11. Learned Advocate also contended that the Court had sufficient power to either extend or abridge the time fixed by the Rules for the ends of justice and in support thereof cited the case of Shri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew v. Fatik Chandra Seal, reported in AIR 1972 Cal 372. Here the learned Judge sitting singly construed R. 46 of Chap. 38 of the High Court Rules, Original Side and observed as follows at p. 375:—

"After all rules of procedure are intended to be a handmaid to the administration of justice. A party cannot be refused just relief merely because of some mistake, negligence or inadvertence or infraction of the rules of procedure. This is a salutary principle and this principle has been recognised by the Supreme Court in AIR 1969 SC 1267 at p. 1268".

12. Learned Advocate for the defendant contended in reply that in Shri Iswar Jagannath Deb Jew (supra), the learned Judge found as a fact that the notice covering the period contemplated in the Rules had been given and, as such, the learned Judge was not called upon to decide whether the Court would have power to abridge the time if the period was short and the observations of the learned Judge should be treated as obiter.

13. The point to be considered first is whether this application should be dismissed in limine inasmuch as the summons was not made returnable without giving seven clear days' notice to the defendant. In the facts it appears that the defendant did appear on the returnable date and obtained directions for filing its affidavit in opposition. Time to file such affidavit was extended more than once, and the affidavit in opposition was filed ultimately more than two months after the returnable date. Therefore it appears that the defendant was not at all prejudiced by not having seven clear days' notice. It is not the case that on the returnable date before the defendant could appear, the plaintiff obtained a summary decree. If the defendant had complained on the returnable date that the notice was short, the returnable date could be formally extended covering the shortage. The defendant not having taken any objection to the shortness of the notice till the final hearing will be deemed to have waived its objection thereto. The decision in Province of Bengal (AIR 1945 Cal 341) (supra) does not appear to have any application in the facts of this case inasmuch as, under the C.P.C., the Court has no power either to abridge or enlarge the time fixed by S. 80 of the Code. Time fixed by the Rules can be enlarged or abridged under the Rules themselves.

14. For the reasons above, the contention of the defendant as to the shortness of the period of notice of the summons cannot stand. It is directed that the period of the notice should be treated as abridged.

15. On merits, the defendant, has raised an issue on the Bengal Moneylenders' Act. Whether the amendment of the Bengal Moneylenders' Act will have any effect on the transaction will have to be finally determined in the suit and cannot be decided summarily here.

16. Payment which has been alleged by the defendant and denied by the plaintiff will also have to be adjudicated on evidence at the trial though the defendant's case appears to be little weak inasmuch as the defendant is not in a position to produce any receipt or other document in support of the payment alleged by it.

17. For the reasons above, the defendant is given leave to defend the suit on furnishing security for Rs. 25,000 to the satisfaction of the Registrar, Original Side. Such security should be furnished within one week after the Court reopens after the winter vacation.

18. In the event security is not furnished by the defendant as directed there will be an order in terms of prayer (a) of the summons and costs.

19. In the event security is furnished, there will be cross order for discovery of the security. Inspection forthwith thereafter and the suit is directed to appear in the appropriate Prospective List for hearing three months hence.

20. Liberty to mention. Costs in the cause.

21. All parties and the Department to act on a signed copy of the minutes of the order on the usual undertaking.

Ordered accordingly.

(A) West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 8 — Application for pre-emption under — Question whether disputed land is agricultural or non-agricultural has to be gone into — Lower Court not considering this question — Held court failed to exercise its jurisdiction.

In an application for pre-emption under S. 8 the court has to determine the character of the disputed land i.e. whether it is agricultural or non-agricultural, with reference to the user of the land. (1978) 1 Cal LJ 532; (1979) 83 Cal WN 87 and (1979) 2 Cal LJ 526, Rel. on. (Para 4)

Where in an application under Sec. 8, the court did not took into consideration the entries in the record of rights regarding the nature of the disputed plots and the admission of the applicant that the suit land was non-agricultural, the court clearly failed to exercise its jurisdiction and the judgment of the court was, therefore, liable to be set aside.

Shyamacharan Mitter and Syamaprosanna Roy Chowdhury, for Petitioner; Harinarayan Mukherjee, for Opposite Party No. 1.

ORDER:— The opposite party No. 1 Sanyasi Biswas filed an application under S. 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act for pre-emption on the ground that he was a contiguous owner of the disputed land which was transferred by opposite party No. 2, Tukubala Biswas, to the petitioner Kusum Rani Biswas. The learned Munsif dismissed the application on the ground that Sanyasi Biswas had failed to prove that he was a contiguous owner of the disputed portion sought to be pre-empted. The appeal preferred by Sanyasi Biswas was allowed by the learned Additional District Judge who came to the finding that appellant Sanyasi Biswas a raiyat and he was in possession of land adjoining the disputed holding out of which the disputed three plots were transferred. The petitioner Kusum Rani Biswas has challenged the said decision of the learned Additional District Judge in the present revisional application.

2. Mr. S. C. Mitter, learned Advocate for the petitioner, has submitted that the learned appellate Court failed to exercise jurisdiction as the court did not consider the entries in the R.S. records and the admission of P.W. 1, Sanyasi Biswas, that the land was non-agricultural. Mr. Mitter contends that as the land was non-agricultural the provisions of S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act were not applicable. In support of his contention Mr. Mitter relies on the case of Mishri Show v. B. N. G. Institution, (1978) 1 Cal LJ 532, Eyachhin Ali Naskar v. Gopal Gazi, (1979) 83 Cal WN 87, Kamaleswar Singha v. Bijoli Bhattacharya, (1979) 2 Cal LJ 526. Mr. Mitter has further contended that the document sought to be pre-empted, namely, the document (Ext. B) dated Aug. 3, 1974 is not a kobala but only a deed of release as Tukubala Biswas was benamdar of her husband Rabindranath Biswas. Mr. Mitter submits that Kusum Rani purchased from Rabindranath Biswas by the kobala, Ext. B (1), dated March 18, 1974. But as it transpired subsequently that a benami document had been executed by Rabindra in favour of his wife Tukubala (Ext. B (2)) on March 15, 1974 it was thought advisable to have a deed of release from Tukubala. Mr. Mitter argues that all these questions are material for the purpose of decision of the application for pre-emption and the learned courts below failed to exercise their jurisdiction.

3. Mr. Harinarayan Mukherjee, learned Advocate for the opposite party No. 1, has submitted that the contentions raised by Mr. Mitter cannot be urged in the present revisional application as no objection was raised by the petitioner Kusum Rani before the trial court as well as before the appellate Court regarding the land being non-agricultural. It has further been contended that Rabindra had already sold to Tukubala and, as such, Kusum Rani did not derive any interest by the kobala, Ext. B (1). Kusum Rani's interest accrued only when the disputed document was executed by Tukubala in her favour and Sanyasi Biswas being the contiguous owner of the disputed land was entitled to pre-empt.

4. After hearing the learned Advocates for the parties and considering the materials before me I am of opinion that the Rule should be made absolute. The learned trial court dismissed the application only on the ground that opposite party No. 1 Sanyasi Biswas had failed to establish that he was the owner of land adjoining the disputed holding. Another contention which was raised before the learned trial court, namely, whether the disputed document was a deed of release or not was not considered. The learned appellate Court allowed the application under Section 8 of the Land Reforms Act reversing the finding of the learned Munsif and holding that petitioner-appellant was a raiyat possessing land adjoining the disputed holding. The learned appellate Court, however, did not take into consideration the entries in the record of rights regarding the nature of the disputed plots and the admission of P.W. 1, Sanyasi Biswas, that the suit land was non-agricultural. In view of the decisions reported in (1978) 1 Cal LJ 532, (1979) 83 Cal WN 87 and (1979) 2 Cal LJ 526, the character of the disputed land, that is, whether it is agricultural or non-agricultural, is to be determined with reference to the user of the land. In this connection, the evidence of P.W. 1, Sanyasi Biswas, regarding the nature of the land will also be relevant. The learned courts below committed jurisdictional error in not considering these aspects of the question.

5. Another contention of Mr. Mitter is that the courts below failed to exercise jurisdiction as the petitioner Kusum Rani raised the objection that the disputed document executed by Tukubala was not a deed of transfer but only a deed of release. Referring to the decision in Balai Chand Mondal v. Nibaran Chandra Dass, AIR 1947 Cal 410, Mr. Mitter has argued that in hearing an application under S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act the question of benami can be gone into. In Balai Chand's case, referred to above, it was held that in a pre-emption proceeding under S. 26F of the Bengal Tenancy Act the question of benami or fictitious transfer can be gone into. The question that the transfer was fictitious and the transferee held the property for the transferor himself was decided and the said decision would operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit by the transferee for the declaration that the transfer was benami. This decision is in respect of S. 26F of the Bengal Tenancy Act. But the principles would also be applicable to an application under S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act and in such a case the real nature of the purported transfer giving rise to the application under S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act may be gone into in a proceeding under S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act. There was jurisdictional error on the part of the learned courts below in not dealing with this question which was specifically raised by the petitioner Kusum Rani Biswas in her petition of objection.

6. In the result the Rule be made absolute without costs. The judgments of both the courts below be set aside and the matter be remitted to the learned trial Court for decision in accordance with law.

Rule made absolute.

M/s. Nag Book House and another, Petitioners v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 12253 (W) of 1981, D/- 17-2-1982.

(A) West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963), Ss. 19-A (3) (h), 27 (2) (as amended by Act 32 of 1979) — Powers of Board — Circular by Board totally prohibiting individual publishers from printing and publishing text books on mathematics in any form whatsoever as per syllabi prescribed by Board — Held, violative of Art. 19 (1) (g). (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (g), 226). (Education — Secondary Board — Publication of text books — Powers as to).

The Circular published by the Board totally prohibiting individual publishers from printing and publishing text books on mathematics in any form whatsoever according to the prescribed syllabi for students for classes VI and VII reading in secondary schools recognised by the Board is violative of the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution to practice any profession or to carry on any trade or business, because the impugned circular purports to create an unreasonable restriction on this fundamental right and as such it is void and so it is liable to be quashed and set aside. (Para 11)

The Board themselves undoubtedly can monopolise the trade of printing and publishing text books to be read by the pupils in secondary schools under the Board according to the syllabi prescribed by it. But this does not either expressly or impliedly confer upon the Board power to forbid printing and publication of text books by any other publisher or author according to the prescribed syllabi for students reading in secondary schools. These books if written cannot be treated as text books nor the printers or publishers thereof can claim any right to have them treated as text books and to allow them to be read by the pupils of the secondary schools as text books. Nevertheless, if students or schools are desirous of keeping these books or buying these books and reading them it cannot be prevented. (Para 11)

The syllabi prepared by Board merely prescribing the guidelines which are to be followed by the text books writers cannot be termed as an original work having some quality or character of its own different from the raw material used. The syllabi that has been prescribed by the Board being not a product of labour, skill and capital and not having an independent character and quality of its own the question of subsisting any copyright in it does not arise. (Para 12)

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Writ petition — Locus standi — Circular published by Secondary Education Board affecting and infringing individual publisher's fundamental right under Art. 19 (1) (g) — Individual publisher is competent to maintain writ petition. R. N. Mitra, Moloy Bose, D. K. Halder and B. G. Chatterji, for Petitioners; A. P. Chatterjee and S. P. Banerjee (for Nos. 3 and 4) and P. K. Basu, (for Nos. 1 and 2), for Respondents.

ORDER :— The petitioner No. 1 is a registered partnership firm which has been carrying on the business of printing, publishing and selling of approved text books of different classes in the different schools recognised by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education. This business is carried on under the name and style of "Nag Book House." The petitioner No. 2 is one of the partners of the said business. The West Bengal Board of Secondary Education issued guidelines for authors of text books on mathematics containing instructions regarding syllabus that has to be followed in respect of text books on Arithmetics and Geometry in classes VI and VII. The said guidelines describing the syllabus in respect of Arithmetics and Geometry to be followed by the writers on text books on the said subjects for being read by the pupils of the schools recognised under the Board. Thereafter a Circular No. Syll/79/9 dated 23rd Nov. 1979 was issued by the Secretary, Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal to the heads of all Junior and High Schools recognised by the Board notifying that the syllabi in Mathematics for Classes VI to X had been revised and the new syllabi for classes VI and VII would be introduced in place of the existing syllabi already published in Board's Brouchure under reference from the academic sessions 1981 onwards. The syllabi for classes VIII and IX will be introduced in place of the existing syllabi already published in Board's brouchure under reference from the academic sessions 1982, 1983 respectively. Another circular being circular No. Syll/80/9 dated 12th Aug. 1980 was sent by the Secretary of the Board to the heads of all Junior and High Schools recognised by the Board intimating that the new syllabus in mathematics will be introduced from the academic session 1981 only in class VI and not in class VII. The new syllabi for classes VIII, IX and X will be introduced in place of existing syllabi from the academic sessions of 1982, 1983 and 1984 and 1985 respectively.

2. Text books were prepared according to the syllabus prescribed from time to time by the authorities concerned and sent to the intending publishers and/or authors asking them to submit text books written and/or printed as per the said syllabus to the authorities for approval. The authorities used to fix up dates within which text books were to be submitted for approval as well as prescribed fees for the purpose. The authors and/or publishers after preparing the text books according to the syllabus and/or guidelines used to submit the same to the authorities concerned well in advance so that the text books could be put to market before the academic session concerned. After the submission of the text books so prepared by the authors and the publishers the same were to be scrutinised by experts appointed by the authorities to ascertain whether the same had been prepared strictly according to the syllabus and the guidelines prescribed by the authorities. The text books after being recommended by the experts were formally approved by the authorities and thereafter the names of the text books were sent to the Heads of the Institutions for circulation. Such approval was also to be notified in the official Gazette. In case any mistakes and/or defects noticed by the experts the Authors and/or Publishers were to rectify the same after having followed the entire procedure and resubmit the same for its approval in the same manner and that too well in advance. The authorities have the absolute right either to reject any text book submitted for approval if the same were not up to the mark or to approve the same. This procedure was followed by the Government as well as University of Calcutta before the constitution of the Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal. After the constitution of the Board of Secondary Education similar procedure was followed until the issuance of new circular mentioned hereafter.

3. On 18th Nov., 1981, the Secretary, Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal issued a circular No. 95/81 intimating that the syllabi in Mathematics for Classes VI and VII has been prescribed by the Board by its circulars Nos. Syll/79/19 dated 23-11-1979 and Syll/80/9 dated 12-8-1980. It has been further stated in the said circular that the Education Department of the Government of West Bengal have undertaken the responsibility of publishing the mathematics text books for Class VI from the year 1981 and of distributing the same free of cost among the students all over the State of West Bengal. The West Bengal Board of Secondary Education have undertaken, with the approval of the Government of West Bengal, the preparation, publication and sale of text books in Mathematics for Class VII for the Secondary Schools recognised by the Board from the academic session 1982. From the academic session 1982, no book in Mathematics for Classes VI and VII other than the text books published either by the Government of West Bengal or by the Board as aforesaid, shall be prescribed in any secondary schools recognised by the Board. It has also been mentioned therein: "And, that no individual publisher shall be entitled to publish text books in Mathematics in any form whatsoever, as per the said syllabi."

4. It has also been stated that the petitioners came to know from the notification dated 23-11-1981 this purported circular. It has been stated that this circular has completely frozen the text books on Mathematics for Classes VI and VII written by Sri Keshab Chandra Nag and published and printed by the petitioners thereby causing substantial loss to them. It has been stated that the petitioners have invested a huge sum of money for printing and publishing the text books on Mathematics for its use by the students of Secondary Schools under the Board and the impugned circular which purports to make total prohibition of the publishing and selling of these books published by the petitioner has caused serious prejudice as well as financial loss to the petitioner. It has further been stated that in view of the circular dated 23rd Nov., 1979 prescribing the syllabus for Mathematics the petitioners invested a huge sum of money in printing and publishing books on Mathematics for Classes VI and VII on the basis of the syllabus prescribed by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education. It has, therefore, been submitted that the Board is estopped from acting contrary to the said circular by way of promissory estoppel. It has also been submitted that the impugned circular dated 18th Nov. 1981 is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution as it discriminates between one publisher and another publisher similarly placed inasmuch as the petitioners have come to learn that the Board is entering into trading activities through Messrs. MacMillan Company Ltd. who is another publisher for the books for Class VII and above. It has been further submitted that the impugned circular is illegal and ultra vires inasmuch as it purports to interfere with the fundamental rights of carrying on by the petitioners their occupation as well as in practising their profession of printing and publishing books guaranteed in Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India. As such the said circular is liable to be quashed and set aside. It has been further submitted that the impugned notification is also violative of the principles of natural justice inasmuch as before the issuance of the said circular and notifying the same in the Gazette no opportunity of hearing was given to the petitioners whose fundamental rights have been seriously affected by the purported circular.

5. On these allegations and averments the instant Rule was issued on 9th Dec. 1981 and there was an interim order to the effect that the respondents were restrained from interfering with the rights of the petitioners to print, publish and sell books written by Keshab Chandra Nag in Mathematics during the disposal of the Rule.

6. An affidavit-in-opposition on behalf of respondents Nos. 3 and 4 sworn by Sri Jyotirbhusan Dutta, Deputy Secretary (Academic) West Bengal, Board of Secondary Education was filed on 7th Dec. 1981. In paragraph 4 of the said affidavit it has been stated that the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education constituted under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963, has been empowered to provide for secondary education to the students and also it has been vested with the task of supervising the various institutions and schools recognised by the Board for imparting secondary education to the students reading in the schools under the Board. In the exercise of such powers of supervision and control over secondary education the Board have always the power to approve and select text books for the students and in fact text books in compulsory subjects could be used in any institution or school recognised by the Board only after being approved by the Board of Secondary Education. It has also been stated that after the amendment of the provisions of S. 27 of the said Act the Board has been conferred with greater powers in this respect. Clause (d) of sub-sec. (2) of S. 27 confers in particular the power to undertake, if necessary, with the approval of the State Government, the preparation, publication, or sale of text books and other books for use in recognised institutions. This Act was further amended by West Bengal Act XXXII of 1979 and S. 19A was inserted in the parent Act by S. 8 of the said Amendment Act. Sub-sec. (3) of Section 19 which has specified the duty of the Executive Committee of the Board clearly provides in cl. (h) of the said subsection that the Executive Committee of the Board can undertake with the approval of the State Government the preparation, publication or selling of text books and other books for use in recognised institutions. It has been submitted that on the basis of this provision the Board has undertaken the monopoly publication of text books for different classes in Secondary Schools. For several years past the Board has monopoly publication of text books in English for Classes VI to X and it has now decided to undertake, with the approval of the State Government, monopoly publication of text books in Mathematics for Classes VII as well as for class VI. It has been further stated that the action of the Board in undertaking monopoly publication of books on Mathematics for class VII is not in conflict with the petitioner's right enshrined in part III of the Constitution. It has been further stated that the last two riders of the circular dated Nov. 18, 1981, to the effect that no book in Mathematics for Classes VI and VII other than the text books published by the Government of West Bengal or by the Board shall be prescribed in any recognised school and no individual publisher shall publish any text books in Mathematics in any form are not wholly illegal nor these two instructions violate the petitioner's right to carry on trade. It has also been stated that in the facts of the case there is no principle of promissory estoppel because of publishing and printing of books in accordance with the syllabus circulated under the circular dated 23rd Nov. 1979 as text books in a secondary institution for classes VI and VII in Mathematics written according to the syllabus must have to get prior approval of the Board.

7. An affidavit-in-reply has been filed reiterating the statements and submissions made in the writ petition.

8. Mr. R. N. Mitra, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners has contended that the impugned circular dated 18th Nov. 1981 issued by the Secretary, West Bengal Board of Secondary Education is wholly illegal, unwarranted and bad inasmuch as the purported circular totally prohibits the publication of text books in Mathematics in accordance with the syllabus prescribed for classes VI and VII in any form. It has been submitted that the Secretary has not been conferred by the provision of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 as amended by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education (Amendment) Act, 1979 and the Rules framed thereunder the power to exercise any such power of the Board. It has been next submitted by Mr. Mitra that the impugned circular is ultra vires as it purports to create unreasonable restrictions on the petitioner's fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution. It has further been submitted that the Board cannot issue the impugned circular prohibiting the petitioner from printing and publishing text books in Mathematics according to the syllabi prescribed by the Board though the same may not be approved by the Board as text books for students reading in secondary schools.

9. Mr. A. P. Chatterjee, learned Standing Counsel, has, on the other hand, submitted that the Board can issue the impugned circular in exercise of the powers conferred by S. 27 of the Act and the impugned circular cannot be attacked as being illegal or unwarranted. It has been further submitted that the Board has in accordance with the provisions of S. 27 of the Act made regulations prescribing the syllabus. The impugned circular which empowers the Board to publish text books in Mathematics for Class VI and VII in secondary schools recognised by the Board and prohibiting publication of any text books in Mathematics according to the said syllabi is in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the regulations framed by the Board. It has been further submitted that this circular cannot be challenged as arbitrary, illegal and violative of the fundamental right guaranteed by the Constitution under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India. It has been lastly submitted by the learned Standing Counsel with great vehemence that the Board has a copyright to the syllabi made by it and the petitioner by writing text books in Mathematics in accordance with the said syllabus for classes VI and VII has infringed the copyright. For this infringement of the copyright the redress cannot be sought in this jurisdiction but to any other forum. It has also been submitted in this connection that the instant application at the instance of the petitioner is not maintainable inasmuch as the petitioner's statutory or constitutional rights have not been affected or infringed by the impugned circular. Section 27 of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 which deals with the powers and functions of the Board have been amended by S. 15 of West Bengal Board of Secondary Education (Amendment) Act, 1979 (West Bengal Act XXXII of 1979) and it substitutes cls. (a) to (m) under sub-sec. (2) of that Section. The relevant provisions which are quoted hereinbelow:—

visions of this Act and any rules made thereunder, the Board shall have generally the power to direct, supervise and control Secondary Education, and in particular the power—(c): to make regulations in respect of matters referred to in clauses (c), (d), (e) and (g) of subsec. (2) of S. 19A. Section 19A (3) (g) which was inserted by S. 8 of the amended Act runs as follows:—

"it shall be the duty of the Executive Committee to provide by bye-laws after considering the recommendations, if any, of the Syllabus Committee, the Syllabus, the courses of studies to be followed and books to be studied in recognised institutions and for examinations instituted by the Board in accordance with such regulations as may be made by the Board. In this case the Board has framed certain regulations prescribing the syllabi for Mathematics in respect of Classes VI and VII of Secondary Schools recognised by the Board. The Executive Committee as well as the Board has got power to make bye-laws and regulations respectively in the manner laid down in the statute providing for the syllabus, the courses of studies to be followed by the students and books to be studied in recognised institutions. In this case the syllabi that has been prescribed by the Board by making regulations is, therefore, not illegal and bad. There is also no dispute nor it has been questioned on behalf of the petitioner that the Board cannot issue circular notifying that it will print and publish text books for students reading in secondary schools recognised by the Board and for sale of those books to the students. In other words, the Board can take up upon itself the entire responsibility of preparing, printing, publishing and selling of text books on Mathematics according to the syllabi prescribed by it to the exclusion of any other author, printer and publisher. This cannot be questioned and/or challenged by any other printer or author.

10. The next question that comes up for consideration is whether in exercise of this power the Board is competent to issue the impugned circular dated Nov. 18, 1981 preventing any individual publishers from publishing text books in Mathematics in any form whatsoever as per the syllabi prescribed by the Board. In my opinion, the Board is not empowered to publish a circular totally prohibiting other publishers from printing and publishing text books on Mathematics according to the prescribed syllabi for students for Classes VI and VII reading in secondary schools recognised by the Board. The impugned circular which purports to prohibit printing and publishing text books in Mathematics in any form whatsoever according to the prescribed syllabi is, in my opinion, violative of the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution which guarantees the right of the citizen to practice any profession or to carry on any trade or business. This impugned circular purports to create an unreasonable restriction on this fundamental right and as such it is void and so it is liable to be quashed and set aside. The Board themselves undoubtedly can monopolise the trade of printing and publishing text books to be read by the pupils in secondary schools under the Board according to the syllabi prescribed by it. But this does not either expressly or impliedly confer upon the Board power to forbid printing and publication of text books by any other publisher or author according to the prescribed syllabi for students reading in secondary schools. These books if written cannot be treated as text books nor the printers or publishers thereof can claim any right to have them treated as text books and to allow them to be read by the pupils of the secondary schools as text books. Nevertheless, if students or schools are desirous of keeping these books or buying these books and reading them it cannot be prevented. Therefore, this circular is liable to be quashed and set aside.

11. The learned Standing Counsel has submitted with great persuasiveness that the Board has a copyright to the syllabus made by it and the petitioners have no right to write text books on Mathematics for students of class VI and VII following the syllabus. It has been contended in this connection that the preparation and publication of the syllabus requires skill, capital and labour, it is the product of all these and as such no publisher including the petitioner have any right to write, print and publish text books following the said syllabus. Reference has been made in this connection to the decision of Lord Atkinson in AIR 1924 PC 75, Mac Millan & Co. Ltd. v. K. & J. Cooper where it has been observed that "It is the product of the labour, skill and capital of one man which must not be appropriated by another, not the elements, the raw material if one may use the expression, upon which the labour and skill and capital of the first have been expended, to secure copyright for this product. It is necessary that the labour, skill and capital expended should be sufficient to import to the product some quality or character which the raw material did not possess, and which differentiates the product from the raw material". In AIR 1967 All 91, Agarwala Publishing House, Khurja v. Board of High School and Intermediate Education, U. P. Allahabad it has been observed that examination papers are within the category of original works within the meaning of S. 13 of the Indian Copyright Act, 1957 and copyright can be claimed therein. Section 2 (m) of the Copyright Act, 1957 defines "Infringing copy" as meaning:—

"(i) in relation to a literary, dramatic, musical or artistic work, a reproduction thereof otherwise than in the form of cinematograph film."

Section 13 provides that "copyright shall subsist in the following classes of works, that is to say,—

"(a) original literary, dramatic, musical and artistic works."

Chap. X deals with registration of copyright. S. 51 provides that "copyright in a work shall be deemed to be infringed

"(a) when any person, without a licence granted by the owner of the copyright or the Registrar of Copyrights under this Act or in contravention of the conditions of a licence so granted or of any condition imposed by a competent authority under this Act—

(i) does anything, the exclusive right to do which is by this Act conferred upon the owner of the copyright."

In the case of Mohini Mohan Singh v. Sita Nath Basak, (1930) 34 Cal WN 540 : (AIR 1931 Cal 233) it has been held that an author may avail himself of common sources of information on a subject but he is not entitled to save himself pain and labour by adopting a predecessor's work with colourable variations even though such predecessor's work is based on materials which are common property. In AIR 1970 Madh Pra 261, Mishra Bandhu Karyalaya v. Shivaratanlal Koshal it has been held "Neither original thought nor original record is essential for a literary work to be original under S. 1. Schedule I of the 1914 Act. The real test in adjudging the originality of a work is whether it involved any skill, labour and knowledge of author. The originality in writing of a successful text book in a subject like arithmetic lies upon the skill of the author. The amount of originality may be small, but the extent of his thought, skill and labour may be tremendous and it is that which is protected by law."

12. The guidelines for the authors and publishers of text books issued by the Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal annexed as annexure 'A' to the petition prescribing the syllabus cannot be taken as original work being the product of labour, skill and capital of some men engaged by the Board. The syllabi merely prescribing the guidelines which are to be followed by the text books writers cannot be termed as an original work having some quality or character of its own different from the raw material used. Therefore, in my opinion, the syllabi that has been prescribed by the Board being not a product of labour, skill and capital and not having an independent character and quality of its own the question of any copyright does not arise from this. The submission of the learned Standing Counsel that in accordance with the syllabi the text books prepared by the petitioners is an infringement of the copyright is without any merit and hence the same is overruled.

13. The impugned circular dated 18th Nov, 1981 as mentioned in annexure 'D' to the petition undoubtedly affects and infringes upon the petitioner's fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India. Therefore the petitioner's being aggrieved persons are competent to maintain this application in this jurisdiction. The submission of the Standing Counsel on this score is totally devoid of merit and hence the same is rejected.

14. For the reasons aforesaid the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner having succeeded the Rule succeeds and it is made absolute. Let a writ of Mandamus be issued commanding the respondents to forbear from giving effect to the impugned circular in so far as it purports to prohibit individual publisher from publishing text books in Mathematics in any form whatsoever as per the syllabi of the Board. Let a writ of certiorari be also issued commanding the respondents to quash and set aside that portion of the circular which purports to prohibit individual publisher from publishing text books in Mathematics in any form whatsoever according to the syllabi of the Board.

15. In the facts and circumstances of the case there will, however, be no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

State of West Bengal, Appellant v. Subimal Kumar Mondal and another, Respondents.

A. F. A. D. No. 339 of of 1974 D/- 12-6-1981.*

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Ss. 100-101 — Second appeal — Suit for declaration of title and for further declaration that entry in record of rights was incorrect dismissed — Suit decreed by lower appellate Court which ignored material evidence — Held, findings of fact thus arrived at were not binding in second appeal. AIR 1976 SC 2229 and AIR 1940 PC 192, Rel. on. (Para 6)

(B) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), Ss. 101-103 — Suit for declaration of title — Burden is on plaintiff to prove his title.

In a suit for declaration of title it is for the plaintiff to prove his case because the principle of law is that the plaintiff must succeed on the strength of his own case and not on the weakness of the defendant's version. AIR 1946 PC 59 and AIR 1954 SC 526, Rel. on. (Para 7)

(C) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 107 — Appreciation of evidence — Duty of lower appellate Court.

The plaintiff filed a suit for declaration of title to the suit property and for a further declaration that the entry in the record of rights showing the plaintiff's father as the owner was incorrect. The plaintiff alleged that when he was a minor, his father acted as his guardian and for the benefit of the minor son sold the suit property to the minor. After making the purchase the plaintiff had been possessing the property. But in the R. S. Khatian there was a wrong entry that the property belonged to his father and that land had vested in the State. The plaintiff's father did not make any purchase. A written statement was filed by defendant No. 1, the State, denying the plaintiff's allegations. It was stated that defendant No. 2, plaintiff's father, was a big raiyat and he made a Benami purchase. He did not retain the suit-land. That property had vested in the State. The trial Court after considering all the relevant evidence, disbelieved the plaintiff's version in all respects and held that the plaintiff had no money to make the purchase. That purchase was not a genuine one. The plaintiff was not in possession of the property. The dakhilas filed by him were interpolated. The plaintiff had no title. The suit was dismissed. The plaintiff went up in appeal. The appellate Court decreed the suit by allowing the appeal. The first appellate Court practically accepted the plaintiff's version simply because defendant No. 2 did not controvert his allegations. But that Court failed to consider the broad fact that defendant No. 2 was none but the plaintiff's father.

Held, the evidence given by the plaintiff and the documents filed by him were rejected by the trial Court. Reasons were assigned why those documents could not be accepted and the evidence of the P. Ws. seemed to be unacceptable to the trial Court. Therefore, the lower appellate Court ought to have been cautious before allowing the appeal by reversing all the findings of fact of the trial Court. AIR 1972 SC 1716, Rel. on. (Para 8)

(D) T. P. Act (4 of 1882), S. 41 — Question whether transaction was benami — Evidence led by parties — Held, court had to decide issue on basis of such evidence and it had to consider source of consideration money — Court should not have decided issue by stating that defendants had failed to discharge onus — Question of onus did not arise since parties had led evidence. Gouriprosad Mukherjee, for Appellant; Himadri Sankar Majumdar, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT :— The plaintiff has alleged that the disputed land belonged to the minor, Satyendra Nath Patra. The latter's father acted as his guardian and for the benefit of the minor son, sold the disputed property to him on the 7th Dec., 1953, for Rs. 250/-. After making the purchase he has been possessing the property. But in the R. S. Khatian there is a wrong entry that the property belongs to his father and that land has vested in the State. The plaintiff's father did not make any purchase. The suit is for an injunction on declaration of the plaintiff's title and for a further declaration that the entry in the record-of-rights is incorrect.

2. Defendant No. 1 is the State of West Bengal. A written statement was filed denying the plaintiff's allegations. It has been stated that defendant No. 2, plaintiff's father, was a big raiyat and he made a Benami purchase. He did not retain the suit-land. That property has vested in the State.

3. The learned Munsif disbelieved the plaintiff's version in all respects and has held that the plaintiff had no money to make the purchase. That purchase was not a genuine one. The plaintiff was not in possession of the property. The dakhilas filed by him were interpolated. The plaintiff has no title. The suit was dismissed. The plaintiff went up in appeal. The appellate Court decreed the suit by allowing the appeal. Hence this appeal by the State.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the State that the decision of the learned Additional District Judge is incorrect. The facts and the law were not properly discussed. The important items considered by the learned Munsif were ignored by that court. The plaintiff has no title or possession.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent has stated that the fate of this appeal is concluded by the findings of fact arrived at by the learned Additional District Judge. The findings are binding on the High Court in second appeal. The case of Ramchandra v. Ramalingam in AIR 1963 SC 302 decided by Gajendragadkar, J. has been cited to support this contention.

6. The first question arises whether there was non-consideration of material evidence by the learned Additional District Judge. In the case of Damadilal v. Parashram reported in AIR 1976 SC 2229, A. C. Gupta, J. has stated that where there was non-consideration of material evidence by the first appellate Court, the High Court can enter into questions of fact in second appeal. The most important fact is that the entry in the R. S. Khatian is against the plaintiff. The statutory presumption attached to the record-of-rights was not considered by the first appellate Court. In the well-known case of Shankar Rao v. Sambhu reported in (1941) 45 Cal WN 57 : (AIR 1940 PC 192). Sir George Rankin has stated that where in arriving at the finding of fact, the final Court of fact omitted to consider the presumption arising out of the provisions of S. 135J of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (corresponding presumption u/s. 103B of the Bengal Tenancy Act), such finding is not binding on the High Court in second appeal. The question of possession was elaborately dealt with by the learned Munsif. But that finding has been reserved in one line by stating that the evidence of the P. Ws. was accepted. No reason was assigned why that Court rejected the reasons given by the learned Munsif in this respect. The question of benami was also cryptically discussed and stated that since the defendant failed to establish the plea of benami, the same could not be accepted. The learned Munsif stated that the plaintiff filed only two dakhilas, which were interpolated. This item was not at all discussed by the first appellate Court. The other important points were dealt with by the learned Munsif, but not considered by the learned Additional District Judge. Hence for non-consideration of material evidence, the findings of fact cannot be accepted by this Court in Second appeal.

7. Then about the merits. The plaintiff has asked for declaration of title. Hence it is for him to prove his case because the principle of law is that the plaintiff must succeed on the strength of his own case and not on the weakness of the defendant's version. This principle was laid down by Sir George Beaumont in the well-known case reported in (1946) 50 Cal WN 477 at p. 478 : (AIR 1946 PC 59). This principle was also enunciated in the case in AIR 1954 SC 526 at p. 538 by Jagannadhadas, J.

8. The learned first appellate Court practically accepted the plaintiff's version simply because defendant No. 2 did not controvert his allegations. But that Court failed to consider the broad fact that defendant No. 2 is none but the plaintiff's father. So the Court ought to have been cautious before allowing the appeal by reversing all the findings of fact. The observations of the Supreme Court are clear, in this respect. In the Court of T. D. Gopalan v. Commr., H.R. & C.E., Madras, reported in AIR 1972 SC 1716 at p. 1719, it has been stated that the uniform practice in the matter of appreciation of evidence has been that if the trial court has given cogent, detailed reasons for not accepting the testimony of a witness, the appellate court in all fairness should deal with those reasons before proceeding to form a contrary opinion about accepting the evidence, which has been rejected by the trial court. Here the evidence given by the plaintiff and the documents filed by him were rejected by the learned Munsif. Reasons were assigned why those documents could not be accepted and the evidence of the P. Ws. seemed to be unacceptable to him.

9. Then about the question of benami. The learned Additional District Judge should not have decided the point of benami simply by stating that the defendants failed to discharge the onus in this respect. In the latest Supreme Court case Bibi Fatima v. Union of India, Singha, J.,* after following the case of Kalwa Devadattam in AIR 1964 SC 880 at p. 885 and AIR 1977 SC 409 at p. 413 has stated that the question of onus in a benami case is important only in the early stages of the case. It may assume importance where no evidence is led. But where evidence has been led, an abstract consideration of onus is out of place and the case has to be decided on the evidence adduced by the parties. In such cases, the court has to consider about the source of the consideration money. This point was emphasized by the Judicial Committee all along and subsequently the Supreme Court has also taken that view.

10. The learned Munsif has pointed out that the plaintiff's evidence in this respect bristles with contradictions. When P. W. 1, Subimal, plaintiff, was cross-examined, he had to admit that he had nothing to show that he had sufficient money to pay the consideration money at the relevant time for the purpose of purchasing the disputed property. This witness has stated that he had a discussion with the vendor for purchasing the property. He admits that he did not go through the papers to satisfy himself about the vendor's title. He first says that he himself purchased the stamp paper. In the next breath he denies the same. These facts were elaborately discussed by the learned Munsif. P. W. 1 Subimal says that the consideration money was paid before the Registrar, whereas P. W. 2, Pramatha Nath, makes a different statement and states that the consideration was not paid before the Sub-Registrar, but in the presence of the scribe. The plaintiff has stated that he cannot say who presented the deed for registration and what was the value thereof. He says that he called P. W. 2, Pramatha, and other witnesses for witnessing the execution of the document. But P. W. 2 Pramatha Nath, has stated that the plaintiff did not call him and he went to that place of his own accord because he had business in the registration office.

11. The plot 1225 covers 90 cents, whereas the kobala in question, 1, will show that the area of that plot No. 1225 is 1.22. This shows that the plaintiff was tutored to make statements in the Court and somebody else was pulling the string from behind.

12. The learned Munsif pointed out that the two dakhilas, Exts. 6 and 6(a), were interpolated and the same could not be connected with the entry of the plot in the disputed kobala, Ext. 1. This item was also not discussed by the first appellate Court.

13. Then about the point of possession. It has already been pointed out that the first appellate Court did not refer to the presumption arising out of the finally published R. S. Khatian, which is against the plaintiff. P. W. 1, Subimal, is the plaintiff and is thus an interested witness. P. W. 2, Pramatha Nath, lives in a different village altogether. P. W. 3, Niranjan Mandal, deposed in the plaintiff's favour. He says that he is a neighbour of the plaintiff. He admits that he does not know when the plaintiff first possessed the disputed plot nor does he know the plot number or the area of the disputed plot. The learned Munsif pointed out that this witness could not give details about the land which he claims to have cultivated himself. This witness says that he has land to the adjoining east of the disputed land. The learned Munsif has pointed out that the kobala, Ext. 1, shows that to the adjoining east of the plot lies the land of Aniruddha, plain-tiff's father. One fails to understand why in the face of these findings, the learned Additional District Judge allowed the appeal.

14. Thus from the aforesaid discussion the evidence of the P. Ws. cannot be believed. It must be held that the plaintiff's kobala, Ext. 1, is not a genuine transaction and he did not purchase the property in question for consideration. It is further held that he has no interest in the disputed land and that land is not in his possession. The decision of the learned first appellate Court is absolutely perverse.

15. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against be hereby set aside and those of the learned Munsif restored without any order as to costs.

Appeal allowed.

MANAS NATH ROY, J.

Bhakta Prosad Paul, Petitioner v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 12374 (W) of 1980, D/-18-6-1981.

(A) W. B. Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), Section 54 — Tribunal could correct accidental error in its order. — Party not being prejudiced could not challenge the correction as being opposed to rules of natural justice. (Constitution of India Art. 226).

The Tribunal exercising jurisdiction under the above W. B. Land Reforms Act is competent to correct an accidental error or mistake in the order made by it. Where the appellate authority corrected an obvious error with reference to the bhagchas case number and the correction could not be said to have caused any prejudice or difficulty to the other party in appreciating the effect of the appellate order, it was not allowed to be challenged on the ground that he had not been heard before the correction was made. (Para 8)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 226 — High Court's power under Art. 226 to interfere with a perverse order — Where perversity was in issue the appellate body was bound to give a speaking order even though it was confirming that of the Tribunal. (W. B. Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 54).

The contention that, unlike in the case of a statutory appeal the Court was bound to make a speaking order, the same could not be insisted upon when the High Court was moved under Article 226 of Constitution because the High Court acting under that Article could not interfere with the findings of fact reappreciating the evidence in the case, was rejected. Where there was an allegation of perversity or where there was at least a claim to that effect or which would be required to be decided by the High Court, the Tribunal was bound to make a speaking order not only for finding out whether the exceptions taken were duly decided but also for testing the validity of the findings reached on the evidence on record. The circumstance that the appellate authority was only confirming the finding of the lower Tribunal was no excuse, AIR 1966 SC 1827 and AIR 1963 SC 1612, Distinguished. Mrs. Archana Sen Gupta and Amit Prokash Lahiri, for Petitioner; B. C. Dutt and Satyanarayan Jas, for Respondents Nos. 4 and 5.

ORDER:— The Rule, in which the exceptions regarding the maintainability have been taken and the particulars whereof are mentioned hereinafter, was obtained on 18th Nov., 1980, against order dated 13th March, 1978, made by the Bhagchas Officer, Monteswar, Burdwan, in Bhagchas Case No. 40 of 1976, as affirmed in M. P. Case No. 154 of 1978 on 10th July 1980. The impugned orders are in Annexures "E" and "H" to the petition of motion.

2. It was contended by the petitioner, on a reference to the impugned appellate order, that the same was bad, irregular, void, illegal and unauthorised, as firstly, the same was not a duly reasoned order or a speaking order, secondly the reference to Bhagchas Case No. 46 of 1976 in the order itself, which should have been Bhagchas Case No. 40 of 1976, proved and established non application of mind and thirdly, even though such point was not taken in explicit language, both the determinations as impeached, were perverse, as the facts and evidence as lead or tendered, were not duly considered. It has been stated that the lands in question belonged to one Khudiram Mondal and on his death, his son Sri Sailendra Nath Mondal, Sm. Bhagabati Mondal, the second wife of the deceased and Sm. Minati Rani Mondal, the daughter, inherited those properties. It has also been stated that Sm. Bhagabati Mondal and Sm. Minati Rani Mondal, settled the lands in question as Bargadar with the petitioner, after such inheritance.

3. It was the case of the petitioner that thereafter, Respondents Nos. 4 and 5, for whom Mr. B. C. Dutt was appearing, filed an application for eviction of the petitioner on the grounds as mentioned in Section 17 (I) (d) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act. 1955 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act). This application, as mentioned above, was numbered as Bhagchas Case No. 40 of 1976. Such application, even after contest by the petitioner, was allowed, wherefrom the concerned appeal was taken, which again was dismissed in the manner as indicated above.

4. The main grievance of the petitioner have been indicated hereinbefore. The Respondents Nos. 4 and 5, by their affidavit-in-opposition dated 17th December 1980, apart from denying the material allegations and facts, claimed that the determinations as made by the Bhagchas Officer, were due, proper and appropriate, on the basis of the pleadings and records or evidence as available before him and since the terms of the appellate order would establish that the determinations as made in the manner as indicated hereinbefore, were appropriate, so there was also no justification in the contentions of the petitioner that the appellate order was bald, bare or without any appropriate particulars or reasons. It was also stated that the reference to Case No. 46 of 1976, instead of Case No. 40 of 1976, was made inadvertently and in any event, such reference, has not created any prejudice.

so far the petitioner was concerned and such mistake, which was an accidental one, was appropriately corrected, by an order dt. 3rd Oct. 1980. It was claimed that in the facts of the case, if the Rule is not disposed of early, the interim order as made, should be vacated. In fact, when on 21st April, 1981, the case appeared in the list, Mr. Jas prayed, that let the affidavit-in-opposition as filed, be treated as an application for vacating the interim order. Such prayer was allowed and it was directed that exceptions by the petitioner, if any, to the said application for vacating the interim order, be taken within two weeks and reply thereto by a week thereafter. The exceptions and the reply have been filed and they are dated 4th May, 1981 and 7th May, 1981 respectively. Mrs. Sen Gupta claimed that instead of determining the issues regarding the maintainability of the application, on the grounds as mentioned by the answering Respondents at this interlocutory stage, where and when no final order is required or intended to be made, this Court can, without deciding the point, should direct the matter to go back before the learned Tribunal, for appropriate determination in accordance with law and that too, after giving due reasons, for such determinations.

5. The above submissions of Mrs. Sen Gupta and those of her contentions, that the learned Tribunal, who was required to pass a reasoned order or to make a speaking order, was contested by Mr. Dutta, who claimed, that in the facts and circumstances of the case and more particularly when, on a reference to the order as made by the learned Tribunal, it would appear that such order was made or passed, on consideration of the initial order and more particularly when the reasons given in the initial order, are the basis of the final and ultimate order by the learned Tribunal so no interference is required or should be made or necessary, as, if the two orders are read together, they would give a complete answer to the submissions of Mrs. Sen Gupta and more particularly, that a reasoned or a speaking order has been passed.

6. Mr. Dutt also claimed that such reasoned or speaking order, would be necessary or required when there would be a statutory appeal, but not in cases, where a writ proceeding has been initiated. He contended that writ proceeding, not being statutory appeals and in such proceeding, this Court having no jurisdiction or authority to interfere with the findings of facts or to assess or reappraise evidence as led, unless perversity is proved or established, the submissions as put forward by Mrs. Sen Gupta, could not be considered or would be available in such a proceeding. It was in fact, claimed by Mr. Dutt that perversity in this case, has neither been pleaded nor established and as such the same should not be a ground for consideration by this Court.

7. In support of his submissions as aforesaid Mr. Dutt firstly, referred to the determinations in the case of Uttam Bala v. M. N. Mathur, AIR 1972 Goa 41. This was a case under the Defence of India Rules 1952 and more particularly under Part XII-A, comprised of the Gold Control Rules. In that case, it has been observed that where order of the Government in revision, indicates that the detailed reasons given in the order of the Collector and Administrator, were considered and adopted by the Government, there was no need for the Secretary to the Government, to pass the order to repeat those reasons in his own order. The order of the Government, therefore, cannot be quashed on the ground that it was a non speaking order. Then, reference was made to the determinations in the case of Tarachand Khatri v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, AIR 1977 SC 567, for the observations that although it may be necessary for the disciplinary authority to record its provisions and conclusions in the notice calling upon the delinquent officer to show cause why the proposed punishment should not be imposed upon him, if it differs from the findings arrived at by the Enquiry Officer with regard to the charge, it is not obligatory to do so in case the delinquent officer concurs with the findings of the enquiry officer. Mr. Dutt thereafter referred to the case of Madhya Pradesh Industries Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1966 SC 671. In this case, it has been observed that the order of the Central Government, in the facts of that case, was not bad, since they agreed with the reasons given in the orders of the State Government and under the relevant Rules, they were not bound to give fuller reasons in the concerned order. It was then pointed out by Mr. Dutt, on a reference to the determinations in the case of Som Datt Dutta v. Union of India, AIR 1969 SC 414, which was a case under the provisions of the Army Act, 1950, that there is no express obligation imposed by S. 164 or by S. 167 of the Army Act, on the confirming authority or upon the Central Government, to give reasons in support of its decision to confirm the proceeding of the Court Martial. It has also been observed in that case, that apart from any requirement imposed by the statute or statutory Rules, either expressly or by necessary implication, it cannot be said that there is any general principle or any rule of natural justice that a statutory Tribunal should always and in every case give reasons in support of its decision. It was thus observed further that such orders cannot, therefore, be held to be illegal for not giving any reasons for confirming the orders of the Court Martial.

8. The above argument on natural justice and the case, was made and cited, as Mrs. Sen Gupta contended that when admittedly the learned Tribunal changed the number of the case from B. C. Case No. 46 of 1976 to B. C. Case No. 40 of 1976 after a lapse of time and without any opportunity to the petitioner of being heard, there was violation of such principles. On this point, on consideration of the arguments and the pleadings, I do not think that the petitioner has a substantial case, as admittedly he had no prejudice or difficulty in appreciating the effect of the appellate order on that basis or to challenge the appellate order, for that reason. The quoting of a wrong case number, may happen or occur for reasons more than one, but, that would not ipso facto establish non-application of mind as claimed by Mrs. Sen Gupta. The learned Tribunal, in my view, had jurisdiction and authority to correct such accidental error or mistake and since it has duly made such corrections, it can but be held that the learned Tribunal duly acted within its power, competence and jurisdiction. So, the submissions of Mrs. Sen Gupta on this aspect, should also fail.

9. Mrs. Sen Gupta claimed that the cases as cited by Mr. Dutta and the particulars whereof are mentioned hereinbefore, are distinguishable on facts. It was specifically claimed by her, on a reference to the grounds of appeal in M. P. Case No. 154 of 1978 and the appellate order as impeached, that the learned Tribunal has not duly determined the issues involved, on proper or due reasons being given. It was claimed by her that the initial authority also was in errors in deciding the lis or the points as raised and pleaded duly. As such, she claimed that the point regarding perversity, even if not taken specifically, this Court would not be powerless to consider whether the points as duly raised have been appropriately decided on good and cogent reasons and if the answer is not satisfactory, then that would give rise to or would be a case of perversity, which this Court, in a proceeding under Art. 226 would be justified and authorised to investigate. There is no doubt that in a writ proceeding High Court would be justified to interfere and investigate in cases of perversity, when the findings arrived at, are obstinately or wilfully or unreasonably or blindly or unaccountably wrong. In fact, it was the submissions of Mrs. Sen Gupta that since the exceptions as duly taken or raised at appropriate stages, have not been properly dealt with or decided, on reasons or such reasons are not available from the records viz., the orders as impeached, there was admittedly a case of perversity, which this Court can investigate, more so when in a writ proceeding. High Court, as a superior authority, has such right over inferior Tribunals. Mrs. Sen Gupta further claimed that the High Court, as such superior authority, has every jurisdiction to see, scan and scrutinise the reasonings given by the inferior Tribunals, in a case like this and as such, the learned Tribunal was required to record its reasons duly or should have passed a speaking order, so that reading the appellate order, it could form the opinion or get an idea about the basis or background of the order, as made. It was further claimed by Mrs. Sen Gupta that since the orders as made, have determined the rights of the petitioner.

so the authorities making them, were quasi-judicial authorities and as such also, they were required to pass speaking orders. She claimed that the order by the initial authority was speaking order no doubt, but since the learned Tribunal, has not decided all the exceptions as taken by a speaking order, such determination was perverse.

10. The submissions as referred to above, do get support from the determinations in the case of M/s. Mahabir Prosad Santosh Kumar v. State of U. P., AIR 1970 SC 1302, where it has been observed that opportunity to a party interested in the dispute to present his case on question of law as well as fact, ascertainment of facts from materials before the Tribunal after disclosing the materials to the party against whom it is intended to use them and adjudication by a reasoned judgment upon a finding of the facts in controversy and application of the law to the facts found, are attributes of even a quasi-judicial determination. Recording of reasons in support of a decision by a quasi-judicial authority is obligatory as it ensures that the decision is reached according to law and is not a result of caprice whim or fancy reached on ground of policy or expediency. The necessity to record reasons is greater if the order is subject to appeal. The submissions of Mrs. Sen Gupta, do also get further support from the determinations in the case of M/s. Travancore Rayons Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 862. In that case, it has been observed that when judicial power is exercised by an authority normally performing executive or administrative functions, the Supreme Court insists upon disclosure or reasons in support of the order on two grounds, one, that the party aggrieved in a proceeding before the High Court or the Supreme Court has the opportunity to demonstrate that the reasons which persuaded the authority to reject his case were erroneous, the other, that the obligation to record reasons operates as a deterrent against possible arbitrary action by the executive authority invested with the judicial power.

11. It must also be noted that apart from the decisions as mentioned hereinbefore, specific reference was made by Mr. Dutta to the determinations in the case of State of Madras v. A. R. Srin-vasan, AIR 1966 SC 1827, which was also a case on disciplinary proceedings and where, the Supreme Court has observed that in dealing with the question as to whether it is obligatory on the State Government to give reasons in support of the order imposing a penalty on the delinquent officer, it is to be remembered that the disciplinary proceedings against such a delinquent officer begin with an enquiry conducted by an officer appointed in that behalf. That enquiry is followed by a report and the Public Service Commission is consulted where necessary. Having regard to the material which is thus made available to the Government and which is made available to the delinquent officer also, it is unreasonable to suggest that the State Government must record its reasons as to why it accepts the findings of the Tribunal. It is conceivable that when the State Government does not accept the findings of the Tribunal which may be in favour of the delinquent officer and proposes to impose a penalty on the delinquent officer, it should give reasons as to why it differs from the conclusions of the Tribunal, though even in such a case it is not necessary that the reasons should be detailed or elaborate. This case was also sought to be distinguished by Mrs. Sen Gupta on the grounds as mentioned above. Mr. Dutt also made further reference to the determinations in the case of the State of Assam v. Bimal Kumar, AIR 1963 SC 1612, wherein, the effect of absence of statements, if the findings of the enquiry officer were accepted and what was contemplated by reasonable opportunity under Art. 311 (2), were considered and it has been observed that it is no doubt desirable that the dismissing authority should indicate in the second notice its concurrence with the conclusions of the enquiry officer before it issues the notice under Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution. But the failure to so state expressly in the notice does not necessarily justify the conclusion that the notice given in that behalf does not afford a reasonable opportunity to the delinquent officer under Art. 311 (2) and amounts to a contravention of Article 311 (2). If the dismissing authority differs from the findings either wholly or partially, recorded in the enquiry report it is essential that the provisional conclusions reached by the dismissing authority must be stated in the notice in order to give the delinquent officer a reasonable opportunity to show cause under Art. 311 (2). But where the dismissing authority purported to proceed to issue the notice after accepting the enquiry report in its entirety (as in the instant case) and a copy of the enquiry report was also enclosed along with the notice, it must have been obvious to the delinquent officer that the findings recorded against him by the enquiring officer had been accepted, and so it would not be reasonable to accept the view that the civil servant concerned had no reasonable opportunity as required by Art. 311 (2). From the fact that the enquiry report had suggested the punishment of withholding of three increments while in the show cause notice the action proposed was removal from service, it cannot be inferred that the dismissing authority did not accept the findings recorded by the enquiring officer in favour of the delinquent officer, apart from holding that it is now well settled that a public officer against whom disciplinary proceedings are intended to be taken is entitled to have two opportunities before disciplinary action is finally taken against him. An enquiry must be conducted according to the rules prescribed in that behalf and consistently with the requirements of natural justice. At this enquiry, the public officer concerned would be entitled to test the evidence adduced against him by cross-examination, where necessary, and to lead his own evidence. In other words, at this first stage of the proceedings he is entitled to have an opportunity to defend himself. When the enquiry is over and the enquiring officer submits his report, the dismissing authority has to consider the report and decide whether it agrees with the conclusions of the report or not. If the findings in the report are against the public officer and the dismissing authority agrees with the said finding, a stage is reached for giving another opportunity to the public officer to show why disciplinary action should not be taken against him. In issuing the second notice, the dismissing authority naturally has to come to a tentative or provisional conclusion about the punishment which would meet the requirement of justice in his case, and it is only after reaching conclusions in both these matters provisionally that the dismissing authority issues the second notice. The second opportunity enables the public officer to cover the whole ground and to plead that no case had been made out against him for taking any disciplinary action and then to urge that if he fails in substantiating his innocence, the action proposed to be taken against him is either unduly severe or not called for. It should also be noted that in the case of M/s. Mahabir Jute Mills Ltd., v. Shibban Lal, AIR 1975 SC 2057, it has been observed that while the rules of natural justice would apply to administrative proceedings, it is not necessary that the administrative orders should be speaking orders unless the statute specifically enjoins such a requirement. But it is desirable that such orders should contain reasons when they decide matters affecting rights of parties.

12. Thus, on the basis of the decisions as cited at the Bar and as above and when one thing is certain, that the High Court has power of interference in cases of perversity, so it will also have the jurisdiction to see, if the exceptions as taken, have been appropriately dealt with and decided. For that, and to ensure proper justice, thus, the High Court, in appropriate cases, will have jurisdiction to demand a speaking order from the lower Tribunal, not only for the purpose of finding out, whether the exceptions as taken, have been duly decided, but also for the purpose of testing the validity of the findings arrived at, on the available materials and evidence. Under the determinations of the Supreme Court, ordinarily and where perversity is not in issue, a learned Tribunal, on appeal, may not be required to record reasons extensively, where such appellate order is made on the basis of or on consideration of and in the light of the findings of or by the initial authority, as, in terms of the submissions of Mr. Dutt, the theory of merger would apply. But, the position would be different in a case like this or where there has been an allegation of perversity or there has at least been a claim to that effect, or which would be required to be decided by the High Court. In such view of the matter, the determinations, as referred to by Mr.

Dutt are distinguishable. So, on the basis of the claims as made by him, on the aspect under consideration, when a Rule has been issued, on prima facie satisfaction, the same, in my view can neither be discharged nor the interim order as made in aid of the same, can or should be dissolved at the interlocutory stage, the more so when, the orders as made, have also affected the right of the petitioner or affect the right of the parties.

13. As such, the prayers of Mr. Dutt at this stage, are refused and I further have it on record, that by this determination, I have not made and in fact I have not intended to make any final determination of the issues as involved in the case and they are left to be decided or considered at the relevant stage, on appropriate or proper materials and submissions.

Ordered accordingly.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA AND

C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

Prahldrai Agarwalla and others, Appellants v. Sm. Renuka Pal and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 444 of 1979, D/- 15-2-1982.

Letters Patent (Cal), Cl. 15 — Civil P.C. (1908), O. 7, R. 11; O. 43 R 1—Order under O. 7 R. 11 refusing to reject plaint is not a judgment — Appeal against it is not maintainable.

An order under O. 7 R. 11 refusing to reject the plaint and dismissing the application for rejection of the plaint is not appealable under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent as the order is not a judgment within the meaning of that clause. Similarly any order under O. 7, R. 11 under any of the clauses thereof is clearly non-appealable in view of O. 43 R. 1, Case law discussed.

An order to be a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent must be a decision affecting the merits of the disputes between the parties by determining some right or liability although it might be either final or preliminary or interlocutory. The court in dismissing an application for rejection of the plaint does not determine any right or liability of the parties to the suit which could be said to have affected the merits of the disputes between the parties. (Para 22)

P. K. Ghosh, for Appellants; Gautam Chakravarty, for Respondents.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— This is an appeal from the judgment and order dated 19th Nov., 1979 of R. N. Pyne, J. dismissing the application made by the appellants, inter alia, for the plaint in the suit herein being rejected and taken off the file; alternatively for stay of the suit till the disposal of Title Suit No. 2297 of 1978 (Prahladrai Agarwalla & Ors. v. Shri Rabindranath Pal & Ors.) pending in the City Civil Court at Calcutta; an injunction restraining the respondents herein from proceeding with the suit herein until the disposal of the said application. Facts material for the purpose of this appeal shortly are that, the respondents are owners of premises No. 23, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road, Calcutta, within the Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction of this Court. Their predecessor-in-interest Radhakanta Pal obtained a decree for ejectment in the city Civil Court against Dwariknath Das & Anr., the erstwhile lessees of the said premises. While the said decree was being executed the said Radhakanta Pal died. The respondents as the heirs and legal representatives of the said deceased executed the said decree and obtained possession of the said premises on the 27th Nov., 1978. The case of the respondents is that since then at all material times they lawfully held, seized and possessed the said premises. The suit herein was instituted by the respondents against the appellants in this Court by invoking the concurrent jurisdiction of this Court with the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta. The relevant paragraphs of the plaint filed in the suit herein which would be material for the purposes of this appeal, are set out below:

"6. By an agreement of tenancy dated Dec. 1, 1978 entered into by the plaintiff No. 2 (being the respondent No. 2 Rabindranath Pal) on behalf of all the plaintiffs (being the other respondents) the defendant No. 3 (being the appellant No. 3 Kailash Agarwalla) was granted the tenancy and as such tenant possession of one shop room on the ground floor of the said premises No. 128, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road, Calcutta.

7. On or about Dec. 9, 1978, the defendants (being the appellants) wrongfully and/or illegally dispossessed the plaintiffs without their consent and without recourse to law of the entire first floor of the said premises No. 128, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road, Calcutta, save and except two rooms in possession of one Bimal Homeo Hall Private Ltd., by forcing open the Padlock to the said floor which was put by the plaintiff after obtaining possession of the premises as aforesaid. The defendants have also removed the furniture kept by the plaintiff in the first floor of the said premises wrongfully, illegally and without the consent of the plaintiff.

10. The plaintiffs state that in the premises aforesaid they are entitled to recover possession of the said property notwithstanding any title, right or interest which may be set up by the defendants or by any of them.

11.

12. Further and in the alternative by reason of the premises the plaintiffs have suffered damages caused by the defendants and by each of them in respect of the suit property which the plaintiff assess at Rs. 4,000.00 on and from Dec. 9, 1978 being the date of their dispossession.

13. The plaintiffs are entitled to and claim recovery of possession of suit pro-party and damages as aforesaid from the defendants from the date of dispossession i.e., Dec. 9, 1978.

14. The plaintiffs' cause of action in this suit arose on Dec. 9, 1978 at premises No. 128, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road within the jurisdiction of this Hon'ble Court and has been and still is continuing from day-to-day.

15. Inasmuch as the value of the suit property exceed Rs. 50,000.00 and damages claimed by the plaintiffs do not exceed Rs. 5,000.00 this Hon'ble Court has the jurisdiction concurrent with Small Cause Court at Calcutta and the City Civil Court at Calcutta has not the jurisdiction to entertain, try and determine this suit.

16. For the purpose of court-fees this suit has been valued at Rs. 500.00/- for delivery of possession and at Rupees 4,000.00/- for damages and such ad valorem Court-fees has been paid in this suit and the plaintiffs undertake to pay such additional Court-fees as and when the same may be directed by this Hon'ble Court.

The plaintiffs claim:

(a) Decree for possession of the suit property being the first floor of the said premises No. 128, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road, Calcutta save and except two rooms in possession of the said Bimal Homeo Hall (P) Ltd.

(b) Decree for Rs. 4,000.00 as damages.

(c) Receiver.

(f) Further or other reliefs."

2. It appears that the appellants Nos. 1 and 2 herein have also instituted a suit against the respondents herein in the City Civil Court being Title Suit No. 2297 of 1978 (Shri Prahladrai Agarwalla & Anr. v. Shri Rabindranath Paul & Ors), inter alia, for a declaration that the appellant No. 1 is the rightful tenant of the first floor flat of premises No. 128, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road at a monthly rent of Rs. 215/- and the appellant No. 2 is the rightful tenant in respect of the shop room on the ground floor of the said premises No. 128 Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road at a monthly rent of Rs. 40/-.

3. Mr. P. K. Ghose, learned Advocate for the appellants, submitted that the said application in the Court below was made by the appellants for the plaint in the suit herein being rejected and taken off the file and alternatively, for stay of the said suit until the disposal of the suit filed by the appellants in the City Civil Court against the respondents. The suit has been instituted by the respondents by invoking the concurrent jurisdiction of this Court with the Presidency Small Causes Court, Calcutta as would appear from paragraph 15 of the plaint. To keep the suit within the pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of the Presidency Small Causes Court, Calcutta the suit has been valued for the purpose of court-fees at Rupees 500.00 for delivery of possession and at Rs. 4,000.00 for damages. Such damages are claimed by the respondents in respect of damages done by the appellants to the suit property as will appear from paragraph 12 of the plaint. In paragraph 15 of the plaint the respondents have valued the suit property at exceeding Rs. 50,000.00. A suit for recovery of possession of a property exceeding Rs. 50,000.00 in value could not be entertained by the Presidency Small Causes Court, Calcutta, the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction being Rs. 5,000.00. The valuation of the suit for delivery of possession at Rs. 500.00 for the purpose of Court-fees is an undervaluation and would not in any event determine the question of jurisdiction. Mr. Ghose referred to S. 18 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act as amended by the West Bengal Act XXXII of 1969. The portion relevant for our purposes of the said section reads as under:

"Subject to the exceptions in Sec. 19, the Small Cause Court shall have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature when the amount or value of the subject matter does not exceed five thousand rupees."

He also referred to Section 19 of the said Act and to clauses (d) and (g) of the said section which read as under:

"The Small Cause Court should have no jurisdiction in

(d) Suits for the recovery of immovable property

(g) Suits for the determination of any other right to or interest in immovable property."

4. Mr. Ghose urged that the suit herein is a suit for recovery of immoveable property. The claim for damages is merely an ancillary relief. The immoveable property, recovery whereof is claimed in the suit is valued in paragraph 15 of the plaint at exceeding Rs. 50,000.00. The Small Cause Court, therefore, had no jurisdiction to entertain or try such suit. In any event the claim for damages is an alternative claim as pleaded in paragraph 12 of the plaint. Thus, even if the respondents give up their claim for possession, the suit cannot proceed merely on an alternative claim. The claim for damages as framed in the suit arises out of alleged dispossession of the respondents of the property in suit by the appellants and in paragraph 12 of the plaint it is pleaded that the respondents suffered damages caused by the appellants in respect of the suit property which the respondents assess at Rs. 4,000.00 on and from 9th December, 1978 being the date of their alleged dispossession. To decide the question of damages as made in the suit it would be necessary for the Court to determine the right or interest of the parties in the the property in suit which the Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction to decide under Section 19 (g) of the said Act.

5. Thus if the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction to entertain or try the suit, the suit could not be filed in this Court with the Small Causes Court.

6. Mr. Ghose next urged that the application in the Court below was maintainable under Order 7 Rule 11 (d) of the Civil P. C. Alternatively for determination of a preliminary issue as to the jurisdiction of this Court to entertain or try this Suit.

7. Under O. 7 R. 11 (d) the plaint shall be rejected where the suit appears from the statements in the plaint to be barred by any law. The suit is barred by Section 18 read with Section 19 Clauses (d) and (g) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. The suit is firstly for recovery of immoveable property. The jurisdiction of the Presidency Small Cause Courts to entertain or try the suit in respect of such claim is barred by section 19 (d) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act and its jurisdiction to try the claim for damages is barred by section 19 (g) of the said Act.

8. It was next urged that both the claims in the suit, namely, recovery of possession and damage arise out of the same cause of action, namely, trespass by the appellants and dispossession of the respondents. Both the claims are therefore joined in the suit under O. 2 R. 4 (c) of the Civil P. C. otherwise the claim for possession could not be joined with the claim for recovery of possession of immoveable property. The respondents could not have sued only for the damages nor could they relinquish the claim for possession inasmuch as in such case the relief for recovery of possession would be barred under O. 2 R. 2 sub-rules (2) and (3). There is no question of return of the plaint under Order 7, R 10, that rule does not apply to this Court, a chartered High Court, as will appear from O. 49, R. 3 sub-r. (1) of the Civil P.C. The valuation of the suit for the purposes of Court fees as made in para. 16 of the plaint, is incorrect and the suit has been undervalued. The suit could not be valued either for the purpose of court fees or for any other purpose in respect of delivery of possession at Rs. 500.00 in respect of a property exceeding Rs. 50,000-00 in value.

9. Mr. Ghose urged that the suit herein being a suit for recovery of possession of immoveable property from a trespasser without any claim for declaration of title to the property, the Court fees payable under the West Bengal Court Fees Act, 1970 had to be computed under Section 7 (vi) of the said Act according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint and so far as the claim for damages the Court-fees payable had to be computed under Section 7 (i) of the said Act according to the amount claimed. Section 7 (i) and Section 7 (vi) of the West Bengal Act corresponds to Section 7 (i) and S. 7 (v-A) respectively of the Court-fees Act, 1870, which sections are not exempted from the operation of Sec. 8, of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887 and the value of the suit for computation of Court-fees and for the purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. The respondents having valued the property in suit at a sum exceeding Rs. 50,000.00 could not value the suit either for the purposes of Court fees or jurisdiction at any other sum so as to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of a particular Court. In any event, the suit as framed not being a suit of a small cause Court nature the respondents could not convert it to a suit of small cause Court nature by arbitrary valuation. It was held by a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Ganappa Putta Hedge v. Hammad Saiba reported is AIR 1925 Bom 440. That the suit as framed not being of a small cause Court nature did not attain that character because the plaintiff gave up his claim to the declaration. This was a suit where the plaintiff sued the defendant for recovery of Rs. 150.00/- and for a declaration that the mortgage bond executed by him was satisfied. The plaintiff did not pay the court-fees in respect of the said declaration and gave up that claim. The matter ultimately went before the High Court in Second Appeal and it was contended that such appeal did not lie as the suit was of a Small Cause Court nature by reason of the plaintiff having given up his claim for declaration. The High Court negatived such contention.

10. It was urged before us that even if the respondents gave up their claim for recovery of possession the suit would not be converted into a suit of a Small Cause Court nature so that this Court would be entitled to entertain or try this suit in exercise of its concurrent jurisdiction with the Presidency Small Cause Court. The jurisdiction had to be determined on the basis of the suit as filed and not on the basis of what the plaintiff might do or might not do subsequently. It was next urged that the suit having been filed in this Court as a suit entertainable by the Small Cause Court could not be converted into a suit solely entertainable by this Court alone by subsequent amendment of the plaint. It was next urged that even if, Order 7 Rule 11 (d) did not apply, the said application may be treated as an application for trial of an issue under Chapter XIV Rule 6 of the Original Side Rules of this Court and this Court could decide in such application the issue as to the jurisdiction of this Court in the exercise of its concurrent jurisdiction with the Small Cause Court in entertaining the suit herein.

11. It was lastly contended that the order under appeal was without jurisdiction inasmuch as the learned Judge of the Court below proceeded on the basis that the Small Cause Court was entitled to entertain and try the suit if the respondents gave up their claim for recovery of possession which was solely on the basis of an assumption although the respondents had not, in fact, given up any part of their claim in the suit. Subsequent facts would reveal that not only the respondents did not give up any part of their claim in the suit but on the contrary they applied for amendment of the plaint so as to convert the suit to a suit triable by this Court in its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction and not on the basis of concurrent jurisdiction of this Court with the Small Cause Court.

12. Mr. Gautam Chakravarty appearing for the respondents urged that this Court having allowed the amendment of the plaint and payment of additional Court fees, the defect, if any, in the suit was regularised under Section 11 of the West Bengal Court Fees Act, 1970. The Court has power to revise the valuation and determine the correct valuation of the suit and may make an enquiry for that purpose and under O. 7, R. 11 (b) and (c) of the Civil P. C. the Court may direct the plaintiff to correct the valuation and put in the deficit Court-fees. It was urged that the Court-fees Act was an Act for the computation of Court fees, it had nothing to do with, nor did it confer jurisdiction on Court. The jurisdictional value of a suit had to be determined only under the Suits Valuation Act. The relief as to recovery of possession of the property in suit from the appellants, the trespassers, as no declaration of title had been claimed, was governed by Sec. 7 (vi) (a) of the West Bengal Court Fees Act, 1970 and computation of the Court fees would be according to the amount at which such relief had been valued in the plaint and under Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act the value determined for Court fees and the value for the purposes of jurisdiction should be the same. If the case of the appellants was that the respondents have undervalued the suit, they would bring the matter to the notice of the Court and the provision of valuation and determination of correct valuation as contained in Sections 11 to 14 of the West Bengal Court Fees Act, 1970 could be applied by the Court.

13. It was next urged that, the entire claim and issue in the suit was not beyond the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. Even if the Small Cause Court could not grant the relief in prayer (a) of the plaint, being the claim for recovery of possession, it could grant the relief in prayer (b) of the plaint, the claim for Rs. 4,000.00 as damages. Thus, it was not a case where the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction at all to entertain or try the suit but it could entertain and try the suit as to recovery of damages and decide that question. The expression "right to or interest in immovable property" as used in Section 19 (g) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, suits for determination whereof was not cognizable by the Small Cause Court under the said section did not mean proceeds of immovable property. The Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to try even questions of title which arose incidentally in a suit even if such question was the principal question but not the sole and only question. In support of such contention Mr. Chakraborty referred to the following decisions of this Court:

(1) In the matter of Peary Mohun Ghosaul v. Haran Chunder Gangooly reported in (1885) ILR 11 Cal 261.

(2) Makhan Lal Datta v. Goribullah Sardar reported in (1890) ILR 17 Cal 541.

(3) Ashutosh Dey v. Foolchand Keshabdeo, reported in AIR 1942 Cal 530.

(4) Amritlal Kalay v. Nibaran Chandra Nayek reported in (1904) ILR 31 Cal 240.

(5) Rajendra Mullick v. Nanda Lal Gupta reported in (1904) ILR 31 Cal 1001.

14. It was urged that Order 7 R. 11 (d) was not applicable in this case. Rejection of a plaint under that rule was envisaged in a case where from the statement made in the plaint the suit appeared to be barred by any law. There was a fundamental difference between want of jurisdiction in a Court to entertain the suit and the suit being barred by law. Want of jurisdiction in a Court was a matter of procedure under the Civil P. C. That would not bring the suit or any part of the claim in the suit within the mischief of O. 7 R. 11 (d). Want of jurisdiction could not be equated with the expression "barred by any law". The suit being barred by any law and suit not entertainable by a particular Court because of want of jurisdiction in that Court in that behalf, were two different concepts. Question as to the jurisdiction of the Court could not be agitated under O. 7 R. 11 (d). Such question could be agitated under O. 7 Rule 10, the specific provision made for such purpose. Under O. VII R. 10 plaint could not be rejected for want of jurisdiction in a Court in which it was filed but it would be returned for being presented to the Court in which the suit should have been instituted. If this Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, it would be returned for filing in the City Civil Court, Calcutta under Section 14 of the Calcutta City Civil Court Act. Mr. Chakraborty in this connection referred to Section 5 and the non obstante clause in Section 21 and to Clause 17 of Schedule I of the Calcutta City Civil Court Act.

15. It was next urged that the question of jurisdiction decided herein by the Court below on the said application of the appellants was not barred by the principles of res judicata or estoppel and could be urged by the appellants over again at the hearing of the suit. Mr. Chakravarty relied on the following decisions:—

1. P. Dasa Muni Reddi v. P. Appa Rao reported in AIR 1974 SC 2089.

2. Arjun Singh v. Mohindra Kumar reported in AIR 1964 SC 993.

3. Sushil Kumar Ghosh v. Revenue Officer, Balurghat reported in AIR 1976 Cal 1.

16. For the meaning of the expressions "bar" and "jurisdiction" Mr. Chakraborty referred to Osborne's Judicial Dictionary (5th Edition). At page 44 it is stated: "to bar a right is to destroy or to end it" and at page 178 jurisdiction is defined as "power of Court or Judge to entertain an action". Reference was also made for the same purpose to Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (4th Edition) at page 254 for the meaning of the expression "bar" and to page 1452 for the meaning of the expression "jurisdiction."

17. It was next urged that if the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit with regard to prayer (b) of the plaint being the claim for damage of Rs. 4,000.00, the suit could be tried and decided by the Small Cause Court in respect of that prayer, while the prayer for recovery of possession could be given up by the respondents or rejected by the Court. It was not a case of total lack of jurisdiction of Small Cause Court to entertain or try the suit. That being the position, part of the plaint with regard to only recovery of possession could not be rejected by this Court on the said application of the appellants. In support of such contention reliance was placed on a decision of this Court in Manick Lal v. Shiva Jute Bailing reported in (1948) 52 Cal WN 389. Here, the plaintiff filed the suit for the following reliefs:

(a) Declaration that the aforesaid contract is void;

(b) Delivery up of the said contract by the defendants to the plaintiff;

(c) Cancellation of the said alleged contract;

(d) Injunction on the defendants from proceeding with the arbitration or taking any other steps.

18. The defendants made an application under Order 7 R. 11 (a) of the Civil P. C. for rejection of the plaint on the ground that it did not disclose any cause of action. Das, J. found that the plaint disclosed a cause of action and the plaintiff could obtain relief in the suit with regard to delivery up and cancellation of the contract although the other prayers in the plaint were not maintainable and in that context, his Lordship made the following observation:

"Under O. 7 Rule 11 the Court has no authority to reject parts of the plaint. Therefore even if the prayer for declaration and injunction may not be maintainable, the plaint cannot be rejected or taken off the file, for it discloses a cause of action for cancellation under Section 39 of the Specific Relief Act."

19. The case before us is, not a matter which is governed by Order 7. Rule 11 (a) but governed by Order 7, Rule 11 (d). It is not the case of the appellants that the plaint filed herein does not disclose a cause of action; but their case is that jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court is barred by law, namely, Section 19 (d) and (g) of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act. The primary and main relief claimed in the suit is recovery of possession on the ground that appellants are trespassers. The claim for damages is merely an ancillary relief based on damages caused by the respondents in respect of the property in suit from the date of dispossession of the respondents by the appellants. Whether the respondents would ultimately give up their claim for recovery of possession or not so as to bring the suit within the cognizance of the Small Cause Court, would not be, in our view, a relevant consideration in a case where the suit has been filed in the High Court on the basis of its concurrent jurisdiction with the Small Cause Court. A subsequent event which might or might not happen would not determine the jurisdiction of the High Court to entertain or try the suit on the ground that the suit is cognizable by the Small Cause Court. In our opinion the question has to be considered and decided on the basis of the suit as framed and filed in this Court. It is possible that if this suit was filed in the Small Cause Court, the respondents might have given up a part of their claim to bring it within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, but we are not concerned with such question. We are concerned with a case where the suit has been filed in the High Court on the basis of its concurrent jurisdiction with the Small Cause Court as a suit cognizable by the Small Cause Court. Then again, when the application by the appellants was made, heard and decided the respondents had not given up their claim for recovery of possession. The suit was at that time a suit for recovery of immovable property with a claim for damages. Thus there was no question of part of the plaint being rejected. In that view of the matter the case of Manik Lal Memani v. Shiva Jute Bailing Co. (1948) 52 Cal WN 389 (supra) has no application to this case.

20. Whether the respondents would give up part of their claim which is admittedly not within the cognizance of the Small Cause Court would be a matter of conjecture and speculation and cannot determine the question of jurisdiction. Subsequent events however, show that the respondents not only did not give up the claim for recovery of possession, but amended the plaint in such a way that the suit herein became a suit solely cognizable by this Court. Whether that is permissible or not is the subject matter of the very next appeal appearing before us being Appeal No. 24 of 1980 (Prahladrai Agarwalla & Ors. v. Smt. Renuka Pal & Ors). In our opinion, the said subsequent event also would not decide the questions raised by the appellants before the Court below in the application herein. The same has to be decided on the basis of plaint as it stood at the time when the said application was made, heard and decided. It was next urged by Mr. Chakraborty that an order made under Order 7 Rule 11 was not appealable and he referred to O. 43 Rule 1 of the Civil P. C. It was also urged that an order under O. 7 R. 11 refusing to reject a plaint and dismissing the application for rejection of the plaint was not a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. Such order did not determine any part of the suit. In support of his contention Mr. Chakraborty cited the following decisions.

1. Shanti Kumar R. Kanji v. Home Insurance Co. of New York reported in AIR 1974 SC 1719.

2. Rani Asrumati Debi v. Rupendra Nath Raikat reported in AIR 1953 SC 198.

3. Gaganmal Ramchand v. Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation reported in AIR 1950 Bom 345.

4. Lal Behari Prosad Chowdhury v. Parasmull Jain reported in (1970) 74 Cal WN 972.

5. National Screw & Wire Products Ltd. v. Syndicate Bank Ltd., reported in (1971) 75 Cal WN 447.

21. It is not necessary to discuss above decisions in detail. Any order under O. 7. Rule 11 under any of the clauses thereof is clearly not appealable as will appear from O. 43 R. 1.

22. An order to be a "judgment" within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent must be a decision affecting the merits of the disputes between the parties by determining some right or liability although it might be either final or preliminary or interlocutory. The Court below in dismissing the application of the appellants and rejecting their prayer for rejection of the plaint did not determine any right or liability of the parties to the suit which could be said to have affected the merits of the disputes between the parties. The said disputes have to be decided in the suit and it would be open to the appellants to raise all contentions in their written statement which they might desire to urge in the suit at the hearing. In that view of the matter the order under appeal is not, in our opinion, appealable under clause 15 of the Letters Patent. An application for trial of issues could be made only after written statement has been filed by the defendant and thereupon issues have been settled. That is not the case here. But even if the said application of the appellants be taken as an application for trial of issues under Chapter XIV R. 6 of the Rules of the Original Side of this Court then also the answer to the question as to the appealability of the order would remain the same. The order would be appealable only if it was a 'Judgment' within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent, which, as has been noted earlier, it is not.

23. We are, therefore, of opinion that the order under appeal is not appealable and this appeal is, therefore, not maintainable. We should note another point urged by Mr. Chakraborty and we accept his argument that the point of jurisdiction as decided by the Court below on the said application of the appellants was not barred by res judicata and the appellants would be entitled to urge the same over again at the trial of the suit. Reference may be made in this connection to the two decisions of the Supreme Court and also to a decision of this Court.

1. Arjun Singh v. Mohindra Kumar reported in AIR 1964 SC 993.

2. P. Dasa Muri Reddy v. P. Appa Rao reported in AIR 1974 SC 2089.

3. Sushil Kumar Ghosh v. Revenue Officer Balurghat reported in AIR 1976 Cal 1.

24. For all the above reasons the appellants cannot succeed in this appeal and the appeal is therefore dismissed with costs.

25. We however make it clear, that we have not decided in this appeal any of the other points raised by the parties before us save and except the question of appealability of the order under appeal. The parties would, therefore, be entitled to urge all such points at the hearing of the suit.

C. O. No. 168 of 1982, D/- 30-3-1982.

W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 17 (1) & (2) — Striking out defence — Protection against — Tenant must deposit even time-barred rent. (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 and AIR 1981 Cal 352 (Pt C), Overruled.

Under Sec. 17 (1) and (2) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act the tenant is under obligation to deposit the rent which may have been time barred if he is to avail of the protection against striking out the defence against delivery of possession u/s. 17 (3) of the Act. (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 and AIR 1981 Cal 352 (Pt. C.), Overruled; AIR 1980 Cal 114 Approved. AIR 1978 SC 287 Explained. (Paras 24, 33, 37, 47 to 49)

Per P. K. Banerjee, J.

In the context of the history of the Rent Control legislation in West Bengal and in the context of earlier legislation it is quite clear that the word 'legally' cannot be read in S. 17 (1) and (2). As the words "legally payable" have been deliberately omitted from sub-s. (1) of S. 17 by the Legislature in S. 17 or for that matter S. 17 (1) and (2), the words "legally payable" cannot be read into S. 17 (1) and/or (2). The Rent Act of West Bengal gives the tenant a protection only if he is a defaulter and if he pays the amount within the period allowed under Ss. 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the Act. The Act and amendment therein make it clear that a tenant who is a defaulter cannot be protected unless he pays the amount of default and the principle is "pay and stay". If tenant does not pay or default in making the payment the protection available to the tenant under the Act for the benefit of the tenant cannot be availed of. In the context of S. 17 the amount of arrears which is barred will have to be deposited and the court will have to consider all the amounts whether it is barred or not and come to a finding of the actual amount deposited if the tenants want to avail the protection of Section 17 of the Act.

(Paras 10, 10A, 12, 33, 37)

Per Maitra, J. (concurring):

The use of the expression "for the period for which the tenant may have made default" in sub-s. (1) of S. 17 is a pointer that there is no restriction about the period of default. It covers the entire period of default and is wide enough to indicate that the tenant is enjoined to deposit the entire arrears. After the determination of the dispute under the sub-sec. (2), the amount payable by the tenant is substantially the same, as stated in sub-sec. (1) of S. 17 of the Act. (Paras 28, 29)

Per Dutta, J. (concurring):

Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co. (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 has not been impliedly overruled by the decision of the Supreme Court in Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandrajji Virajman Mandir, AIR 1978 SC 287. But Raghunath Singh's case was not correctly decided and that a tenant raising a dispute under S. 17 (2) read with S. 17 (1) of the 1956 Act is required to deposit the arrears for the period for which he may have made default including the time barred arrears as payment of such arrears can be and has been made a condition of protection granted to the tenants under S. 17 of the Act.  S. N. Bakshi and Subrata Nayak, for Petitioners; Tarun Chatterjee, for Respondent.

BANERJEE, J.:— This revisional application was heard as contested application in presence of both the parties. The point involved in this revisional application is whether in adjudicating an application under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act the Court is to take cognizance of arrears which are time barred or not. On the point there was an earlier Division Bench decision reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghu Nath Singh v. Patel & Co.). In a case reported in AIR 1978 SC 287 (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ramchandra) it was held by the Supreme Court that while considering a provision of S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act, the Supreme Court held that the words 'entire amount due' as contained in S. 20 (4) of the Act included rent which has become time barred. Following the said decision the Division Bench of this Court in the case reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) (Central Coalfields Ltd. v. Rabindra Nath Dutta) held, inter alia, that the case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghu Nath Singh v. Patel & Co.) was not properly decided and in any case has been overruled by the Supreme Court judgment as hereinbefore stated. After the judgment was delivered by the Division Bench, however, the Hon'ble single Judge in a case reported in (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) (L. N. Shah v. D. P. Karmakar) at page 846 (of Cal WN): (at p. 356 of AIR) held that the Supreme Court is clearly distinguishable and the Supreme Court has not by implication overruled the decision of our High Court reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093. When the same matter came up before the Division Bench, the Division Bench referred the matter to the learned Chief Justice for constitution of a Special Bench for hearing of the present revisional application. The Hon'ble Chief Justice having constituted the Bench, the matter was placed before us for hearing.

2. Mr. S. N. Bakshi on behalf of the petitioner contended firstly that in S. 17 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act there are no restrictions for the period of default in the four corners of the said section, secondly, he argued that S. 17 was enacted to give the benefit to the tenant on condition that if the tenant wants to avoid striking out his defence against delivery of possession he must have to deposit the amount specified under section or if there is a dispute of the amount under S. 17 (2) of the Act may raise it by an application under S. 17 (2) of the Act. It is argued by Mr. Bakshi that limitation bars the remedy but does not extinguish the debt which still remains in force and if payable the creditor or in this case landlord may recover the debt in some other way. The bar of limitation only extinguishes the remedy by way of suit but the debt still remains due.

3. Mr. Tarun Chatterjee on behalf of the opposite party, however, contended that S. 17 is not only for the benefit of the tenant but also for the landlord. Mr. Chatterjee contended that the decision reported in AIR 1978 SC 287 (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ramchandra) has no manner of application in the present case as the provision of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act is quite different from S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act, which was interpreted by the Supreme Court in AIR 1978 SC 287. It is argued by Mr. Chatterjee that the Division Bench judgment reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) (Central Coalfields Ltd. v.

Rabindra Nath Dutta) is not correct, inasmuch as, their Lordships of the Division Bench could not import the word "entire" into the body of S. 17 as the said section does not contain the word. Mr. Chatterjee further contended the Hon'ble single Judge in the case reported in (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) (L. N. Saha v. D. P. Karmakar) was of the opinion and rightly so that the judgment of (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) does not deal with S. 17 (2) at all. It only deals with S. 17 (1). It is, therefore, argued that the provision of S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act and the scheme of the section are quite different and therefore the Supreme Court decision has no manner of application.

4. Before we discuss those decisions cited at the Bar it is relevant for us to consider the history of the tenancy legislations in our State beginning from 1950. The W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 which came into force on 30th March, 1950. The said legislation was enacted in order to make better provision for the control of rents of premises in Calcutta or certain other areas. Section 12 of the Act provides for the grounds on which and which alone the tenant can be evicted from the tenanted premises. The marginal note of section is for protection of a tenant against eviction which provides a non obstante clause, namely, "notwithstanding anything to the contrary to any other Act or law, no order or decree for the recovery of possession of any premises shall be made by any court in favour of the landlord against a tenant, including a tenant whose lease has expired: Provided that nothing in the sub-section shall apply to any suit for decree for such recovery of possession",.....12 (1) (i) provided "subject to the provisions of Section 14 where the amount of two months' rent legally payable by the tenant and due from him is in arrears by not having been paid within the time fixed by contract, or in the absence of such contract by the fifteenth day of the month next following that for which the rent is payable or by not having been validly deposited in accordance with Section 10." Section 14 of 1950 Act runs as follows:—

"14 (1). If in a suit for recovery of possession of any premises from the tenant the landlord would not get a decree for possession but for clause (i) of the proviso to sub-section (i) of Section 12, the court shall determine the amount of rent legally payable by the tenant and which is in arrears taking into consideration any order made under sub-section (4) and effect thereof up to the date of the order mentioned hereafter, as also the amount of interest on such arrears of rent calculated at the rate of nine and a three eights per centum per annum from the day when the rents became arrears up to such date, together with the amount of such cost of the suit as is fairly allowable to the plaintiff-landlord, and shall make an order on the tenant for paying the aggregate of the amounts (specifying in the order such aggregate) on or before a date fixed in the order.

(2) Such date fixed for payment shall be the fifteenth day from the date of the order, excluding the day of the order.

(3) If within the time fixed in the order under sub-section (i), the tenant deposits in the court the sum specified in the said order, the suit, so far as it is a suit for recovery of possession of the premises, shall be dismissed by the court. In default of such payment the court shall proceed with the hearing of the suit:

Provided that the tenant shall not be entitled to the benefit of protection against eviction under this section if he makes default in payment of the rent referred to in clause (i) of the proviso to sub-section (i) of Section 12 on three occasions within a period of eighteen months.

(4) If the tenant contests the suit as regards claim for ejectment, the plaintiff landlord may make an application at any stage of the suit for order on the tenant-defendant to deposit month by month rent at a rate at which it was last paid and also the arrears of rent, if any, and the court after giving an opportunity to the parties to be heard may make an order for deposit of rent at such rate month by month and the arrears of rent, if any, and on the failure of the tenant to deposit the arrears of rent within fifteen days of the date of order or the rent at such rate for any month by the fifteenth day of the next following month, the court shall order the defence against ejectment to be struck out and the tenant to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended the claim to ejectment. The landlord may also apply for permission to withdraw the deposited rent without prejudice to his right to claim decree for ejectment and the court may permit him to do so.

(5) The power given under sub-section (4) may be exercised by courts of appeal with necessary adaptation".

5. The W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 was repealed and West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act of 1956 was enacted and came into force on 31st of March, 1956. Section 13 (1) runs as follows:

"13 (1). Protection of tenant against eviction:

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any other law, no order or decree for the recovery of possession of any premises shall be made by any court in favour of the landlord against a tenant except on one or more of the following grounds, namely,.....(i) where the tenant has made a default in payment of rent for two months within a period of twelve months or for two successive periods in cases where rent is not payable monthly".

Sections 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 also run as follows:—

"17. When a tenant can get the benefit of protection against eviction.—

(1) On a suit or proceeding being instituted by the landlord on any of the grounds referred to in Section 13, the tenant shall, subject to the provisions of sub-section (2), within one month of the service of the writ of summons on him or where he appears in the suit or proceeding without the writ of summons being served on him, within one month of his appearance deposit in Court or with the Controller or pay to the landlord an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid, for the period for which the tenant may have made default including the period subsequent thereto up to the end of the month previous to that in which the deposit or payment is made together with interest on such amount calculated at the rate of eight and one-third per cent. per annum from the date when any such amount was payable up to the date of deposit, and shall thereafter continue to deposit or pay, month by month, by the 15th of each succeeding month a sum equivalent to the rent at that rate.

(2) If in any suit or proceeding referred to in sub-section (1) there is any dispute as to the amount of rent payable by the tenant, the tenant shall, within the time specified in sub-section (1), deposit in court the amount admitted by him to be due from him together with an application to the court for determination of the rent payable. No such deposit shall be accepted unless it is accompanied by an application for determination of the rent payable. On receipt of such application, the court shall—

(a) having regard to the rate at which rent was last paid, and the period for which default may have been made, by the tenant, make, as soon as possible within a period not exceeding one year, a preliminary order, pending final decision of the dispute, specifying the amount, if any, due from the tenant and thereupon the tenant shall, within one month of the date of such preliminary order, deposit in court or pay to the landlord the amount so specified in the preliminary order and

(b) having regard to the provisions of this Act, make, as soon after the preliminary order as possible, a final determining the rate of rent and the amount to be deposited in court or paid to the landlord and either fixing the time within which the amount shall be deposited or paid or, as the case may be, directing that the amount already deposited or paid be adjusted in such manner and within such time as may be specified in the order".

6. In S. 17 (1) of the Act it has been provided that on a suit or proceeding being instituted by the landlord on any of the grounds referred to in S. 13 the tenant shall, subject to the provisions of sub-sec. (2) within one month of the service of the writ of summons on him or where he appears in the suit or proceeding without the writ of summons being served on him, within one month of his appearance deposit in court or with the Controller or pay to the landlord an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid for the period for which the tenant may have made default including the period subsequent thereto up to the end of the month previous to that in which the deposit or payment is made together with interest on such amount calculated at the rate of eight and one-third per cent, per annum from the date when any such amount was payable up to the date of deposit, and shall thereafter continue to deposit or pay month by month by the 15th of each succeeding month a sum equivalent to the rent at that rate. If in any suit or proceeding referred to in sub-sec. (1) there is any dispute as to the amount of rent payable by the tenant, the tenant shall, within the time specified in sub-sec. (1), deposit in court the amount admitted by him to be due from him together with an application to the court for determination of the rent payable. No such deposit shall be accepted unless it is accompanied by an application for determination of the rent payable.

7. We are not at the present moment required to consider the other provisions of the said section for answering the reference. Sub-section (2A) provides that an application can be made by the tenant for the extension of the period and the court may by order extend the time specified in sub-sec. (1) or sub-sec. (2) for the deposit or payment of any amount referred to therein by instalment. S. 17 (2B) provides for extension of time for the deposit or payment of any amount under cl. (a) of sub-sec. (2A) shall be entertained unless it is made before the expiry of the time specified in sub-sec. (1) or sub-sec. (2). It must be stated that there were number of amendments to this section from 1950 and the last amendment was in 1969 in the present section.

8. The question, therefore, is and which has been argued by both the parties whether in making any deposit as hereinbefore stated under sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 17 the rent which has been already barred is to be deposited or only the rent which is not barred is to be deposited under section 17 (1) and or section 17 (2) of the Act.

9. In (1981) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Rahu Nath Singh v. Patel & Co.) the Division Bench of this Court held, inter alia, that under S. 17 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 does not require the tenant to deposit or pay any amount in respect of time barred arrears of rent. Their Lordships considered that it is not a duty of the tenant to pay or he is not required to deposit or pay any amount in respect of rent which have been assigned by the plaintiff-landlord to a stranger. Similarly he is not required to deposit or pay any amount in respect of time barred arrears of rent which are not recoverable from him on account of bar of limitation.

10. It appears to us that since a rent is assigned to a stranger the rent is not recoverable as such but if a stranger wants to file a suit against a tenant he will have to pay it as a person to whom the tenant is a debtor in respect of a debt which cannot be suit for rent but a money suit. Therefore the bar will certainly apply in so far as the said case is concerned. In our opinion, the learned Judges read the words "legally payable" as enforceable under S. 17 (2) when the word is only payable. Their Lordships also held that the word 'payable' is of somewhat vague import but in the context of the section it means 'legally enforceable.' In our opinion, in the context of the history of the legislation and in the context of earlier legislation it is quite clear that the word 'legally' cannot be read into the section as we have already stated hereinbefore. In 1950 Act S. 12 (1) (i) 'legally' payable was in the section itself. It is quite clear and it is to be found in the statute itself that the tenant is to deposit an amount of rent legally payable and S. 14 read with the context it is clear that the section provides that the rent 'legally payable' under S. 14 is a section by which the landlord is given power to apply for an order on the tenant-defendant to deposit month by month the rent at the rate it was last paid and also arrears of rent and if such payment are made then the landlord may also apply to withdraw the deposited amount, if not made, the defence against the ejectment has to be struck out. In the present provision of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act S. 13 does not say anywhere that the amount due may be legally payable. S. 17 on the other hand provides that within one month from the date of the service of writ of summons on the tenant or within one month from the date when he appears without the writ of summons the tenant must deposit or pay to the landlord or to the controller an amount calculated the amount last paid. The sub-sec. in S. 17 (2) also refers to S. 17 (1) where there is any dispute as to the amount of rent payable by the tenant. S. 17 (3) provides that if the tenant fails to pay any amount referred to within the time specified the court shall order the defence and the proceeding of the hearing of the suit. In our view as the words "legally payable" have been deliberately omitted from the sub-section by the legislature in S. 17 or for that matter S. 17 (1) and (2) we cannot read the words "legally payable" into S. 17 (1) and/or (2).

"20. Bar of suit for eviction of tenant except on specified grounds. — (1) Save as provided in sub-sec. (2), no suit shall be instituted for the eviction of a tenant from a building, notwithstanding the determination of his tenancy by efflux of time or on the expiration of a notice to quit or in any other manner.

Provided that nothing in this sub-section shall bar a suit for the eviction of a tenant on the determination of his tenancy by efflux of time where the tenancy for a fixed term was entered into by or in pursuance of a compromise or adjustment arrived at with reference to a suit, appeal, revision or execution proceeding, which is either recorded in court or otherwise reduced to writing and signed by the tenant.

(2) A suit for the eviction of a tenant from a building after the determination of his tenancy may be instituted on one or more of the following grounds, namely:—

(a) that the tenant is in arrears of rent for not less than four months, and has failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month from the date of service upon him of a notice of demand:—

Provided that in relation to a tenant who is a member of the armed forces of the Union and in whose favour the prescribed authority under the Indian Soldiers (Litigation) Act (No. IV of 1925) has issued a certificate that he is serving under special conditions within the meaning of Sec. 3 of that Act or where he has died by enemy action while so serving, then in relation to his heirs, the words 'four months' in this clause shall be deemed to have been substituted by the words 'one year.'

(b) that the tenant has wilfully caused or permitted to be caused substantial damage to the building;

(c) that the tenant has without the permission in writing of the landlord made or permitted to be made any such construction or structural alteration in the building as is likely to diminish its value or utility or to disfigure it,

(d) that the tenant has without the consent in writing of the landlord used it for a purpose other than the purpose for which he was admitted to the tenancy of the building or otherwise done any act which is inconsistent with such use or has been convicted under any law for the time being in force of an offence of using the building or allowing it to be used for illegal or immoral purposes;

(e) that the tenant has sublet in contravention of the provisions of Sec. 25, or as the case may be, of the old Act, the whole or any part of the building;

(f) that the tenant has renounced his character as such or denied the title of the landlord, and the latter has not waived his right of re-entry or condoned the conduct of the tenant;

(g) that the tenant was allowed to occupy the building as part of his contract of employment under the landlord, and his employment has ceased.

(3) (Omitted).

(4) In any suit for eviction on the ground mentioned in cl. (a) of sub-s. (2), if at the first hearing of the suit the tenant unconditionally pays or tenders to the landlord or deposits in Court the entire amount of rent and damages for use and occupation of the building due from him (such damages for use and occupation being calculated at the same rate as rent) together with interest thereon at the rate of nine per cent per annum and the landlords' costs of the suit in respect thereof, after deducting therefrom any amount already deposited by the tenant under sub-sec. (1) of S. 30, the Court may, in lieu of passing decree for eviction on that ground, pass an order relieving the tenant against his liability for eviction on that ground;

Provided that nothing in this sub-section, shall apply in relation to a tenant who or any member of whose family has built or has otherwise acquired in a vacant state, or has got vacated after acquisition, any residential building in the same city, municipality, notified area or town area.

Explanation — For the purpose of this sub-section—

(a) the expression 'first hearing' means the first date for any step or proceeding mentioned in the summons served on the defendant.

(b) the expression 'cost of the suit' includes one-half of the amount of counsel's fee taxable for a contested suit.

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Court to pass a decree on the basis of an agreement, compromise or satisfaction recorded under Rule 3 of O. XXIII of the first Schedule to the Civil P. C. 1908 (Act No. V of 1908).

(6) Any amount deposited by the tenant under sub-sec. (4) or under R. 5 of O. XV of the First Schedule to the Civil P. C. 1908, shall be paid to the landlord forthwith on his application without prejudice to the parties pleadings and subject to the ultimate decision in the suits."

In our opinion, the provision of S. 20 (4) of the Act gives the benefit to the tenant if he deposits the entire amount of rent etc. etc. on the very first date of the hearing of the suit unconditionally. This provision is also applicable in subsequent rent suit filed by the landlord on the ground of default only. It must be remembered that the tenant must deposit on the very first date of the hearing of the suit unconditionally the entire amount of rent. In our Legislation under Section 17 (1) of the Act a tenant must deposit the arrears of rent within one month from the date of service of the writ of summons and if no summons is served within a month from the date of appearance, in that matter such amount is to be deposited under Sec. 17 (1) of the Act. Under Sec. 17 (2) of the Act, the defendant-tenant can apply for determination of the rate of rent and the amount in arrear and till the dispute is decided the admitted amount of rent is to be deposited by the tenant. In that view of the matter, in our opinion, the Rent Act of West Bengal gives the tenant a protection only if he is a defaulter and if he pays the amount within the period allowed under Secs. 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the Act. In that respect, in our opinion, there is no material difference in the carriage of suit between the landlord and tenant. Sec. 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act applies in respect of all ejectment suits on any ground mentioned in Secs. 17 and 13 and Sec. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act only applies in respect of the ground for default of payment of rent.

11. In the Supreme Court decision reported in AIR 1978 SC 287, (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ramchandra) it has been held as follows (Para 4):—

"It will be seen that under Sec. 20 (2) of the Act the landlord gets a cause of action for evicting the tenant when the tenant is in arrears of rent for not less than four months, and has failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month from the date of service upon him a notice of demand. If the tenant pays the entire arrears of rent due at the first hearing of the suit the court may relieve the tenant against eviction even though he had not complied with Sec. 20 (2). The tenant can take advantage of the benefit conferred by Sec. 20 (4) only when he pays the entire amount of rent due as required under Sec. 20 (4). The question that arises for consideration in this appeal is whether the entire amount of rent due would include even rent which cannot be recovered as having been time-barred. There is ample authority for the proposition that though a debt is time-barred it will be a debt due though not recoverable, the relief being barred by limitation. In Halsbury's Laws of England (3rd Edn.) Vol. 24 at p. 205, Article 369 it is stated 'except in cases previously mentioned, the Limitation Act, 1939 only takes away the remedies by action or by set off; it leaves the right otherwise untouched and if a creditor whose debt is statute-barred has any means of enforcing his claim other than by action or set-off, the Act does not prevent him from recovering by those means. The Court of Appeal in Curwen v. Milburn (1889) 42 Ch. D 424 Cotton, L. J. said: 'Statute-barred debts are dues though payment of them cannot be enforced by action.' The same view was expressed by the Supreme Court in Bombay Dying and Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. State of Bombay, 1958 SCR 1122: (AIR 1958 SC 328) where it held that the statute of limitation only bars the remedy but does not extinguish the debt, except in cases provided for by Sec. 28 of the Limitation Act, which does not apply to a debt. Under S. 25 (3) of the Contract Act a barred debt is good consideration for a fresh promise to pay the amount. Sec. 60 of the Contract Act provides that when a debtor makes a payment without any direction as to how it is to be appropriated, the creditor has the right to appropriate it towards a barred debt. In a Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court in Ram Nandan Sharma v. Smt. Maya Devi, AIR 1975 Pat 283 Untwalia, C. J. as he then was, has stated 'there is a catena of decisions in support of what has been said by Tek Chand, J. in First National Bank Ltd. v. Sant Lal, (AIR 1959 Punj 328 at p. 330 para 12) that the Limitation Act with regard to personal actions, bars the remedy without extinguishing the right.' The law is well settled that though the remedy is barred the debt is not extinguished. On consideration of the scheme of the Act, it is clear that the statute has conferred a benefit on the tenant to avoid a decree for eviction by complying with the requirement of Sec. 20 (4). If he fails to avail himself of the opportunity and has not paid the rent for not less than four months and within one month from the date of service upon him of a notice of demand, the landlord under Sec. 20 (2) would be entitled to an order of eviction. Still the tenant can avail himself of the protection by complying with the requirements of Sec. 20 (4). As he has not deposited the entire amount due the protection is no more available. We agree with the view taken by the trial court and the High Court of Allahabad that the words "entire amount of rent due" would include rent which has become time-barred."

12. The principles laid down in the Supreme Court decision applies on all fours in the provision of Sec. 17 (1) and (2) of the Act. The Supreme Court made it clear that on the scheme of the Act it is clear that the statute confers a benefit to a tenant to avoid the decree of eviction. Similarly in S. 17 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act it confers a benefit for protection against eviction. This marginal note gives a clue which is to be found in the body of Sec. 17. Subsequent amendments were made in order to protect the tenant even when he has failed to comply with the provisions and his defence was struck off. Even Sec. 17 (1) which was amended as far back in 1959 gives power to the court to stay the decree passed on account of failure of availing of those benefits. Inasmuch as when the legislature found that the tenants are having hardship because of monetary difficulty they have tried to amend the Act to protect the tenant. It appears to us that the Act and amendment therein make it clear that tenant who is a defaulter cannot be protected unless he pays the amount of default and the principle is "pay and stay." If tenant does not pay or default in making the payment the protection available to the tenant under the Act for the benefit of the tenant cannot be availed of. In our opinion, the Supreme Court judgment clearly lays down the principle on which the tenant can have the benefit but not without payment. In our opinion, therefore the Hon'ble Judges of the Division Bench in the case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghunath v. Patel & Co.) were wrong in importing the words 'legally payable' into Section 17 of the Act. In the case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghunath v. Patal & Co.) it will be clear from the said decision that their Lordships considered section 14 (4) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Temporary Provision) Act. It was held by their Lordships that the decision under S. 14 read with sub-sec. (4) of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provision) Act, 1950 and the decision made thereto are of historical interest. Only the structure of S. 17 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act was in many respects materially different from S. 14 of W. B. Rent Control (Temporary Provision) Act, 1950. We respectfully agree to this view expressed by the Hon'ble Division Bench and we are, therefore, really at a loss to find their Lordships importing the words 'legally payable' in Sec. 17 of the Act when it has not been provided in Sec. 17 (1) the words 'legally payable' as we find in 1950 Act. The Hon'ble single Judge in the case reported in (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) (L. N. Saha v. D. P. Kar- makar) distinguished the case reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) on the ground that their Lordships only considered Sec. 17 (1) of the Act and not 17 (2). In our opinion, the word 'amount' in Sec. 17 (1) and in Sec. 17 (2) must have the same meaning and cannot have a different meaning. In the context of Sec. 17 the amount of arrears which is barred will have to be deposited and the court will have to consider all the amounts whether it is barred or not and come to a finding of the actual amount deposited if the tenants want to avail the protection of Sec. 17 of the Act.

13. In the case reported in (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) (L. N. Saha v. D. P. Karmakar) at p. 846 (of Cal WN) (at p. 356 of AIR) the Hon'ble single Judge held that Sec. 17 (1), (2) and (2A) provide the foundation for the landlord's right to recover arrears and current rent during the pendency of the ejectment suit in the trial court and for the discharge of the tenant's liability to pay arrear and current rent. This position in our opinion, cannot be accepted to be correct. Sec. 17 (1), (2) and (2A) does not give any foundation to the landlord but only gives relief to the tenant. Sec. 17 (1) and (2) confer benefit to the tenant who may make an application for availing the benefit contained in the section but will only be entitled to it if the tenant deposits all the arrears of rent including (time-barred arrears) and the current rent during the pendency of the ejectment suit in the trial court as otherwise his defence against delivery of possession is liable to be struck out under Sec. 17 (3) of the Act. It is clear even from the judgment of the Hon'ble single Judge that Sec. 20 (4) of the U. P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act, 1972 and Sec. 17 (1), (2) and (2A) of our Act are the same though the dissimilarity have not been enumerated. If there is similarity, we are bound therefore to follow the principle laid down by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court sought to lay down the principle that Sec. 20 (4) of the said Act conferred a benefit on the tenant to avoid eviction decree by complying with the requirements of Sec. 20 (4) of the Act. If he fails to avail himself of the opportunity and has not paid the rent for not less than four months and within one month from the date of service upon him of a notice of demand, the landlord under Sec. 20 (2) would be entitled to an order of eviction. Still the tenant can avail himself of the protection by complying with the requirements of Sec. 20 (4) on deposit of the entire amount due as contained in Section 20 (4) of the Act. In our opinion, in this judgment the principle laid down applies on all fours in respect of Section 17 (4) read with Sec. 17 (1) and other sub-sections of Sec. 17 of the Act.

14. It is argued by Mr. Chatterjee that Sec. 20 (c) of the Act only applies to the defaulting tenant and not any other grounds upon which the eviction may be prayed for by the tenant. In so far as we are concerned with our Act, Sec. 17 (1) of the Act is applicable in the ejectment suit on any ground whatsoever, as the wording of S. 17 (1) of the Act makes it clear that "on a suit or proceeding being instituted by the landlord on any of the grounds referred to in Sec. 13....." In our opinion, Sec. 17 (4) of the Act is only applicable in a matter for a decree of delivery of possession passed on the ground of default only. Sec. 17 (4) runs as follows:—

"17 (4). If a tenant makes deposit or payment as required by sub-sec. (1), sub-sec. (2) or sub-section (2A) no decree for delivery of possession of the premises to the landlord on the ground of default in payment of rent by the tenant shall be made by the Court but the Court may allow such costs as it may deem fit to the landlord:

Provided that a tenant shall not be entitled to any relief under this sub-section if, having obtained such relief once in respect of the premises, he has again made default in the payment of rent for four months within a period of twelve months."

15. It appears that if the tenant makes deposit or payment as required by sub-sec. (1) or (2) or (2A), no decree or order for delivery of possession on the ground of default in payment of rent shall be made by the Court; but it does not cover any other cases. Therefore a tenant is only entitled to the benefit of protection if he has made a default in payment of rent under Section 13 (1) (i) of the Act and if he has complied with Sec. 17 (1), (2) and (2A) of the Act. In that view of the matter, in our opinion, we respectfully differ with the view expressed by the Hon'ble single Judge.

16. The case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 was not properly decided and if there is any doubt whatsoever that has been set at rest by the Supreme Court in the case reported in AIR 1978 SC 287, (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Virajman Mandir).

17. Mr. Chatterjee relied on the case reported in AIR 1976 SC 1637 (New Delhi Municipal Committee v. Kalu Ram). In that judgment the Supreme Court held that the power to recover arrears of rent under the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958 by the Estate Officer is only limited to which is "legally recoverable." In this case the Estate Officer under Sec. 7 of the Act wanted to recover arrears of rents for more than 7 years from the tenant. Their Lordships, held that the procedure taken by the Estate Officer for recovery of rent is barred by limitation.

18. In the present case this is not a suit by the landlord for recovery of rent for more than 3 years but a suit for eviction on the ground of default and necessary requirement wherein an application was made by the tenant under Sec. 17 (2) of the Act and as such we are here concerned with the interpretation of Sec. 17 of the Act and what amount is payable by the tenant in order to protect himself from the penal provision of striking out the defence against the delivery of possession. "We are of the opinion that the word 'payable' herein does not mean 'legally payable.'" Therefore the payment of amount in so far as the rent is concerned must be, according to us, the arrears including the time-barred rent. In the case reported in (1933) 60 Ind. App 13: (AIR 1933 PC 63) filed by the Company in Liquidation, their Lordships held what the Judicial Committee held that the bar of limitation is 3 years but this decision, in our opinion, does not apply in the facts of the present case.

18A. The case reported in AIR 1978 Madhya Pradesh 165 (FB) on which Mr. Chatterjee relied, in our opinion, is clearly distinguishable. In the M. P. Act, Sec. 12 (1) refers to the whole arrears that "that the tenant has neither paid nor tendered the whole of the arrears of the rent legally recoverable from him." In view of the particular expression, their Lordships of the Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that the decision reported in AIR 1978 SC 287, (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Virajman Mandir) in terms does not apply to the Madhya Pradesh Rent Act.

19. Mr. Chatterjee relied upon the case reported in AIR 1975 Pat 283 (FB) (Ram Nandan Sharma v. Maya Devi) and contended that under the Bihar Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act the arrears of rent is only confined to period after institution of and during the pendency of the suit. In the said case it was held that under S. 11 of the Act the landlord can make an application for arrears of rent falling due during the period of the suit. In that view of the matter it is quite clear that the wordings of S. 17 of our Act and the S. 11 of the Bihar Act are quite different. In S. 17 (1) and (2) of our Act the tenant must deposit the arrears of rent prior to the suit in the Court within one month of the service of the writ of summons on him or within one month of his appearance in Court or with the Rent Controller or pay to the landlord. Therefore the case reported in AIR 1975 Pat 283 (FB) is of no help to us.

20. The case reported in AIR 1977 All 399 was a case which was decided by the Supreme Court in the case reported in AIR 1978 SC 287, (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Virajman Mandir). In the said judgment, in paragraph 17, it has been stated as follows:—

"17. It will thus be seen that the word 'due' was held to have a special connotation in the context of the situation that the provision provided a special procedure for recovery of money without creating any new right and that the provision was discretionary. The court may well refuse to act under it. The word 'due' occurring in S. 20 (4) of the Rent Control Act of 1972 has entirely a different context. It occurs in a section which provides, not an alternative procedure for recovery of arrears of rent, but which confers upon the tenant a right to relief against eviction. This right is founded upon the condition that the rent due must be paid. It confers no discretion on the tenant. The provision is explicit and mandatory.

Unless the condition is fulfilled, the right to relief against eviction does not accrue'.

21. In our opinion the Supreme Court has upheld the view taken in the Allahabad High Court's judgment, we are of the opinion that there is no material difference between S. 17 (4) of the W. B. Act and S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act. The principle laid down in the Supreme Court case reported in AIR 1978 SC 287, (K. G. U. Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Mandir) upheld the Allahabad High Court judgment the case reported in AIR 1977 All 399 (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Ram Chandraji Mandir)

22. Mr. Chatterjee argued that after the decision is made in the case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093, (Raghunath v. Patel & Co.) there are number of amendments of S. 17 of the Act. But still the legislature did not amend the word 'payable' to mean 'legally payable'. It was argued by Mr. Chatterjee that the legislature knew what decision has been taken in the case reported in ((1961) 65 Cal WN 1093), (Raghunath v. Patel & Co.) and it may be said that the interpretation given by the judgment was a proper and the legislature did not think to amend the same. In our opinion as we have already stated in the context and historical background of the legislation it is quite clear that when the legislature in their wisdom omitted the words 'legally recoverable' it is no answer to say that the subsequent amendment, the legislature did not think it fit to make amendment of the statute if the legislature intended otherwise. We have not, therefore, dealt with the cases referred to by Mr. Chatterjee on that point, namely, (1973) 77 Cal WN 424: (AIR 1973 Cal 529), AIR 1971 SC 1691, (1979) 1 Cal LJ 160: (AIR 1978 Cal 457) (FB) (Renuka Pachal v. Chapa Guha Neogi) and (1975) 1 Cal LJ 1: (AIR 1977 Cal 110) (FB) (Gurudas Biswas v. Sibasankar Seal). In the case reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) (Central Coalfields Ltd. v. Rabindra Nath Dutta) the Hon'ble Judges held that the entire amount due including the time barred rent must be deposited. It will be found by the amendment the word 'total' was used in Ss. 17B and 17C of Act. The word 'entire' used by the Division Bench only means the total arrears due including the time-barred rent and it will have to be deposited under S. 17 (1) read with S. 17 (2) of the Act.

23. Mr. Chatterjee referred to AIR 1940 Mad 385 (FB) (Nana Rao v. Arunachalam). In our opinion the Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court does not support the contention of Mr. Chatterjee. The Full Bench in the said judgment held that 'if the words of a later statute differ materially from those of an earlier one, effect should be given to the change, especially where to do so would be to advance the policy underlying it. If the language fails to achieve the object in view, it can only be regretted but not helped. But the court need not be astute to adopt a construction which would tend to bring about a frustration of the objective. If the words of a latter statute differ from those of an earlier one, the Court in construing the later, is not bound by decisions under the earlier, even though it relates to the same subject matter'. We have already held in the present case with reference to the earlier Act that the word 'legally recoverable' has been omitted by the legislature in the present statute and therefore in our opinion the learned Judges of the Division Bench were right in holding that the rent which was time barred will have to be deposited under S. 17 (1) of the Act.

24. In the circumstances, I hold that under Ss. 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act the tenant is under obligation to deposit the rent which may have been time barred if he is to avail of the protection against striking out the defence against delivery of possession u/s. 17 (3) of the Act.

25. In the present case the Division Bench did not issue a rule in the matter but both the parties were present before the Division Bench as also before us on notice being issued by the Division Bench and the arguments were advanced in the matter. In view of our finding that the tenant is liable to deposit the rent which has become time barred, the learned Subordinate Judge will have to reconsider his order and re-hear the matter afresh and decide the same in accordance with law.

B. N. MAITRA, J. (Concurring) :—

26. I agree. But it is necessary to make some observations.

27. The important question is, if the provisions of S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act and of Section 17 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, are substantially the same. It is true that the words "entire arrears" appearing in S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act do not find place in S. 17 of the West Bengal Act. Nevertheless the various circumstances be dealt with to arrive at a decision whether or not the bench case of Raghunath Singh v. Patel and Company in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 still holds the field.

28. Firstly, according to the provisions of S. 17 of the West Bengal Act, the landlord can only receive the rent as there is no scope for him to pay court fees and ask for recovery of the arrears. The amount to be deposited by the tenant has been specified in sub-sec. (1) of S. 17. Only in case of a dispute, sub-sec. (2) comes into operation. After the determination of the dispute under the sub-sec. (2), the amount payable by the tenant is substantially the same, as stated in sub-sec. (1) of Section 17 of the Act. It can be next seen that the choice is entirely with the tenant whether he will comply with the provisions of S. 17. That sub-section imposes a statutory obligation on him to pay or deposit the arrears for avoiding the defence against delivery of possession being struck out, for in such an eventuality the landlord has the only right of invoking the provisions of sub-sec. (3) of S. 17 for striking out such defence. So, S. 17 provides for a conditional protection to the contesting tenant.

29. The Limitation Act merely bars the remedy but not the right of the landlord nor does it bar the debt. One cannot lose sight of the fact that previously, in the Temporary Rent Act of 1950, the expression used was "legally payable". But the word "legally" was dropped from the S. 17 of the later West Bengal Act of 1956. In the Full Bench case of Nana v. Arun in AIR 1940 Mad 385 at page 392, it has been stated that where the words of a later statute differ materially from those of an earlier one, effect should be given to the change, especially where to do so would be (to) advance the policy underlying it. The court should not adopt a construction which would tend to bring about a frustration of the objective. Moreover, the use of the expression "for the period for which the tenant may have made default" in sub-sec. (1) of S. 17 is a pointer that there is no restriction about the period of default. It covers the entire period of default and is wide enough to indicate that the tenant is enjoined to deposit the entire arrears.

30. In the Privy Council case of Hansraj Gupta v. Official Liquidator in (1933) 60 Ind App 13 at p. 23: (AIR 1933 PC 63 at p. 66) the Liquidator was concerned only with the money due from a contributory. In the case of New Delhi Municipal Committee v. Kaluram in AIR 1976 SC 1637, the Estate Officer had power to recover the dues from the defaulter, whereas in the West Bengal Act, 1956, no such procedure has been provided for the landlord's benefit.

31. In the case of Bombay Dyeing Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 328 at p. 335, it has been stated that the statute of limitation only bars the remedy, but does not extinguish the debt except in cases provided for in Section 28 of the Act.

32. Reference has been made to the provisions of S. 17 (4) of the W. B. Act by both the sides. The provisions of this sub-sec. (4) speak of a relief to the defaulting tenant and the same is analogous to those of S. 114 of the Transfer of Property Act.

33. The provisions of S. 17 of the West Bengal Act of 1956 and of S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act of 1972 are, therefore, substantially the same. There is no reason to import the word "legally" in S. 17 of the West Bengal Act, though that word was specifically omitted by the Legislature when the Act came into operation. It is thus held that the bench case of Raghunath Singh v. Patel and Company ((1961) 65 Cal WN 1093) (supra) has been impliedly overruled and in a case covered by the provisions of sub-Ss. (1), (2) and (2A) of S. 17 of the West Bengal Act, the tenant is required to deposit the entire amount including the time-barred debt.

AMITABHA DUTTA, J. (Concurring):—

34. I agree with the order proposed by my Lord. But I want to explain in my own way, my point of view.

35. The question at issue arises in a revisional application by the plaintiff, which is directed against Order No. 16 dated 24-9-1980 of the learned Subordinate Judge. Siliguri in O. C. Suit No. 17 of 1979 for ejectment of the defendant as a premises tenant on the grounds mentioned in cls. (f), (ff) and (i) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, the defendant having been a defaulter in payment of rent at Rs. 250/- per month payable according to English calendar month for the suit premises from January, 1970. The defendant filed an application under S. 17 (2) of the said Act claiming set off of Rs. 29,239/-. The plaintiff opposed that application. The learned Subordinate Judge negatived the defendant's plea of set off and determined the amount payable by the defendant as Rs. 9,000/- being equivalent to arrears for three years. The plaintiff moved this Court in revision against the said order on the ground that the trial court has acted illegally and with material irregularity as in determining the amount payable it ought to have included the time barred arrears of rent also within such amount.

35. The learned Judges of the Division Bench while hearing the revisional application as Civil Order No. 168 of 1982 felt that in view of the conflict between the Bench decision in the case of Central Coalfields Ltd. v. Rabindra Nath Dutta, (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) and the decision of the learned single Judge in the case of L. N. Saha v. D. P. Karmakar, (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) on the point whether the earlier Bench decision of this Court in the case of Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co., (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 stands impliedly overruled by the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Virajman Mandir, AIR 1978 SC 287, the matter should be referred to a larger Bench to resolve the conflict. This is how the matter came up before this Bench.

37. In my view, it is correct to hold that under the provisions of S. 17 (1) read with (2) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter called the 1956 Act), the tenant defendant is required to deposit the arrears of rent for the period for which he may have made default including the time barred arrears. But I do not think that the Supreme Court's decision in Khadi Gram Udyog Trust's case AIR 1978 SC 287 has impliedly overruled the Bench decision of this Court in Raghunath Singh's case, (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 in which it has been held that S. 17 (2) read with sub-s. (1) of the 1956 Act does not require the tenant to deposit or pay any amount in respect of time barred arrears of rent. The reasons are these. The Supreme Court had no opportunity in that case to apply its mind to and analyse the provisions of S. 17 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. The Supreme Court after considering the provisions of S. 20 (1), (2) and (4) of the U. P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting Rent and Eviction) Act, 1972 has decided that the words "entire amount of rent due" in Section 20 (4) would include rent which has become time-barred. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court observed as follows (at page 289):

"On a consideration of the scheme of the Act it is clear that the statute has conferred a benefit on the tenant to avoid decree for eviction by complying with the requirement of S. 20 (4)". Secondly the provisions of S. 17 (1) and (2) of the 1956 Act are not in pari materia with S. 20 (4) of the U. P. Act. The relevant expression as to arrears payable are different. There is no provision in the U. P. Act corresponding to Section 17 (1) of the 1956 Act which applies to every suit for ejectment on any of the grounds mentioned in Section 13 (1) and which requires the tenant to deposit both arrear rent and current rent to get the benefit of protection against eviction on the ground of default under Section 17 (4). Again a tenant can get the relief under Section 20 (4) of the U. P. Act more than once. But under Section 17 (4) of the 1956 Act read with its proviso a tenant shall not get any relief if having got such relief once he defaulted in payment of rent for four months within a period of twelve months.

38. The learned advocate for the petitioner has submitted and in my view, rightly that the decision in Raghunath Singh's case does not lay down the law correctly for the following reasons. Sec. 17 (1) read with (2) of the 1956 Act does not provide for the procedure for recovery of arrears of rent at the instance of the landlord. S. 17 imposes a statutory obligation on the tenant to deposit or pay rent in accordance with the provisions thereof if he wants to avoid a decree for eviction on the ground of default in payment of rent when it is the first occasion of such default or if he wants to avoid his defence against delivery of possession being struck out whatever be the ground in S. 13 (1) of the Act on which the suit is based. In other words Section 17 grants conditional protection to the tenant. If he chooses to avail of the protection he had to comply with the conditions. The landlord cannot apply for recovery of arrears of rent. There is no restriction on the period for which the tenant may have made default in Section 17 (1) or (2) (a) of the Act and bar of limitation is foreign to Section 17.

39. The learned single Judge in L. N. Saha's case (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) has referred to the following two decisions which may be discussed. In New Delhi Municipal Committee v. Kaloo Ram, AIR 1976 SC 1637, the recovery of arrears of rent was at the instance of the Estate Officer under Section 7 of the Delhi Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958 and so it has been held that if the person in arrears raises a dispute as to the "arrears of rent payable" the Estate Officer in determining the amount of arrears payable cannot insist on payment of arrears barred by limitation. The Supreme Court has interpreted the word "payable" in Section 7 by holding that "in the context in which it occurs, (it) means legally recoverable". Thus in the aforesaid case the recovery was at the instance of the Estate Officer representing the landlord. In Hans Raj Gupta v. Official Liquidator etc., (1933) 60 Ind App 130: (AIR 1933 PC 63) the Privy Council interpreting the expression "money due" to the company in Section 186 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 held it as confined to money due and recoverable in a suit by the company and so the bar of limitation would apply. In the summary proceeding under the said section in the winding up court against debtor contributories every objection is just as open to the person sought to be charged as it would have been if the suit had been brought by the liquidator in the company's name for the money. These decisions in the context of the provisions of the particular Acts are distinguishable and do not furnish authority for the proposition that "the amount of rent payable" in Section 17 (2) of the 1956 Act should be confined to an amount legally recoverable by the landlord in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent. The meaning of that expression is to be gathered from its context. It has been observed by Viscount Simonds in Attorney General v. Prince Ernest Augustus of Hanover 1957 A. C. 436 at page 461 "For words and particularly general words cannot be read in isolation; their colour and content are derived from their context. So it is that I conceive it to be my right and duty to examine every word of a statute in its context and I use context in its widest sense....." The legislative history of Section 17 and the context in which the expression "the amount of rent payable" appears in Section 17 (2) of the 1956 Act will be presently explained.

40. There is no provision in Section 17 of the 1956 Act enabling the landlord to make an application for recovery of the arrears of rent and in this respect of scheme of the 1956 Act is basically different from the scheme of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 which it replaced, as under Section 14 (4) of the earlier Act the landlord could apply for an order on the tenant to deposit the arrear and current rent. In the earlier Act of 1950 Section 14 (1) provided that "the court shall determine the amount legally payable by the tenant and which is in arrears taking into consideration any order made subsection (4)". But under Section 17 (2) of the 1956 Act the tenant may by an application raise dispute as to "the amount of rent payable" and in that case the court shall "having regard to the rate at which the rent was last paid and the period for which default may have been made "make a preliminary order" "specifying the amount of rent due from the tenant" (the word used is due and not recoverable) and as soon as thereafter as possible having regard to the provisions of the Act make a final order determining the rate of rent and the amount to be deposited or paid by the tenant. It is well settled that if the words of a later statute differ materially from those of an earlier one effect should be given to the change to advance the policy underlying it. There is no express or implied restriction of "the period for which the tenant may have made default" in Section 17 (1) or of "the period for which default may have been made" in Section 17 (2) (a) of the 1956 Act. The court cannot disregard the plain and natural meaning of those words in determining the amount of rent payable. "It is sometime more important to emphasize the obvious than to elucidate the obscure". The Court cannot limit the said period to three years preceding the date of the suit. Such confinement of the period will also be not justified as the determination of the amount payable is made at the instance of the tenant seeking protection in terms of Section 17 and not on the application of the landlord. The procedure is not a source or foundation of the landlord's right to recover the arrears. It gives the tenant option to avail of the conditional protection. If he chooses not to avail of it and his defence against delivery of possession is struck out as a consequence, he can still contest the suit by cross-examining the plaintiff's witnesses on all points and making submissions on the merits of the plaintiff's case before the court. It has been so held in the Bench decision of this Court in the case of Dayamoyee Sudhakhan v. Dal Singer Singh, (1980) 1 Cal HN 498: (AIR 1979 Cal 332). Having regard to this scheme of Section 17 I find that it will be wrong to construe the expression "the amount payable" in the context in which it is used to mean the amount legally recoverable in an action by the landlord and to interpret the word 'period' in Section 17 (1) and (2) (a) so as to limit and confine it to three years.

41. The principle underlying Section 114 of the Transfer of Property Act granting relief against forfeiture for non-payment of rent may not be germane to the interpretation of S. 17 of the 1956 Act, the basic structures of the two provisions not being identical. It cannot be said that because the tenant does not get relief against eviction when the suit is on a ground other than the first default, he cannot be called upon to pay the time barred arrears. The legislature can reasonably enact that the tenant must fulfil his obligation to pay the arrears due to the landlord before he can be permitted to pursue his defence against delivery of possession in the suit. The "amount of rent payable" means what the tenant should pay as rent. Rent does not lose its character by being in arrear for over three years. So the principle laid down in the Bench decision in the case of Dayadebi v. Chapala Debi, (1959) 63 Cal WN 976: (AIR 1960 Cal 378) does not come into the picture. In Khadi Gram Udyog Trust's case, (AIR 1978 SC 287) the Supreme Court has approved of the principles that statute barred debts are dues though payment thereof cannot be enforced by action and that if the creditor has any means of enforcing his claim other than by action or set off, law does not debar him from recovering it by those means.

42. The decision in the case of Man-kunwar Bai v. Sunderlal, AIR 1978 Madh Pra 54 (FB) and AIR 1978 Madh Pra 165 (FB) relied on by the learned advocate for the respondent are distinguishable as the pivot on which the decisions turn is the word "default" in the expression "the period for which the tenant may have made default" in Section 13 (1) of the M. P. Accommodation Control Act, 1961 which refers to the default described in Sec. 12 (1) (a) of the Act meaning non-payment of "the whole of the arrears of rent legally recoverable from him" within two months of service of the notice of demand.

43. It has been submitted by the learned advocate for the respondent that Raghunath Singh's case (1961-65 Cal WN 1093) was decided in June, 1961 but the legislature has not changed the provisions of Sec. 17 (1) and (2) of the 1956 Act although Sec. 17 was amended several times thereafter and that a decision of long standing on the basis of which many persons have arranged their affairs should not be disturbed. But in my view, legislative inaction is no ground for perpetuating an erroneous construction of the statute and when disturbance of a long standing decision will not have the effect of reopening transactions relating to title to immovable property or imposition of any unjust liability on persons, the superior court will not hesitate to overrule it as in the instant case to remove doubt expressed about it in a subsequent decision and resolve conflict of subsequent decisions on the same point for bringing about certainty in the law.

44. In conclusion, I find that Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co. (1961) 65 Cal

WN 1093 has not been impliedly overruled by the decision of the Supreme Court in Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Virajman Mandir, AIR 1978 SC 287. But I hold that Raghunath Singh's case was not correctly decided and that a tenant raising a dispute under Sec. 17 (2) read with Sec. 17 (1) of the 1956 Act is required to deposit the arrears for the period for which he may have made default including the time barred arrears as payment of such arrears can be and has been made a condition of protection granted to the tenants under Sec. 17 of the Act.

45. I, accordingly, agree that this reference should be answered in the manner suggested by my Lord and I concur in the order proposed by him.

46. We, therefore, hold as follows:—

47. We hold that the decision reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co.) was wrongly decided. We respectfully agree with the view taken by the Division Bench in the case reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 80: (AIR 1980 Cal 114) (Central Coalfields Ltd. v. Rabindra Nath Dutta) and differ with due respect to the views of the Hon'ble single Judge taken in the case reported in (1981) 85 Cal WN 840: (AIR 1981 Cal 352) (L. N. Saha v. D. P. Karmakar).

48. (Mr. Justice P. K. Banerjee and Mr. Justice B. N. Maitra) We hold that by implication that the judgment reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co.) is overruled by the Supreme Court judgment reported in AIR 1978 SC 287 (Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ram Chandraji Mandir).

49. (Mr. Justice Amitabha Dutta) The case reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1093 (Raghunath Singh v. Patel & Co.) has not been impliedly overruled by the decision of the Supreme Court in Khadi Gram Udyog Trust v. Shri Ramchandraj Mandir reported in AIR 1978 SC 287.

50. Let the order be communicated to the Court below for disposal of the application pending before him in accordance with law as hereinbefore laid down.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 282

P. K. BANERJEE AND

B. N. MAITRA, JJ.

Alliance Mills (Lessees) Pvt. Ltd.,
Appellant v. M/s. Madan Gopal & Sons, Respondent.

A. F. O. D. Nos. 333, 202, 250, 313 and 170 of 1975, D/- 16-2-1982.

(A) Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act (74 of 1952), Sec. 15 (3A) — Contract relating to Jute and Hessian not made in prescribed form and in accordance with prescribed Bye-laws read with S. 15 (3A) of Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, would be void. (East India Jute and Hessian Exchange Ltd. Calcutta (Working Manual Vol. III), Chap. V. Bye-laws 15, 17, Appendix II).

Any member of the East India Jute and Hessian Exchange Ltd. cannot contract out of Appendix II in respect of transferable specific delivery contracts in jute goods. The prescribed form as provided in Appendix II is imperative and a contract in order to be valid must contain all the terms and conditions set out in the prescribed form. Either the contract must incorporate all those terms and conditions or no contract can be made at all. No term or condition in the prescribed form can be dispensed with on the plea that it is inapplicable. Thus where the contract was not in form as in Appendix II and was entered in violation of Chap. V Bye-laws 15 and 17 read with Sec. 15 (3A) of the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act the contract would be void. Case law discussed. (Paras 8, 9)

When there was no option given in the column left for option prescribed in the contract form to be exercised by the buyer within the time specified in the contract, the contract becomes illegal in view of Bye-laws 15 and 17 of the Manual read with Sec. 15 (3) of the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1952. However in view of the fact of statutory prohibition and in view of the fact that the contract must be entered into in Appendix II and not otherwise, the purchase or no purchase is of no concern for the consideration whether the contract was validly made or not in accordance with the statutory regulations framed under the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1952. (Para 9)

(B) Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), Sections 33, 2 (9) — Application to set aside award — Plea that contract containing arbitration clause is void — Can be raised even after party has acquired to arbitration after proceedings and award was passed. (Para 9)

Pramatha Nath Chatterjee, K. N. Misra and N. C. Bhattacharjee, for Appellant; K. K. Maitra and Tapan Mitra, for Respondent.

BANERJEE, J.:— These appeals arise out of an application under Secs. 30 and 33 of the Arbitration Act 1940 for setting aside the award made by the Tribunal of Arbitration, The Bengal Chamber of Commerce & Industry, Calcutta. The fact relating to the arbitration proceeding is that there was a contract between the appellant and the respondent coming under the East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd., Calcutta for Trading in Transferable Specific Delivery Contracts in Raw Jute and Jute Goods and Rules (Sic). The transferable specific delivery contracts in raw jute and jute goods are embodied in the Rules framed under the East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd. The contract also is to be found in Appendix X of the East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd., Calcutta (Working Manual Vol. III). There was no dispute that some sort of agreement was entered into by Alliance Mills (Lessees) Pvt. Ltd. and M/s. Madan Gopal & Sons in a form which is akin to Appendix II as hereinbefore stated. But it appears from the original that the rubber stamp which was embossed on the same form could not be deciphered.

2. These matters were being heard by us sometime in Mar. 1978 and we passed an order on the same by consent of parties. It is imperative what is imprinted by the rubber stamp must be deciphered. We, however, made the order on 20th Mar., 1978 by sending back the matter to the learned Judge, City Civil Court for decision on the following issues framed by us "(1) Whether the Transferable Specific Delivery Contract for Jute Goods being Contract No. JG/C-10053 dated 9th Dec., 1971 is statutory form upon which the contract was entered into? and (2) What was the prescribed form prevalent on the date of the Contract?" We also directed that the parties should be given liberty to adduce evidence.

3. The learned Judge however sent his decisions on the said two issues to this Court holding inter alia that the contract was not entered into in the statutory form and secondly, that statutory form in Appendix II at the page next to 93 of the Working Manual Vol. III is a form with up-to-date amendments as prevalent on the date of contract as on 9th Dec. 1971.

4. After the records were sent to us with a decision of the learned Judge, the matter could not be heard because a number of adjournments were taken by the parties on different grounds including the one that one of the appeals in which the main judgment was printed, was not ready. Be that as it may, though belated, all the matters could be heard analogously today.

5. Mr. P. N. Chatterjee on behalf of the appellant contended firstly that the doctrine of substantial compliance has no application in the present case. The contract not being in the prescribed form, there is no contract and as such, arbitration clause is not applicable. Secondly, it is argued by Mr. Chatterjee that so far as the option clause is concerned the Rule in Chapt. V, sub-r. (3) time will have to be specified and no time having been specified in the contract itself, the parties are not entitled in law to rely on custom.

6. Mr. K. K. Maitra on behalf of the respondent, however, contended that it is not Chap. V but Chapter VII of the Working Manual, Vol. III applies. It is also contended by Mr. Maitra that the Supreme Court judgment as reported in AIR 1974 SC 1579 has no application in the facts of the present case, as there was no scoring or cancellation in the statutory form prescribed under the Manual. It is argued further by Mr. Maitra that no prejudice is caused to the seller, when subsequent to the contract about the option in regard to the time, element for the exercise of option is present as contained in R. 3 of Chap. V of the Working Manual, Vol. III. Mr. Maitra further contended that the matter had gone to the arbitration and the appellant cannot now raise the question having submitted to the jurisdiction of the arbitrator and it cannot also say that the arbitration was without jurisdiction. Mr. Moitra relied upon the decisions reported in AIR 1949 PC 334, AIR 1951 SC 9, (1953) 57 Cal WN 482: (AIR 1953 Cal 621), AIR 1959 Mad 351 and on Russell's Arbitration 19th Ed. p. 453.

7. In reply to the above decisions as cited by Mr. Moitra, Mr. Chatterjee contended that as the contract itself is void, this question is not at all relevant. Mr. Chatterjee relied upon a decision reported in AIR 1962 SC 1810.

8. The question for our consideration is therefore whether the contract is in Appendix II of the Working Manual Vol. III at page 93. Admittedly it is not so. It appears that in the original there is some rubber stamp which cannot be deciphered. On evidence also nothing came out that the amended form has been used at the time of contract on 9th Dec. 1971. In our opinion, the case reported in AIR 1974 SC 1579 applied here on all fours as the Supreme Court has held in the said case that it is not correct to say that the prescribed form may be followed only in so far as circumstances may admit. The prescribed form is imperative and a contract in order to be valid must contain all the terms and conditions set out in the prescribed form. Either the contract must incorporate all those terms and conditions or no contract can be made at all. No term or condition in the prescribed form can be dispensed with on the plea that it is inapplicable. The Supreme Court has clearly stated in para 10 relying upon the case reported in AIR 1971 SC 166 that "In our opinion, the High Court was right in holding that the contracts in question were not in the prescribed form and thus they did not comply with the requirement of Bye-law 1 (b) of Chap. V. There can be no manner of doubt that that bye-law is mandatory when read with By-laws 15 and 17. It must be remembered that under Bye-law 15 no member shall enter into any transferable specific delivery contract otherwise than on terms and conditions prescribed under the bye-laws and under Bye-law 17 if there is a contravention inter alia of Bye-law 15 the contract shall be rendered illegal by virtue of the provisions contained in Sec. 15 (3A) of the Act, that is, Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1952. It is clear from this judgment that any member of the East India Jute & Hessian Exchange Ltd. cannot contract out of Appendix II in respect of transferable specific delivery contracts in jute goods. Chap. V of the said Manual deal with the trading provisions in general. Chap. V sub-para (g) provides that all Transferable Specific Delivery Contracts shall be subject to the provisions of the Bye-laws. Bye-law 3 of Chap. V runs as follows:—

"T. S. D. Contracts in jute goods shall ordinarily provide for delivery of a specified quality of these goods but provisions can be made in the contract for specified options which may be with or without penalty and/or premium or which may contain terms for delivery at specified rates arranged mutually between the sellers and the buyers. Such options shall be exercised by the buyer within the time specified in the contract."

9. It appears from the contract form that there was no option given in the column left for option to be exercised by the buyer within the time specified in the contract. If no such option is given, the contract becomes illegal in view Bye-laws 15 and 17 of the Manual read with Sec. 15 (3) of the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1952.

That there was no incorporation in the form is clear from the application the buyer made in his arbitration petition which contained an objection thereto, to the appellant's objection. It is clear from their objection that they pleaded that even if the option clause was not there, still this can be incorporated in the contract itself by consent of the parties and according to the customs prevailing. In our opinion, in view of the fact of the statutory prohibition and in view of the fact that the contract must be entered into in Appendix II and not otherwise, this purchase or no purchase is of no concern for the consideration whether the contract was validly made or not in accordance with the statutory regulation framed under the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act, 1952. Mr. Moitra further contended that, when the matter was referred to the arbitration, the petitioner or appellant or any of the party was barred in raising the question of arbitration being invalid because the contract was invalid. In our opinion this cannot be correct. The Privy Council in AIR 1949 PC 334 has already decided that the award cannot be set aside even if there is error of law unless it comes within the mischief of provision of Sec. 20 (or 30) of the Arbitration Act of 1940. This question was also considered in a similar matter by the Supreme Court in a case reported in AIR 1962 SC 1810 and AIR 1963 SC 90 where the question was raised similarly under the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act that this cannot be raised by the parties to the Contract. The Supreme Court categorically stated that if the contract itself is void the question of submitted jurisdiction of arbitrator is of no avail. It has been held by the Supreme Court that it cannot be disputed that the expression "arising out of" or "concerning" or "in connection with" or "in consequence of" or "relating to this contract" occurring in an arbitration clause in an agreement to purchase goods are of sufficient amplitude to take in a dispute as to the validity of the agreement. But the arbitration clause cannot be enforced when the agreement of which it forms an integral part is held to be illegal. On principle it must be held that when an agreement is invalid every part of it including the clause as to arbitration contained therein must also be invalid. The point which Mr. Moitra argued was specifically taken by the parties. It has been held by the Supreme Court that the party applying under S. 33 is not estopped by its conduct in appearing before the arbitrators and in taking part in the proceedings before them from questioning the validity of the award. What confers jurisdiction on the arbitrators to hear and decide a dispute is an arbitration agreement as defined in Section 2 (a), and where there is no such agreement, there is an initial want of jurisdiction which cannot be cured by acquiescence. We are therefore of opinion that this argument of Mr. Moitra that the appellant having acquiescence and taking part in the arbitration proceeding cannot now challenge the arbitration proceeding, cannot be sustained and must fail. In view of the finding on the first question we must hold that the contract not being in form as in Appendix II and in violation of Chap. V

Bye-laws 15 and 17 read with S. 15 (3A) of the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act cannot be upheld and must be said to be void.

10. The appeals are therefore allowed. The judgment and order passed by the court below are set aside and the Award of the Tribunal is set aside. But there will be no order as to costs.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— I agree.

Appeals allowed.

Paresh Nath Mondal, Petitioner v. Bijan Behari Mondal and others, Respondents.

C. R. Nos. 258 and 259 of -1980, D/- 26-2-1982.

(A) West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 9 (6) — Appeal under — District Judge in entertaining appeal does not act as a persona designata. (Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), S. 22, Civil P. C. (1908), S. 24).

It cannot be said that the District Judge in entertaining appeal under S. 9 (6) acts as persona designata and as such none but he alone could hear and dispose of the appeal. Sec. 9 (6) when it speaks of District Judge it really means the Court of the District Judge or the Principal Civil Court of the District. Further, Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act and Civil P. C. are applicable to proceedings contemplated by that provision before the District Court. AIR 1977 SC 282, (1977) 81 Cal WN 580. (1977) 81 Cal WN 866, Rel. on. (Para 4)

(B) West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), S. 9 (6) — Appeal under S. 9 (6) before District Judge — Appeal cannot be transferred to Subordinate Court. (Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), S. 22, Civil P. C. (1908), S. 24).

The appeal under S. 9 (6) preferred to the District Judge could not have been transferred to the Court of the Subordinate Judge when that Court had not the jurisdiction to either entertain or hear and dispose of the appeal as the statute itself has prescribed the forum to be the Court of the District Judge and has neither left the forum to be determined by the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act nor has it given any indication that the District Judge in dealing with such an appeal can transfer the appeal to any other Court Subordinate to the District Judge. Therefore the District Judge could not transfer appeal under S. 9 (6) to the Court of Subordinate Judge. AIR 1962 Cal 635, Rel. on. (Para 5)

Jahar Lal De, for Petitioner; G. C. Pal, for Respondents.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— These are the two revisional applications at the instance of one Paresh Nath Mondal who filed an application under S. 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act against the opposite party being Misc. Case No. 40 of 1974 for pre-empting a sale by a co-sharer in favour of the opposite party. The opposite party in his turn instituted a counter proceeding under the same provision being Misc. Case No. 11 of 1975. The learned Munsif allowed the petition filed by the petitioner Paresh Nath Mondal but dismissed the counter petition filed by the opposite party by two separate orders both dated June 26, 1976. The opposite party preferred two appeals being Misc. Appeal No. 78 of 1976 (arising out of Misc. Case No. 40 of 1974) and Misc. Appeal No. 79 of 1976 (arising out of Misc. Case No. 11 of 1975). Both the appeals having been transferred by the learned District Judge to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge, the learned Subordinate Judge by two independent orders both dated Sept. 4, 1976 allowed both the appeals and reversed the decision of the learned Munsif. Feeling aggrieved the petitioner Paresh Nath Mondal has moved this court with two revisional applications on which the above two Rules had been issued. Mr. De, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the pre-emptee petitioner, has raised a short point that the appeals which lay to the learned District Judge could not have been lawfully transferred to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge since the learned Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain or hear and dispose of the appeals. According to Mr. De, under S. 9 (6) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act an appeal lies to the District Judge not as a Court but as a persona designata and hence he could not have transferred the appeal to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge for hearing. Mr. De has next contended that even if it be not held that the District Judge is a persona designata, yet the jurisdiction conferred being a special one, it was for him to exercise it and he cannot transfer the appeal to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge. Mr. Pal, appearing on behalf of the pre-emptor opposite party, has contested both the points thus raised by Mr. De. According to Mr. Pal, S. 9 (6) has extended the jurisdiction of the principal civil court of the District to hear the appeals from orders of pre-emption made under S. 9 (1) read with S. 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act and such appeals, as appeals from orders and decrees of a munsif, could be transferred for disposal to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge; it could be so transferred, according to Mr. Pal, under either of the provisions of S. 22 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887 or 24 of the Civil P. C.

2. The points raised require careful consideration. It would be necessary first of all to refer to the statutory provisions providing for the right of appeal, its forum and the procedure for disposal of such an appeal. An application under S. 8 of the Land Reforms Act claiming pre-emption is to be disposed of by the learned Munsif in terms of S. 9 (1) of the Act. Sub-sec. (6) of S. 9 provides "any person aggrieved by an order of the Munsif under this section may appeal to the District Judge having jurisdiction over the area in which the land is situated, within thirty days, from the date of such order and the District Judge shall send a copy of his order to the Munsif. The fees to be paid by the parties and the procedure to be followed by the District Judge shall be such as may be prescribed."

3. Rule 8 of the Rules framed under the Act prescribes the procedure for appeals and fees to be paid under sub-sec. (6) of S. 9 and the said provision is set out hereunder:

"8. (1) Every appeal under sub-sec. (6) of Section 9 shall be filed in the form of a memorandum and shall be signed and verified by the appellant in the manner provided in sub-rules (2) and (3) of R. 15 of O. VI of Schedule 1 to the Civil P. C. 1908. It shall be accompanied by an authenticated copy of the order appealed against and shall contain the following particulars namely:—

(a) the name and address of the appellant;

(b) the name and address of the respondent;

(c) the location and particulars of the holding in respect of which orders were passed by the Revenue Officer, and

(d) the grounds of appeal.

(2) The Court-fees payable on the memorandum of appeal shall be such as are provided in sub-cl. (ii) of cl. (a) of Art. 11 of Sch. II to the Court-fees Act, 1870 and shall be collected in the same manner as laid down in that Act.

(3) On the filing of an appeal, the Appellate Officer shall call for the records of the case from the officer or authority against whose order the appeal has been filed and after giving the appellant and the respondent an opportunity of being heard shall dispose of the appeal.

(4) A process fee of rupees three per party on whom a notice is to be served shall be paid along with the memorandum of appeal."

4. On the statutory provisions as aforesaid we are to consider the two objections raised by Mr. De. Though a decision of a learned single Judge of this court supports the first objection raised by Mr. De it appears to us that the view expressed by the learned single Judge is not approved by two subsequent Bench decisions of this court. Following the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Kerala State Electricity Board, Trivandrum v. T. P. Kunhaliumma, AIR 1977 SC 282, this court in the cases of Prosonna Kumar Giri v. Gangadhar Raut, (1977) 81 Cal. WN 580 and Kalidasi Nath v. Obedullah Sheikh, (1977) 81 Cal. WN 866 held that S. 9 (6) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act when it speaks of District Judge it really means the court of the District Judge or the principal Civil Court of the District. It had been further held that both the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act and the Civil P. C. are applicable to proceedings contemplated by that provision before the District Judge. Having regard to the statutory provisions we are not inclined to differ from the view so expressed which is otherwise binding on us. This negatives the first objection raised by Mr. De to the effect that the learned District Judge in entertaining an appeal under Sec. 9 (6) of the Act acts as a persona designata and as such none but he alone could hear and dispose of the appeal.

5. Although the first objection raised by Mr. De stands overruled for reasons given hereinbefore, the question still remains as to whether the learned District Judge could have transferred the appeal to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge for hearing and disposal. Mr. Pal, as we have indicated hereinbefore, relies upon the provisions of S. 24 of the Civil P. C. and S. 22 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act and contends that the appeal being one to the court of the District Judge is to be regulated by the normal practice and procedure of such a court as prescribed by law. But, in our view, neither of the provisions relied on by Mr. Pal can be invoked to support an order of transfer of such an appeal to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge. In order to attract the provisions of S. 24 (1) (a) of the Code in aid of an order of transfer to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge, it has to be first established that the court of the learned Subordinate Judge is otherwise competent to hear and dispose of the appeal. Unless the court of the learned Subordinate Judge is otherwise a court competent to hear and dispose of such an appeal the learned District Judge cannot transfer the appeal to the said court for hearing and disposal in exercise of his powers under the said provision. Sec. 9 (6) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act not only confers the right of appeal but also fixes the forum, namely the court of the District Judge which in view of the provisions of Section 8 (2) of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act may include on assignment the court of the Additional District Judge appointed for the District. But the position of the Subordinate Judge is materially different. Sec. 24 (1) of the Civil P. C. can be attracted only if S. 22 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act can be invoked to confer upon the learned Subordinate Judge the jurisdiction to hear and dispose of such an appeal preferred under S. 9 (6) of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act. S. 22 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, however, cannot be invoked. S. 22 must be read along with and in the light of S. 21 of that Act. When S. 22 speaks of "appeals pending before him from the decrees or orders of Munsifs, it obviously refers to appeals the forum of which is prescribed by S. 21 (2) of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act. It has now been clearly held by a Special Bench of this court in the case of Union of India v. Manmull Jain, (1962) 66 Cal WN 970 : (AIR 1962 Cal 635) that S. 21 of the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act when it speaks of orders, it means orders passed in suits or proceedings arising out of suits. Such being the position, the order appealed against in the present case though passed by a Munsif is not an order coming within the scope of S. 21 (2) or S. 22 of that Act because it is not an order passed in a suit or a proceeding arising out of a suit. Moreover, we have pointed out hereinbefore that the statute itself has prescribed the forum to be the court of the District Judge and has neither left the forum to be determined by the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act nor has it given any indication that the District Judge in dealing with such an appeal can transfer the appeal to any other court subordinate to the District Judge. In such a situation it would not be permissible for us to hold that the learned District Judge could transfer the appeal as done in the present case to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge or that the learned Subordinate Judge was competent to hear and dispose of such an appeal. In this view we must uphold the objection of Mr. De that the appeal preferred to the learned District Judge could not have been competently transferred to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge when that court had not the jurisdiction to either entertain or hear and dispose of the appeal.

6. In the result, the revisional applications succeed and the Rules are made absolute. The impugned orders passed by the learned Subordinate Judge in two Misc. Appeals referred to hereinbefore being set aside the appeals are remanded for rehearing by the competent court in accordance with law.

7. The parties will bear their respective costs.

8. Let the records be sent down forthwith.

A. F. O. O. No. 455 of 1980, D/- 20-1-1982.

Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), Section 27 (1) (a) and (b)—Power given to Commissioner of Wakfs under — It must be exercised in quasi-judicial manner. (Wakf Act (1954), S. 15).

Section 27 (1) (a) of the Act requires investigation as well as determination of the nature and extent of the wakf and wakf property. S. 27 (1) (b) is corollary to S. 27 (1) (a) or in other words, in order to determine the nature and extent of the wakf, the wakfnama must be considered and it must be shown how does it benefit and to whom benefit is intended and what is the object of wakfnama and how the income is to be spent on the said objects. All these require determination by Commissioner of Wakfs. This is a quasi judicial power.

Altamas Kabir and Miss. Sukla Kabir, for Appellant; T. P. Das, B. C. Roy and Miss. S. Parmar, for Respondents.

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal at the instance of the petitioner arises out of an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India challenging the order passed by the Commissioner of Wakfs under S. 27 of the Bengal Wakf Act. The petitioner who is the appellant herein, is alleged to be mutwalli and the respondent No. 2 is alleged to be beneficiary under the Wakf created by one Sk. Panchkari who executed wakf and registered the Wakfnama on 10th of Falgun, 1332 B. S. At the time of execution of the said wakfnama, it is alleged, the Wakif had only two daughters namely. Raushan Ara Bibi and

BZ/BZ/A749/82/VSS/MVJ-H

Masuda Dibi, both of whom were married. After the execution of the Wakf-nama the wakif married again and the petitioner was born of the wakif's second wife. The wakif died sometime in 1940 and after his death, it is alleged, one of his sons-in-law, husband of respondent No. 2 was appointed as mutwalli of the wakf estate. At that time the petitioner was a minor. The said mutwalli died on 7th of Sraban, 1362 B. S. and the office of mutwalli fell vacant whereupon both Masuda Bibi and the petitioner applied before the Commissioner of Wakfs for recording their names as mutwallis of the wakf estate. The Wakfs Commissioner on intimation to the applicants for being appointed as mutwallis, fixed 16th Nov. 1955 as a date of hearing and by an order dated 9th January, 1956 the petitioner was appointed mutwalli after rejection of the application of Masuda Bibi. Thereafter Masuda Bibi filed a suit on 9th of Jan. 1956 in the court of the 3rd Munsif at Burdwan and prayed for declaration that she was the mutwalli of the wakf estate of Sk. Panchkari and the aforesaid order of the Commissioner was not binding on her and was liable to be set aside. The said suit was dismissed on 10th of August, 1957. An appeal was taken against that order. That appeal was also dismissed. A second appeal was taken to this Court which was also dismissed. It appears that on or about 1st week of Dec. 1976 the petitioner received a notice dated 1st Dec. 1976 from the office of the Commissioner of Wakfs regarding enquiry to be made by the Commissioner into the affairs of the wakf estate. Then the petitioner appeared on 23rd Dec. 1976 and it is stated he was surprised to find Masuda Bibi applying again to the Commissioner of Wakfs for recording her name as mutwalli in respect of the wakf estate. The Commissioner of Wakfs by an order dated 6th Nov. 1977 removed the petitioner from the post of mutwalli and appointed Masuda Bibi to act as mutwalli of the wakf estate for a period of six months. Then the matter was taken to this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India and in C. R. 178 (W) of 1977 this Court quashed the order of the Commissioner of Wakfs on 6th of Jan. 1977 and directed the Commissioner to pass fresh order in accordance with law. Subsequently the petitioner was appointed mutwalli of the wakf estate of Sk. Panchkari. Thereafter another Rule was obtained against an order passed by the Commissioner of Wakfs for reviewing the earlier order and the Rule was made absolute by this court. Thereafter again a fresh notice from the Commissioner of Wakfs was received enclosing a copy of petition filed by Masuda Bibi wherein the petitioner was directed to make a payment of Rs. 1,26,000/- to Masuda Bibi. The Commissioner directed such payment to be made by the order dated 19th May, 1979. Against the said order the petitioner moved this court and obtained a Rule. The said Rule was discharged by the Hon'ble single Judge. In his order it was directed as follows: "The Commissioner would be at liberty to determine who are the beneficiaries under the aforesaid wakf deed and the shares of the allowances payable to them". In discharging the Rule the Hon'ble single Judge held inter alia that the proceeding before the Commissioner of Wakfs was one under S. 27 (1) (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) and whether it was a quasi-judicial power or not. It has been held by the Hon'ble single Judge that the wakf estate has been enrolled with the description that it is a wakf-alal-aulad which under S. 6 (11) of the Bengal Wakf Act means a wakf under which not less than 75 per cent of the net available income is for the time being payable to the wakf for himself or any member of his family or descendants. Argument was advanced before the Hon'ble single Judge about maintenance of (एकानरु बढती संसार) and the question remains who are the beneficiaries of the wakf estate. The Hon'ble single Judge held that the settlement was made in favour of the beneficiaries namely for himself or any members of his family or descendants. The learned Commissioner held that Masuda Bibi being a daughter is a beneficiary under the wakf deed. Be that as it may, he has directed that the Commissioner will consider the question again and decide what will be the share of the allowance the beneficiaries are entitled to get under the gift.

2. Being aggrieved by the order of the Hon'ble single Judge discharging the Rule, this appeal has been preferred. Before us the only question which was mooted is whether S. 27 (1) (a) and (b) of the Bengal Wakf Act has given power which is to be exercised quasi judicially or not.

3. Mr. Kabir on behalf of the appellant contended before us that at least the power given in S. 27 (1) (b) (c) (d) and (e) is not quasi-judicial in function but administrative function of the Commissioner of Wakfs only. Assuming for a moment that Kabir is correct in his submission that power given in Section 27 (b) (c) (d) and (e) is administrative function, in view of judgment reported in AIR 1978 Cal 92 at page 98 it is clear that even the administrative function which affects other persons will be vulnerable to attack any application under Art. 226 of the Constitution. On the basis of this judgment Mr. Kabir contended that we must also hold that power under S. 27 (1) (b) of the Act is administrative function and cannot be exercised by the Commissioner in a quasi-judicial way as it has done.

4. Mr. Das on behalf of the respondents, however, contended that all the powers under S. 27 (1) (a) (b) (c) (d) and (e) are functions to be exercised in a quasi judicial manner and not administratively. Mr. Das relied upon a number of cases in support of his contention. In our opinion, S. 27 (1) (a) of the Bengal Wakf Act on the face of it cannot but be quasi judicial. In a case reported in (1944) 48 Cal WN 157: (AIR 1944 Cal 206) Mr. Justice Pal sitting with Mr. Justice Bijon Kumar Mukherjee held inter alia that the power, so far as the decision is concerned, under S. 27 (1) (a) is a quasi judicial power. His Lordship held that so far as this decision is concerned the Commissioner discharged the quasi judicial function. On reading S. 27 (1) (a) of the Act it is quite clear that the Commissioner may investigate and determine the nature and extent of wakfs and wakf property, and call from time to time for accounts, returns and information from mutwallis and it cannot but be quasi-judicial, because it requires investigation as well determination of the nature and extent of the wakf and wakf property. The nature and extent of the wakf property prima facie means, in our opinion, how income from the property has to be applied for the objects and purposes of the wakf and for such benefit of such class of persons for which such wakf is created or intended. This is exactly what has been stated in S. 27 (1) (b) of the Act. In our opinion, S. 27 (1) (b) of the Bengal Wakf Act is corollary to S. 27 (1) (a) of the Act or, in other words, in order to determine the nature and extent of the wakf, the wakfnama must be considered and it must be shown how does it benefit and to whom the benefit is intended and what is the object of the wakfnama and how the income is to be spent on the said objects. All these, in our opinion, require determination by the Commissioner of Wakfs. Therefore, naturally this is a quasi judicial power. We are not concerned with sub-sections (d) and (e) of S. 27 (1) of the Act in this case. It is suffice for us to say that the power under S. 27 (1) (a) and (b) given to the Commissioner of Wakfs is the power which is to be exercised in a quasi judicial manner and not otherwise. In the present case this was done. Therefore, we agree with the Hon'ble single Judge while discharging the Rule that the Commissioner may now decide how much benefit each of the beneficiaries will get and how much from the income of the wakf property. We make it clear that the learned Judge has not decided regarding payment to be made to the respondent No. 2. On the other hand, the learned Judge, in our opinion, has directed the learned Commissioner to decide the matter afresh after hearing all the parties about the benefits which are to be determined by the Commissioner under the aforesaid Deed of Wakf.

5. The appeal is therefore dismissed

6. There will be no order as to costs.

7. No formal decree need be drawn in this appeal.

ANIL K. SEN AND

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, JJ.

Ganges River Transport, Petitioner v. Reliance Jute and Industries Ltd. and others, Respondents.

C. O. No. 2915 of 1981, D/- 28-1-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908) Ss. 151, 149 and O. 7, R. 11 — Order rejecting plaint for failure to put in deficit court-fee within extended time — Plaintiff's application under S. 151 for recalling that order and restoration of plaint — Matters to be considered.

Plaintiff filed money suit with deficit court-fee. When plaintiff failed to put in deficit court-fee within the extended time given by Court under S. 149 of the Code, he was called upon to show cause why the plaint should not be rejected in terms of O. 7, R. 11. The cause shown being considered unsatisfactory, court passed order dated 28-1-1980 rejecting plaint. On 25-2-1980, plaintiff filed an application under S. 151 for recalling the said order and praying time to put in deficit court-fee. That application was allowed by an ex parte order dated 22-3-1980. Plaintiff paid deficit court-fee. After service of summons defendant filed an application under S. 151, dated 23-3-1981 for reconsideration of order dated 22-3-1980 but it was dismissed by impugned order.

Held: The fact that the plaintiff's default has resulted in accrual of a right in favour of the defendant under limitation is certainly a matter of consideration when the court is dealing with an application under S. 151 for restoration of a plaint, which had earlier been rejected, because that right would be lost to the defendant as and when the plaintiff's prayer is allowed. It may be that when the court finds that the order of rejection of the plaint was due to any error or default of the court or where the plaintiff himself is not in any way instrumental to the default, the court may allow an application under S. 151 and recall an order of rejection of the plaint notwithstanding the fact that the same would deprive the defendant of a right which had accrued in the meantime by limitation. But where the default concerns the plaintiff or arises out of his own conduct, whatever the reason, that would not entitle him to have the order of rejection recalled and thus deprive the defendant of a valuable right which has accrued in his favour in the meantime. When the court exercises its powers under S. 151, it so exercises for doing justice to the parties including the defendant. The ex parte order dated 22-3-1980, was vacated and plaintiff's application under S. 151 dated 25-2-1980 was remanded for reconsideration on its merits upon notice to defendant in accordance with law. AIR 1961 SC 882 explained.

Sudhis Das Gupta and Kedar Nath Sen, for Petitioner; S. K. Lahiri, Amal Sahu and S. S. Roy, for Respondents.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— Defendant No. 1 in Money Suit No. 47 of 1979 of the 8th Court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore is the petitioner before us. The order challenged is the one dated June 18, 1981 passed by the learned Subordinate Judge dismissing an application filed by the defendant No. 1 on Mar. 23, 1981 for reconsideration of an order dated Mar. 22, 1980. It will be necessary to refer to the facts shortly in the background in order to appreciate the real dispute between the parties.

2. The plaintiff opposite party, namely, the Reliance Jute and Industries Limited, a company incorporated under the Companies Act instituted the aforesaid Money Suit No. 47 of 1979 for a decree for a sum of Rs. 1,03,257.11 P. by way of compensation and in the alternative for damages. This suit was filed on Oct. 23, 1979 with deficit court fee paid on the plaint. The court directed the plaintiff to put in the balance court-fee on or before Nov. 17, 1979 on which date the balance court-fee not having been paid further time was granted till Dec. 4, 1979. Since the balance court-fee was not paid even on that date, on Dec. 4, 1979, the Court issued a show cause notice upon the plaintiff calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the plaint should not be rejected. The notice was made returnable on Dec. 22, 1979 on which date an application was filed by the plaintiff for further time to put in the deficit court-fee. The Court allowed the prayer and directed the plaintiff to put in the deficit court-fee on or before Jan. 15, 1980. On the date fixed deficit court-fee was not put in but again a prayer was made for time to put in the deficit court-fee which prayer being refused the court issued a fresh show cause notice calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the plaint should not be rejected. The notice was made returnable on Jan. 28, 1980 on which date the cause shown by the plaintiff was considered unsatisfactory and the plaint was rejected.

3. On Feb. 25, 1980 the plaintiff filed an application under S. 151 of the Civil P. C. for recalling the order dated Jan. 28, 1980 whereby the plaint was rejected. Therein the plaintiff further prayed for time to put in the balance court-fee payable on the plaint. This application was allowed ex parte by the learned Judge who observed that he is satisfied that the plaintiff could not pay the deficit court-fee within time. There is no indication in the order as to the reason why it could not be so put in and what exactly was the satisfaction of the court as regards such reasons. Be that as it may, the order dated Jan. 28, 1980 being recalled the Court granted the plaintiff time till April 17, 1980 to put in the deficit court-fee. The deficit court-fee this time being put in summons was issued upon the defendants.

4. Once the service of the summons upon the defendants was effected the defendants appeared and after appearance defendant No. 1 filed an application out of which the present revisional application arises. This was an application made under Sec. 151 of the Code by defendant No. 1 filed on Mar. 23, 1981. He made a grievance that the Court should not have recalled the order dated Jan. 28, 1980 ex parte without notice to the defendants and without giving them any opportunity to contest the prayer made therein. In particular it was claimed by defendant No. 1 that the plaintiff's plaint having been rejected on Jan. 28, 1980, his claim became barred by limitation so that a valuable right accrued in favour of the defendant and such a right could not have been taken away by an ex parte order without giving the defendants' an opportunity to contest the application on which such an ex parte order was passed.

5. This application being heard the learned Judge disposed of the application by observing "In the instant case the petition under Sec. 151 C. P. C. was already allowed. So this Court cannot revoke his own order but it be made clear that the question whether the suit shall be deemed to have been filed afresh or not after the petition under Sec. 151 was filed is kept open and to be determined at the time of trial of the suit. At this stage I however find no ground for rejection of the plaint again under O. 7 R. 11 C. P. C." Feeling aggrieved defendant No. 1 has preferred the present revisional application. The revisional application is being heard upon notice to and on contest by the plaintiff opposite party.

6. Mr. Sen, appearing in support of this revisional application, has contended that the learned Judge had in substance rejected the prayer of the defendant upon a clear misconception of the legal position. According to Mr. Sen, when the plaint was rejected the plaintiff's claim, according to the defendant, came to be barred by limitation and in such a situation the learned Judge could not have restored the plaint by an ex parte order. It was necessary for him to recall the ex parte order and allow the defendants to contest the earlier application filed by the plaintiff under Sec. 151 of the Code. According to Mr. Sen, if the defendants' claim be correct, namely that the claim of the plaintiff became barred by limitation on the date the plaint was rejected the learned Judge could not have restored the plaint to take away the right which accrued in the meantime in favour of the defendants. Reliance is placed on an earlier judgment of ours in the case of Joydeb Mukherjee v. William Jacks and Co. (India) Ltd. (1981) 85 Cal WN 671: (AIR 1981 Cal 267) in support of such a contention.

7. Mr. Lahiri, appearing on behalf the plaintiff opposite party, has been fair enough not to dispute the position that the ex parte order allowing the application under Sec. 151 of the Code should have been recalled and the defendants should have been given an opportunity to contest that application on its merits. He has, however, strongly contested the claim of Mr. Sen that if the claim of the plaintiff gets barred on the date of rejection of the plaint, an application under Sec. 151 of the Code for restoration of the plaint cannot be entertained so as to deprive the defendants of the right which had accrued in their favour. According to Mr. Lahiri, as and when the default is sufficiently explained the fact that the claim of the plaintiff stood barred by limitation on the date of rejection of the plaint should be no consideration for refusing the prayer for restoration made under Sec. 151 of the Code, Reliance is placed by Mr. Lahiri on the provision of Sec. 149 of the C. P. C. and the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mahanth Ram Das v. Ganga Das, AIR 1961 SC 882. We have carefully considered the rival contentions put forward before us. We are unable to sustain the order impugned before us or the view expressed by the learned Judge therein. He seems to think that since the plaintiff's application under Sec. 151 of the Code had already been allowed that order can neither be recalled nor can that application be reheard on its merits on contest by the defendants. We are also unable to agree with the learned Judge that the question of limitation as sought to be raised by the defendants can be relegated for consideration at the trial of the suit. In our view, the learned Judge had failed to appreciate that once the order rejecting the plaint is recalled and the suit is restored to file, it is so restored with reference to the original date of the filing of the plaint. The defendants' objection is not restricted to the position that the claim of the plaintiff is barred on the date of the suit, but that in any event it is so barred on the date when the plaint was rejected. This the defendants are claiming upon the plaint itself. The defendants rely on limitation only in support of their plea that it would not be just and proper for the court to restore a plaint which has once been rejected if such restoration amounts to revival of a barred claim a claim which got barred on the rejection of the plaint. Hence, we are of the view that the learned Judge could not have relegated the point for consideration at the trial of the suit. In such a circumstance it was necessary for the learned Judge to recall the ex parte order dated Mar. 22, 1980 which the learned Judge has ample power to do and allow the defendants to contest the plaintiff's application dated Feb. 25, 1980 made under Sec. 151 of the Code. When the learned Judge refused such a prayer made on behalf of the defendants he did so on a clear misconception of the legal position resulting in the order being made in irregular exercise of his jurisdiction. Hence the impugned order, in our view, should be set aside, the application of the defendants being allowed the ex parte order dated Mar. 22, 1980 should be set aside and the plain-tiff's application dated Feb. 25, 1980 should be directed to be reheard on contest by the defendants.

8. But before we go on to record the final order of ours in this revisional application, we feel it necessary to consider the other point raised by Mr. Lahiri. According to Mr. Lahiri, we were not correct when in the case of Joydeb Mukherjee v. William Jacks & Co. (India) Ltd., (1981) 85 Cal WN 671: (AIR 1981 Cal 267), we held that where the claim of the applicant would be barred by limitation on the date the plaint is rejected, it would not be just and proper for the court to exercise its inherent power and recall the order of rejection of the plaint for default. Mr. Lahiri contends that where the plaintiff sufficiently explains his default the fact that restoration of the plaint would deprive the defendant of a right, which has accrued by way of limitation in the meantime, can be no consideration for refusing an application under Sec. 151. In support of this proposition Mr. Lahiri has placed great reliance on a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mahanth Ram Das v. Ganga Das, AIR 1961 SC 882. We have given our anxious consideration to the point thus raised by Mr. Lahiri. We are, however, unable to accept a proposition in such a wide term as put forward by Mr. Lahiri. At one time the view that prevailed with this Court was to the effect that once a plaint has been rejected under Or. 7 R. 11 no application under Section 151 of the Code is entertainable for recalling such an order and restoration of the plaint. Somewhat different views were expressed by other High Courts and some of the decisions relied on by Mr. Lahiri are authorities in that regard. We had reviewed the decisions on the point in our earlier decision in the case of Joydeb Mukherjee and in view of the later Full Bench decision of this Court and the decision of the Supreme Court, we have held that the mere fact that the order rejecting a plaint is appealable would not necessarily bar entertainment of an application under Sec. 151 of the Code. The divergence of views in that regard now stands resolved and really does not arise now before us because it is not the contention of Mr. Sen that the application filed by the plaintiffs was not entertainable at all. The specific point which arises for our consideration is as to whether when such an application is entertained, should the court recall the order of rejection of the plaint and restore the plaint irrespective of the consideration that such an order may result in deprivation of a right which has since accrued in favour of the defendant by limitation? In our view, the fact that the plaintiffs' default has resulted in accrual of a right in favour of the defendant under limitation is certainly a matter of consideration when the court is dealing with an application under S. 151 of the Code for restoration of a plaint, which had earlier been rejected, because that right would be lost to the defendant as and when the plaintiff's prayer is allowed. It may be that when the court finds that the order of rejection of the plaint was due to any error or default of the court or where the plaintiff himself is not in any way instrumental to the default, the court may allow an application under S. 151 of the Code and recall an order of rejection of the plaint notwithstanding the fact that the same would deprive the defendant of a right which had accrued in the meantime by limitation. But where the default concerns the plaintiff or arises out of his own conduct, whatever the reason, that would not entitle him to have the order of rejection recalled and thus deprive the defendant of a valuable right which has accrued in his favour in the meantime. This view we take because when the court exercises its powers under S. 151 of the Code, it so exercises for doing justice to the parties including the defendant.

9. The decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mahanth Ram Das v. Ganga Das, AIR 1961 SC 882, in our view, does not support the extreme proposition contended for by Mr. Lahiri. In that case upon the finding of the court there was no final order in substance and again the application for extension of the time was filed even before the expiry of the time followed by another application which was filed after the expiration of the time. In such a situation, the Supreme Court held that an order made under Sec. 149 of the Code can be modified and the time originally granted can be extended on either of the two applications filed therefor. The Supreme Court itself was making a disinction between peremptory procedural orders and final orders as in the case of conditional decrees. The facts in the present case are totally different because here the plaintiffs not only failed to put in the deficit court-fee within the extended time given by the court under Sec. 149 but they were called upon to show cause why the plaint should not be rejected in terms of O. 7, R. 11 of the Code. Cause shown being considered unsatisfactory, the court passed a final order rejecting the plaint and the application filed under Sec. 151 of the Code is one for recalling the said order and restoration of the plaint. Such being the position, the view we have taken is in no way inconsistent with the above decision of the Supreme Court.

10. In the result, the revisional application succeeds and is allowed. The impugned order being set aside, the application of the defendant No. 1 made under Sec. 151 of the Code dated Mar. 23, 1981, is allowed. The ex parte order passed by the learned Judge D/- Mar. 22, 1980, being vacated, the plaintiffs' application under Sec. 151 of the Code dated Feb. 25, 1980, is remanded for reconsideration on its merits upon notice to the defendants in accordance with law.

11. No order is made as to costs in this revisional application.

In the instant case there was conflict between two R. S. Khatians, viz., one prepared in 1964 in A's name, and the second one in B's name in 1966. "B" had not filed any case for correction of entry. No suo motu proceeding was initiated for deleting A's name from first R. S. Khatian and for making such entry in the next R. S. Khatian in favour of "B." Consequently, such unauthorised entry in the subsequent R. S. Khatian had no value in the eye of law. Therefore, entry in the first R. S. Where in a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession it was clear from the evidence that a fictitious sale was made by "A" in favour of plaintiff's vendor "B", after the statutory period of 12 years, "B" acquired no interest by his purchase from "A" and the plaintiffs acquired no title to the suit land on the footing of the purchase made by them from "B". Since, "A" or "B" or the plaintiffs had no possession in the suit land within 12 years of the filing of the plaint, the suit was barred by limitation.

Sudhis Das Gupta and Amiya Narayan Mukherjee, for Appellant; A. Gangulie, P. L. Sharma and N. K. Mitra, for Respondents.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— Title Suits Nos. 73 of 1966 and 102 of 1967 were heard analogously. In the former suit, the plaintiffs are Mrityunjoy Prosad and Bhairab Nath. Their case is that the disputed plot No. 4162 was duly recorded in the C. S. Khatian in the name of one Sheikh Hamizuddin, who was its owner under the landlords, who were Kandu Chaudhuris. In 1945, he expired leaving one Sheikh Akbar as his son. Akbar used to possess the land till 1950, when on account of communal disturbance in the locality, he left the place. The property in suit together with the structures standing thereon remained vacant and unoccupied. By a registered kobala executed on the 2nd Feb. 1965, Sheikh Akbar sold the property for Rs. 1000/- to one Tara Prasad Sarkar, who took possession thereof. Then by a registered sale deed dated 30th Apr. 1966, Tara Prasad sold that property to the plaintiffs for a sum of Rs. 11,500/-. The plaintiffs obtained possession. In the R. S. Khatian, the land was recorded in Sk. Akbar's name. Tara Prasad filed an application in the Baranagore Municipality for mutation of his name. The plaintiffs also filed similar application in that Municipality, but the same is pending. Defendant No. 1, Dukhi Ram Dey, has been declaring that he is the owner of the property on the footing of a kobala executed by the heirs of Sheikh Mofijuddin on the 19th Nov. 1952; and Tara Prasad and plaintiffs also did not acquire any title. The plaintiffs took out a copy of that kobala and noticed that Dukhi Ram purported to purchase both the plot No. 4162 and the adjoining plot

No. 4163 taking advantage of Sk. Akbar's absence from the locality. Sk. Mofijuddin or his heirs never had any interest or possession and consequently, Dukhi Ram also did not acquire any title thereto. The suit is for declaration of title to the property in question. Subsequently, the plaint was amended and it was asserted that should the plaintiffs be found to be out of possession, a decree might be passed for recovery of possession.

2. Defendant No. 1 filed a written statement denying the plaintiffs' allegations. The defence, inter alia, is that Sk. Mofijuddin, who was a tenant of the property, possessed the plots Nos. 4162 and 4163 exclusively by paying rent and municipal taxes. Sheikh Hamijuddin or Sheikh Akbar had no title or possession. Sheikh Akbar is a fictitious person. After Mofijuddin died, his sons, Sk. Mansur Ahammad, Sk. Bechu and Sk. Raja and his widow, Hamidun Bibi, inherited the property and possessed the same exclusively. Then Sk. Mansur and others sold those two lands together with the structures standing thereon to him by a registered kobala dated 19th Nov., 1952. He possessed the same and paid the rent and the municipal taxes. The kobalas executed in favour of Tara Prasad and of the plaintiffs are collusive and bogus documents executed without consideration. The suit is barred by time. Moreover, the suit is also barred by adverse possession. After the purchase he evicted a tenant and some trespassers, who remained in unauthorized occupation of the property. The R. S. Khatian was prepared in his name.

3. It is necessary to state some other facts. Dukhi Ram evicted one Atindra Nath Datta from the property and obtained possession. Then the plaintiffs filed a misc. case under O. 21 R. 100 of Civil P. C. against him complaining of dispossession and won that case. That decision was challenged by Dukhi Ram by filing the Title Suit No. 102 of 1967 under O. 21, R. 103 of the Code. He has repeated his statements which he had engrafted in his written statement in Title Suit No. 73 of 1966. He has prayed for declaration of his interest in the property and for a permanent injunction.

4. The plaintiffs contested that suit by filing a written statement.

5. The learned Subordinate Judge accepted the plaintiffs' version, rejected Dukhi Ram's contention, decreed Title Suit No. 73 of 1966 and dismissed Dukhi Ram's Title Suit No. 102 of 1967. The correctness of these decisions has been challenged by Dukhi Ram by filing present appeals.

6. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant (Dukhi Ram) that the evidence given on behalf of the plaintiffs cannot be accepted. It is clear case of discontinuance of possession within the meaning of the provisions of Article 142 of the old Limitation Act of 1908. Reference has been made to the Bench case of Jyoti Mojumder v. Girija Bhushan in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1071 at pages 1074 and 1075: (AIR 1965 Cal 11 at pp. 12,13) to show that the new Limitation Act does not take away the petitioner's right to appeal. Sheikh Hamijuddin was not the owner of the disputed property. Sk. Akbar was a fictitious person and he was not Hamijuddin's son. The purchase made by Tara Prosad from him is a sham and collusive transaction and the same is the position regarding the plaintiffs' purchase from Tara Prosad in 1966. Dukhi Ram purchased the property in Nov. 1952, possessed it, evicted the tenant, Atindra Datta, and some trespassers, paid rent to the Government and taxes to the Baranagore Municipality. The documentary evidence filed by him will clearly show Sk. Akbar was not a resident of 22/1/H or of 22/H, though in his kobala, Ext. 1 (a), and (in ?) his alleged affidavit Ext. 4, his address had been given at 22/1/H, Cossipore Road, Holding No. 85 consisted of plots Nos. 4162 and 4163. Dukhi Ram purchased both the plots from the lawful owner's heirs. Reference has been made to the Full Bench case of Official Receiver v. Govindaraju in AIR 1940 Mad 798 at page 801 to show that in a suit for ejectment by a person out of possession, he cannot succeed unless he proves that he was in possession within twelve years of the suit and the burden is not on the defendant to prove adverse possession. The Bench case of Kanai Lal v. Nityananda in (1977) 1 Cal LJ 578 has been referred to show that the certified copies of Assessment Registers of a Municipality, where the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act are applicable, are admissible under Sec. 35 of the Evidence Act because they are entries made in a register prescribed to be maintained under Sec. 136 of the Bengal Municipal Act and such entry is an authorized one.

7. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiff-respondents has stated that the C. S. Khatian, Ext. 6 (a), shows that Sk. Hamijuddin was the recorded owner regarding the disputed plot No. 4162. Then the R. S. Khatian, Ext. 6 (b), was also prepared in Sk. Akbar's name. The court must hold that Sk. Hamijuddin was the previous owner and Sk. Akbar was his son. This has been stated by P. W. 2, Sanwar Ali, and P. W. 6, Anil Chandra Mitra, who are Akbar's neighbours. They are competent witnesses within the meaning of Sec. 50 of the Evidence Act to depose about the relationship of Akbar with Sk. Hamijuddin. The order passed in the misc. case filed under O. 21 R. 100 of the Code is against Dukhi Ram. The evidence adduced by Dukhi Ram cannot be believed. There is no reason why the court should not accept the oral and documentary evidence given by P. Ws. The case is not governed by the provisions of Art. 142 of the old Limitation Act.

8. The first question is whether Sk. Akbar is a fictitious person and who was the real owner of the disputed plot No. 4162. Sec. 50 of the Evidence Act says that the opinion regarding the relationship is relevant. The section was considered by S. K. Das, J, in the well-known case of Dol Gobinda v. Nermal reported in AIR 1959 SC 914 at page 918. It has been stated at page 918 of the report that under Sec. 50 of the Evidence Act, when the court has to form an opinion about the relationship expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship by any person, who has special means of knowledge, it is relevant. The person whose opinion is expressed by conduct is relevant when he is a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the particular subject of relationship. In other words, the person must fulfil the conditions laid down in the later part of this section.

9. It is common ground that only the C. S. Khatian, Ext. 6 (a), stands in Sheikh Hamijuddin's name. But on this also, there is a conflict between the entry in the C. S. Khatian and the R. S. Khatian. It has been stated by Mudholkar, J. in the well-known case of Durga Singh v. Tholu in AIR 1963 SC 361 at page 364 that where there is such conflict, the latter entries recorded in the record of rights are presumed to be correct and not the earlier ones. Now, the important question arises which entry in the three R. S. Khatians, Ext. 6 (b), Exts. 1 and 1/1, will prevail. The first one prepared first in 1964 is in Dukhi Ram's name. The next is in Sk. Akbar's name, Ext. 6 (b). Then an application was made by Dukhiram for correction of name. The Revenue Officer purported to exercise jurisdiction under Sec. 151 of the Civil P. C. corrected the previous entry in Akbar's name and passed an order that the R. S. Khatian be prepared in Dukhiram's name, vide the decision, Ext. J. But the Revenue Officer is not a court. This principle was laid down in the case of Adinath v. State of West Bengal in AIR 1975 Cal 257 at page 259. After relying on the decision of my Lord, Banerjee, J, it has been stated that such power under Section 151 of the Code cannot be invoked by the Revenue Officer for there is no such provision in the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act. Hence that judgment, Ext. J, and the R. S. Khatian prepared in Dukhi Ram's name in 1967 must be left out of the picture. So, the conflict remains between two R. S. Khatians, viz., one prepared in 1964 in Dukhi Ram's name, and the second one in Sk. Akbar's name in 1966. But there is a snag in the matter. Akbar did not file any case, No suo motu proceeding was initiated under Sec. 44 (2a) of the Act for deleting Dukhiram's name from first R. S. Khatian and for making such entry in the next R. S. Khatian in favour of Sk. Akbar. Consequently, such unauthorised entry in the subsequent R. S. Khatian has no value in the eye of law. The upshot of such discussion is that the first R. S. Khatian prepared in 1964, Ext. 1, will prevail, and not the later one in Sheikh Akbar's name.

10. Sk. Akbar was not examined as a P. W. and there is no explanation of the same. In the case reported in AIR 1949 Cal 457 at page 461, Bajranglal v. Sitaram, it has been stated that if a party fails to call a material witness, who is in a position to throw light on the transaction and to refute the allegations of the other side, there will be adverse inference under Sec. 114 of the Evidence Act. His affidavit, Ext. 4, and kobala, Ext. 1 (a) give his address as 22/1H Cossipore Road, Calcutta. But the evidence of D. W. 1 Nihar Bose, Superintendent of Archives Dept., and of D. W. 2, Krishna Nath, employee of the Assessment Dept. of the Calcutta Corporation, shows that there is no existence of premises Nos. 22H and 22/1H Cossipore Road in the Cossipore Assembly Constituency and in the Assessment Register of the Corporation respectively.

11. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents tried to bank on the evidence given by P. W. 2, Sanwar Ali, and P. W. 6, Anil Chandra Mitra. But P. W. 2, Sanwar, is not a neighbour because he says that his house is about 100/150 cubits away from the disputed land. He is a man of straw and is a rickshaw-puller. This is Calcutta property and not a mofussil land where the residents generally know the other residents. Similarly P. W. 6, Anil Chandra Mitra, is not a man of substance as he says that he is a bidi binder and previously, he worked as a labourer for about 12/14 years. He states that his house is about 100 cubits from the property in question, and he deposed for the plaintiffs in the Sealdah Court. So, none of them is a competent witness within the meaning of the provisions of S. 50 of the Evidence Act and the conditions given in the later part of the section have not been fulfilled.

12. Sk. Akbar's affidavit, Ext. 4, has no value in the eye of law because he was not examined as a P. W. and there is no explanation why he did not enter into the witness-box. So, we disbelieve the plaintiffs' version on this and hold that Akbar was a fictitious person and was not a son of Sk. Hamijuddin.

13. Then the question arises whether the defendant and before him his predecessors had any interest in the land in question and who has title to the property. In this respect, the R. S. Khatian, Ext. 1, is in the defendant's name. D. W. 5, Sanat Kumar Nandy, who lives at 66, Maharaja Nanda Kumar Road, says that the disputed holding No. 85 covering 4 or 4½ cottahs of land which is to the south of his house, is being possessed by Dukhi Ram for the last 17/18 years and before him, Mofijuddin possessed the same. After Mofijuddin, his heirs Sheikh Mansur, Sheikh Bechu and Sheikh Raja possessed it. He has also stated that Hamijuddin or Akbar, Tara Prosad or Mrityunjoy (plaintiff No. 1) never possessed the holding.

14. D. W. 7, Jagannath Nath, lives at 265 Maharaj Nanda Kumar Road (South). He says that his house is to the opposite of 85, Maharaj Nanda Kumar Road intervened by a road and that premises has an area of 4 to 4½ cottahs of land. Dukhiram has been possessing the same for the last 17 years. Mansur and Bechu possessed the property before Dukhiram started possessing it and he did not see Hamizuddin or Sk. Akbar on this land. He further says that Tara Prosad or Mrityunjoy never possessed the property. They are the neighbours and thus had special means of knowledge within the meaning of the principles enunciated in the aforesaid case of Dol Gobinda v. Nemai (AIR 1959 SC 914) (supra) and the conditions of the later part of S. 50 of the Evidence Act have been fulfilled. We accept their testimony and find that the disputed property was owned by Sheikh Mofijuddin and after his death, by his heirs, Sk. Mansur and others and they were the owners of the property in question, and Sheikh Akbar or Sk. Mofijuddin was not its owner. defendant purchased the property from those heirs by a registered kobala, Ext. D, executed on the 19th Nov. 1952.

15. Now about some documentary evidence. On behalf of the plaintiffs, only two dakhilas of 1372 and 1373 B. S., Exts. 3, 3 (a), were put in the suit was instituted in 1966 and both the dakhilas are of that year. P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy says that Government did not accept any rent from him. No tax receipt has been put in to show that taxes were ever paid by Sk. Akbar or by Tara Prosad or by the plaintiffs to Baranagore Municipality.

16. The Assessment Register, Ext. L, of 1948-1949, is in the name of defendant's predecessor. It will appear therefrom that both the plots Nos. 4162 and 4163 comprised holding No. 85. The next copy of the Assessment Register of Baranagore Municipality of 1953-54, Ext. L/1, stands in Dukhiram's name. The next copy, Ext. L/2, is also in defendant's name for 1963-1964. That was an area where the Bengal Tenancy Act applied up to its repeal in Nov. 1965. The municipal tax receipts, Ext. H series, stand in Dukhiram's name regarding the holding No. 85. In view of the bench case of Kanailal v. Nitya Nanda ((1977) 1 Cal LJ 578) (supra) these entries are relevant as the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act are applicable there. He filed dakhilas, Ext. F series, to show that from 1368 B. S. rent was being paid by his previous tenant Atin Datta and then by him.

17. He also filed the copy of the suit register, Ext. R. of Title Suits Nos. 167 of 1955 and 316 of 1954 regarding the disputed holding No. 85. He instituted that suit for recovery of possession and a decree was passed in his favour. He also filed certified copies of the decrees in Title Suits Nos. 361 of 1964, 268 of 1954 and 246 of 1955 to show that he obtained decrees for eviction against some trespassers and also against one Atin Datta, vide Ext. E series. Surely, these decisions are admissible in evidence under S. 13 (a) of the Evidence Act because Dukhiram's interest regarding holding No. 85 was recognized by the court by some transactions.

18. It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that Dukhiram is not a party to the plaintiff's kobala, Ext. 1. So, as a third party, he has no locus standi to challenge that kobala as a fictitious document. Similar contention advanced in this Court was repelled by relying on the decision in (1923) 37 Cal LJ 122: (AIR 1923 Cal 521), it has been stated in the case in (1942) 46 Cal WN 798 at page 800: (AIR 1942 Cal 514) that a person, who is not a party to a document, is not debarred from challenging it as a benami and fictitious document and he can say that no consideration was paid. The first kobala, Ext. 1 (a), executed on the 2nd Feb. 1965, by Sk. Akbar was for a sum of Rs. 1,000/- only. P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy, plaintiff No. 1, says that the land was sold at Rs. 6,000/- per cottah in 1965 or 1966 and he cannot say what was the price in 1965. Though the first kobala purported to be executed by Sheikh Akbar on the 2nd Feb. 1965, was for a paltry sum of Rs. 1,000/- within the Baranagore Municipality, in 1966 the sale was made by Tara Prosad in favour of the plaintiffs on the 30th April, 1966, for a sum of Rs. 11,500/- There is no manner of doubt that it was absolutely a sham and fictitious transaction made without payment of any consideration, and we hold accordingly.

19. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent laid emphasis on the point that possession was delivered to Tara Prosad, Akbar's transferee by P. W. 1 Sri Jatindra Mohan Mukherjee, an Advocate. But his evidence shows that he cannot say who was in previous possession of the land. He says that he drafted the kobala, Ext. 1, and there was no tea shop on that land at that time, though in the kobala itself, it has been stated that there is a tenant of the property. It is common ground that Atin Datta was a tenant of that property and he was evicted by Dukhiram in execution of a decree with police help, vide Ext. E, which is the copy of the decree in Dukhiram's favour in Title Suit No. 361 of 1965. That gave rise to the Misc. case under O. 21, R. 100 of the Code on the allegation that plaintiff's possession was disturbed by Dukhiram. Hence, the evidence given by P. W. 1. Mr. Jatindra Mohan Mukherjee, that he delivered possession to Tara Prosad by handing over the key cannot be relied upon.

20. P. W. 2, Sanwar, and P. W. 6, Anil, say that they do not know if there was a tea stall of Atin Datta on that land. P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy, (Plaintiff No. 1) stated in the Seldah Court that Atin was a tenant of that property, vide Ext. O, though he denied the same in the trial court while he was confronted with that statement. In view of the bench case in (1922) 36 Cal LJ 186: (AIR 1921 Cal 781) Supreme Court cases of Bharat in AIR 1966 SC 405, Union of India in AIR 1977 SC 409 and Sitaram v. Ramchandra Nag in AIR 1977 SC 1712 such statement can be taken as P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy's admission.

21. Then about the evidence of possession, which is linked with the important question whether the suit is barred by time and whether the provisions of Article 142 of the old Limitation Act will be attracted.

22. Reference may be made to the cases in (1927) 31 Cal WN 806: (AIR 1928 Cal 118), (1937) 66 Cal LJ 359: (AIR 1938 Cal 206), AIR 1939 Cal 354, AIR 1966 SC 605 and AIR 1974 SC 706. The principle of law enunciated under the provision of Article 142 of the old Limitation Act of 1908 is that that article applies if the plaintiff has discontinued possession and the onus is on him to prove his possession of the property within twelve years.

23. The quality of evidence given by P. W. 1, Mr. Jatindra Mohan Mukherjee, and P. W. 2, Sanwar Ali, has already been discussed. P. W. 3, Tara Prosad Sarkar, is the plaintiff's vendor and is an interested witness. He says that he purchased the land in 1965 and before that he had no knowledge of the property. P. W. 6, Anil, says that after 1950, Akbar came occasionally and plucked cocoanuts and sajnās. But P. W. 4, Indra Kumar, has clearly stated that he did not see Akbar possessing the land, though he knows it from 1950. Any way this evidence clearly shows that Akbar did not exercise possession for over 12 years. This witness says that in 1956, no Muslim lived on the land and a Hindu lived there. It has already been stated that the defendant filed copies of the decrees, Ext. E series, to show that he evicted the unauthorised occupants from the property and obtained possession. P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy, being plaintiff No. 1 is an interested witness. We disbelieve their evidence.

24. It is clear from the aforesaid discussion that a fictitious sale was made by him in favour of Tara Prosad in 1965, i.e., after the statutory period of twelve years. The case is squarely covered by S. 31 (a) of the New Limitation Act. We hold that Tarapada acquired no interest by his purchase from Akbar and the plaintiffs have acquired no title to the suit land on the footing of the purchase made by them from Tara Prosad. The earlier registered kobala of 1952 in Dukhiram's favour operated as notice under explanation I of Section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act and his actual possession of the property was tantamount to constructive notice under explanation II of that section. P. W. 7, Mrityunjoy, says that he did not even enquire at the Municipal Office or make any search about Dukhiram. We further hold that Akbar or Tara Prosad or the plaintiffs had no possession in the suit land within 12 years of the filing of the plaint and hence, the suit is barred by limitation.

25. Then about the alternative case of advance possession. S. 31 (a) of the new Limitation Act says that nothing in the Act shall enable any suit to be filed for which the period of limitation prescribed by the Limitation Act of 1908 expired before its commencement. The principles laid down in the cases of Jyoti v. Girija Bhusan (AIR 1965 Cal 11) (supra) and of Ram in AIR 1966 Cal 488 may be referred to. The new Act came into force with effect from 1st Jan. 1964, and the suit was instituted in Aug. 1966. The position will not improve even if it be assumed that the new Act applies. This has already been discussed. The evidence of D. W. 5, Sanat, and D. W. 7, Jagannath, clearly shows that Dukhiram was in possession of the property and before him, his predecessors were in possession thereof to the exclusion of others for over 12 years. We believe their evidence and hold that Dukhiram has title to and possession in the disputed property and before him, his predecessors had interest and possession therein and the suit No. 73 of 1966 is also barred by adverse possession.

26. Appeal No. 196 of 1970 be allowed with costs throughout. Title Suit No. 73 of 1966 is dismissed. Appeal No. 78 of 1978 is allowed with costs throughout and Title Suit No. 102 of 1967 decreed. The judgment passed on 29-7-1967 in the misc. case No. 163 of 1966 be hereby set aside. It is hereby declared that the plaintiff has title to the property in question. The defendants be permanently restrained from interfering with his possession therein.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J.:—

This interlocutory application has now come up before us, inter alia, for stay of the operation of the judgment and order dated Jan. 12, 1982 passed by Deb J. The application before the learned Judge was for leave to revoke the authority of the respondent No. 2 who had been acting as the umpire in the pending arbitration proceedings arising out of the arbitration agreement dated Dec. 31, 1979. The prayer in the alternative is for removal of the umpire and for the appointment of a fit and proper person as the umpire and to continue the proceedings. There are other prayers, inter alia, for stay of the arbitration proceedings and for an injunction restraining the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 from proceeding with the arbitration proceedings. The learned Judge passed the ad interim order restraining the umpire from proceeding with the arbitration reference until further orders. At the final hearing, however, the learned Judge dismissed the application making cost in the arbitration proceedings. He also extended the time to make the award till 15th March, 1982 and directed the respondent No. 2 to give reasonable opportunity to both the parties of being heard before making his award.

2. When the matter was moved before us for interim orders, we passed an order, inter alia, restraining the Umpire from proceeding with the arbitration reference until the disposal of this application.

3. The facts shortly are, that both the appellant and the respondent appointed their respective arbitrators who after making the appointment of the Umpire differed amongst themselves leaving the matter to be decided by the Umpire one S. Rama Chandran. Before the said arbitrators statements and counter-statements were filed sometime in October and November 1980, Documents were also filed before them round about such time. In May 1981 the umpire S. Ramachandran entered upon the reference and directed the parties to submit their respective documents and papers. A meeting was sought to be fixed on 29th May, 1981 but due to the inconvenience of the appellant the same was adjourned and thereafter it was fixed on 7th to 9th June, 1981. The appellant then requested the umpire to fix the last week of June for inspection of site. On 8th June, 1981 the umpire visited the site in the presence of the representatives of both the parties but on that date the case was not discussed. Thereafter the umpire fixed 27th to 30th June, 1981 for meetings to be held at Calcutta giving liberty to the parties to file further statements or documents, if so desired. The appellant again prayed for extension of time to submit further paper by a fortnight. The umpire thereupon gave liberty to the appellant to produce all papers and documents on the date of hearing. On July 4, 1981 the meeting was held at Calcutta in which the parties virtually agreed that the statements and documents already filed by them before the arbitrators would be held to be good for hearing before the umpire. Time to make the award was extended by consent up to Aug. 31, 1981. On July 25/26, 1981 meetings took place in which the appellant opened its case and made submissions and filed counter-statements and other papers which were filed before the arbitrators. Thereafter on July 26, 1981 the umpire for the second time visited the site and on 23rd, 24th and 25th Aug. 1981 meetings were fixed for hearing at Calcutta. Directions were given that books, papers and documents intended to be relied on must be produced and oral evidence, if any, should be made available at the hearing.

4. On 23rd Aug. 1981 the meeting was held when the appellant made further submissions and tendered a counter claim. The umpire directed that further documents, if any, were to be submitted on or before 7th Sept. 1981. The umpire thereupon expressed his gratitude to the parties and their lawyers for the cooperation and fine exposition of the case on behalf of their clients. According to the umpire and the respondent the hearing was concluded on that date.

5. On Sept. 3, 1981 the appellant intimated the umpire that the minutes of the meeting supplied by him did not reflect all the points argued by the counsel. It was further informed that as the minutes did not give the correct picture due to various typographical errors a fresh meeting should be held for necessary correction thereof. On Sept. 4, 1981 the respondent No. 1 filed its counter statement and also filed documents as per leave given by the umpire in the meeting held on Aug. 23rd, 1981. By its letter dated Sept. 9, 1981 the respondent No. 1 required the umpire to make his award by Sept. 30, 1981 being the last extended date mutually agreed by and between the parties. The respondent, inter alia, wrote:

"You asked certain information from H. S. C. L. and ourselves. While we had sent our documents vide letter dated 4-9-1981, we find H. S. C. L. is delaying the matter in sending the required information/documents. We request you to stick to the date mutually agreed at the Calcutta meeting without any further extension."

By his letter dated Sept. 10, 1981 written to the appellant the umpire, inter alia, intimated that the minutes were dictated in the presence of all the parties and no objections were raised at that time. The umpire informed that no meeting was necessary to be held merely to correct the minutes and stated that the hearing had already been closed. The umpire, inter alia, wrote:

".....It may be that there are few typographical errors. I see no reason for fixing a meeting merely to correct the minutes. It was expressly understood that the hearings are closed and parties were merely given liberty to submit any documents which they want, before 7-9-1981.   However, you are granted further time till 20-9-1981 for filing documents if any. No further time will be granted. You may also send me the corrections required to be made in the minutes of last meeting.

As I am committed to issue the award on or before 30-9-81 I request you to send me the documents required immediately."

On Sept. 17, 1981 the appellant filed two documents and requested the umpire to grant six weeks time to file its rejoinder of the counter-statement of the respondent No. 1. The appellant requested the umpire for giving a hearing. The appellant wrote:

"We pray to you for affording us an opportunity to substantiate our counter claim after submission of our rejoinder and/hold hearing for such purposes. Furthermore, we pray to you for offering us opportunity to make our submissions to the various documents filed by the claimants by their letter dated 4-9-81."

Thereafter on Sept. 21, 1981 by telex the umpire informed the appellant that the statements, if any, should reach the umpire before Sept. 27, 1981 and liberty was given to the appellant to indicate all its points in such statements. The umpire also intimated that the case was fully argued on all counts and was closed by counsel of the appellant at the Calcutta sitting. It was intimated that no further meeting was required. By its letter dated Sept. 22/24, 1981 the appellant wrote to the umpire:

"We further state and submit that there is no commitment to issue the award on or before 30-9-1981 and in the event of our prayer as made in our previous correspondence are not granted we will suffer irreparable loss and prejudice."

On Sept. 24, 1981 the appellant prayed for six weeks' time to file its rejoinder intimating that such time was required in view of the preoccupation of counsel and due to the intervening Puja holidays.

6. It will be noticed from the aforesaid events that had happened that the respondent No. 1 made it clear that the award be made within the last extended time and if it was not so done they would not consent to any further extension. There was no corresponding assurance from the appellant that they would (not?) apply for extension of time from court. All that was said was that there was so commitment on the part of the umpire to issue the award on or before Sept. 30, 1981. That was too vague to be acted upon. The umpire did appreciate that unless the award was made within the extended time that is, Sept. 30, 1981 he would become functus officio and unless there were impelling reasons so to do it was his discretion to consider whether the making of the award would be postponed further or not. It appears that the umpire had before him the following considerations, (a) that if another hearing would have to be given that would mean an enormous expenditure with which both the parties would be saddled; (b) At the last sitting, at his desire, the parties were asked to send some documents to him; (c) According to the umpire the mistakes complained of in the minutes of the last meeting could be corrected without holding a meeting if the details of such correction were made known to him. The appellant did not co-operate in that respect; (d) Under the circumstances, the parties could as well submit their written submissions before him which would obviate the necessity of a hearing particularly when no oral evidence was to be adduced. In any event, the allegations about the mistakes in the minutes being without any particulars whatsoever and the proceedings having been closed as minuted by the umpire and the expenses involved in holding another meeting being enormous and time consuming, he could reasonably think that such a meeting would be unnecessary and written submissions could make it up. In any event, it is within the knowledge of the umpire as to on what basis he gave his directions but from the facts as placed before us it can safely be concluded that a reasonable man placed in the position of an umpire under the circumstances has acted reasonably and honestly.

7. Mr. Gupta contends that the umpire is guilty of legal misconduct because he did not give hearing as asked for regarding the various documents filed by the claimants by their letter dated Sept. 4, 1981. The umpire should also have given a hearing so that the appellant might have an opportunity to substantiate its counter claim after submissions of its rejoinder. The legal misconduct was committed when the umpire refused to give a hearing on the fresh documents filed by the respondent No. 1 and it was no ground to say that the court below by its order had directed the umpire to give a hearing as asked for. In other words, by refusing to give a hearing he committed legal misconduct and thereby made himself liable to be removed or his authority being revoked.

8. As stated hereinabove on Sept. 24, 1981 in spite of the urgency of the matter and knowing full well that the time available to the umpire was to expire on Sept. 30, 1981, the appellant asked for six weeks' time to file its rejoinder and put forward the plea of the intervening long holidays for taking such a long time.

9. On the next day i.e. on Sept. 25, 1981 the appellant moved this court orally and obtained an ad interim order restraining the umpire from making the award. The umpire was immediately informed about it but no step was taken to file the petition before the vacation Bench. Instead, the appellant waited till No. 3, 1981 when the court reopened and filed its written application for which it gave an undertaking to court on Sept. 25, 1981.

10. In the written application the appellant took the plea of bias and of legal misconduct. The learned Judge after considering the facts in details found that there was no case on the question of bias. From the prima facie point of view we take the same view. The learned Judge has noted that the allegation of dishonesty in the petition was not pressed. The learned Judge, however, was of the view that in so far as the plea of legal misconduct was concerned the umpire did not get any opportunity to consider whether he should allow the aforesaid prayers of the appellant and held that, accordingly, no ground had been made out for his removal. In that view of the matter the learned Judge by dismissing the application gave two directions in the matter. The time to make and publish the award was extended till March 15, 1982 and the umpire was directed to give a reasonable opportunity to both the parties of being heard before making the award.

11. In so far as the last direction was concerned Mr. Gupta contends that the learned Judge had no power to give such direction to the umpire and as such he acted without and/or in excess of jurisdiction. That being so, it became an appellable order under clause 15 of the Letters Patent and the appeal is maintainable.

12. We have noted from the cause title in the petition of the lower court that this application was made under Ss. 4, 5, 11 and 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and as such S. 39 read with Sch. II thereof would apply and no appeal would lie from the order made in such an application. The order of dismissal and the direction for extension of time to make and publish the award were clearly under the said Act. Regarding the second direction of the learned Judge to the umpire to give a hearing, we are of the view that even assuming the same to have been passed without and/or in excess of jurisdiction yet that part of the order is severable and cannot vitiate the whole order so as to make the whole order without jurisdiction and as such appealable. Mr. Gupta has cited the case of Rawatmal v. Rajputana Trading Co. Ltd., AIR 1973 Cal 248 and Rebati Ranjan Chakravarti v. Suranjan Chakravarti, AIR 1963 Cal. 642 but, in our opinion, such cases are distinguishable and have no application to the facts of this case. Mr. Bhabra argues that the part of the direction to the umpire should come under S. 41 (b) of the Arbitration Act. We do not think that such an argument is tenable. We should observe that the memorandum of appeal should have indicated the nature of the application made before the trial court indicating thereby that the application was made under those provisions.

13. In so far as the first direction is concerned we are of the view that the extension of time to make and publish the award is an order under the Arbitration Act and as such incidental to the main order and no appeal lies therefrom. Accordingly, the same does not affect the legality of the order but from a prima facie point of view, in our opinion, possibly the learned judge exceeded his jurisdiction in giving direction to the umpire as to the conduct of the proceedings before him and to that extent Mr. Gupta's argument that it is without jurisdiction appears to be sound. It seems that it is within the domain of the umpire to decide the question himself and to take upon himself the responsibility of deciding whether or not any further opportunity should be given in pursuance of the letter dated Sept. 24, 1981 and that the court is incompetent to give any direction to him to act in a particular manner. The appellant has made the prayer before the umpire and he has to allow it or to refuse it himself. After such decision if any party would challenge the same then the question would arise whether he has committed any legal misconduct or not and the court would be competent to decide that question.

14. It would seem that this part of the order is definitely severable from the main order. The learned Judge has clearly found that the case of bias has not been established and has recorded that the allegation of dishonesty was not pressed. In effect he has held also that the case of legal misconduct was not sustainable as the umpire could have changed his mind upon receipt of that letter dated Sept. 24, 1981.

15. Mr. Gupta contends that the umpire has already committed legal misconduct and, accordingly, in what manner he would act after receiving the letter dated Sept. 24, 1981 would be another question and that would not affect his past conduct. In the facts of this case it would seem, from a prima facie point of view, that this contention may not hold good. Mr. Gupta's client could have come up before the court before writing the letter dated Sept. 24, 1981 but having written that letter his client would be held to have sought for another opportunity from the umpire in getting its grievances redressed. We are of the opinion that although that part of the order might have been without jurisdiction but the same did not create any prejudice so far as the appellant is concerned.

16. Taking into consideration the fact that the umpire is free to decide the question himself without being guided by the court we stay that part of the order which directs the umpire "to give a reasonable opportunity to both the parties of being heard before making his award". Accordingly, we make it clear that in spite of such stay the umpire would be free to decide the question himself and would be at liberty to cancel the notice which he gave pursuant to such direction of the court below and would be free to decide whether or not any fresh opportunity should be given to the parties and as to his own course of action. Save as aforesaid the rest of the order of the court below will remain in force. There will be a partial order for stay as aforesaid. All interim orders are vacated. Costs will be costs in the appeal. The umpire and all parties to act on a signed copy of the minutes.

17. We put it on record that various case laws have been cited at the bar and arguments have been advanced at length and as such we have gone into the details of the facts herein to give our reasons but inasmuch as the principles are well established we did not discuss the various case laws cited before us at this interlocutory stage.

C. K. BANERJI, J. :— I agree.
Order accordingly.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 305

B. C. RAY, J.

In re: Chandidas Ghosh, Petitioner.
D/-10-5-1982.

W. B. Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963), Ss. 28 (2), 24 (as amended in 1979) — Rules for Management of Non-Government Institutions (Aided and Unaided) (1969), R. 28 (8) — President according approval to disciplinary proceedings against teacher of school — Matter ordered to be placed before Committee of Education Board instead of Board itself — Order is invalid.

Where the President of the Secondary Education Board after according approval to the disciplinary proceedings against a teacher under S. 28 (2) has instead of placing the matter with his report stating the reasons for the exercise of emergency power before the next meeting of the Board placed the matter before a Committee constituted under S. 24 to which power of the Board has been delegated under Proviso to sub-rule (8) of R. 28, the order would not be in accordance with the provisions of the rules and as such it could not be sustained.

The real position in law is that the power to accord approval of the disciplinary proceedings that are initiated against a teacher of a school under the Board is vested in the Board i.e. the Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal. This has been clearly provided for in R. 28 (8). The Board may either exercise this power itself or it may delegate it to any committee constituted under the provisions of S. 24. Therefore, if a committee has been vested with the power of the Board conferred on it under R. 28 (8) of the Rules by the Board then in that case such committee is quite competent to consider the papers of the relevant proceeding initiated by the managing committee of the school against members of the teaching and non-teaching staff of a school and can accord the approval. This is one way of exercising the power conferred by R. 28 (8). In case where the Board has not for some reason or other been able to exercise this power either by itself or through a committee constituted with the approval of the State Govt. by delegating its power to the committee the President has been empowered under S. 28 to exercise the powers of the Board in case there is an emergency or in other words to meet an emergent situation and in that case immediately after exercise of such power of the Board the President shall have to place a full report before the Board of the action taken by him stating the reasons therefor. There is no other third method of exercising such power as conferred by R. 28 (8).

H. Chakraborty with H. Barua, for Petitioner; A. P. Sircar with A. N. Banerjee, for the State; J. K. Banerjee, for Respondent No. 9.

ORDER:— A short question though, of course, of point of law is involved in this application namely whether the approval that has been accorded by the President of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education as communicated by the letter of the Secretary of the Board of Secondary Education on 19-8-81 to the Secretary, Managing Committee of Uttar Ful-sara Jr. High School in the District of 24 Parganas for terminating the service of the petitioner who is the headmaster of the said school is in accordance with law and is sustainable.

2. Mr. Sircar, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education, has in his usual frankness candidly placed before this Court the records of the Board including the order passed by the President of the Board on 4-8-81. It appears from the said order that the President of the Board after considering the relevant papers including the explanation submitted by the teacher and also the recommendation of the committee proposing the action to be taken against the petitioner, the delinquent employee, the President passed an order to the effect that as all the steps have been taken by the managing committee of the school in accordance with the procedure prescribed by R. 28 (8) of the Rules for Management of Non-Government Institutions (Aided and Unaided), 1969 the President therefore approves of the proposed action of the committee to pass the order of termination of the petitioner from service as proposed by them. It has been further stated that this matter will be in due time reported to the meeting of the Board. This order was made on 4-8-81. Thereafter on a misappreciation of the provisions of the Act and the Rules this matter was placed in the meeting of the committee which was constituted by the Board u/s. 24 of the West Bengal Secondary Education Act, 1963 to whom the Board delegated its power and functions conferred on it by R. 28 (8) instead of placing the matter before the meeting of the Board as required under the provisions of Sec. 28 (2) as substituted by S. 16 (2) of the Act of 1979. Therefore this step taken by the President of the Board by placing the matter before the committee constituted u/s. 24 of the Act is not in accordance with law. The real position in law is that the power to accord approval of the disciplinary proceedings that are initiated against a teacher of a school under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education is vested in the Board i.e. the Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal. This has been clearly provided for in Rule 28 (8) of the Rules for Management of Non-Govt. Institutions (Aided and Unaided), 1969 as amended in 1979. The Board may either exercise this power itself or it may delegate it to any committee constituted under the provisions of Sec. 24 of the said Act. Sec. 24, as I have stated hereinbefore, clearly confers power on the Board with the approval of the State Govt. to constitute such other committee as the Board may think fit and the Board with the approval of the State Govt. may delegate to any such committee any of its powers or functions including the power conferred by R. 28 (8) of the said Rules. Therefore if a committee has been vested with the power of the Board conferred on it under R. 28 (8) of the Rules by the Board then in that case such committee is quite competent to consider the papers of the relevant proceedings initiated by the managing committee of the school against members of the teaching and non-teaching staff and can accord the approval. This is one way of exercising the power conferred by Rule 28 (8) of the said Rules. In case where the Board has not for some reason or other been able to exercise this power either by itself or through a committee constituted with the approval of the State Govt. by delegating its power to the committee the President has been empowered u/s. 28 of the said Act to exercise the powers of the Board in case there is an emergency or in other words to meet an emergent situation and in that case immediately after exercise of such power of the Board the President shall have to place a full report before the Board of the action taken by him stating the reasons therefor. These are the two modes or ways provided in the Act and the Rules laid down thereunder for exercising the powers of the Board. There is no other third method for exercising such power as conferred by R. 28 (8) of the said Rules. In this case as I have stated hereinbefore that the President after exercising his emergency powers u/s. 28 (2) of the said Act has instead of placing the matter with his report stating the reasons for the exercise of such power before the next meeting of the Board has placed the matter before a committee constituted u/s. 24 of the said Act to which power of the Board has been delegated under proviso to sub-rule (8) of Rule 28 of the said Rules. Therefore this is not in accordance with the provisions of the said rules and as such it cannot be sustained. This might have been due to a mis-apprehension or misconception of the legal position with regard to this matter.

3. In these circumstances it is just and proper to quash and set aside the order of the President of the Board dated 4-8-1981 and to direct the Board since a committee has been constituted according to the provisions of Sec. 24 and powers of the Board under Rule 28 (8) have been delegated to that committee to place all the relevant papers and also the proposed action against the delinquent employee i.e. the petitioner before that committee which will consider and dispose of the same by either granting or refusing to grant or accord approval for taking the action proposed against the petitioner in accordance with the provisions of R. 28 (8) of the Rules. It is also directed since the matter is pending for a long time that the committee will consider and dispose of the matter as early as possible preferably within a period of eight weeks from today.

4. Let a writ of certiorari be issued directing the respondents to set aside and/or cancel the impugned order of the President dated 4-8-81 as communicated by the letter of the Secretary dated 19-8-81 and to reconsider the matter as directed hereinbefore. The application is therefore allowed to the extent indicated above without any order as to costs. L/A for State may take a plain copy of this order as prayed for.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 307

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI AND

C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

Kumar Veda Kantha Sinha Roy, Appellant v. The State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

A.F.O.O. No. 26 of 1978, D/- 25-9-1981.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Delay — Question whether delay is fatal to maintainability of petition — Principles stated — Petitioner complaining of non-payment of compensation under Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act — On facts, held, petition should not have been dismissed on ground of delay. Order of Basu, J., Reversed. (Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act (1952), S. 8).

If a person has a good case on the merit, a good case in the sense that it is otherwise entitled to be considered by the Government, then, normally his petition should be entertained and should be examined. Secondly, delay is a relevant and material factor. While the claimants and the persons who are assertive of their rights should not be disentitled to the exercise of discretion by the courts under Art. 226 of the Constitution in order to consider whether the delay should defeat the right of the claimant, it is material to bear in mind whether by the conduct or delay in the conduct of the petitioner or the appellant, the other side, viz. the Government or the respondents have been prejudicially affected or they have altered their position thereby or if the damage has been caused to the respondent or who is to pay compensation by the delay on the part of the petitioner or the claimant. Thirdly, it appears that in considering the question of delay, the merits of the case of the petitioner or claimant should be taken into consideration, the nature of it, how it has been caused and what would be the effect of delayed grant of relief. Grant of relief under Art. 226 is discretionary and an exercise of such discretion by the learned trial Judge should not be interfered with normally by an appellate authority. But it has also to be emphasised that the power which is given to the Court must be exercised on intelligible and rational basis and on sound legal principle. It is true that the party affected must be diligent in asserting and pursuing his claim. This right, however, is coupled with the fundamental obligation of the State to pay compensation for acquisition and requisition of the property. It is asserted that it is the citizen's duty to prefer his claim if his claim has been denied. It has, however, also to be borne in mind that in a society governed by rule of law it is the Government's primary obligation to pay for any property acquired if the parties are entitled under the provisions to the compensation. This principle is clearly enjoined by S. 8 of the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act, 1952 under which the State has in this case acquired the property. It imposes a reciprocal obligation and reciprocal right that while one should be diligent in pursuing its right the other should be equally diligent in discharging its obligation. In this case the indisputable fact is that in the apportionment case, as it stands, the appellant has been declared to be entitled to a share in the 44 C. S. Plots. The appellant has not been paid compensation in respect of the entirety of the said 44 Plots. The appellant might have pursued his claim more vigilantly. There is nothing to show that in 1957 when the alleged payment was made to the Hercules Trading Corporation by the State Government the appellant was aware of it. The adjudication in the adjudication reference holding that the petitioner is entitled to compensation in 44 C. S. plots stands. If that fact stands, this cannot be consistent with the alleged payment in respect of the petitioner's share to the Hercules Trading Corporation. (Para 12)

In the premises, the ground upon which the learned trial Judge has exercised his discretion is not a proper ground, in the facts and circumstances of the case. The petitioner (appellant) is certainly entitled to a proper adjudication by a proper authority on the question whether the petitioner (appellant) is entitled to any compensation lawfully under the provisions of the law in respect of C. S. plots in respect of which he has been adjudged in the apportionment case as a shareholder. In the premises the order and the judgment of the learned trial Judge dismissing the writ petition on ground of delay must be set aside. Order of Basu, J. Reversed. (Para 13)

P. K. Dutta and B. Banerjee, for Appellant; Gopal Chakraborty with Shyamal Sen, (for Nos. 1 to 4) and N. C. Roy Chowdhury with P. Majumdar (for No. 2), for Respondents.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— This is an appeal arising out of an order passed and judgment delivered by T. K. Basu, J., on 9th Dec., 1977. By the said judgment and order Basu, J. has dismissed the writ application of the appellant on the ground of delay. The learned trial Judge has observed that though there was some confusion as to facts, he was not pursuing the aspect about the facts, because he was dismissing the application on the ground of delay. His Lordship observed that the factual aspect regarding 9 C. S. Plots, there were serious controversies raised. But the learned Judge made it clear that he was not pronouncing on the merits of the controversies, as he was dismissing the application on the ground of delay. With great respect it is difficult to appreciate this part of the observation of the learned trial Judge. It is not possible to find out whether the learned Judge held that the factual controversies were such which disentitled the appellant to seek relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution or not. Be that as it may, it would be profitable to refer to certain facts in order to appreciate the contentions raised in this appeal and the points upon which the learned Judge has proceeded.

2. It appears that on or about 18th April, 1921 a permanent lease (Mokarari Mourasi Patta) was granted of Touzi No. 2402 within the District of 24 Parganas, of which the appellant was Touzi holder and/or absolute proprietor to the extent of 1/3rd. The said lease provided that in the event of permanent acquisition the appellant would be entitled to the share of compensation to the ratio of 6:10. On the 19th Dec., 1946, 44 C. S. Plots pertaining to the said Touzi comprising of an area of 68 bighas 15 cottahs 3 chittacks were permanently acquired by the Central Government without notice. Permanent Acquisition Case No. 27/4 of 1946-47 was started before the Land Acquisition Collector, 24 Parganas, who had assessed the land value at the flat rate of Rs. 4000 per bigha. On the 15th March, 1955 the appellant was served with a notice of acquisition and the Land Acquisition Collector on being moved directed the appellant to move the proper court of law. This appears from the averments made in para 14 of the petition and this averment is not seriously disputed on behalf of the respondents. On the 3rd May, 1962 the State Government issued a notification appointing an arbitrator for determination of the compensation payable in respect of the said Touzi land. On the 11th August, 1962 the arbitrator sent back the case to the State Government for re-submission, determination and apportionment of respective shares of the persons interested in the said Touzi land from the highest chain to the lowest. It appears that on the 11th March, 1963 a writ petition was filed by one Abhoy Singh Shahela. Thereafter on 19th April 1964 the appellant moved the Land Acquisition Collector for award of compensation. This would appear from the judgment of the learned trial Judge at p. 177 of the Paper Book. The petition of Shahela was marked C. R. No. 125 (W) of 1963 and came up for hearing before B. N. Banerjee, J. on the 27th Sept. 1965. Banerjee, J. directed that the respondent-State Government would appoint another Arbitrator with a direction on him to determine compensation payable for the share of the petitioner in that case which share the petitioner in that case should establish before the arbitrator. The learned Judge had, further, ordered that if for the purpose it was necessary to add other parties to the reference, the arbitrator would be at liberty to do so or the respondent-State Government should itself do so. On the 29th August, 1966 apportionment case being Arbitration Case No. 67 of 1966 (A) and Arbitration Case No. 64 of 1966 (V) were started. The appellant was already a party, i.e., the referring claimant No. 2, in the valuation case, but was left out in the apportionment case. On the 22nd June, 1967 the appellant applied to the Collector for being included in the apportionment case. On the 14th June, 1968 the terms of reference was issued to the arbitrator. Again on 7th Oct. 1971 the appellant again applied for being included as a party referring claimant in the apportionment case. On the 29th Dec. 1972 the State Government accepted the appellant's representation and held that the appellant and the original referring claimant were jointly interested in the said acquired land. The appellant should also be included as a party referring claimant in the Arbitration Case No. 67 of 1966 (A) arising out of Arbitration Case No. 64 of 1966 (V). In this connection, reference may be made to page 113 of the Paper Book, wherein in the award Sri S. S. Ganguly, the Arbitrator observed that he had been appointed Arbitrator in Arbitration Case No. 64/66(V) for apportionment and determination of compensation payable in respect of a number of plots and went on to say that as per the order of appointment he was required to determine the amount of compensation payable in respect of the interest of only the referring claimants involved in such acquisition of such properties. Thereafter he mentioned the different plot numbers which appear at page 114 of the Paper Book. Then he gave reference to the rights of the parties with reference to the genealogical table and thereafter at page 116 of the Paper Book he had stated that the parties were interested in the following shares and it may be necessary to set out the said portion of the order in the said award:—

"4. From the above table, the shares of the descendants of Raja Bara Kantha and purchasers from them may be described in the following way:—

1. Kumar Veda Kantha	1/3rd share
2. (a) Satish Kantha by purchase from him Bahadur Singh Singhee by deed dated 7-9-1934	1/9th share
(b) Nirmal Kantha	1/9th share
(c) Rani Jotirupa	1/9th share
3. Purchasers in Revenue sale of the share of Hemada Kantha	1/3rd share

Total 1

5. Kumar Veda Kantha and Nirmal Kantha are referring Claimants Nos. 2 and 3 in this case. Admittedly, their shares in the touzi as shown in the above table were never transferred. It may be safely held, therefore, that they are entitled to get 1/3rd and 1/9th shares respectively out of the touzi holder's or landlord's share in the amount of compensation payable for the disputed plots."

3. After referring to the several deeds and other documents, he decided the apportionment case as under:—

"Ordered that the apportionment case is hereby decided in favour of referring Claimants Nos. 2 & 3 without contest and in favour of referring Claimant No. 1 on contest between him and Craig Jute Mills only. It is hereby declared that the referring claimants have the following shares, mentioned against the names of each, in the amount of land-value payable as compensation for the disputed lands covered by Touzi No. 2402 of the 24-Parganas Collectorate:—

- | | |
|--------------------------------|-----------|
| 1. Shri Abhoy Singh Sahela | 511/144th |
| 2. Kumar Veda Kantha Sinha Roy | 2/16th |
| 3. Kumar Nirmal Kantha Roy | 1/24th |

Parties do bear their own costs up to this stage."

4. Accordingly, the appellant was asked to submit a formal petition duly stamped and signed by him. On the 11th Jan. 1973 the appellant duly filed a stamped petition for being included as a referring claimant in the apportionment case. On the 19th Feb. 1973 the appellant was included as a referring Claimant No. 2 in the said Apportionment Case No. 67/66(A). On the 4th July, 1973 the appellant was declared to be entitled to receive 2/16th share for compensation of all the 44 C. S. plots. In this connection, reference may be made to the observations of the learned trial Judge appearing at page 178 of the Paper Books. This award, according to the appellant, was not challenged by the Union of India or any party. The award appears at p. 112 of the Paper Book. The material portions of the award I have set out hereinbefore. On the 31st Aug. 1973 a notification was issued by the State Government appointing one Sri B. K. Sengupta as the Arbitrator in respect of only 29 C. S. plots and not 44 C. S. plots i.e. about 15 plots were left out. From Nov. 1973 to Mar. 1974 the said Arbitration Case No. 64/66(V) was heard and on the 26th Mar. 1974 it was detected by the Arbitrator for the first time on the last day of the hearing that only 29 plots had been included in the notification appointing him as the Arbitrator on the 31st Aug. 1973. This point is also noted in the judgment of the learned trial judge.

5. Thereafter on the 24th April, 1974 the appellant represented to the State of West Bengal for issuing a Corrigendum to include the said 15 plots after the notification dt. Aug. 31, 1973. On the 16th May, 1974 the State of West Bengal wrote a letter whereby, according to the appellant, the State of West Bengal promised in writing to issue a necessary corrigendum shortly pursuant to the representation of the appellant dt. 24th April, 1974. It would, therefore, be necessary to refer to the said corrigendum which has been referred to in page 163 of the Paper Book. But before that letter dt. 16th May, 1974, there is a letter we must take note of which is dt. 21st Aug. 1964 dealing with the petition of the petitioner dt. 19th Apr. 1964, wherein it was stated that from the records it appeared that compensation payable in respect of the award had already been paid to the assessee after assessment by the Land Acquisition Collector. As the stipulation as referred to in the said noted petition was not brought to the notice of the office at the time of preparation of assessment, nothing could be done at the stage by the office as this was written by the Land Acquisition Collector, 24-Parganas. But on the 16th May, 1974 the Deputy Secretary, Government of West Bengal wrote to the petitioner regarding his petition dt. 29th Apr. 1974 to say that the Land Acquisition Office, 24-Parganas had been requested to send a proposal for appointment of an Arbitrator in view of what was stated in the petition of the petitioner dt. 8th Apr. 1974 and a proposal was still being awaited and necessary action would be taken as soon as the revised proposal was received from the Collector to remind the submission of the proposal.

6. Thereafter again after 1964's letter the State Government issued a corrigendum adding only 6 plots being C. S. Plots Nos. 321 to 325 and 329, leaving out still 9 plots as mentioned in para 29 of the petition which appears at page 13 of the Paper Book. It has been found by the learned trial Judge that on the last day of the hearing on the 16th March, 1974 it was noted by the Arbitrator that in the valuation case unlike in the apportionment case the terms of reference were limited to only 29 C. S. plots and not 44 C. S. plots. On the 20th Jan. 1975 the said valuation award was made and published and limited to 35 C. S. plots only. As a result of that, out of 44 C. S. plots valuation was awarded in respect of an area of 52 bighas 16 kattahs and 3 chittacks of land and the valuation of an area covered by the said 9 plots left out was not awarded. Therefore the appellant's grievance was that he had been deprived of the said 9 C. S. plots measuring an area of 15 bighas 17 kattahs. On the 7th Feb. 1975 the appellant obtained the certified copy. All the said 9 C. S. plots were danga lands and the Arbitrator, according to the appellant, had awarded compensation @ Rs. 6,500/- per bigha. It appears at page 151 of the Paper Book. But we are not concerned at this stage with this part of the award of Sri B. K. Sengupta.

7. On the 22nd Mar. 1976, the appellant issued a notice demanding justice. Thereafter on the 30th Apr. 1976 the appellant moved an application under Article 226 of the Constn. claiming, inter alia, that a writ of or an order in the nature of mandamus should be issued commanding the respondents and in particular the respondent No. 1, that is, the State of West Bengal and each of them and/or their agents and/or their servants to issue and/or cause to be issued necessary notification in the manner and according to the provisions of the Act and/or otherwise as may be enjoined upon by law upon them, as referred to, in inter alia, paragraph 29 of the petition for computation, determination and assessment of the compensation of the land value of the 9 C. S. plots and other consequential reliefs. The particulars of the said 9 C. S. plots are as follows :

"Outstanding C. S. Plots for determination of the said compensation :

In the said application under Art. 226 of the Constn., the State of West Bengal, the Union of India for whose purpose the land in question was acquired, the Land Acquisition Collector, the Court of the Arbitrator, Abhoy Singh Shahela and Nirmal Kantha Sinha Roy were added as respondents.

8. The learned Trial Judge by the judgment and order dt. 25th July, 1977 discharged the rule nisi which had been issued on 30th April, 1965 on the ground of delay. The learned trial Judge mainly based his decision on the ground of 14 months unexplained delay, that is to say, the delay between 20th Jan. 1975 being the date of valuation award and 22nd Mar. 1975 the date of demand for justice. This appears from page 181 of the Paper Book. The learned Judge therein had observed as follows :

"Unfortunately for the petitioner this story of his inaction does not stop there. As pointed out by Mr. Roy Chowdhury on the 22nd June, 1967 the petitioner filed a petition before the Arbitrator in the apportionment case for being added as a referring claimant. It is the petitioner's own case that notwithstanding the application no steps were taken by the appropriate respondents to add the petitioner as a party. Notwithstanding the above as Mr. Roy Chowdhury points out, the petitioner took no steps whatsoever till the 5th Oct. 1971 when he made a representation to the respondent No. 1 on this question. Therefore even at this stage the petitioner chose to keep quiet and take no steps whatsoever for a period of over 4 years. No explanation of any kind whatsoever is given either in the petition or in the course of the argument as to why the petitioner chose to wait for four long years before a pursuing this remedy."

Though the learned trial Judge has indicated in the judgment that all throughout the period the appellant was not diligent in pursuing its remedy, the appellant states that the State of West Bengal had not taken the plea of delay however.

9. Before we deal with the points raised in this appeal, it will be necessary for us to refer to one important aspect, that is to say, the statement contained in the affidavit made by the Land Acquisition Collector, District 24-Parganas in answer to the rule nisi affirmed on the 9th Nov. 1976. In paras 16 and 18 therein, it was stated as follows :

"16. Save that the said 29 C. S. Plots referred to in para 26 of the petition became subject matter of the jurisdiction of the learned Arbitrator in a reference made by the Collector upon the application of the petitioner and that 15 C. S. plots were left out of the jurisdiction of the Arbitrator on the ground that the Arbitrator is incompetent to go into the question of the said C. S. Plots and save what has been stated hereinbefore and save that are matters of record, I make no admission of the statements contained in paras 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27 of the petition.

18. The allegations contained in paragraph 29 of the petition are denied and disputed. I say that on scrutiny by Land Acquisition Collector's Department it appeared that land value compensation in respect of the said 9 C. S. plots were already paid to Hercules Trading Corporation Ltd. and others on the basis of the assessment as far back as on 13th Nov. 1957. I further say that the said assessee

M/s. Hercules Trading Corporation Ltd. and others were also not parties in the corresponding apportionment Case No. 67 of 1966 (A). The prayer for reference to arbitration in respect of these plots were therefore not allowed."

While we are on this aspect, we may also refer to the affidavit filed on behalf of Union of India by one Harsharan Gangwar affirmed on the 10th Sept. 1976 wherein he stated inter alia as follows :

"6. From the said records it appears that the said nine C. S. plots which were the subject matter of the 226 application had already been assessed for compensation and compensation paid. The said assessment was made in the name of Hercules Trading Corporation Ltd. and payment was made to it on 13th Nov. 1957 by account payee cheque. The assessment of compensation so far as the landlord's interest is concerned was paid to Sri Rajendra Singh Singhee and Sri Narendra Singh Singhee. If necessary the petitioner will crave leave to refer to the records."

Two important facts emerge out of this narration of facts. The apportionment case was initiated on or about 29th Aug. 1967. The appellant had applied to the Collector for being included as a party in the apportionment case though the appellant had been referred to as the claimant No. 2 in the valuation case. In the apportionment case the appellant was included as a party on the 19th Feb. 1973, and on the 4th July, 1973, the appellant was declared entitled to receive 2/16th share of compensation for all the 44 C. S. Plots. This appears from the award at page 114 of the Paper Book as also from the judgment and order of the learned trial Judge.

10. Now, it appears from other documents, which we have referred to, that sometimes in 1957 certain amounts were alleged to have been paid to M/s. Hercules Trading Corporation. It is not apparent that in the subsequent apportionment case, the case which determined the share of the parties in the land in question including other C. S. Plots M/s. Hercules Trading Corporation was even adjudicated as a party entitled to any share of compensation. It does not also appear that such alleged compensation which was alleged to have been paid to M/s. Hercules Trading Corporation by the State Government sometime in 1957 was done in any proceedings as a result of adjudication, notice in respect of which was given to the appellant. How therefore and under what circumstances could the Hercules Trading Corporation come to receive any compensation, if it had received it at all, is not clarified either from the averments made in the affidavit filed on behalf of the State Government or from the affidavit filed on behalf of the Union of India. Therefore, the facts remain that so long as the apportionment award remains which has held as mentioned hereinbefore and accepted by the Government the appellant was entitled to compensation, according to his share, in respect of 44 C. S. Plots. It has been further held that he had shares in respect of 44 C. S. Plots. It is indisputable that appellant has not been paid his full share in respect of the entirety of 44 C. S. Plots. This, in our opinion, entitles the appellant to claim for adjudication before the appropriate authority of his right to compensation.

11. A large number of authorities were cited, before us, on the plea that delay is a relevant consideration in an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution. It is not necessary to refer to all the decisions. But the Courts have taken different views in the background of the various facts and circumstances of the case. In some cases, delay of one year or less than one year has been considered to be fatal. In respect of compensation cases, in some cases, delay extending over 35 years have not been considered to be fatal. We will only note the numerous decisions, not because they are very relevant for the purpose of our decision in the facts of this case but out of deference to the arguments advanced by learned advocates on both sides. Reference was made to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of M/s. Tilokchand Motichand v. Commr. of Sales Tax, Bombay, AIR 1970 SC 898. Our attention was drawn to paras 9, 10 & 11 of the decision in the case of P. B. Roy v. Union of India, AIR 1972 SC 908 in the case of Nirmala Khosla v. Union of India, AIR 1976 Punj & Har 22 where delay between the period of 35 to 71 years was not considered to be fatal in respect of an award of compensation. Our attention was also drawn to the decision in the case of Sualal Yadav v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1977 SC 2050 and to the case of Smt. Hemlata Basu v. State of West Bengal, (1971) 75 Cal WN 94 where it was held that the conduct of the petitioner was a relevant factor and the relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution was discretionary and should be granted more or less on similar ground, though not on identical ground on which the courts of Chancery in England exercised jurisdiction. Reference was also made to para 12 of the decision in the case of Madras Port Trust v. Hymanshau International, AIR 1979 SC 1144, in the case of State of Gujarat v. Bhogilal Keshavlal, AIR 1980 SC 367, in the case of Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills Co. Ltd. v. State of U. P., AIR 1979 SC 621 which was relied on in aid of the proposition that in case of promissory estoppel Government was bound to perform its part. We do not think it is relevant for our present purpose. Reliance was placed on the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Century Spg. & Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Ulhasnagar Municipal Council, AIR 1971 SC 1021 at pp. 1023-1024 to highlight that it is necessary to find out whether there was a good case for the petitioner and whether he should be heard by the Court. Reference was also drawn to the decision in the case of R. L. Gupta v. Municipal Corporation, Delhi, (1973) 1 Serv LR 359: (1973 Lab IC 1253) (Delhi) to the case of State of Bihar v. Presiding Officer, Industrial Tribunal, Patna, 1977 Lab IC 803 (Pat), in the case of Sualal Yadava v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 (2) SLR 698 (2): (AIR 1977 SC 2050). Reference was also made to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Uttar Pradesh Co-operative Federation Ltd. v. Sunder Bros., Delhi, AIR 1967 SC 249 in aid of the proposition that the grant of relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution was discretionary and unless such discretion was exercised, the exercise of the discretion by the learned trial Judge should not be interfered with. These propositions are well settled.

12. In our opinion, the following propositions can well be applied out of the principles enunciated in different cases in the background of the facts of this case. If a person has a good case on the merit, a good case in the sense that it is otherwise entitled to be considered by the Government, then, normally his petition should be entertained and should be examined. Secondly, delay is a relevant and material factor. While the claimants and the persons who are assertive of their rights should not be disentitled to the exercise of discretion by the Courts under Art. 226 of the Constitution in order to consider whether the delay should defeat the right of the claimant, it is material to bear in mind whether by the conduct or delay in the conduct of the petitioner or the appellant, the other side, viz. the Government or the respondents have been prejudicially affected or they have altered their position thereby or if the damage has been caused to the respondent or who is to pay compensation by the delay on the part of the petitioner or the claimant. Thirdly, it appears that in considering the question of delay, the merits of the case of the petitioner or claimant should be taken into consideration, the nature of it, how it has been caused and what would be the effect of delayed grant of relief. Grant of relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution is discretionary and an exercise of such discretion by the learned trial Judge should not be interfered with normally by an appellate authority. But it has also to be emphasised that the power which is given to the Court must be exercised on intelligible and rational basis and on sound legal principle. It is true that the party affected must be diligent in asserting and pursuing his claim. This right, however, is coupled with the fundamental obligation of the State to pay compensation for acquisition and requisition of the property. It is asserted that it is the citizen's duty to prefer his claim if his claim has been denied. It has, however, also to be borne in mind that in a society governed by rule of law it is the Government's primary obligation to pay for any property acquired if the parties are entitled under the provisions to the compensation. This principle is clearly enjoined by S. 8 of the Requisitioning & Acquisition of Immovable Property Act, 1952 under which the State has in this case acquired the property. It imposes a reciprocal obligation and reciprocal right that while one should be diligent in pursuing its right the other should be equally diligent in discharging its obligation. In this case the indisputable fact is that in the apportionment case, as it stands, the appellant has been declared to be entitled to a share in the 44 C. S. plots. The appellant has not been paid compensation in respect of the entirety of the said 44 Plots. The appellant might have pursued his claim more vigilantly. There is nothing to show that in 1957 when the alleged payment was made to the Hercules Trading Corporation by the State Government the appellant was aware because in the subsequent documents that we have mentioned the Government did not make any reference of this. The adjudication in the adjudication reference holding that the petitioner is entitled to compensation in 44 C. S. plots stands. If that fact stands, this cannot be consistent with the alleged payment in respect of the petitioner's share to the Hercules Trading Corporation.

13. In the premises, we are of the view that the ground upon which the learned Trial Judge has exercised his discretion is not a proper ground, in the facts and circumstances of the case. The petitioner is certainly entitled to a proper adjudication by a proper authority on the question whether the petitioner is entitled to any compensation lawfully under the provisions of the law in respect of C. S. plots in respect of which he has been adjudged in the apportionment case as a share-holder. In the premises the order and the judgment of the learned trial Judge dated July 25, 1977 are hereby set aside. The appeal is allowed to that extent.

14. Let a writ be issued directing the respondents 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 to issue or cause to be issued necessary notification in the manner and in accordance with the provisions of the Requisitioning and Acquisition of Immovable Property Act, 1952 in respect of the plots mentioned in paragraph 29 of the petition and in case it is determined that the petitioner is entitled to compensation in respect of the 9 C. S. plots he should be paid such compensation. As the matter has prolonged for a long time, let the notification and steps as indicated above to be taken by the respondents be issued as expeditiously as possible. After that the Arbitrator will decide the matter as expeditiously as possible. The Rule is made absolute to the extent indicated above.

15. In the facts and circumstances of the case the parties will pay and bear their own costs.

16. Learned advocate on behalf of the Union of India prays for certificate for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. As we have determined the case on the facts and circumstances of the case and as no principle of law requires interpretation by the Supreme Court, we decline to grant any certificate.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 314

M. M. DUTT AND MONOJ KUMAR
MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Ram Awatar Agarwal and others, Appellants v. Corporation of Calcutta and others, Respondents.

F.M.A.T. Nos. 540 and 588 of 1982, D/- 7-4-1982.

DZ/EZ/B651/82/LGC

(A) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), S. 414 — Demolition of unauthorised construction — Construction of building up to 6th storey adjudicated as unauthorised construction — Order confirmed upto Supreme Court — Demolition order — Proceedings before Building Tribunal in respect of subsequent unauthorised construction and stay order, held, became infructuous and inoperative.

The construction of the building up to the 6th storey was adjudicated as unauthorised construction having been made in violation of the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. It was not disputed that all further constructions upon the 6th storey are also unauthorised. The Corporation became entitled to execute the two orders of demolition regarding the 7th to 14th storeys of the building. It is true that the Building Tribunal has stayed the subsequent orders for demolition but, as the first demolition order was pending before the High Court in appeal, the Building Tribunal had no other alternative than to stay the subsequent demolition orders. But, after the first demolition order was confirmed up to the Supreme Court, the Building Tribunal will have no option in the matter, but has to vacate the stay order. The Corporation has not, however, moved the Building Tribunal for vacating the stay order but, that is not necessary. The illegality and unauthorisedness of the construction of the building up to the 6th storey having been confirmed up to the Supreme Court, the proceedings before the Building Tribunal in respect of the subsequent unauthorised constructions up to the 14th storey and the stay order have become infructuous and inoperative. The Building Tribunal will not have any jurisdiction to continue the stay order which will defeat the order of the High Court as affirmed by the Supreme Court. The Corporation, therefore, need not wait for the disposal of the appeals before the Building Tribunal or to take any step for the vacation of the stay order, for the said appeals and stay order have become infructuous and inoperative. The demolition of the building on the strength of the first order would be quite consistent with the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. (Paras 12, 16)

(B) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), S. 414 (1) (c) — Demolition of unauthorised construction — Fresh demolition proceeding not necessary for each addition to an unauthorised construction. (Para 16)

(C) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 414, 414-A — Demolition of unauthorised construction — Written notice under Sec. 414 (1) to person responsible to demolish or alteration etc. — “Person responsible”, connotations of — Occupier if can challenge order of demolition — Occupier whether entitled for opportunity of being heard. (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

It is clear from the provisions of sub-section (1) and sub-section (5) of S. 414 that the expression “person responsible” only relates to a person who has something to do with the work of construction or who is in a position to comply with an order of demolition. The said expression does not include an occupier of the unauthorised construction, who has nothing to do with the work of such construction or any addition to it. (Para 19)

The first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of Section 414 clearly provides for the service of a copy of the demolition order on the owner and the occupier and enjoins that no action shall be taken until the expiry of thirty days from the date of service of the order. The object of the service of the copy of the demolition order on the owner and the occupier is clear, namely, it will enable them to vacate the structure within thirty days of such service. (Para 22)

Section 414A confers a right of appeal to the Building Tribunal on “any person” dissatisfied with the order of demolition. The expression “any person”, will undoubtedly include an occupier. But, where an occupier is not a person responsible, he cannot challenge the demolition order on the ground that the construction is authorised and lawful as having been made in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. In such an appeal preferred by an occupier, other than a person responsible, the only relief that can be sought for by him is some more time so as to enable him to vacate the unauthorised structure. In any event, in the instant case, the building being admittedly unauthorised, there will be no scope for any argument in any appeal by an occupier in justification of the construction of the building. (Para 23)

An occupier not being a person responsible will have no say against an order of demolition of the unauthorised structure, except that he can ask for some time to vacate. The first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 in effect gives a period of thirty days to the owner and the occupier. It cannot be contended that no demolition order can be enforced without giving the occupier an opportunity of being heard. S. 414 (1) provides for the service of a notice on the person responsible so as to give him an opportunity of being heard. The appellants who are the occupiers of the building in question and having no connection whatsoever with the construction of the building have no right to claim an opportunity of being heard against the demolition orders of the building. They are only entitled to a reasonable time to shift to some other place. The first proviso to sub-section (3) of Section 414 has prescribed a period of thirty days from the date of service of a copy of the order of demolition on the occupier during which the demolition order will not be enforced. This really means that the occupier is given a reasonable time to vacate the unauthorised structure. (Paras 24, 33)

(D) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), S. 414 (3) — Demolition order — Service on owner and occupier — Corporation not required to serve copy of demolition order on every occupier found in unauthorised building at the time of execution of order.

On a proper construction of the first proviso to S. 414 (3) it seems that after a demolition order is passed and copies of which are served on the owner and the occupiers for the time being of the unauthorised structure, the Corporation will be entitled to start the demolition work after the expiry of 30 days from the date of service of the demolition order. No further copy of the demolition order is required to be served by the Corporation on any person who comes to occupy the unauthorised structure during the period of thirty days or during the period between the service of the copies of the demolition order and the execution of the work of demolition. (Para 27)

(E) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Relief under — Grant of relief under Art. 226 is discretionary — Nobody can claim as a matter of right that he must be given the relief he asks for in his writ petition. (Para 29)

(F) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 414; 392 and Sch. 16, Rr. 59, 60 — Demolition of unauthorised construction — Occupiers of unauthorised structure if can claim infringement of fundamental rights to carry on business, their personal liberty or their right to property. (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (g), 21 and 300-A).

The fundamental rights cannot be availed of in justification of an unlawful act or in preventing a statutory authority from lawfully discharging its statutory duty. The occupation of the appellants in the unauthorised structure is unlawful in view of Rules 59 and 60 of the Building Rules read with S. 392 of the Act.

A citizen whose occupation of a place is unlawful cannot claim fundamental right to carry on business in such place. Personal liberty as contemplated by Article 21 of the Constitution does not include any liberty to be in unlawful occupation. Even assuming that there is any such liberty, there cannot be any grievance of the appellants that they are being deprived of such liberty by the Corporation without following the procedure established by law. The procedure laid down in S. 414 including the first proviso to sub-sec. (3), is quite reasonable, fair and just from the point of view of Art. 21 of the Constitution and consequently, satisfies the test of reasonableness. (Para 36)

It is, however, significant to be noticed that the appellants have not challenged the constitutional validity of S. 414 on any ground. So the question of reasonableness of the procedure provided in S. 414 of the Act does not arise. Be that as it may, the Corporation has acted in accordance with the procedure prescribed by S. 414 of the Act and, accordingly, there can be no question of infringement of Art. 21 of the Constitution. The same reason applies with equal force to the contention of the appellants based on their purported right to property under Art. 300A of the Constitution. There is no merit in the contention of the appellants that their fundamental rights or their right of property are being interfered with by the Corporation. (Para 36)

(G) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 568 and 414 — Demolition of unauthorised construction — Occupiers of unauthorised building cannot claim compensation under S. 568.

A person to whom compensation may be given by the Corporation under S. 568 refers to a person who is a stranger to the act in respect of which a municipal authority or municipal officer exercises any of the powers vested in him by the Act. When such a person suffers damage, the Corporation may pay compensation to him, but a person who is directly or indirectly connected with an illegal act for which the municipal authority or officer has to exercise the powers under the Act, such a person cannot claim compensation on the ground that he has suffered damage. The owner of an unauthorised structure cannot insist on payment of compensation under S. 568 on the ground that the unauthorised structure having been demolished he has suffered damage. The appellants, in the instant case, are in unlawful occupation of the unauthorised building in question. They do not come within the purview of S. 568 for the purpose of maintaining a claim for compensation for the damage that they may suffer on account of their dispossession from the unauthorised structure.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— The appellants, who are 60 in number, have preferred this appeal against the judgment of B. C. Ray J., whereby the learned Judge dismissed the application of the appellants under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

2. The appellants claim to be the tenants of premises No. 174, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta, which is a 14-storeyed building. It is not disputed that the said building has been constructed without any sanctioned plan and in violation of the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, hereinafter referred to as the Act, and the Building Rules under Schedule XVI of the Act. Admittedly, one Smt. Durga Devi is the owner of the land, comprising the said building being premises No. 174, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta. The respondent No. 11, Shyam Lal Agarwalla, took a lease of the land with an old structure standing thereon from the said Durga Devi on June 27, 1977. The old structure was demolished by him and, thereafter, he started the construction of the disputed building without any sanctioned plan and in violation of the Building Rules. The Corporation of Calcutta tried to prevent the respondent No. 11 from constructing the building in defiance of the provisions of the Act and the Rules, but all attempts of the Corporation were defeated by the respondent No. 11, and he succeeded in erecting the building up to the sixth storey. After the service of statutory notice, the Corporation started a demolition case and on May 15, 1978 the Deputy Commissioner of the Corporation passed an order of demolition.

3. The said order of demolition dated May 15, 1978 could not stop the respondent No. 11, Shyam Lal Agarwalla, from going on with further constructions up to the 10th storey and, thereafter up to the 14th storey. On April 21, 1981, the Corporation passed two other demolition orders, one for the 7th to 10th storeys and the other for the 11th to 14th stories. In the meantime, Shyam Lal Agarwalla filed an appeal before the Building Tribunal of the Corporation against the first demolition order of the building up to the sixth storey. He also filed two other appeals before the Building Tribunal against the other two demolition orders, both dated April 21, 1981, relating to 7th to 10th stories and 11th to 14th stories.

4. On May 29, 1981, the Building Tribunal dismissed the appeal of the respondent No. 11, Shyam Lal Agarwalla, filed against the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978 in respect of the demolition of the building up to the sixth storey. Against the said order of the Building Tribunal, the respondent No. 11 filed a writ application in this Court, which was dismissed by P. C. Barooah J. on June 22, 1981. Being aggrieved by the said order of Barooah J., the respondent No. 11 preferred an appeal before a Division Bench of this Court under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent. The said appeal and an application for interim order were both dismissed by the Appeal Court by its judgment dated November 16, 1981. A special leave petition was filed by the respondent No. 11 before the Supreme Court against the judgment of the Appeal Court dismissing the appeal. On February 15, 1982, the Supreme Court summarily dismissed the special leave petition.

5. While the appeal preferred by the respondent No. 11 against the judgment of Barooah J. was pending before the Appeal Court, he filed an application before the Building Tribunal of the Corporation praying for stay of the said two demolition orders dated April 21, 1981. At the hearing of the said application for stay, it was contended on behalf of the respondent No. 11 that the issue whether the construction of the building up to the 6th storey was illegal or not was sub judice before the High Court and as such, the Tribunal should not act on the assumption that such construction up to the 6th storey was unlawful and unauthorised. Considering the said contention, the President of the Building Tribunal by his order dated September 9, 1981 directed that the execution of the said two demolition orders would remain stayed until further orders.

6. After the special leave petition filed by the respondent No. 11 against the judgment of the Appeal Court dismissing the appeal and the application for interim order relating to the demolition of the building up to the 6th storey was dismissed by the Supreme Court on February 15, 1982, the Corporation started demolition of the 14th storey of the building on February 17, 1982. On that day, the appellants moved an oral application before B. C. Ray, J. at his residence at about 8-30 P.M. and obtained an ex parte interim order of injunction restraining the Corporation from demolishing the building. Thereafter, they filed the writ petition. Ultimately, B. C. Ray, J., by his judgment dated March 1, 1982 dismissed the writ petition of the appellants. Hence this appeal.

7. In the appeals, an application for interim order of stay of the demolition of the building has been filed. We granted an ad interim order and fixed the hearing of the application. The respondents Nos. 1 to 5 including the Corporation of Calcutta have filed an affidavit-in-opposition to the application for interim order of stay. As the disposal of the application would virtually mean disposal of the appeal, by our order dated March 10, 1982 we directed the hearing of the appeal and the application together.

8. On behalf of the appellants, the appeal has been argued by Mr. Sankar Das Banerjee, assisted by Mr. Dipankar Ghosh who, to a great extent, supplemented the argument of Mr. Banerjee. The first point that has been urged on behalf of the appellants is that in view of the order dated September 9, 1981 of the Building Tribunal staying the two demolition orders of the building, one from 7th to 10th stories and the other from 11th to 14th stories, the Corporation has no authority to start demolition of the building as it did on February 17, 1982. It is not disputed that the Building Tribunal has not yet vacated the said order for stay. It is, accordingly, contended by the appellants that so long as the stay order remains operative, the action of the Corporation to commence demolition of the building will be highly illegal. In this regard, we may notice the contention of the Corporation as made in paragraph 23 of the affidavit-in-opposition affirmed by Sri Debabrata Banerjee, the City Architect and Special Officer, Multi-storeyed Building Cell of the Corporation. It has been stated in paragraph 23, inter alia, that the last two demolition cases need not have been initiated at all if the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978 had not been under challenge in the appeal. The subsequent demolition proceedings were initiated by way of abundant caution, so that even if the first demolition order was set aside on any ground, further unauthorized constructions made upon the existing unauthorized structure could not evade the process of law. Any construction made upon an existing unauthorized structure is ipso facto unauthorized, and the additional construction having merged in the original unauthorized construction is liable to be demolished along with the same. No further demolition proceeding was necessary for such additional unauthorized construction. It was only as a precautionary measure against any possible violation of the first demolition order that the subsequent demolition proceedings had to be initiated.

9. Mr. Dipankar Ghosh, learned counsel for the appellants has criticised the contention of the Corporation as made in paragraph 23 of the affidavit-in-opposition. It is submitted by him that the merger of one unauthorized construction with another is unknown in legal jurisprudence. The learned counsel submits that the Corporation cannot rely on the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978 relating to the 1st to 6th stories of the building. It is urged that in respect of every addition to an unauthorized construction, a fresh demolition order is necessary under Section 414 (1) (c) of the Act. It is submitted that there is no substance in the contention made on behalf of the Corporation that no further demolition proceeding was necessary for the demolition of additional unauthorized constructions. The Corporation, counsel submits, is bound to obey the order of the Building Tribunal and cannot ignore such order on the ground that no further demolition order was necessary.

10. The further contention of the appellants in this regard is that the Corporation is a statutory body, and when the statute lays down the manner in which the powers conferred on it by the statute should be exercised, such powers can be exercised in that manner only and in no other manner. Reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellants on the decision of the Privy Council in Nazir Ahmed v. King Emperor, AIR 1936 PC 253 (2). It has been observed by the Privy Council that where a power is given to do a certain thing in a certain way the thing must be done in that way or not at all, and that other methods of performance are necessarily forbidden. The said principle has been followed by the Supreme Court in Ballabhdas Agarwala v. J. C. Chakravarty, AIR 1960 SC 576 and Gujarat Electricity Board v. Girdharilal Motilal, AIR 1969 SC 267. Relying on the above principle of law, it has been contended on behalf of the appellants that the attitude of the Corporation that in view of the first order of demolition of 1st to 6th stories of the building, there is no need for any demolition order or to start any demolition proceeding in respect of the 7th to 14th stories which are the subsequent unauthorized constructions upon the original six storeyed unauthorized construction, is illegal. It is submitted that the Corporation could only proceed for the demolition of the 7th to 14th stories in accordance with the provision of Section 414 of the Act and not in any other manner according to its sweet will.

11. The learned counsel for the appellants has also placed much reliance on the doctrine of election. It is contended that when the Corporation has taken recourse to Section 414 of the Act, it cannot give the go-by to the procedure for demolition as laid down in that section and proceed to demolish 7th to 14th stories without an order of demolition, even assuming that such an order of demolition was not necessary. In other words, the Corporation having a choice either to proceed under Section 414 or not, and it having elected to proceed under Section 414 cannot now proceed without conforming to the procedure laid down in the section.

12. We may now consider the above contentions of the appellants. We have already noted the circumstances under which the Building Tribunal granted stay of the two subsequent demolition orders dated April 21, 1981. As the first demolition order was the subject matter of an appeal pending before this Court which was filed by the respondent No. 11, the Building Tribunal, in our opinion, had some justification for granting stay of the subsequent demolition orders dated April 21, 1981. After this Court dismissed the appeal and the Supreme Court dismissed the special leave petition regarding the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978, it became final. In other words, the construction of the building up to the 6th storey was adjudicated as unauthorized construction having been made in violation of the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. It is not disputed before us that all further constructions upon the 6th storey are also unauthorized. As soon as it is conceded, the Corporation become entitled to execute the two orders of demolition regarding the 7th to 14th storeys of the building. It is true that the Building Tribunal has stayed the subsequent orders for demolition but, as the first demolition order was pending before this Court in appeal, the Building Tribunal had no other alternative than to stay the subsequent demolition orders. But, after the first demolition order was confirmed up to the Supreme Court, the Building Tribunal will have no option in the matter, but has to vacate the stay order. The Corporation has not, however, moved the Building Tribunal for vacating the stay order but, in our opinion, that is not necessary. The illegality and unauthorizedness of the construction of the building up to the 6th storey having been confirmed up to the Supreme Court, the proceedings before the Building Tribunal in respect of the subsequent unauthorized constructions up to the 14th storey and the stay order have become infructuous and inoperative. The Building Tribunal will not have any jurisdiction to continue the stay order which will defeat the order of this Court as affirmed by the Supreme Court.

13. The contention in this regard may be examined from another point of view.

The appeals before the Building Tribunal were filed and the stay order was obtained by the respondent No. 11, Shvam Lal Agarwalla. The stay order bound the Corporation vis-a-vis the respondent No. 11 and not the appellants. The appellants, therefore, in our opinion, have no locus standi to rely on the stay order of the Building Tribunal in respect of the subsequent unauthorized constructions up to the 14th storey.

14. The criticism of the appellants of the statements of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 in paragraph 23 of the affidavit-in-opposition is not justified. It may be that the contention of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 that the subsequent unauthorized constructions up to the 14th storey have merged in the original unauthorised construction up to the 6th storey is not technically correct, but what has been meant by the said contention is quite clear. The subsequent unauthorized constructions being the extension of the original unauthorized construction, all these constructions up to the 14th storey should be treated as one single unauthorized construction. Indeed, the structure comprising 7th to 14th stories cannot have any separate and independent existence without the first six stories of the building. Obviously, that is what the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 went to mean by the said contention in paragraph 23.

15. There is also justification for the Corporation to take steps against the subsequent unauthorized constructions. The contention of the appellants is that the Corporation cannot give the go-by to the subsequent demolition orders which are now pending before the Building Tribunal in appeals and proceed to demolish the building from the 14th storey relying on the first demolition order which has become final and conclusive. It is submitted that the Corporation being a statutory body has to proceed in accordance with the provisions of the Act and cannot adopt a procedure of its own dehors the provisions of the Act and the Rules. It is true, as observed by the Privy Council in Nazir Ahmad's case (AIR 1936 PC 253 (2)) (supra), where a power is given to do a certain thing in a certain way the thing must be done in that way or not at all, and that other methods of performance are necessarily forbidden. We are, however, unable to accept the contention of the appellants that the Corporation has been proceeding in violation of the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. It has been earlier observed that for the subsequent unauthorised constructions no demolition order was required to be made by the Corporation. The Corporation, in our opinion, can proceed on the basis of the first demolition order of the building up to the 6th storey, regard being had to the fact that the subsequent constructions are, admittedly, unauthorized having no separate and independent existence apart from the original unauthorized construction up to the 6th storey. In other words, the unauthorized constructions from 7th to 14th stories come within the purview of the first demolition order.

16. It is difficult to accept the contention of the appellants that for each addition to an unauthorized construction a fresh demolition proceeding has to be started. Section 414 does not lay down any such procedure. To accept the contention of the appellants would be to defeat the purpose for which S. 414 has been enacted by the legislature. To say that at each step of addition to an unauthorized construction a demolition proceeding has to be started would, undoubtedly, lead to a manifest absurdity completely defeating the power of the Corporation and the provisions of the Act. We, therefore, hold that the Corporation need not wait for the disposal of the appeals before the Building Tribunal filed by the respondent No. 11 or to take any step for the vacation of the stay order, for the said appeals and stay order, have become infructuous and inoperative. The demolition of the building on the strength of the first order would be quite consistent with the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. The contention of the appellants in this regard is unsound and is rejected.

17. The doctrine of election which has been relied on by the appellants has no manner of application to the instant case. The said doctrine will apply when two courses are open to a party and, if he chooses to follow one in preference to the other, he cannot give up that course and take resort to the other. The Corporation being a statutory body, it has to act in accordance with the provisions of the statute by which it has come into existence. The provision of S. 414 does not lay down two different procedures for demolition of an unauthorized structure and does not empower the Corporation to pursue either of such procedures at its choice. There is, therefore, no question of putting the Corporation to election. As has been already observed by us, the Corporation has proceeded in accordance with the provision of S. 414 by taking steps to demolish the unauthorized structure by virtue of the first demolition order. We do not think that the legislature can put a statutory body to election for the purpose of adopting one or other procedure for an action at its volition or choice. Such a provision would be discriminatory and ultra vires Art. 14 of the Constitution. There is, therefore, no substance in the contention made on behalf of the appellants on the basis of the doctrine of election. The decision of the Privy Council in Benjamin Scarf v. Alfred George Jardine, (1882) 7 AC 345, on which reliance has also been placed on behalf of the appellants has no manner of application to the Corporation, a statutory body.

18. The next point that has been urged on behalf of the appellants is based on the ground of non-service of the copies of the two subsequent demolition orders in regard to the 7th to 14th stories of the building. Before we consider the contention of the appellants on the point, we may refer to the provisions of Ss. 414 and 414A of the Act which are set out below :

"414. If the Commissioner is satisfied—

(i) that the erection of any building—

(a) has been commenced without obtaining any permission required to be obtained by or under this Act, or

(b) is being carried on or has been completed otherwise than in accordance with the particulars on which such permission was based, or

(c) is being carried on or has been completed in breach of any provision contained in this Act or in any rules or by-laws made thereunder or, of any direction or requisition lawfully given or made under this Act or under such rules or by-laws, or

(ii) that any alteration of, or addition to, any building or any other work made or done for any purpose in, to or upon any building, has been commenced or is being carried on or has been completed in breach of, or otherwise than in accordance with, any sanction granted under S. 387 in contravention of the provisions of S. 396 or 397, or

(iii) that any alteration required by any notice issued under R. 22 of Schedule XVI has not been duly made, he may, without prejudice to any action that may be taken under any other provision of this Act, by written notice require the person responsible to demolish such erection, alteration, addition or other work or to make the alteration, as the case may be, or to show cause why such erection, alteration, addition or other work should not be demolished or the alteration should not be made.

(2) The Commissioner may issue a notice under sub-sec. (1) notwithstanding the fact that the valuation of such building has been made under Chap. XI for the assessment of the consolidated rate.

(3) If the person responsible fails—

(a) to demolish such erection, alteration, addition or other work, or to make the alteration, or

(b) to show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Commissioner as the case may be, why such erection, alteration, addition or other work, should not be demolished, or the alteration should not be made, the Commissioner may order—

(i) the demolition of the erection, alteration, addition or other work, or

(ii) the making of the alteration ;

Provided that a copy of the order shall be served upon the owner and the occupier thereof and no such action shall be taken until the expiry of thirty days from the date of the service of the said order.

Provided further that where the structure does not contravene any of the provisions of this Act or the Rules made thereunder, the Commissioner may, without prejudice to any other action that may be taken against the person concerned under the provisions of this Act or the Rules made thereunder, allow him to submit proper plan under the rules referred to in Sch. XVI and sanction such plan.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sub-sections, no action shall be taken under this section in respect of any erection, alteration, addition or other work executed more than twelve years before the issue of the notice under sub-sec. (1) :

Provided that the onus of proving that the work was done more than twelve years previously shall lie on the person responsible.

(5) In this section the expression "person responsible" include the owner, the occupier and any other person who executes the erection, alteration, addition or other work or who is liable to mark any alteration required by any notice issued under R. 22 of Schedule XVI.

414A. Appeal. Any person dissatisfied with the order of the Commissioner made under sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 may, within thirty days from the date of the order, present an appeal accompanied by a copy of the order of the Tribunal constituted under S. 391B, and the President of the Tribunal may stay the execution of the order for such period or periods as he may think fit or until the disposal of the appeal."

19. Section 414 provides for demolition or alteration of building work unlawfully commenced, carried on or completed. Under sub-sec. (1) of S. 414, the Commissioner may by written notice require the person responsible to demolish such erection, alteration, addition or other work or to make the alteration, as the case may be, or to show cause why such erection, alteration, addition or other work should not be demolished or the alteration should not be made. The written notice will be served only on the person responsible. Under sub-sec. (3) of S. 414, if the person responsible fails to demolish or to show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, as the case may be, the Commissioner may order the demolition of the erection, alteration, addition or other work, or the making of the alteration. Under the first proviso to sub-sec. (3), a copy of the order shall be served upon the owner and the occupier thereof and no such action shall be taken until the expiry of thirty days from the date of the service of the said order. Sub-sec. (5) of S. 414 defines the expression "person responsible". It is clear from the provisions of sub-sec. (1) and sub-sec. (5) of S. 414 that the expression "person responsible" only relates to a person who has something to do with the work of construction or who is in a position to comply with an order of demolition. The said expression does not include an occupier of the unauthorized construction, who has nothing to do with the work of such construction or any addition to it. There is no dispute with regard to the above interpretation of the expression "person responsible". It is not also disputed by the appellants that none of them is a "person responsible" within the meaning of sub-sec. (5) of S. 414 of the Act. The appellants claim to be the occupiers of the building in respect of all the floors excepting the first floor of which the Rajasthan Bank of India Ltd. is the occupier. It is also claimed by the appellants that they became tenants of the said building under the respondent No. 11, Shyam Lal Agarwalla, before the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978 was passed by the Corporation.

20. The contention of the appellants is that, as the copies of the subsequent demolition orders dated April 21, 1981 were not served on them, the action of the Corporation in proceeding to demolish the building is highly illegal and ultra vires the first proviso to sub-section (3) of S. 414 of the Act. It is submitted on behalf of the appellants that if the copies of the demolition orders had been served on them they could have preferred appeals before the Building Tribunal under S. 414A of the Act. In this connection, it may be stated that although S. 414A provides that the appeal shall be filed within thirty days from the date of the order, in our opinion, on a proper construction of the provision, it should be held that the period of thirty days should be computed not from the date of the order, but from the date of the service of the copy of the order on the owner and the occupier or from the date of knowledge of the order of such owner and occupier. It is, accordingly, submitted on behalf of the appellants that so long as the copies of the subsequent demolition orders are not served on the appellants, the Corporation has no jurisdiction to demolish the further unauthorized construction. It is urged that non-service of the copies of the demolition orders on the appellants has deprived them of their valuable right of appeal under S. 414A of the Act. On this ground, the appellants submit that the Corporation should be prohibited from demolishing the building without complying with the provision of the first proviso to S. 414 (3). The further submission of the appellants is that the copy of the demolition order has to be served not only on the occupier who was in occupation of the unauthorized structure at the time when the demolition order was passed, but also on the occupier who came later. In other words, the contention of the appellants is that whenever any occupier comes to occupy the unauthorized structure before the execution of the demolition order, the execution should be deferred until the expiry of thirty days from the date of service of the order on such occupier.

21. On the other hand, Mr. Pradip Ghosh, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 including the Corporation of Calcutta submits that on a proper construction of the first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 of the Act, it should be held that only that occupier who was there in the unauthorized structure at the time of passing of the demolition order is required to be served with a copy of the demolition order, and not any other occupier who comes to occupy the unauthorized structure subsequent to the demolition order. It is the case of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 that at the time the first demolition order dated May 15, 1978 was passed, there was only one recorded occupier viz., Shyam Lal Agarwalla, the respondent no. 11, and a copy of the demolition order having been served on him, the corporation is not required to serve copies of the subsequent demolition orders on any other occupier or the appellants who were not in occupation of the unauthorized structure before May 15, 1978. So it is contended on behalf of the said respondents that there is no substance in the contention of the appellants about non-service on them of the copies of the demolition orders.

22. One significant fact that may be noticed is that although the appellants claim to be in occupation of the building from before the first demolition order, they have not made any grievance on account of non-service of the copies of the first demolition order. They are only insisting on the service of copies of the two subsequent demolition orders, both dated April 21, 1981. The first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 clearly provides for the service of a copy of the demolition order on the owner and the occupier and enjoins that no action shall be taken until the expiry of thirty days from the date of service of the order. The object of the service of the copy of the demolition order on the owner and the occupier is clear, namely, it will enable them to vacate the structure within thirty days of such service.

23. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that if the copies of the demolition orders had been served on them, they could have preferred appeals under S. 414A of the Act. Section 414A confers a right of appeal to the Building Tribunal on "any person" dissatisfied with the order of demolition. The expression "any person", in our opinion, will undoubtedly include an occupier. But, where an occupier is not a person responsible, he cannot, in our opinion, challenge the demolition order on the ground that the construction is authorized and lawful as having been made in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. In such an appeal preferred by an occupier, other than a person responsible, the only relief that can be sought for by him is some more time so as to enable him to vacate the unauthorized structure. In any event, in the instant case, the building being admittedly unauthorized, there will be no scope for any argument in any appeal by an occupier in justification of the construction of the building.

24. It is, however, submitted by the learned counsel for the appellants that as the appellants and other occupiers are persons affected, they should be given an opportunity of being heard before the enforcement of any demolition order. Section 414 including the first proviso to sub-sec. (3) does not provide for such hearing being given to the occupiers. As has been observed before, an occupier not being a person responsible will have no say against an order of demolition of the unauthorized structure, except that he can ask for some time to vacate. The first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 in effect gives a period of thirty days to the owner and the occupier. We are unable to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants that no demolition order can be enforced without giving the occupier an opportunity of being heard. The decision of the Supreme Court in the Municipal Corporation of Greater Bombay v. Lala Pancham, AIR 1965 SC 1008, on which much reliance has been placed by the learned counsel for the appellants, is not applicable to the facts and circumstances of the case for the reasons stated hereafter. Sub-sec. (4) of S. 354R of the Bombay Municipal Corporation Act, 1888 confers powers on the Commissioner of the Bombay Municipal Corporation to order demolition of a building in the area declared to be a clearance area. Clause (b) of sub-sec. (4) of S. 354RA provides for the service of notice, inter alia, on every person whose name appears in the assessment book as primarily liable for payment of property tax and for specifying the time within and the manner in which the objection to the demolition order can be made to the Commissioner. Clause (b) of sub-section (4) of S. 354A of the said Act does not provide for service of any notice on the tenants of the building ordered to be demolished. On a construction of the said provision and the provision of Section 354R and in view of the fact that the tenants of the building are persons who would be affected by the order of demolition, it has been held by the Supreme Court that they are also entitled to lodge an objection to the order of demolition. Further, under the provision of S. 354R, a demolition order can be passed on the ground that the residential buildings are by reason of dis-repair not fit for human habitation or for like reason dangerous or injurious to the health of the inhabitants of the area, and that the conditions in the area can be effectively remedied by the demolition of all the buildings in the area without making an improvement scheme. When, therefore, a demolition order is passed under the said Act the tenants of the building which has been ordered to be demolished, may have many things to say against the order of demolition. It may be shown by them that the building is not unfit for human habitation or dangerous or injurious to the health of the inhabitants. In the instant case, however, the occupiers of the building in question will have nothing to say against the demolition order. If the legislature had intended to give such an opportunity to the occupier, it would have specifically provided for the same as it has provided in the case of a person responsible in S. 414 (1) of the Act. So, in our opinion, there is no question of giving the occupiers an opportunity of being heard before the enforcement of the demolition order.

25. In support of his contention that the occupiers should be given an opportunity of being heard by the Corporation before the enforcement of any demolition order, the learned counsel for the appellants has drawn our attention to clause (b) of S. 557 (1) and S. 560 (1) of the Act. Section 557 confers on the Commissioner power of entry into any premises, inter alia, for the purpose of execution of any work which is authorized by the Act. Clause (b) of S. 557 (1) provides, inter alia, that no dwelling-house and no public building or hut which is used as dwelling place shall be entered without giving the occupier at least twenty-four hours' previous written notice of the intention to make such entry. Section 560 (1) provides, inter alia, that when any requisition or order is made under the Act or any rule or by-law made thereunder, a reasonable period shall be prescribed in such notice for carrying such requisition order into effect, and a reasonable period shall be prescribed in such notice within which any written objection thereto shall be received by the municipal authority or the municipal officer issuing the notice. We fail to understand how these provisions are of any help to the contention of the appellants. So far as S. 557 (1) (b) is concerned, it is conceded by Mr. Pradip Ghosh, learned counsel for the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 that at the time of actual demolition of the building in enforcement of the demolition order, written notice mentioned in S. 557 (1) (b) will be given to the occupiers of the dwelling units in the building. He, however, submits and, in our opinion, rightly that S. 560 (1) has no bearing on the question with which we are concerned. Section 560 (1), as has been noticed already, only provides for specifying a reasonable period in the notice for carrying the requisition or order into effect and for the submission of any written objection thereto. S. 560 (1) has, therefore, no manner of application to the facts and circumstances of the instant case. The contention of the appellants, in our opinion, is not tenable and is rejected.

26. In this connection, we may consider one contention of Mr. Pradip Ghosh, learned counsel for the respondents Nos. 1 to 5. He has drawn our attention to Rules 59 and 60 of the Building Rules contained in Sch. XVI of the Act. R. 59 directs the owner of a building to send to the Commissioner a written notice by registered post with acknowledgment due informing him of the fact of the completion of the building; Rule 60 provides for the issuance of an occupancy certificate by the Commissioner after he is satisfied on inspection that the building has been constructed strictly in accordance with the Building Rules. Section 392 of the Act enjoins that no new building or part of a new building shall be occupied for use until and unless a certificate of completion of the building or that part of it has been submitted to the Corporation. The cumulative effect of S. 392 and Rules 59 and 60 is that so long as the Corporation does not issue an occupancy certificate no one can occupy the building. It is not disputed that no notice was served by the respondent No. 11 on the Commissioner as to the completion of the building and, consequently no occupancy certificate has been issued. Indeed, there is no question of the granting of any occupancy certificate inasmuch as the building has been constructed in defiance of the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules. The learned counsel for respondents Nos. 1 to 5 submits that occupation of the appellants and of is wholly illegal and unlawful. It contended by him that the first proviso to S. 414 (3) does not contemplate service of the copy of the order of demolition on an occupier whose occupation is unlawful. We are unable to accept this contention. The demolition order can be passed only in respect of unauthorized construction. When a construction is unauthorized, no occupancy certificate can be issued by the Corporation under Rule 60 of the Building Rules and, accordingly, the occupation of occupier of such construction will be unlawful. In spite of that, the first proviso to S. 414 (3) provides for the service of a copy of the demolition order on such occupier. As has been already observed the first proviso, in effect, gives the owner and the occupier of an unauthorized construction in respect of which demolition order has been passed, a period of thirty days to vacate the same so that the demolition order can be enforced. It is, therefore, not correct to say that because the occupation of appellants of the building in question is unlawful the Corporation is not required to serve the copies of the demolition orders on them under the first proviso to S. 414 (3) of the Act.

27. Now the question is whether every and every occupier who is found in unauthorized building at the time of execution of the demolition order should be served with a copy of the order. If the contention of the appellants that any person comes to occupy the building before the execution of the demolition order, he has to be served with a copy of the order and, consequently execution will have to be deferred for thirty days as provided in the first proviso to S. 414 (3) of the Act. This will mean that every time the Corporation proceeds to demolish the building, if a new occupier is found in the building, he will have to be served with a copy of the demolition order and the work has to be postponed for thirty days from the date of service. In our opinion, if such a contention is accepted, it will defeat the purpose and object of S. 414 of the Act. In that case a demolition order may be defeated by the owner of an unauthorized building structure or a person responsible by introducing a new occupier each time. If the Corporation starts the demolition work, a statutory provision should not be interpreted in such a way as will render it nugatory. The interpretation should be such as to make the provision workable and consistent with the object and purpose for which it has been enacted. On a proper construction of the first proviso to S. 414 (3) of the Act, it seems that after a demolition order is passed and copies of which are served on the owner and the occupiers for the time being of the unauthorized structure, the Corporation will be entitled to start the demolition work after the expiry of thirty days from the date of service of the demolition order. No further copy of the demolition order is required to be served by the Corporation on any person who comes to occupy the unauthorized structure during the period of thirty days or during the period between the service of the copies of the demolition order and the execution of the work of demolition. Any other interpretation of the first proviso to S. 414 (3) of the Act will frustrate the very object and purpose of the provision and the intention of the legislature. In other words, the provision of S. 414 will be rendered inoperative.

28. The appellants have not admittedly been served with the copies of the demolition orders as mentioned in the first proviso to S. 414 (3) of the Act. It is urged on behalf of the appellants that, in any event, the Corporation cannot execute the demolition work without serving copies of such orders. We have already discussed the object of service of the copies of the demolition order on the occupiers. It has been held by us that the only object is to give the occupiers a reasonable time to vacate the unauthorized structure. The appellants are quite aware of the demolition orders that have been passed and they have got plenty of time to vacate the building. For the last few months litigations are going on and from time to time, there had been publications in almost all the newspapers of the city of the reports of Court proceedings. Indeed, on Feb. 17, 1982 the Corporation actually started the demolition of the 14th Storey. The appellant No. 60 also filed a suit in the City Civil Court, Calcutta on Feb. 5, 1982. From the above facts, it can be reasonably inferred that all the other occupiers of the building are quite aware of the demolition orders and they have got plenty of opportunity to vacate the building. The question, therefore, is whether the Corporation shall be directed to serve on the appellants and other occupiers of the building copies of the demolition orders. In the circumstances stated above and, in view of the object of the service of the copy of the demolition order, we do not think the Corporation should be directed to serve copies of the demolition orders on the occupiers of the building.

29. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the occupiers have a statutory right to claim service of the copies of the demolition orders on them. Technically it may be correct, but the grant of any relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution is discretionary with this Court. Nobody can claim as a matter of right that he must be given the relief he asks for in his writ petition. After considering the facts and circumstances of the case, we are of the view that it is a fit case where we should not exercise our discretion by issuing a mandate on the Corporation to serve copies of the demolition orders on the occupiers of the building.

30. The next contention of the appellants is that even assuming that the Act does not make any provision for giving an opportunity of being heard, rules of natural justice require such opportunity being given to the occupiers of an unauthorized structure before the structure can be demolished. To substantiate this contention, the learned counsel for the appellants has placed reliance on some English and Indian decisions which will be stated presently.

31. In Cooper v. Wandsworth Board of Works, (1863) 143 ER 414, the 76th Section of the Metropolis Local Management Act empowers the District Board to alter or demolish a house, where the builder has neglected to give a notice of his intention to build seven days before proceeding to lay or dig the foundation. Willes, J. observes "I apprehend that a tribunal which by law invested with power to affect the property of one of Her Majesty's subjects is bound to give such subject an opportunity of being heard before it proceeds : and that that rule is of universal application, and founded upon the plainest principles of natural justice." The principles of law laid down in Cooper's case has been followed in Hopkins v. Smethwick, (1890) 24 QBD 712, where it has been observed by Wills, J. that in condemning a man to have his house pulled down, a judicial act is as much implied as in fining him 5l; and as the local board is the only tribunal that can make such an order, its act must be a judicial act, and the party to be affected should have a notice given him; and there is no notice, unless notice is given of time when, and place at which the party may appear and show cause. The decisions in Cooper's case and in Hopkings's case have been followed in Urban Housing Co. v. Oxford City Council, (1940) 1 Ch. 70. It has also been followed by the House of Lords in Ridge v. Baldwin, 1964 A. C. 40, where Lord Morris observes that it is well established that the essential requirements of natural justice at least include that before someone is condemned he is to have an opportunity of defending himself, and in order that he may do so that he is to be made aware of the charge or allegation or suggestion which he has to meet.

32. So far as the Indian decisions are concerned, the learned counsel for the appellants has placed reliance on a decision of Panckridge, J., in Indumati Debi Chaudhuri v. Bengal Court of Wards, ILR (1938) 1 Cal 476 : (AIR 1938 Cal 385), where the learned Judge, relying on the principles of law in Cooper's case and Hopkings's case and some other English decisions, held that the making of an order of the Court of Wards declaring that a female was incompetent to manage her property without notice to or hearing the person affected by it constituted a breach of the principles of natural justice and was in excess of any jurisdiction conferred by the Court of Wards Act and the Court of Wards should be restrained from acting under it. Now we may refer to two Supreme Court decisions which have been relied on by the appellants. In State Bank of India v. Rajendra Kumar Singh, AIR 1969 SC 401, the High Court directed disposal of property consisting of some currency notes under S. 517 read with Section 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code without giving notice to the person to whom the property was directed to be delivered by the Sessions Court. In setting aside the order of the High Court, the Supreme Court observed that though the statute, i.e., the Criminal Procedure Code was silent and did not expressly require issue of any notice, there was in the eye of law a necessary implication that the parties adversely affected should be heard before the Court makes an order of return of the seized property. In State of J & K v. Haji Vali Mohammed, AIR 1972 SC 2538, the Municipality sought to demolish the structures in question which were in a dilapidated and dangerous condition by serving

24 hours' notice u/s. 129 of the Jammu & Kashmir Municipal Act. It was held by the Supreme Court that the time of 24 hours which was given for demolition was so short that it could not be held to be a reasonable time. The respondents had to make some arrangements for removal of either their goods or business equipment or whatever articles that were lying in these buildings or structures. So it was held that notices issued to the respondents did not comply with the provision of S. 238 of the said Act, and that the time which was granted was so short that it was not possible for the respondents either to comply with the notices or to take any effective steps in the matter of filing any appeal or revision to the appropriate authorities.

33. We have already discussed above that S. 414 (1) provides for the service of a notice on the person responsible so as to give him an opportunity of being heard. The appellants who are the occupiers of the building in question and having no connection whatsoever with the construction of the building have no right to claim an opportunity of being heard against the demolition orders of the building. They are only entitled to a reasonable time to shift to some other place. The first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 has prescribed a period of thirty days from the date of service of a copy of the order of demolition on the occupier during which the demolition order will not be enforced. This really means that the occupier is given a reasonable time to vacate the unauthorized structure. In the circumstances, we do not think that the above decisions cited on behalf of the appellants are of any help to them. In the Supreme Court decision in Haji Vali Mohammed's case (supra) 24 hours' notice for the purpose of vacating the buildings or structures in question were considered to be not reasonable. But, in the instant case, the first proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 of the Act gives to the occupier a period of thirty days to leave the building or structure in question. So we do not find any merit in the contention of the appellants based on the ground that the principles of natural justice have been violated.

34. In challenging the action of the Corporation in the enforcement of the demolition order, the appellants also take resort to fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution. It is submitted on behalf of the appellants that the action of the Corporation interferes with their fundamental rights to carry on business under Art. 19 (1) (g) and their personal liberty under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. They also rely on right to property under Art. 300A of the Constitution. It is contended that as some of the appellants have been carrying on their business in the building in question, the Corporation cannot interfere with their fundamental right to carry on business save in accordance with law. Further, it is submitted that the demolition of the building will deprive them of their personal liberty and, as such, the action of the Corporation in enforcing the demolition order is ultra vires Art. 21 of the Constitution of India unless such demolition is carried out according to the procedure established by law.

35. The further contention of the appellants is that they are not trespassers, but they have lawfully acquired their tenancy right in the building, and that such right to property of the appellants cannot be interfered with save by authority of law as provided in Art. 300A of the Constitution. In support of the above contentions, the appellants have placed reliance on the decision of the Supreme Court in Kharak Singh v. State of U. P. AIR 1963 SC 1295. In that case, the constitutional validity of Regn. 236 of U. P. Police Regulations came up for consideration before the Supreme Court. By virtue of the said regulation, the petitioner was subjected to surveillance by the police. The police constable entered his house, knocked and shouted at his door, waked him up during the night and disturbed his sleep. On a number of occasions the police had compelled him to get up from his sleep and to accompany them to the police station to report his presence. The majority view of the Supreme Court was that Regulation 236 (b) which authorizes "domiciliary visits" was ultra vires Art. 21 of the Constitution and was struck down. Reliance has also been placed on behalf of the appellants on the decision of the Supreme Court in Smt. Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597. In that case, the petitioner's passport was impounded. It was held by the Supreme Court that there was no good reason for impounding the passport of the petitioner and, furthermore, the petitioner had no opportunity of showing that the grounds for impounding it, either did not exist or had no bearing on public interest.

36. We are unable to accept the above contentions of the appellants. The fundamental rights cannot be availed of in justification of an unlawful act or in preventing a statutory authority from lawfully discharging its statutory duty. The occupation of the appellants in the unauthorized structure is unlawful in view of Rules 59 and 60 of the Building Rules read with S. 392 of the Act. In Kharak Singh's case or in Maneka Gandhi's case referred to above, it has not been laid down by the Supreme Court that a citizen can conveniently rely on his fundamental right in defending his illegal act. A citizen whose occupation of a place is unlawful cannot claim fundamental right to carry on business in such place. Personal liberty as contemplated by Art. 21 of the Constitution does not include any liberty to be in unlawful occupation. Even assuming that there is any such liberty, there cannot be any grievance of the appellants that they are being deprived of such liberty by the Corporation without following the procedure established by law. The procedure laid down in S. 414 including the first proviso to sub-sec. (3), is quite reasonable, fair and just from the point of view of Art. 21 of the Constitution and, consequently, satisfies the test of reasonableness, as laid down by the Supreme Court in Francis Coralie v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 746 and in Nand Lal Bajaj v. State of Punjab, AIR 1981 SC 2041 relied on by the appellants. It is, however, significant to be noticed that the appellants have not challenged the constitutional validity of S. 414 on any ground. So the question of reasonableness of the procedure provided in Section 414 of the Act does not arise. Be that as it may, the Corporation has, in our opinion, acted in accordance with the procedure prescribed by S. 414 of the Act and, accordingly, there can be no question of infringement of Art. 21 of the Constitution. The same reason applies with equal force to the contention of the appellants based on their purported right to property under Art. 300A of the Constitution. In our opinion, there is no merit in the contention of the appellants that their fundamental rights or their right of property are being interfered with by the Corporation, and we overrule the same.

37. Lastly, it is argued on behalf of the appellants that before enforcing the order of demolition, the Corporation should have provided the appellants with alternative accommodation. It is submitted that although the Corporation has the power to demolish an unauthorized structure, such power is coupled with a duty, that is to say, the duty to provide alternative accommodations or, at least, to grant compensation to the occupiers of the building, who will be dispossessed therefrom. This argument seems to be an argument of despair. The Act does not make any provision for alternative accommodation. The Corporation is a statutory body and it has to act in accordance with the provisions of the statute. As the Act does not make any provision for alternative accommodation, the Corporation has no right to provide alternative accommodation to the occupiers, who will be displaced from the said building.

38. As regards the claim of the appellants to compensation, our attention has been drawn to Section 568 of the Act which provides, inter alia, that the Corporation may pay compensation to any person who sustain damage by person of the exercise of any of the powers vested by the Act, or by any rule or by-law, in any municipal authority or in any municipal officer or servant. A person to whom compensation may be given by the Corporation under S. 568 refers to a person who is a stranger to the act in respect of which a municipal authority or municipal officer exercises any of the powers vested in him by the Act. When such a person suffers damage, the Corporation may pay compensation to him, but a person who is directly or indirectly connected with an illegal act for which the municipal authority or officer has to exercise the powers under the Act, such a person cannot claim compensation on the ground that he has suffered damage. The owner of an unauthorized structure cannot insist on payment of compensation under S. 568 on the ground that the unauthorized structure having been demolished he has suffered damage. The appellants are in unlawful occupation of the unauthorized building in question, and in our opinion, they do not come within the purview of S. 568 for the purpose of maintaining a claim for compensation for the damage that they may suffer on account of their dispossession from the unauthorized structure. There is, therefore, no substance in the above contention of the appellants.

39. It is pointed out in the letter of the Chief Law Officer of the Calcutta Corporation dated December 31, 1981 to the respondent No. 11, Shyam Lal Agarwalla (Annexure H/1 to the affidavit-in-opposition) that the building is standing practically on the support of the two adjoining premises on both sides of it and it may fall to the ground at any moment on the slightest change in the soil structure in the foundation and, as such, it is unsafe. Further it is pointed out that besides the building being insecure and exposed to fire-hazard, it is really a death-trap for the inmates of the building as well as the passers-by. Cracks have already developed in the adjoining premises and the building itself may crumble down at any moment like a pack of cards. It appears also from the report of Shri R. S. Gupta, the Adviser (Fire), Government of West Bengal, that there is no fire detecting or extinguishing system in the building, as also no Fixed Fire-Fighting Installation, in the form of Rising Mains, being kept charged with water by means of pump, for all time, with Hydrant outlets/hose reels connecting all the floors. There are also no portable fire extinguisher for first-hand fire fighting on any of the floors. The existing water tank on the ground floor with a small electrical pump as was found, is totally insufficient to meet the fire-fighting requirements. There is also no alternative means of escape in the building, in the form of an additional stair-case, connecting all the floors, as also no "Fire Lift" for use by Fire Services Personnel, in the event of any fire, with the exception of only one stair-case and lift, located at one end on the southern side. The occupants including those in the adjacent buildings are likely to be affected by hot air, smoke and heat in case of a fire. It has been observed that the building is considered to be unsafe.

40. It, therefore, appears that not only that the building was constructed in violation of the provisions of the Act and the Building Rules, it is also unsafe for human habitation.

41. After considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the submissions made on behalf of the parties, we are of the view that there is no merit in this appeal. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed. There will, however, be no order as to costs. No order need be made on the application for interim order which shall be deemed to have been disposed of along with the appeal.

42. We, however, direct that the Corporation shall not enforce or execute the demolition order for a period of thirty days from date so as to enable the owner and the occupiers of the building to vacate the same. On the expiry of the period of thirty days the Corporation will be at liberty to execute the demolition order.

F.M.A.T. No. 588 of 1982.

43-44. In this appeal, the same arguments have been made by Mr. Dipankar Ghosh, learned counsel for the appellant, the Bank of Rajasthan Ltd., and by Mr. Pradip Ghosh, learned counsel for the respondents Nos. 1 to 4 including the Corporation of Calcutta as in Ram Awtar Agarwal v. The Corporation of Calcutta, F.M.A.T. 540 of 1982. For the same reasons as in Ram Awtar Agarwal's appeal, this appeal is dismissed. There will, however, be no order for costs.

45. The respondents Nos. 1 to 4 shall not execute the order for demolition for thirty days from date so as to enable the appellant to vacate the first floor of the building in question being premises No. 174, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta.

MONOJ KUMAR MUKHERJEE, J.:—
I agree.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 329

S. G. GHOSE, C. J. AND R. N. PYNE, J.

Ritu Sachdev, Appellant v. Anita Jindal and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 154 of 1980, D/- 25-2-1982.

(A) Letters Patent (Cal.) Cl. 15—Appeal — Plaintiff besides seeking amendment of plaintiff praying for joinder of new party and grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12 — Order be appealable.

Where the plaintiff apart from seeking amendment of the plaintiff in a suit for partition and administration of the estate left by her father, also prayed for joinder of a new party and for grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12, the order rejecting the prayer would not be an order in amendment of the plaintiff simpliciter but it also involved the question of refusal of grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12 and, as such, the question of procedure was mixed with the question of jurisdiction and hence the order would be appealable. Case law discussed. (Para 12)

If an order allowing the amendment of plaintiff in a suit instituted with leave under Cl. 12 is an order of amendment simpliciter such an order is not an appeal-able order. But where the question is further complicated by the fact that fresh leave under Cl. 12 was granted in respect of the amendment, as such leave was found necessary in view of the provisions of Cl. 12, the question of amendment of the pleading and the question of leave under Cl. 12 are inter-connected or in other words when the question of procedure and the question of jurisdiction are mixed up and one cannot be dissociated from the other, the order dealing with such question of procedure and the jurisdiction is an appealable order and it is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15.

(Para 10)

(B) Letters Patent (Calcutta), Cl. 12 — Amendment of plaintiff — Permissibility. Decision of single Judge D/- 19-2-1980, Reversed. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10 and O. 6, R. 17).

Where an heiress of the deceased governed by Mitakshara, in a suit for partition, sought amendment of plaintiff to have dissolution of partnership owned by the deceased and also the transfer of tenancy rights in properties owned by the deceased declared void, the amendment could not be disallowed on the ground that the other heiresses were not interested parties as they themselves were parties to such dissolution and transfer. Decision of single Judge, D/- 19-2-1980, Reversed.

If the deed of dissolution of partnership of firm of which the deceased during his lifetime was the sole owner and the transfer of the tenancy rights in respect of the immovable properties of the deceased in favour of the added new party were set aside, the same would be in its entirety and not merely in respect of the concerned heiress' share therein. That being the position, it could not be said that the other co-sharers were not interested in the dispute concerning the said tenancy rights. Therefore if the concerned heiress' challenge succeed, all the co-sharers would be interested in the tenancy right of the properties. (Para 16)

Further, inasmuch as by any decision on the question regarding the validity of the transfer of the tenancy rights, the transferee who was sought to be added as new party would be affected; he would be a proper party if not a necessary party, to the suit. (Para 17)

S. K. Gupta, for Appellant; B. N. Sen, for Respondents.

R. N. PYNE, J.— This appeal is directed against the judgment and order dated 19th Feb., 1980 of Mrs. P. Khastgir, J. dismissing the appellant's application made in the court of the first instance for amendment of the plaint filed in Suit No. 576 of 1979 (hereinafter referred to as 'the said suit') and for addition of party. In the said application the appellant also prayed for fresh leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent against the added defendant.

2. The appellant as the plaintiff in the court of the first instance filed the said suit for partition and declaration of the shares in the estate of her father, Baldev Raj Sachdev, as also for a declaration that the partnership business of Printers Emporium, created by the Deed dated 1st September, 1975 was illegal, void and not binding on the plaintiff and for other reliefs as would fully appear from the plaint.

3. The appellant's father, Baldev Raj Sachdev, (hereinafter referred to as 'the said deceased') died on the 17th August, 1975 leaving his widow Bimala Sachdev, the respondent No. 2 in this appeal and three daughters namely, the appellant Ritu Sachdev, the respondent No. 1 Anita Jindal nee Sachdev and the respondent No. 3 Vanita Kuckreja nee Sachdev as his heiresses and legal representatives under the Hindu Law. According to the appellant, she was born on 21-10-60 and, therefore, was a minor at the time of the death of her father, the said deceased. In the Schedule to the plaint, the appellant has stated various properties belonging to and comprising the estate of the said deceased. They are premises No. 53, Block 'D', New Alipore, Calcutta, monthly rent due and payable by the tenants of the said property, tenancy of the shop-room at premises No. 14/2, Old, China Bazar Street, Calcutta and of the godown at No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta and No. 52A, Block 'D', New Alipore, Calcutta, assets and stock-in-trade of the firm of Printers Emporium of which the said deceased during his lifetime was the sole owner, several cars and other furniture and fixtures as fully stated in the said schedule to the plaint. The said premises Nos. 14/2, Old China Bazar Street and 22, Sukeas Lane are within the original side jurisdiction of this Court. New Alipore, properties are outside the said jurisdiction. In the plaint the plaintiff has claimed for partition of the properties left by the said deceased. It is also stated in the plaint that after the death of the said deceased at the instance of defendant No. 1 Anita Jindal and her husband one Satish Kant Jindal, the said business of the Printers Emporium was converted into a partnership with three partners namely, the appellant's mother and her two sisters. The appellant was admitted to the benefit of the said partnership. In the plaint, the appellant has claimed a declaration that the said partnership namely Printers Emporium created by the deed dated 1st September, 1975 and the power of attorney of the same date given to the husband of the respondent No. 1 are illegal, void and not binding on the plaintiff or the estate of the said deceased. The said suit was filed after obtaining leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent was obtained on the basis that the immoveable properties being the tenancy rights in respect of the said shoproom and godown at No. 14/2, Old China Bazar Street and No. 22, Sukeas Lane respectively are within the original side jurisdiction of this court.

4. It appears that in Dec. 1979 the respondent No. 1, Anita Jindal (defendant No. 1 in the said suit) made an application, inter alia, for revocation of leave granted under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent to institute the said suit. Thereafter, on or about 18th Feb., 1980 the appellant made the application out of which the present appeal has arisen. In the petition of the application the appellant has made the following prayers:—

"(a) Leave be given to the petitioner to amend the cause title and body of the plaint herein in the manner as shown in Red Ink in a copy of the plaint annexed to the petition and marked 'B';

(b) the amendments in pursuance of the order to be made directed to be incorporated in the plaint within a fortnight from the date of the filing of order to be made herein;

(c) the register of the suit be also amended accordingly;

(d) fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent be granted;

(e) leave be given to reverify the amended plaint;

(f) that Writ of Summons be issued for service upon the added defendant and the same is made returnable by nine weeks from the date of issue and Sheriff of Calcutta do accept the same for service if lodged with him within 14 days from the date of issue;

(g) that the other defendants be given liberty to file Written Statement within such time or this Hon'ble Court fix after service of the amended copy of the plaint upon them;

(h) such further order or orders be made or directions given as this Hon'ble Court may deem fit and proper."

5. From the proposed amendment indicated in the plaint as will appear from pages 34-36 of the Paper Book it appears that the appellant has challenged a deed of dissolution dated April 1, 1978 whereby partnership of Printers Emporium was dissolved. By the said deed the assets and properties of the said firm of Printers Emporium including the tenancy right of the said shoproom were conveyed to Satish Kant Jindal the husband of the respondent No. 1. The appellant has further challenged the purported transfer of the tenancy of the godown in premises No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta in the name of the said Satish Kant Jindal. The appellant has also challenged the misappropriation of various money belonging to the said firm by the husband of the respondent No. 1. By the amendments the appellant has sought to introduce two further prayers in the plaint as follows:—

"(cc) A declaration that the purported Deed of Dissolution of Partnership dated April 1, 1978 is non-genuine, illegal, void and not binding on the plaintiff and/or the estate of Baldev Raj Sachdev and the same be cancelled and/or rescinded;

(ccc) A declaration that the purported transfer of tenancy in respect of the godown at No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta in favour of the defendant No. 4 is illegal, fraudulent, void and of no effect and not binding on the plaintiff or the estate of Baldev Raj Sachdev and the same be set aside."

6. It, therefore, appears that by the said application the appellant has prayed for amendment of the plaint, addition of said Satish Kant Jindal as a party to the said suit as also for fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent.

7. The said application was heard by Mrs. P. Khastgir, J. and Her Lordship by the judgment and order dated 19th Feb., 1980 dismissed the said application. It appears that Her Lordship mainly relying on the case of Ranjit Kumar Pal Chowdhury v. Murari Mohan Pal Chowdhury, AIR 1958 Cal 710 and an unreported judgment of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Promode Kumar Jalan and Shyam Lal Jalan held that so far as the tenancy right in respect of the two premises within the jurisdiction of this court was concerned, only the appellant and the proposed defendant No. 4, Satish Kant Jindal, would be entitled to and that all the co-sharers of the estate of the said deceased would not be entitled to the same and in that view of the matter Her Lordship dismissed the said application.

8. Mr. S. K. Gupta, the learned counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant, has submitted that in the present application the appellant has prayed not only the amendment of the plaint but also addition of a new party and for grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Relying on a decision reported in the case of Daulatram Agarwalla v. Champalal Jugraj, AIR 1963 Cal 337 it was submitted that inasmuch as in the instant case the appellant has prayed for fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent the impugned order is appealable. Mr. Gupta has further submitted that the plaintiff has challenged the deed of dissolution dated April 1, 1978 and if the challenge succeeds and the deed is set aside then that would be with regard to all the co-sharers and not in respect of the appellant's share or interest only in the property in question. In this connection reliance was placed on a passage in Mullah's Hindu Law, (14th Edition) Article 269, page 337. Mr. Gupta has also submitted that, in the instant case, as leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent has been revoked the appellant cannot agitate the question of dismissal of the prayer of the amendment in an appeal from any decree in the suit.

9. Mr. B. N. Sen, learned counsel appearing for Satish Kant Jindal (Proposed defendant No. 4 in the suit) has submitted that by the proposed amendment the appellant has sought to introduce an inconsistent case. It has been further submitted that if the said deed of dissolution is set aside it would be only with respect of appellant's interest in the said business and not in respect of the interest of other parties to the said deed because they have executed the said deed and obtained benefit thereunder. Therefore, excepting the appellant all other co-sharers cannot be said to have any interest in the said business of Printers Emporium of which at present Satish Kant Jindal is the sole owner. So far as the disputes regarding the tenancy rights of the said shoproom and the said godown are concerned the appellant and Satish Kant Jindal only are the interested parties. Other co-sharers have no interest in the said tenancy rights and are not interested in the dispute regarding the same. It is also submitted that a new cause of action is sought to be introduced by the proposed amendment.

10. In the case of Daulat Ram v. Champa Lal, AIR 1963 Cal 337 it has been held that if an order allowing the amendment of plaint in a suit instituted with leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent is an order of amendment simpliciter such an order is not an appealable order. But where the question is further complicated by the fact that fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent was granted in respect of the amendment, as such leave was found necessary in view of the provisions of Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, the question of amendment of the pleading and the question of leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent are inter-connected or in other words when the question of procedure and the question of jurisdiction are mixed up and one cannot be dissociated from the other, the order dealing with such question of procedure and the jurisdiction is an appealable order and it is a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent.

11. In the case of Ranjit Pal Chowdhury v. Murari Mohan Pal Chowdhury AIR 1958 Cal 710 relying on the earlier decisions it was observed as follows:—

"The true meaning of this rule is not that no property could be brought into hotchpot in which all the defendants do not claim interest but that no property can be so brought in which all the co-sharers do not claim interest. In a partition suit the defendants may include co-sharers as well as strangers. It is not the law that those properties in which all the defendants do not claim interest have to be left out in a suit for partition but it is the law that only those properties have to be left out which upon the allegations in the plaint, are not held in common by the co-sharer defendants. Otherwise no question of title or benami could be investigated in a suit for partition where as it is the settled law that such question can and should be decided in a partition suit"

In the unreported decision in the case of Promode Kumar Jallan v. Shyam Lal Jallan the principle laid down in AIR 1958 Cal 710 was followed. In that case all the defendants were not interested in one of the two properties which was outside the jurisdiction although the said property along with one property within the jurisdiction were joined for partition. In view of the aforesaid fact the court held that since all the co-sharers were not interested in the property outside the jurisdiction, the same could not be joined along with the property within the jurisdiction and on that basis leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent was revoked.

12. In the instant case, the appellant in her application made in the court of the first instance, apart from amendment of the plaint, also prayed for joinder of a new party namely, the said Satish Kant Jindal and for grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Therefore, the order appealed against is not an order for amendment of the plaint simpliciter but it also involves the question of refusal of grant of fresh leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. Hence the question of procedure is mixed with the question of jurisdiction. In the aforesaid view of the matter we are of the opinion that the impugned order is appealable.

13. By the proposed amendment, the appellant has sought to challenge the deed of dissolution dated April 1, 1978 whereby the firm of Printers Emporium was dissolved and all its assets and stock-in-trade (including the tenancy right of the shoproom at No. 14/2, Old China Bazar Street) were transferred to Satish Kant Jindal, the proposed defendant No. 4 as also the transfer of tenancy right of the godown at No. 22, Sukeas Lane. The appellant's allegations is that the properties belonging to the estate of the said deceased were wrongfully and illegally transferred and/or conveyed to Satish Kant Jindal, the proposed defendant No. 4.

14. The question, therefore, is if the said deed of dissolution is declared void and the transfer of the tenancy rights in respect of the said shoproom and the godown are set aside, whether that would affect only the appellant's share or the shares of all the co-sharers of the estate of the said deceased.

15. In Mulla's Hindu Law, 14th Edition, Article 269 page 337 it is observed that where a member of joint family governed by Mitakshara law as administered in Bengal, Bihar and Uttar Pradesh sells or mortgages the joint family property or any portion thereof without the consent of his coparcener, the alienation is liable to be set aside wholly unless it is for legal necessity or for payment by father of an antecedent debt and it does not pass the share even of the alienating coparcener. The result is that if the alienation is neither for legal necessity nor for payment of the antecedent debt the other coparceners are entitled to a declaration that the alienation is void in its entirety.

16. Therefore, it would appear that if the deed of dissolution and the transfer of tenancy rights in respect of the said shoproom and the said godown are set aside the same would be in its entirety and not merely only in respect of the plaintiff's 1/4th share therein. That being the position, it cannot be said that the other co-sharers are not interested in the dispute concerning the said tenancy rights. Therefore, if the appellant's challenge succeeds all the co-sharers would be interested in the tenancy right of the shoproom and the godown.

17. Inasmuch as by any decision on the question regarding the validity of the transfer of the tenancy rights Satish Kant Jindal would be affected; he is a proper party, if not a necessary party, to the suit.

18. For all the reasons stated hereinbefore, in our view, the appeal should be allowed and the same is allowed. There will be an order in terms of clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f) of the Master's Summons filed in the court of the first instance. The defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 will be at liberty to file their respective addl. written statement to the amended plaint and such addl. written statement should be filed within two weeks from the date of service of a copy of the amended plaint upon them. Cost of the appeal as also of the application made in court of the first instance will abide by the result of the suit.

S. C. GHOSE, C. J.:— I agree.

Ritu Sachdev v. Anita Jindal and others.

Appeal No. 136 of 1980, D/- 25-2-1982.

Letters Patent (Cal.), Cl. 12 — Leave to file suit — Revocation of, on ground of absence of territorial jurisdiction — Principles regarding. Decision of single Judge, D/- 19-2-1980, Reversed.

The question of jurisdiction must be decided on the allegation in the pleadings and it must be decided before the case begins whether or not there is a jurisdiction.

If, on the face of the pleading, the court has jurisdiction, it matters not that later the suit as against the person who carried on business or resided within the jurisdiction is dismissed. Where leave has been granted under Cl. 12 an application by defendant for revocation may raise questions far too difficult to determine upon affidavit evidence and in such case the question should not be decided on affidavit evidence. In a proper case an application to revoke the leave granted under Cl. 12 may be entertained by the court, but the question of difficulty and importance should not be dealt with by an application to revoke the leave under Cl. 12 and to take the plaint off the file. The proper course is to dismiss the application to take the plaint off the file and to direct that the cases do proceed on all points in the usual way. Decision of single Judge, D/- 19-2-1980, Reversed.

R. N. PYNE, J.:— This appeal is directed against the judgment and order dated 19th February, 1980 of Mrs. Padma Khastgir, J. allowing the application made by the respondent No. 1, Smt. Anita Jindal, inter alia, for revocation of leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent and for other reliefs as will appear from the petition of the said application.

2. The appellant, Ritu Sachdev, filed Suit No. 576 of 1979 for partition and administration of the estate left by her deceased father, one Baldev Raj Sachdev. Baldev Raj Sachdev, since deceased, (hereinafter referred to as the said deceased) died on 17th August 1975 leaving the respondent No. 2 (his wife) and the appellant and the respondent Nos. 1 & 3 (his three daughters) as his heiresses and legal representatives and various properties as will appear from the schedule to the plaint. In the suit the plaintiff claimed partition of various properties including immovable properties situated at New Alipore outside the jurisdiction and tenancy rights in respect of shop-room at premises No. 14/2, old China Bazar Street where the said deceased used to carry on business under the name and style of printers emporium and of the godown at No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta. The premises No. 14/2, old China Bazar Street.

and 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta are situate within the jurisdiction of this court and on that basis leave under clause 12 was obtained by the appellant.

3. The respondent No. 1, Anita Jindal, made the said application for revocation of the leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent on the ground that after the death of the said deceased the business of Printers Emporium was converted into a partnership whereof the respondents were partners and the appellant, then being a minor, was admitted to the benefit of partnership and thereafter by a deed of dissolution dated 1st April, 1978 the said firm was dissolved and the entire assets of the said firm including the tenancy right in respect of the shop-room in premises No. 14/2, Old China Zazar Street were transferred to one Satish Kant Jindal, the husband of the respondent No. 1. The tenancy in respect of the godown at No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta was surrendered and thereafter it was given to Satish Kant Jindal. The said Satish Kant Jindal became and is the tenant in respect of the said shoproom and the godown. As, according to the respondent No. 1, no immovable property belonging to the estate were situate within the jurisdiction of this court she made the said application for revocation of the leave under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent.

4. Mrs. Padma Khastgir, J. by the judgment and order dated February 19, 1980 dismissed the said application. According to her Lordship, inasmuch as no part of the immovable property was situate within the jurisdiction and further the application for amendment of the plaint and addition of the parties made by the appellant was dismissed it could not be said that any part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of this Court.

5. Counsel for the appellant has submitted that for the purpose of an application for revocation of leave on the ground of lack of jurisdiction the allegation in the plaint must be deemed to be admitted. So far as the present case is concerned it is clear from paragraph 2 read with schedule item Nos. 3 & 4 that some of the immovable properties are situate within the jurisdiction of this court. Therefore, on the basis of the allegations made in the plaint it is not open to any party to challenge the said allegation or to urge that this court has no jurisdiction. It was further submitted that if the court wanted to decide the question of jurisdiction it should not have been done so merely on the allegation by one of the defendants to the effect that under the deed of dissolution dated 1-4-1978 the tenancy rights in respect of the shoproom at 14/2, Old China Bazar Street was assigned in favour of the husband of the defendant No. 1, Satish Kant Jindal or on the allegation of the surrender of the tenancy in respect of 22, Sukeas Lane and its subsequent mutation in the name of Satish Kant Jindal, the husband of the defendant No. 1, in view of the fact that the deed of partnership itself was challenged in the plaint. According to counsel, it should have been ascertained whether the properties continue to form part of the joint estate and as such liable to partition. Further, and in any event, the deed of dissolution was voidable because the plaintiff was a minor and the alleged transfer was done without court's permission and was hit by S. 8 (2) of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956. It was also the submission of the counsel that the deed of dissolution was not admissible in evidence for want of registration under Section 49 read with Section 17 (1) (b) of the Indian Registration Act in so far as it related to the assignment of tenancy. The assignment of tenancy is also invalid in view of Section 14 (1) (b) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Counsel has, therefore, submitted that all these are questions which should be decided in the suit and not in a summary manner in an application. It has also been submitted that the judgment is erroneous because it proceeds on the basis of fact collateral to the matter in issue and the appeal court is entitled to examine the reasons and if the appeal court finds these reasons are unwarranted it should set aside the order.

6. In support of his above submissions, counsel has referred to the cases, Dominion of India v. Jagadish Prosad Pannalal, (1949) 84 Cal LJ 175: (AIR 1949 Cal 622); United Commercial Bank v. Sanatan Bastushilpa Pratisthan, AIR 1981 Cal 146; Himatsinghka Timber Ltd. v. Narendranath, (1946) 50 Cal WN 624 at p. 626 and Basanta Kumar Biswas v. Prosonna Kumar Guha, AIR 1932 Cal 47.

7. Counsel for the respondent has submitted that in the instant case as the two immovable properties namely, the tenancy rights in respect of two premises No. 14/2, Old China Bazar Street and No. 22, Sukeas Lane, Calcutta do not form part of the estate and all the co-sharers are not interested therein inasmuch as the tenancy rights belong to the husband of the defendant No. 1 Satish Kant Jindal. Further in the dispute regarding the tenancy right only the appellant and Satish Kant Jindal are interested. The other co-sharers are not interested in the said dispute. Therefore, inasmuch as no immovable property belonging to the estate is situate within the jurisdiction the court has no jurisdiction to decide this suit and leave u/cl. 12 should be revoked. Counsel has relied on the case of Ranjit Kumar Palchowdhury v. Murari Mohan Pal Chowdhury, AIR 1958 Cal 710 and an unreported Bench decision of this Court in the case of Promod Kumar Jalan v. Shyam Lal Jalan. It was further submitted that the appellant's application for amendment of the plaint was dismissed the question of validity with regard to the dissolution of partnership and assignment of the tenancy right in respect of the shop room and the godown cannot be decided in this suit.

8. From the judgment and order appealed against it appears that the leave under Clause 12 was revoked on the ground that the tenancy right in respect of the shoproom and the godown belonged to Satish Kant Jindal and not to the estate and that the application for amendment of plaint and addition of party was rejected. According to the learned trial Judge, the only property that remained to be partitioned by and between the parties is the property situated at New Alipore outside the original side jurisdiction of this Court.

9. From the decided cases it appears that the question of jurisdiction must be decided on the allegation in the pleadings and it must be decided before the case begins whether or not there is a jurisdiction. If, on the face of the pleading, the court has jurisdiction, it matters not that later the suit as against the person who carried on business or resided within the jurisdiction is dismissed. Where leave has been granted under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent and application by defendant for revocation may raise questions far too difficult to determine upon affidavit evidence and in such case the question should not be decided on affidavit evidence. In a proper case an application to revoke the leave granted under Cl. 12 may be entertained by the court, but the question of difficulty and importance should not be dealt with by an application to revoke the leave under Cl. 12 and to take the plaint off the file. The proper course is to dismiss the application to take the plaint off the file and to direct that the cases do proceed on all points in the usual way. See the cases of Dominion of India v. Jagdish Prosad Pannalal, (1949) 84 Cal LJ 175 : (AIR 1949 Cal 622); Himatsinghka Timber Ltd. v. Narendra Nath Banerjee, (1946) 50 Cal WN 624; Secretary of State v. Golabari Poliram, AIR 1932 Cal 146 and United Commercial Bank v. Sonaton Bastushilpa Pratisthan Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1981 Cal 146.

10. Applying the above principle it appears that on the basis of the allegations made in the plaint it cannot be said that this court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit because part of the immovable property namely, the tenancy rights are in respect of the shoproom and the godown situated within the jurisdiction. Further, we have by our judgment and order made today allowed the appeal No. 154 of 1980 preferred against the judgment and order dismissing the appellant's application for amendment of the plaint and addition of parties. In that view of the matter the question will arise in the suit as to whether the tenancy rights in respect of the shoproom and the godown belong to all the co-sharers or not. In view of our judgment at this stage it cannot be said that all the co-sharers are not interested in the tenancy rights of the said shoproom and the godown. In our view, the question as to whether the said tenancy rights belong to the estate or not or in other words, all the co-sharers are interested in the said tenancy rights or not are complicated questions of fact and law which, in our view, should be decided in the suit itself and not on affidavits in the application. For the aforesaid reasons and in view of our judgment in Appeal No. 154 of 1980, in our view, it cannot be said at this stage on the basis of the plaint that this Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit.

11. For all the reasons stated above, in our view, this appeal should succeed. The appeal, therefore, is allowed. The cost of the appeal will abide by the result of the suit.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 336ANIL K. SEN AND B. C. CHAKRABARTI, JJ.

Smt. Gita Mitra, Petitioner v. Hemanta Kumar Mitra, Opposite Party.

C. R. No. 44 of 1979, D/- 24-9-1981.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 60 (1), Cl. (h) r/w Cl. (i) — Applicability of Cl. (h) — Applies only to such labourers and domestic servants whose wages do not exceed amount mentioned in cl. (i), i.e. Rupees 400 to Rs. 500 per month — “Wages” is used in same sense as “salary” and as such implies total monthly emoluments.

In analogous statutes dealing with workman which is synonymous with a labourer, and their wages the statutes have invariably fixed a limit. That being the position it seems that in construing the extent of exemption of the wages of a labourer u/s. 60 of the Code a reference to the amount of wages becomes almost imperative as it could never have been the intention of the legislature that the wages irrespective of its amount shall be exempt when, the legislature did not consider it necessary to exempt salary beyond the 1st 400 rupees of any other class of employees. Workman as defined in the several other statutes providing for adequate provision for their welfare and protection did not include persons drawing more than Rs. 500 a month at the most. Therefore, it seems that cl. (h) r/w cl. (i) in the light of similar statutes dealing with the welfare of labourers and workmen postulates only such labourers whose wages do not exceed Rs. 400 to Rs. 500 per month. It seems obvious that the object was to except from the liability to attachment of debts, the case of persons who would be likely to be deprived of their daily means of subsistence by having their earnings attached in the hands of their employers. Therefore, taking the collocation of the word ‘labourer’ with ‘domestic servant’ it is obvious that the reasonable application of the clause is to persons of small means receiving small wages at short intervals. Now, the expressions “wages” and “salary” used in cls. (h) and (i) respectively bear an analogous meaning and it would not be fair and equitable to construe cl. (h) as providing for exemption of the wages of the labourers irrespective of its amount whatsoever. This apart, the expressions “salary” as defined in the Code means total monthly emoluments excluding any allowance declared exempt under cl. (i)

Taking the wider connotation of the term salary, it seems that the amount paid on monthly basis and described as pay and officiating pay etc. even though earned by a person doing manual work, would be salary and not wages which has a restricted connotation. It cannot, therefore, be held that the entire amount of wages of a labourer should be exempt from attachment in execution of a decree for maintenance. The exemption cannot exceed the amount provided in cl. (i), which relates to persons supposed to be better placed than labourers or domestic servants. (Paras 11, 12)

Held, the judgment-debtor husband, who was a laskar, did not come within the spirit of cl. (h) of S. 60 (1) since his wages or monthly remunerations exceeded the amount specified in cl. (i). In the circumstances his wife was entitled to proceed with the execution of the decree for alimony by attachment of his monthly salary. (Paras 11, 14)

Bhaskar Bhattacharya, for Petitioner; Harshit Chakrabarti and Bimal Chakrabarti, for Opposite Party.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J:— The petitioner wife obtained an ex parte decree of divorce against the opposite party husband in Matrimonial Suit No. 21 of 1977 of the 8th Court of the learned Additional District Judge, Alipore. Subsequently she filed an application for alimony u/s. 25 (i) of the Hindu Marriage Act. This application however, was contested by the opposite party husband. There was an order in favour of the wife after contested hearing, directing the opposite party husband to pay monthly alimony at the rate of Rs. 200/- from the date of the application. It appears upon a perusal of the order passed in that behalf on January 7, 1978 that an employee from the office of the employer of the opposite party husband gave evidence to the effect that the net income per month of the husband was about Rs. 1,000. The husband claimed that he had to maintain his old parents and minor brothers and sisters. The opposite party husband submitted through his advocate that a monthly alimony at the rate of Rs. 150 would be sufficient. Having however, considered the totality of the evidence the learned Additional District Judge allowed the application for alimony directing the husband to pay at the rate of Rs. 200 per month as already indicated. The husband, however, admittedly did not pay any amount towards alimony whereupon the wife filed an application for execution, by attachment from the monthly salary of the judgment-debtor husband, the total dues at the date of the filing of the execution petition being Rs. 980.

2. The husband filed an application u/s. 47 r/w S. 60 of the C. P. Code, claiming exemption from attachment on the ground that he was a labourer and in view of the provisions contained in Section 60 (1) (h) of the Code his wages could not be attached. The learned Additional District Judge relying upon the decision in the case of K. U. Kulkarni v. Ganpat Hiraji, AIR 1942 Bom 191 held that the husband who was a laskar in the employment of the Port Trust, Calcutta was a labourer within the meaning of S. 60 (1) (h) of the Code since he had to do manual work in the performance of his duties and as such the remuneration earned by him was "wages of a labourer". In that view of the matter the learned Additional District Judge held that the husband was a labourer and the wages earned by him were exempt from attachment. The application u/s. 47 was accordingly allowed with the result that the execution case was struck off.

3. The decree holder wife thereupon filed the present revisional application contending that the husband was not a labourer as contemplated by S. 60 (1) (h) of the Code and as such could not claim exemption from attachment. It was further contended that the provision of Section 60 (1) (h) of the Code is ultra vires the Constitution being violative of Article 14 of the Constitution of India.

4. On the application being presented a Rule was issued and a notice of the Rule was also served on the Advocate General, State of West Bengal as well as on the Union of India.

5. At the hearing there was no appearance either on behalf of the Advocate General or the Union of India. The application was contested by the opposite party husband.

6. It is not disputed before us that while the alimony matter was being heard the wife produced a sheet described as "wage slip for the month of Oct. 1975" showing the amount drawn by the opposite party husband. It appears therefrom that the opposite party was drawing Rupees 890.05 which included "Pay, Officiating Pay, Leave Allowance, Dearness Allowance, House Rent, Conveyance Allowance, Compensatory Overtime Allowance etc. After deductions the husband drew a net amount of Rs. 751.59 for that month. It further appears from the order passed on the application for alimony that one G. N. Guha an employee of the Port Trust, Calcutta was examined as witness on behalf of the wife who stated that the gross monthly income of the husband was at least Rs. 1000. Before we come to consider the question whether the opposite party is a labourer and his earnings are "wages of a labourer" within the meaning of S. 60 (1) Cl. (h) it may be mentioned that the husband did not move against the order granting alimony at the rate of Rs. 200 per month. It is also to be remembered that the wage slip for the month of Oct. which was produced at the hearing of the alimony matter was admitted into evidence on admission by the husband. Now of course it has been submitted before us that the monthly remuneration earned by the husband is but a little over Rs. 500. In view of the fact that the husband submitted to the order for alimony and acquiesced to the admission of the wage slip in evidence it is no longer open to him to contend that the remuneration earned by him is not as indicated in the said wage slip.

7. Mr. Bhaskar Bhattacharjee appearing on behalf of the petitioner wife contended that the opposite party husband who draws remuneration of about Rupees 1000 a month cannot by any stretch of imagination be termed as a labourer within the meaning of S. 60 (1) (h) of the Code. He argued further that a clerk in an establishment drawing much less the amount is not entitled to claim the benefit of exemption under that section while a labourer even if the husband is treated as such but drawing many times more the pay of a clerk would be entitled to claim total exemption from attachment of pay. This Mr. Bhattacharjee contends is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution.

8. Before coming to the question of vires it is necessary to examine whether the husband is really a labourer and if so whether he is entitled to claim exemption u/s. 60 (1) (h) of the Code. S. 60 speaks of properties liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree. Cl. (h) of the first proviso to sub-sec. (1) of the section lays down that "the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind" shall not be liable to such attachment. Cl. (1) provides for exemption of salary to the extent of the 1st 400 Rupees and two-thirds of the remainder in execution of any decree other than a decree for maintenance. Cl. (ia) provides exemption in respect of one-third of the salary in execution of any decree for maintenance. Now the expressions labourer and wages have not been defined in the Code. The expression salary has been defined to mean the total monthly emoluments, excluding any allowance declared exempt from attachment under the provisions of Cl. (L). Expln. IV to the section says "for the purpose of this proviso wage includes bonus and labourer includes skilled, unskilled or semi-skilled labourer". So what we get from S. 60 in the Code is that though the expression salary has been defined to mean the total monthly emoluments the expression wages has not been so defined. The use of the expression "includes" merely has the effect of enlarging the meaning of the word wages, and since wages has not been defined it should be given the etymological meaning of the word, namely, the remuneration for the services. Assuming that the husband, being a laskar is a labourer the question yet remains whether the remuneration earned by him amounts to wages of a labourer as contemplated by S. 60 (1) (h) of the Code. In interpreting the particular Clause courts should not lose sight of the circumstances and conditions prevailing at the time when the provision was enacted. "In the construction of a statute it is of course at all times and under all circumstances permissible to have regard to the state of things existing at the time the statute was passed and to the evil which, as appears from its provision, it was designed to remedy....." (See Craies on Statute Law 6th Edn. page 126). It is significant to note that when this exemption clause was provided in the Code the legislature in its wisdom considered it necessary to give some protection to labourers and domestic servants by exempting attachment of wages earned by them. It is also significant to note that labourers and domestic servants were grouped together in the same category. The concept of the wages of a labourer at the time when the provision was initially enacted in the Code has considerably changed since then. It is not uncommon for a labourer now-a-days to earn much more than any other employee who is not a labourer. This is a situation which was unthought of at the time the provision was made. That this is so would be evident from cl. (i) of S. 60 (1) of the Code with after the amendment in 1976 provides exemption of the first 400 Rupees of the salary. Initially the exemption from attachment of salary was to the extent of first 100 Rupees. It is thus clear that the legislature while providing for exemption of the wages of a labourer was conscious that the salary earned by any other class of servants was more than the wages of a labourer.

9. This apart we have already indicated that the expression wages has not been defined in the Code. Therefore, in order to ascertain whether the expression is referable to any amount paid to a labourer or not the meaning given to the expression "wages" in similar statutes may be conveniently looked into. It is permissible in considering what construction should be put to the use of an expression in one statute, to refer to statutes in pari materia relating to the same persons or things or same class of persons or things. In relation to labourers and their wages there are several other statutes which may be considered as in pari materia so that references to those statutes may be helpful in giving a meaningful construction to the term "wages" of labourer as used in S. 60 of the Code. In the Industrial Disputes Act wages have been defined to mean all remuneration capable of being expressed in terms of money which would, if the terms of employment, expressed or implied, were fulfilled, be payable to a workman in respect of his employment, or of work done in such employment and includes such allowance as the workman is for the time being entitled to, the value of any house accommodation or of supply of light, water, medical attendance other amenity or of any service or of any concessional supply of foodgrains or other articles, any travelling concession but does not include any bonus. In the said Act the expression workman has been defined to mean any person employed in any industry to do any skilled, unskilled, manual, supervisory, technical or clerical work for hire or reward etc. But does not include any such person who being employed in a supervisory capacity draws wages exceeding 500 Rupees per month. It may be noted that in describing the remuneration earned by an employee doing supervisory work, the expression wages has been used.

10. In the Payment of Wages Act, 1936 the definition of the expression "wages" is almost similar to the definition as in the I. D. Act. The P. W. Act applies in the first instance to the payment of wages to persons employed in any factory and to persons employed otherwise than in a factory but in any industrial establishment or in any classes or groups of Industrial establishments. S. 1, sub-sec. (6) however, provides that nothing in the Act shall apply to wages payable in respect of a wage period which, over such wage period, average 400 Rupees a month or more. In the Workmens' Compensation Act, 1923 "wages" has been defined to include any privilege or benefit which is capable of being estimated in money, other than a travelling allowance or the value of any travelling concession or a contribution paid by the employer of a workman towards any pension or Provident Fund or a sum paid to a workman to cover any special expenses entitled on him by the nature of the employment. While defining a workman the statute provided that it does not include a person employed on monthly wages exceeding 500 Rupees.

11. It follows, therefore, that in analogous statutes dealing with workman which is synonymous with a labourer, and their wages the statute has invariably fixed a limit. That being the position we feel that in construing the extent of exemption of the wages of a labourer u/s. 60 of the Code a reference to the amount of wages becomes almost imperative as we have already indicated that it could never have been the intention of the legislature that the wages irrespective of its amount shall be exempt when, the legislature did not consider it necessary to exempt salary beyond the first 400 Rupees of any other class of employees. Workman as defined in the several other statutes providing for adequate provision for their welfare and protection did not include persons drawing more than Rs. 500 a month at the most. Therefore, it seems to us that cls. (h) and (i) read together in the light of similar statutes dealing with the welfare of labourers and workmen postulate only such labourers whose wages do not exceed Rs. 400 to 500 per month.

12. Then again even though the document exhibited on the admission of the husband indicating the emoluments drawn by the husband for the month of Oct., 1975 is described as wage slip the break up of the amount shows payment of pay, officiating pay, house rent allowance, leave allowance, conveyance allowance besides Dearness Allowances. These items are incompatible with wages of a labourer and no particular importance should be given to the use of the expression wage slip so that the total amount inclusive of pay and other allowances should be exempt from attachment. This being the position we are unable to agree with the learned Additional District Judge that execution by way of attachment is totally prohibited u/s. 60 (1), cl. (h) of the Code. We must construe the word 'labourer' having regard to the subject matter and the intention of the Act. Taking the collocation of the word 'labourer' with "domestic servant" it is obvious that the reasonable application of the clause is to persons of small means—receiving small wages at short intervals. It seems obvious that the object was to except from the liability to attachment of debts, the case of persons who would be likely to be deprived of their daily means of subsistence by having their earnings attached in the hands of their employers. A person in the position of the judgment-debtor husband does not come within the spirit of the cl. (h) of S. 60 (1). The decision in the Bombay case relied on by the learned Additional District Judge arose out of a different context and it may not be looked upon as a safe guide in holding that any amount drawn by a labourer is entitled to exemption. This is more so because this decision was made at a time when cl. (h) of S. 60 (1) read as follows :

"The wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind; and salary to the extent of first 100 Rupees and one half of the remainder of such salary." The clause has since been amended and split up into cls. (h) and (i). Since the legislature used the two different expressions, wages and salary though analogous in nature in different parts of the same clause, as it then stood, it was assumed that they were intended to be used in a different sense. Now that the expressions are not used in the same clause but in different clauses and the expressions bear an analogous meaning we do not think it fair and equitable to construe the clause as providing for exemption of the wages of the labourers irrespective of its amount whatsoever. This apart, the expression "salary" as defined in the Code means total monthly emoluments excluding any allowance declared exempt under cl. (L). Taking the wider connotation of the term salary, it seems that the amount paid on monthly basis and described as pay and officiating pay etc. even though earned by a person doing manual work, would be salary and not wages which has a restricted connotation. We are unable to hold therefore, that the entire amount of wages of a labourer should be exempt from attachment in execution of a decree for maintenance. The exemption cannot exceed the amount provided in the other clause of the section namely cl. (i), which relates to persons supposed to be better placed than labourers or domestic servants.

13. Such being our view it is not necessary for us to go into the question whether cl. (h) of S. 60 (1) is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution.

14. In the result the revisional application succeeds. The impugned order is set aside. The execution case do now proceed in accordance with law. The petitioner shall be entitled to costs—hearing fee being assessed at 3 gold mohurs.

15. Let the order be communicated to the court below forthwith and the records go down at once. Rule is made absolute.

Omprakash Patwarika, Petitioner v. Union of India and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 9100 (W) of 1981, D/- 12-3-1982.

Constitution of India, Arts. 299, 226, 14 — Public contract — Acceptance of tender of contractor at rate higher than offered by petitioner — Selection of higher tender after consideration of analysis — Arbitrariness not established.

In the instant case the Tender Committee asked for analysis of the rates in the tenders invited and was of the view that the rates quoted by the petitioner though lowest were not workable. The tender quoting highest rate was accepted. Held that it could not be said that an arbitrary or capricious view was taken by the Tender Committee as it had refused lowest tender only after scrutiny and consideration of the analysis of rates.

ORDER:— By a Tender Notice No. 4A 81-82 dt. 4th May, 1981, the Divisional

CZ/DZ/B264/82/TGD/DVT

Rly. Manager, Eastern Rly., invited tenders for execution of new works, works for additions and alterations as also repairs and maintenance works of miscellaneous nature for Zone No. 108 from 1st July 1981 to 30th June, 1982, on the terms and conditions mentioned in the Tender Notice. The notice was issued by the Office of the Divisional Railway Manager, Eastern Railway. The petitioner, Omprakash Patwarika, one Bijoy Sankar Bohra and Santosh Kumar Sharma submitted their tenders in response to the aforesaid notice. The tenders were also submitted on 17th June, 1981, and were opened in the presence of the representatives of the tenderers. It appears that the rates quoted by Omprakash Patwarika, the petitioner herein, were the lowest. Santosh Kumar Sharma's quotations were on the whole the highest of the three tenders that were submitted. By a memo dated 5th Aug. 1981, the Divisional Engineer asked all the three tenderers to submit analysis against items Nos. 1 & 2 (Cement, concrete and brick work) in support of the rates quoted in the tenders. The petitioner and Sarkar (Santosh) Kumar Sharma submitted detailed analysis of their quotations as required by the Divisional Engineer. Bijoy Sankar Bohra, however, did not submit any such analysis. It appears that the tender of Santosh Kumar Sharma who had on the whole quoted the highest rates was accepted.

2. The petitioner, Omprakash Patwarika has challenged the legality and validity of the aforesaid decision of the Railway Authorities to accept the bid of Santosh Kumar Sharma, the Respondent No. 6 herein. It has been contended on behalf of the petitioner that the Railway Authorities were not bound to give work order to the lowest tenderer in all cases, but if the lowest tender is not accepted there must be some reasonable ground for that. Strong reliance was placed upon the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Ramana Dayaram Shetty v. International Air Port Authority of India, AIR 1979 SC 1628. It was argued that the Government did not have an unfettered or arbitrary discretion in the matter of accepting tenders. It was argued that the petitioner had successfully submitted tenders quoting the same rates in respect of Zone No. 96, an adjacent zone under the same Division. It was, therefore, submitted that the petitioner had made identical bids in two adjoining zones, one was accepted but the other was rejected as unworkable by the Railway Authorities.

The petitioner submitted that this action of the Railway Authorities was clearly against the principle laid down by the Supreme Court in the aforesaid judgment.

3. It was submitted on behalf of the Railway Authorities that the quotations were on the face of it unreal and could not be accepted having regard to the market price. It was submitted that the analysis of the quotations were invited only for the purpose of being fair to the petitioner and also to the other tenderers.

4. The contention of the petitioner, however, cannot be accepted. The petitioner's allegations in paragraph 18 of the petition that the petitioner submitted a tender in respect of Zone No. 96 under the Divisional Engineer 3, quoting exactly the same rate quoted in Zone No. 108 are factually incorrect. It appears from the tender papers produced by the Railway Authorities at the hearing that the petitioner had quoted much higher figures for Zone 96 where his bid was successful. The petitioner's quotation for Zone 108 was much lower.

5. In view of the aforesaid it cannot be said that the decision of the Railway Authorities not to accept tender of the petitioner on the ground that the rates quoted by the petitioner in respect of Zone No. 108 were unworkable is not on the face of it capricious or arbitrary.

6. Reliance was also placed on behalf of the petitioner in the case of S. P. Das v. State of West Bengal, (1980) 2 Cal HN 480. In that case an agreement was entered into for a period of five years by the State of West Bengal. Thereafter, the period of contract was abridged without assigning any reason. There was no allegation that the petitioner was guilty of any defect or breach of any of the terms of the contract. The petitioner was also not given any opportunity of showing cause against the order that was ultimately passed. In these facts T. K. Basu, J. held that the Government could not act arbitrarily or capriciously. The facts of the present case, however, are quite different. The Railway Authorities have rejected the tender submitted by the petitioner as unworkable on the ground that the rates quoted by the petitioner were absurdly low.

7. In the case of Barun Kumar Sinha v. District Magistrate, Murshidabad, AIR 1982 Cal 19 the petitioner had submitted a tender within the stipulated time for supply of dietary articles to the State-owned Hospitals. The tender of another contractor, who quoted rates much higher than the rates of the petitioner, was accepted. No reasons were advanced for rejecting the tender quoted by the petitioner. In this case, however, the Divisional Engineer invited the tenderers to submit analysis of the rates quoted by them. It has been stated by the Divisional Engineer in his affidavit-in-opposition "that the petitioner himself worked during the preceding 2 zonal periods at much higher rates than the rate accepted during the current zonal period. So it is abundantly clear that the interest of the Government has been properly looked into. The abnormally low rate quoted by the petitioner in the current zone period by itself smacks of ulterior motive which could not be overlooked in view of the much higher rate at which he worked in the same zone in the past."

8. The tender by the petitioner was not ignored or rejected arbitrarily. It was duly considered and analysis of the rates was invited and only after due consideration of the analysis, the tender submitted by the petitioner was rejected. The petitioner in the writ petition has tried to justify the abnormally low rates quoted by him on the ground that he had stocks of raw materials bought when the market prices were much lower and, therefore, he was in a position to submit the tender quoting such low rates. That the rates quoted were abnormally very low having regard to the prevailing market prices cannot be denied and has not been denied by the petitioner. If the Tender Committee was of the view that the rates quoted by the petitioner were unworkable, it cannot be said that an arbitrary or capricious view has been taken. An analysis of the rates was invited. The petitioner gave an analysis of his rates which was found to be not satisfactory. In my opinion, the allegation of capricious or arbitrary action has not been established in the facts of this case.

9. Another point was made that the work order in this case was issued on a Sunday. It was argued that the said order was back dated and was issued out of ulterior motive and with a view to show special favour to the successful tenderer in this case, the Respondent No. 6. It has been stated in the supplementary affidavit that for urgent work of the Railways, the railway employees also work on Sundays and holidays. In my view, no adverse inference, in the facts of this case, can be drawn against the Railway Authorities only from the fact that the disputed communication issued on a Sunday.

10. A number of legal points have been argued by the counsel appearing on behalf of the Respondent No. 6. In the facts of this case it is not necessary to go into those questions.

11. In the premises, this Rule is discharged and all interim orders vacated.

12. There will be no order as to costs.

13. The prayer for stay of operation of the order is refused.

Rule discharged.

M. M. Ghosh and S. C. Roy, for Appellants; B. G. Mitter and Miss Aruna Mukherjee, for Respondents.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The plaintiff has alleged that defendant No. 1, Jugal Kishore and defendant No. 2, Bhupendra, are his brothers. Their father, Rasamoy Kundu, lived at Ichhapore in the district of Jessore, which is now in Bangladesh. He was governed by the Dayabhaga school of Hindu law. On the 21st Feb. 1948, he died leaving behind those three sons as his only heirs. His wife had predeceased him. He was very well off, owned many properties and extensive business. He constructed a godown and carried on jute business therein at Langal Bandh Bazar near his native village in the benami of Monorama Kundu, Jugal's wife. In 1946 a riot broke out in Bengal and so Rasamoy wanted to have a house in Calcutta. He sent Jugal to purchase land in Calcutta for that purpose. On the 23rd Dec. 1946, a deed of agreement was thus executed regarding the suit land. On the 16th Jan. 1947, a kobala was executed in respect of that property. Though both the documents stood in his daughter-in-law Monorama's name, she was merely his benamidar. After the purchase, he began to raise building on that land, but the construction was not completed during his lifetime. He and his three sons lived in a joint family. Jugal was the karta. Rasamoy left many properties and business. In 1950, there was a communal riot in East Pakistan. Shortly, thereafter, the plaintiff and Jugal shifted from East Pakistan to the disputed property. Bhupendra was then unmarried and he used to live in East Pakistan. From time to time he would come to Calcutta. The disputed property belonged to the joint family and the three brothers had one-third share each therein. In 1967, they separated in mess, but are still in joint estate. A fire broke out in Langal Bandh Bazar jute godown in 1951 and 1952. A sum of Rupees 130,000.00 was received from the Insurance Company as compensation.

That amount forms part of the joint estate of the brothers. Jugal falsely filed Title Suit No. 340 of 1967 in the First Munsif's Court, Sealdah, for the plaintiff's eviction on the bogus ground that he was a tenant in respect of one room in the disputed house under him and his children. But he lost that case up to the appellate court. Monorama is dead and the pro forma defendants are her heirs. The suit is for partition and for taking accounts also regarding the disputed property.

2. The defendant No. 2 filed a written statement supporting the plaintiff's version.

3. The defendant No. 1 and pro forma defendants Nos. 3 to 6 and 8 and 9 filed a written statement denying the plaintiff's allegations. They allege that Rasamoy separated his three sons and distributed all his assets in 1940 or so. After his death nothing came in the hands of Jugal. There was no existence of any joint family or joint family property. Monorama had considerable money and she acquired the property in question with her own money. Thereafter, she constructed a house on that land with her own money. The godown at Lungal Bandh Bazar belonged to her. Narayan (plaintiff) used to come to the disputed house and live as her guest or licensee. Thereafter, he rented one room from her. As he refused to vacate, the ejectment suit was filed.

4. The learned Subordinate Judge accepted the plaintiff's version and granted a preliminary decree for partition. He also passed a decree for accounts against the defendant No. 1 only regarding the income received from the disputed property. The rest of the prayer for accounts regarding the joint estate was not allowed.

5. Hence this appeal by defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 8. It has been contended on behalf of the appellants that the moot question is as to who acquired the disputed property and whether Monorama was the real owner or a mere benamidar regarding the property in question. The plaintiff's version cannot be accepted.

6. It has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that Monorama was not a woman of substance. It has not been proved that she had sufficient money to acquire the godown at Lungal Bandh Bazar of the disputed property in Calcutta. She died in 1963. A Hindu Joint Family is presumed to be joint in food, estate and worship. That presumption has not been rebutted. Even if it is assumed that Monorama was the real owner regarding the disputed property, the evidence on the record clearly shows that subsequently that property was thrown into the common stock of the joint family. Jugal said in the Sealdah Court that he had received Rs. 30,000/- and property from his father. Of course, the plaintiff filed some affidavits in the High Court making such damaging statements. Those admissions have no value because under S. 31 of the Evidence Act, an admission is not conclusive. The uncorroborated testimony of DW 2, Jugal Kishore (defendant No. 2), cannot be believed. He failed to establish that Monorama had any source from which the godown at Lungal Bandh Bazar, Jessore, and the disputed property could be acquired.

7. Let the position of law be discussed first. After following a bench case of Gouranga Sundar v. Mohendra Narayan in (1927) 46 Cal LJ 175 : (AIR 1927 Cal 776), it has been stated in the bench case of Hem Chandra v. Motilal in (1933) 37 Cal WN 1174 at p. 1178 : (AIR 1934 Cal 68 at p. 70) that under the Dayabhaga Law, there cannot be a joint family consisting of the father and the son. A son can acquire separate property even if he lives with his father. If the brothers live jointly, one of them cannot claim a share in the acquisition of another unless it is proved that they also had contributed towards its acquisition. A self acquired property becomes joint when it is thrown into the common stock voluntarily with the intention of abandoning all claim over it. After following the case of Pratap v. Sarat, in (1921) 33 Cal LJ 201 : (AIR 1921 Cal 101) presided over by Sir Ashutosh Mukherjee, it has been stated by R. C. Mitter, J., in the case of Surendra Bala v. Bhupendra Kumar in (1941) 45 Cal WN 177 at pages 179 and 180 that a wife or daughter-in-law or son is not coparcener in the joint family under the Dayabhaga system of Hindu Law and hence if the purchase is made in their names, there can be no presumption that the purchase was made for the benefit of the family and the apparent title will prevail. In the case of Akshoy v. Sukumar reported in AIR 1951 Cal 320, K. C. Das Gupta, J., has stated that when a document stands in one's name and another party claims it as a joint property, the onus is on the latter to show that it was a joint acquisition and the joint family had sufficient nucleus. If such onus is discharged, only then the burden shifts to the other side.

8. In a case of benami, the most important test is the source of the consideration, vide the cases in AIR 1949 FC 88 (92); AIR 1974 SC 171 (J. Poddar v. Bibi Hazra), AIR 1978 SC 1362 (Fatima v. Hasan) and AIR 1980 SC 727 (Bhim Singh v. Kan Singh).

9. It seems that much of the pleadings and the observations made by the learned Subordinate Judge are misconceived because there could not be a joint family amongst the brothers so long as Rasamoy was alive. The most outstanding fact in this case is that the disputed property was acquired when Rasamoy was alive. So long as he was alive, Jugal could not be a karta. No question of blending was pleaded in the written statement. Since it is outside the pleadings, such case cannot be accepted, vide decisions of Trojen & Co. v. Nagappa in AIR 1953 SC 235 at p. 240 and of Venkatramana in AIR 1958 SC 255.

10. Now it will be our duty to point out that the learned Subordinate Judge has made out a new case. The reason is very simple because in para 6 of the plaint, it has been stated that after making the purchase, Rasamoy began to construct building on the land with his own money, whereas the learned Subordinate Judge has held that the building was constructed with the money of the joint fund of the three brothers. Law on this is well settled because in view of the Supreme Court case of Sheodhari v. Suraj Prasad in AIR 1954 SC 758 at p. 760, the court cannot make a new case not made out in the pleadings.

11. Then about the evidence given on behalf of the plaintiff's side. PW 1, Jitendra Nath Kundu, has stated that Rasamoy acquired the godown in Jessore and the Calcutta property in Monorama's benami. Subsequently he says that this is only his hearsay. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent has stated that this evidence is relevant under S. 32 of the Evidence Act. This submission cannot be accepted because such statement is not covered by any of the sub-secs. (1) to (3) of that section and hence, such hearsay evidence cannot be accepted. This witness also says that Jugal's father-in-law was not well-off and he used to work in a cloth shop. Subsequently, he is constrained to say that this also is his hearsay.

12. Then about the evidence of PW 2, Gopal Chandra Kundu. He has stated that the brothers lived jointly and they separated in mess after the suit was filed in the Sealdah Court in 1967. But PW 1, Jitendra Nath Kundu, has stated in his cross-examination that Narayan Babu (plaintiff) has been living in his own house in Banamali Chatterjee Street, Calcutta, from 1360 B. S. This clearly shows that the three brothers were not living in a joint mess, as alleged on behalf of the plaintiff.

13. The evidence of P. W. 3, Shyamapada Dey, an employee of the State Bank of India, is not relevant because it has been pointed out on behalf of the appellant that the Account Book of that bank, Ext. 12, speaks of the entries starting from 1960. So, it has no relevancy about the acquisition of the disputed property.

14. PW 4, Radhaballav Sikdar, has supported the plaintiff, stated that Rasamoy was alive till the completion of the construction work of the house and he died in 1954. There is no manner of doubt that he is not at all a witness of truth because on the 28th Feb. 1948, Rasamoy breathed his last and a plan of that house was sanctioned only in June, 1948, vide Ext. E. He further says in his cross-examination that he does not know about the source of money from which the properties at Jangal Bandh Bazar and Calcutta were acquired. He deposed on behalf of the plaintiff in the Sealdah Court. At last he admits in his cross-examination that he does not know whether Jugal and Narayan lived separately or in a joint mess.

15. PW 5, Narayan Chandra Kundu, being the plaintiff, is an interested witness.

16. DW 1, Bhupendra Nath Kundu, is defendant No. 2 and he filed a written statement supporting the plaintiff's version. He has stated in his evidence that he only heard from his father that the disputed property had been purchased by the former. This is hearsay evidence and should not have been admitted in evidence. He first says that he saw the Account Books in connection with the cost of purchase of the suit land and in the next breath, he denies the same. We did not pin any faith on the evidence given by the PWs.

17. Let us now deal with the alleged admissions made by the plaintiff. A fire broke out in the godown at Jangal Bandh Bazar in Jessore, and this has already been stated. Suit No. 2021 was filed in the Calcutta High Court in 1954, vide Ext. J. The present plaintiff made several admissions in that case. Law in this respect is well settled. It appears from the case of Narayan v. Gopal in (1960) 2 SCA 153 : (AIR 1960 SC 100) and of Avadh Kishore v. Ram Gopal in AIR 1979 SC 861 that an admission, though not conclusive, is decisive on the point unless it is successfully withdrawn or proved to be erroneous. None of those two elements has been proved because PW 5, Narayan Chandra Kundu, has not been able to show that the admissions made by him in connection with that High Court suit had been withdrawn or the same were erroneous. When he was confronted with the same, he pretended not to recall if he had stated the same. It will appear from his affidavits, Ext. L series, that the properties in Calcutta and at Jangal Bandh Bazar in Jessore belonged to Monorama, she was a woman of substance and she made such purchase with her own money. In that view of the matter, it can be safely stated that the observations made by the learned Subordinate Judge about the existence of the joint family and of a joint family fund are of very little value.

18. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent placed reliance on the letters, Exts. 1 (a) and 1 (c) dated 20th April, 1949, and 22nd April, 1949, to show that Jugal had given information about the raising of the house on the disputed land. At all events, these letters do not show that the brothers had any title thereto or contain any statement that it was their joint property. Reliance was also placed on behalf of the respondent on the letters, Ext. 2 series. At any rate, those letters did not create any title in their favour to the property in question.

19. It is thus not necessary to deal with the fact how and who acquired some compensation from the Insurance Company, when fire broke out in the godown at Jangal Bandh Bazar. This is irrelevant for deciding the main question, whether Monorama was the real owner or a mere name-lender.

20. It has been stated on behalf of the respondent that the documents, Ext. 5 series, show that the electric meter in the back portion of the disputed house stands in plaintiff's name and Jugal himself wrote some of the muris, Ext. 13.

21. Now no handwriting expert was examined to show that, in fact, Jugal wrote the same.

22. Title Suit No. 340 of 1967 was filed in the Sealdah Court, vide copy of the plaint, Ext. 3. The trial court left the question of title to the property open, vide the judgment, Ext. 8. It has been stated that the plaintiff had no cause of action. It will appear from the decision of Wanchoo, J., in the case of Sheodhan v. D. Kunwar in AIR 1966 SC 1332 that where the court holds that the suit will fail for want of cause of action, there is no question of any res judicata. The decision of the lower court was affirmed in appeal, vide Ext. 9. The appellate court made a damaging statement by stating that though Narayan (present plaintiff) alleged that Monorama was only a benamidar, but the case of benami was not proved.

23. There is another important aspect of the case because Narayan occupied only one room in that house, in which there were ten rooms. If, in fact, he was the owner of 1/3rd share, it would be normally expected that as a co-sharer he would have possession in more than one room. It has already been stated that P. W. 1, Jitendra Nath Kundu, says that from 1360 B. S., Narayan (plaintiff) has been living in his own house in Banamali Chatterjee Street, Calcutta. It appears from those judgments, Exts. 8 & 9, that the single room in which the plaintiff lived in the disputed house, has no separate bath-room or kitchen. That clearly shows that his possession therein was only permissive.

24. It has been stated by the Supreme Court in the case of Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi in AIR 1966 SC 405 at p. 410, AIR 1974 SC 117 at p. 119, AIR 1977 SC 409 (Union of India v. Moksh Builders) and Sitaram v. Ramchandra in AIR 1977 SC 1712 at p. 1715 that an admission by a party is substantive evidence of the fact admitted therein, if it is clear and unambiguous. It has already been stated that in the affidavits, Ext. L series, Narayan made a clear and unambiguous admission that Monorama was the owner of the disputed property and she acquired it with her own fund. Such admission was made in 1955 and 1960, vide Ext. L series, whereas the suit in the Sealdah Court was commenced only in 1967, vide Ext. 3. Such previous admissions made by the plaintiff regarding the disputed property at a time, when there was no controversy over it, clearly show the hollowness of his case. The learned Subordinate Judge approached the case from a completely wrong angle.

25. Thus, from the totality of the facts, discussed above, it is clear that the brothers did not own any joint property which can be regarded as a nucleus, which provided for a sufficient source for the acquisition of the disputed property or for construction of a new building thereon. We, therefore, reject the contention put forward on behalf of the respondent and find that Monorama was the real owner of the disputed property and she acquired that land and constructed a house thereon with her own money and she was not Rasamoy's benamidar regarding that property. We further held that the plaintiff has no interest therein and his claim for partition and for taking accounts will fail.

26. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against be set aside and the suit dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

27. In that view of the matter, no order is called for on the application dated 16-5-1980 filed on behalf of the appellant for acceptance of additional evidence.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

M. M. DUTT AND MONOJ KUMAR
MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Parmeshwar Choudhury and others, Appellants v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

F.M.A.T. No. 2224 of 1981, D/- 8-3-1982.

(A) Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act (I of 1919), Ss. 2 (b) and 70, Second Proviso — Rickshaw pullers granted licences by Municipality under S. 173 of Bengal Municipal Act — Inclusion of area of Municipality within limits of Calcutta by notification under S. 2 (b) — Rickshaw pullers do not acquire right to ply rickshaw in Calcutta City. (Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 173).

Where certain rickshaw pullers claimed a right to ply their rickshaws in Calcutta City on the basis of a notification under S. 2 (b) including the area appertaining to the municipality which granted them licences, their claim would be liable to be rejected when the licences were granted to them under S. 173 of Bengal Municipal Act and not by the officer appointed by the Commissioners of the Municipality to discharge functions of the Registering Officer as laid down in the second proviso to S. 70. Granting of licences under S. 173 and registration of rickshaws under the provisions of the Hackney Carriage Act are completely different things. (Para 10)

(B) Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act (I of 1919), Ss. 70 and 71 (1) — By-Laws framed under S. 71 (1), By-law 13-A — Registering Authority limiting number of rickshaws to be registered for plying in Calcutta to 6000 — Action not open to challenge.

Considering that the streets of Calcutta are overcrowded and jam-packed, and that the slow-moving vehicles are causing the biggest traffic problem in the metropolis, the limit of 6000 put by the Registering authority to the number of rickshaws to be registered under the provisions of the Act must be deemed to be perfectly justified. Ranjit Banerjee and Falguni Sarkar, for Appellants; Tapash Roy, S. K. Panja, for C. S. T. C.; D. P. Mazumdar and Miss Sipra Mazumdar, for the State.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— The appellants, who are 117 Rickshaw pullers, have preferred this appeal against the judgment of T. K. Basu, J. dismissing the application of the appellants under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India.

2. The case of the appellants is that, they have been plying their rickshaws within the limits of the South Dum-Dum Municipality under licences granted to them by the said Municipality under Section 173 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932. The appellants claim that by a notification issued by the State Government under S. 2 (b) of the Calcutta Hackney-Carriage Act, 1919, hereinafter referred to as the Act, the area appertaining to the South Dum-Dum Municipality has been included in Calcutta as defined in S. 4 (2) of the Act, that is to say, inter alia, the area described in Schedule I to the Calcutta Municipal Act. The contention of the appellants is that in view of the said notification under S. 2 (b) of the Act, the appellants are entitled to ply their rickshaws in the city of Calcutta inasmuch as their rickshaws shall be deemed to have been registered under the Act. Alternatively, the contention of the appellants is that, they have the right to get their rickshaws registered under the provisions of the Act. It is the case of the appellants that they attempted to get their rickshaws registered under the Act through "Rickshaw Malik Samity", but the Registering authority under the Act refused such registration. The appellants, therefore, filed a writ petition before this Court, inter alia, praying for a writ in the nature of Man-damus commanding the respondents to issue licences to them under the provisions of the Act. They also challenged the constitutional validity of S. 70A which has been incorporated into the Act by the Calcutta Hackney-carriage (Amendment) Act, 1980. S. 70A, inter alia, provides that if any rickshaw, other than a cycle-rickshaw is used as such without having a licence under the Act, the owner of the such rickshaw shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 100 and in default of payment of fine, to simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months.

3. At the hearing of the writ petition before the learned Judge, the appellants challenged the communication dated June 30, 1981 by the Officer-in-charge, Hackney-carriage Branch, Calcutta, made on behalf of the Registering authority Calcutta informing the Secretary of the Rickshaw Malik Samity, Calcutta and 24-Parganas that no new registration of rickshaws could be considered at present. It does not appear that the appellants had advanced any contention before the learned Judge claiming any right to ply their rickshaws in the city of Calcutta in view of the alleged publication of a notification under S. 2 (b) of the Act, and of the grant of licences to them under the provision of S. 173 of the Calcutta Municipal Act. They, however, challenged the constitutional validity of S. 70A of the Act.

4. The learned Judge has observed that if the Executive Government decides as a matter of policy that they will not entertain any new application for licence in respect of any rickshaw in the city of Calcutta, that policy decision cannot be called in question in a court of law. It has been further observed by the learned Judge that judicial notice can be taken of the fact that the streets of Calcutta are over-crowded and jam-packed, and that slow-moving vehicles are causing the biggest traffic problem in the metropolis. The learned Judge, therefore, rejected the first contention of the appellants, that the refusal by the Registering Authority, Calcutta, to register the rickshaws belonging to the appellants was illegal and not justified. The learned Judge also repelled the contention of the appellants that the provision of S. 70A of the Act was illegal and invalid. In that view of the matter, the learned Judge dismissed the writ petition of the appellants. Hence this appeal.

5. Before we examine the contentions of the appellants, we may refer to some of the provisions of the Act which are relevant for the purpose of this appeal. Under sub-section (3) of S. 1, the Act shall apply in the first instance only to Calcutta. "Calcutta" has been defined in S. 4 (2) of the Act as meaning, inter alia, the area described in Schedule I to the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899; S. 2 of the Act provides as follows:—

"2. The State Government may, by notification,—

(a) extent this Act, or any portion thereof, to any other town or local area; or

(b) exclude from, or include in, Calcutta, or any other town or local area to which this Act is extended under cl. (a), any local area in the vicinity of the same and defined in the notification."

(The two provisos to Section 2 not being relevant for our purpose are omitted.)

Under S. 4 (6), "notification" means a notification published in the Official Gazette.

6. Chapter II of the Act provides for registration of hackney-carriage. Under S. 5, every hackney-carriage in Calcutta shall be annually registered by a Registering Officer, on such date as the Commissioner of Police may direct. S. 6 relates to the duties of the Registering Officer who shall be a Deputy Commissioner of Police specially appointed by the State Government for this purpose. S. 8 which provides for the procedure of registration is as follows:—

"8. (1) Any person who is desirous of registering a hackney-carriage, shall apply to the Registering Officer, stating the class in which he desires that the carriage may be registered, and shall submit the carriage for the inspection of the Registering Officer.

(2) The Registering Officer shall satisfy himself that the municipal tax imposed upon such carriage for the current half-year has been paid, and decide whether the carriage is fit to be registered in the class applied for, and shall register it in that class or refuse to grant the application.

(3) The person in whose name any carriage is registered shall be deemed to be the owner of such carriage for the purpose of this Act."

7. Chapter VII provides for registration of palanquins. Under S. 61 of the Act, the palanquins shall be registered by the Officer appointed for registering hackney-carriages in the manner provided by Chapter II with respect to the registration of hackney-carriages.

8. Chapter VIII, relates to Rickshaws. S. 70 which is the only section under Chapter VIII of the Act provides as follows:—

"70. All the provisions contained in this Act, relating to palanquins, and the hirers, owners and bearers thereof, shall be applicable, mutatis mutandis, and so far as the same may reasonably be applied, to all rickshaws plying for hire in any town or place in which this Act is in force, and to the hirers, owners and bearers of such rickshaws:

Provided that the Registering Officer may cancel, or suspend for such period as he thinks fit, the registration of a rickshaw if in his opinion the type of the rickshaw has been so altered as to render it different from that in respect of which registration was made:

Provided further that in any area included in Calcutta under Clause (b) of S. 2, the functions of the Registering Officer shall be performed by an Officer appointed by the Commissioners of the Municipality comprising such area and the said officer shall forward to the Deputy Commissioner of Police referred to in sub-section (1) of Section 6 all papers relating to registration for record after they have been duly dealt with."

9. The first contention made on behalf of the appellants that as the area comprised in the South Dum-Dum Municipality has been included in Calcutta by a notification published under S. 2 (b) of the Act, and as the rickshaws of the appellants have been registered by the said Municipality, the appellants are entitled to ply their rickshaws in the city of Calcutta by virtue of the provision of S. 70 read with that of S. 61 of the Act. Before the contention can be accepted, two conditions have to be fulfilled, namely, (1) the publication of a notification under S. 2 (b) of the Act and (2) the registration of the rickshaws of the appellants by an officer appointed by the Commissioner of the South Dum-Dum Municipality as provided in the second proviso to S. 70 of the Act. As to the first condition, no copy of the notification has been annexed to the writ petition, nor has the same been produced before us by the appellants. Mr. Tapash Roy, learned Advocate appearing for the State of West Bengal has stated before us that in spite of a thorough search in the Government records, such a nomination could not be traced out. He submits that no such notification was published under Section 2 (b) of the Act. On the other hand, as evidence of the publication of such a notification Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellants has drawn our attention to the following statement occurring at page 249 of Bejoy Prasad Singh Roy's Bengal Municipal Act:—

"Under Section 2 (b) of the Calcutta Hackney-carriage Act, 1919, the following Municipalities have been included within Calcutta, Bally, Baranagar, Cossipore-Chitpore, Garden Reach, Howrah, Kamarhati, Manicktolla, South Dum-Dum and Tollygunge. These Municipalities under Section 82 (2) of the Hackney-carriage Act, 1919 are entitled to share of the fees and fines realised in Calcutta, in such a proportion as the Local Government may determine."

10. On the strength of the said statement, it is submitted by Mr. Banerjee that we should proceed on the basis that such a notification was published. We are afraid, we cannot do that as submitted by the learned Advocate. It may be that such a notification was published as has been stated by the learned author of the Bengal Municipal Act, but unless the notification is produced before us, it is difficult for us to take it for granted that the notification was published. The absence of the notification is sufficient to repel the contention of the appellants. But, apart from that, there is another difficulty for the appellants. Even if we assume the existence of a notification S. 2 (b) of the Act, the appellants have to fulfil the second condition, namely, their rickshaws have been registered by the officer appointed by the Commissioners of the Municipality to discharge functions of the Registering Officer as laid down in the second proviso to S. 70 of the Act. There is no material on record to show that any such officer has been appointed by the South Dum-Dum Municipality. It is not also the case of the appellants that their rickshaws have been registered by such officer of the Municipality under the provisions of the Act. On the contrary, the case of the appellants is that licences have been granted to them by the South Dum-Dum Municipality under the provision of S. 173 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932. Granting of licences under S. 173 and registration of rickshaws under the provisions of the Act are completely different things. On the strength of the licences granted to the appellants under S. 173 of the Bengal Municipal Act enabling them to ply rickshaws within the limits of the Municipality, the appellants, in our view are not entitled to claim that they have acquired any right to ply rickshaws in the city of Calcutta. The second proviso to S. 70 of the Act is not applicable to the appellants whose rickshaws have not been registered by any officer appointed by the Commissioners of the South Dum-Dum Municipality to discharge the functions of a Registering Officer under the Act. The above contention of the appellants is, therefore, without any basis and is registered.

11. Next we may consider the contention of the appellants that in any event they have the right to get their rickshaws registered under the provisions of the Act. It has been urged on behalf of the appellants that the Officer-in-charge, Hackney-carriage Branch, Calcutta, was not justified in refusing to register the rickshaws of the appellants as claimed on their behalf by the Secretary of the Rickshaw Malik Samity, Calcutta and 24-Parganas. It is apparent from sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Act, which has been set out above that the Registering Officer has the discretion either to register or refuse the registration of any hackney-carriage. The exercise of such discretion by the Registering Officer cannot normally be challenged unless it is tainted with arbitrariness, bias and mala fide.

12. Under Section 71 (1) of the Act, the State Government has been empowered to make by-laws generally for carrying out the provisions and intentions of the Act; and in particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power they may make by-laws with regard to certain matters as specified in clauses (a) to (n) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 71. It is unfortunate that a copy of the by-laws framed by the State Government has not been placed before us by either party. Instead, we have been handed over a decision of D. N. Sinha J. (as His Lordship then was) in Satya Ranjan Roy v. Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, AIR 1955 Cal 417. In that case, Sinha J. has observed as follows (at page 418):—

"It is by-law No. 13A which grants power to the Registering authority to limit the number of licences if there happens to be too large a number of such vehicles on the road. The registering authority at present finds that 6000 rickshaws (including 168 in Tollygunj) now plying on the road is about the saturation point, and it is unsafe to grant any more licences."

13. Thus it appears from the said observation that the Registering authority has been conferred with the power to limit the number of licences, and such limit to the number of rickshaws has been fixed as 6000 beyond which the Registering authority is unable to register any more rickshaws. It is also the case of the appellants that 6000 rickshaws are plying in Calcutta which will be evident from the letter dated June 4, 1981 of the Secretary of Rickshaw Malik Samity, Calcutta and 24-Parganas, addressed to the Registering authority, Hackney-carriage Branch, Calcutta Police (Annexure B) to the writ petition, although in that letter it has been submitted that six thousand licenced rickshaws are not sufficient for the thickly populated city of Calcutta. Be that as it may, as the Registering authority by virtue of his power under By-law 13A has limited the registration of the number of rickshaws under the Act to 6000, the Registering authority was perfectly justified in refusing to grant registration of the rickshaws belonging to the appellants. In our view, the limit put by the Registering authority to the number of rickshaws to be registered under the provisions of the Act is perfectly justified, for, as judicially noticed by the learned Judge, the streets of Calcutta are overcrowded and jam-packed, and that the slow-moving vehicles are causing the biggest traffic problem in the metropolis. Therefore, the appellants have no right to claim registration of their rickshaws for the purpose of plying them in the city of Calcutta. The contention of the appellants in this regard fails, and it is overruled.

14. No argument has been advanced before us on behalf of the appellants challenging the constitutional validity of the provision of Section 70A incorporated into the Act by the said Amendment Act of 1980, which has been held to be valid by the learned Judge.

15. For the reasons aforesaid and, in view of the facts and circumstances of the case, we are of the view that there is no merit in the appeal. The appeal is, accordingly, dismissed. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

MONOJ KUMAR MUKHERJEE, J.—
I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 350DIPAK KUMAR SEN, J.

Periwal Packing Industries Pvt. Ltd.,
Petitioner v. The Fertilizer and Chemicals Travancore Ltd., Respondent.

Suit No. 998 of 1980, D/- 16-3-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 10 — Forum — Choice of forum — Effect.

Where the only dispute between the parties was whether the manufacturer undertaking supply of gunny bags to a purchaser in Kerala was entitled to the benefit of force majeure clause in the agreement for supply, on account of a strike in a particular period in his factory at Calcutta and the clause regarding forum did not state that only the Courts of law in Kerala would have exclusive jurisdiction or that no other court will have jurisdiction to entertain such litigation or that the parties would not be entitled to resort to any other court, it could not be said that Calcutta High Court would not have jurisdiction to entertain the suit between the parties.

ORDER:— Periwal Packing Industries Pvt. Ltd., the plaintiff, instituted this suit on or about the 25th November 1980 against the Fertiliser And Chemicals Travancore Ltd., the defendant, claiming inter alia a decree for Rs. 75,237.37, alternatively, an enquiry into the damages and a decree on the amount ascertained costs and other reliefs.

2. The plaintiff's case is that an agreement was entered into by and between the plaintiff and the defendant on or about the 15th July 1977 whereunder the plaintiff agreed to sell jute bags of specified quality and quantity at agreed rates to the defendant under inter alia the following terms and conditions recorded in the correspondence had between the parties and also in a purchase order issued by the defendant to the plaintiff:

(a) 90% of the value of the goods supplied would be paid through the State Bank of India and the balance 10% would be paid within 30 days after the receipt of the goods at site.

(b) In case the plaintiff defaulted in making delivery failed to explain such default and the defendant did not accept the extension of the delivery period, the defendant would be entitled to deduct from the bills of the plaintiff an amount subject to a maximum of 7½% of the total value of the order, provided the delay in delivering was not due to any force majeure.

(c) The parties would not be considered to be in default in the performance of their obligations under the contract if the same was prevented or delayed by reason, inter alia, of strikes.

(d) Any litigation arising on account of the said contract would be taken up in a court of law in Kerala.

3. It is not in dispute that the plaintiff has delivered the goods which have been duly accepted by the defendant and that 90% of the payment of the price thereof has been made. It is also not in dispute that the entire supply was not made within the stipulated period and by reason of the delayed delivery the defendant has deducted from the bills of the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 50,326/- by way of penalty and/or liquidated damages.

4. The plaintiff alleges that on account of labour trouble in its factory between April and Nov. 1977, a strike in the plaintiff's factory from December 1977 followed by a clouser of the factory the plaintiff could not supply the goods to the defendant within the time stipulated. The plaintiff contends that under the force majeure clause in the contract the plaintiff is entitled to an extension of time for delivery and the defendant is not entitled to deduct any amount from the plaintiff's bill on account of delay. It is also alleged that the defendant promised to release payment of the amount deducted, on the plaintiff producing a certificate from the office of the Labour Commissioner, West Bengal certifying that the factory of the plaintiff remained closed during the period. Such certificate it is alleged was duly produced by the plaintiff in spite whereof the defendant wrongfully retained the amount deducted.

5. The present application is by the defendant in this suit on a notice dated the 21st August, 1981. The defendant prays for the following orders:

(a) Leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent be revoked;

(b) The plaint be taken off the file and/or rejected;

6. The defendant contends that in view of the terms of the written agreement only the courts in Kerala have jurisdiction and this Court has no jurisdiction to try this suit. The defendant alleges that the goods were delivered in Kerala after notification of documents submitted by the plaintiff through the State Bank at Kerala and as such a substantial part of the plaintiff's cause arose in Kerala. It is alleged further that the defendant has no office in Calcutta all its documents and its witness are in Kerala. In view of the agreed forum and in view of the balance of convenience it is contended that an order should be made in favour of the defendant.

7. One Mohanlal Periwal, a director of the plaintiff has affirmed an affidavit, which has been filed in opposition to this application.

8. It is, inter alia, alleged in this affidavit that the defendant has applied for extension of time to file its written statement in this suit and thus has taken steps in the suit. The clause in the agreement conferring jurisdiction to the Kerala Court it is contended is not a term of the contracts.

9. In the facts and circumstances it appears that the main dispute in the suit will be whether the plaintiff's factory was rendered unproductive on account of a strike at the relevant period and whether on account of the aforesaid the plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of force majeure clause. The evidence on the said issue will necessarily be at Calcutta and not at Kerala. There is no other dispute between the parties.

10. The clause in the agreement provides that litigation under the contract would be taken up in a Court at Kerala. The clause does not indicate that only the Courts of law in Kerala would have exclusive jurisdiction or that no other court will have jurisdiction to entertain such litigation or that the parties would not be entitled to resort to any other court.

11. For the reasons above the defendant is not entitled to succeed in this application.

12. Learned counsel for the plaintiff stated on instructions that the plaintiff has no objection to secure a part of the costs of the defendant in this suit which might be incurred and has suggested that Rs. 5,000 may be kept in deposit with the Advocate on record of the plaintiff to be held free from lien and subject to further orders in the suit. Let the amount be deposited within a fortnight from date.

13. Costs costs in the cause.

14. All parties to act on a signed copy of the minutes of this order on the usual undertaking.

15. On the oral application made on behalf of the defendant the suit will not appear in the undefended list for a fortnight from date.

Order accordingly.

B. C. RAY, J.

Dr. Miss Ruby Sett, Petitioner v. University of Calcutta and others, Respondents.

C. O. 9364 (W) of 1981, D/- 15-3-1982.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 15, 226 — Admission to M. D. course by competitive examination — Assessment of marks — High Court cannot go into the merits of answer scripts — Assessment of marks if done arbitrarily or in utter violation of Rules — High Court will interfere.

It is well settled that to assess marks on the answer scripts is exclusively the affair of the examiners appointed by the University and the High Court will not intrude upon as it will not be just and proper for the High Court to say on merits whether the answer scripts were properly assessed or not. But if the assessment of the answer scripts and the giving of marks on such assessment is done arbitrarily, in utter violation of the rules, then certainly High Court will interfere. (Para 4)

In the instant case, the High Court refused to enter into the merits of the case, in view of the fact that the classes of M. D. course had already commenced and almost half of the session was over. (Para 4)

(B) Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 15 — Admission to M. D. Course by competitive examination — Duty of University.

While selecting candidates for highest course of study (M. D. in the instant case) the only idea before the University should be to choose the best students in consideration of their academic achievements not being swayed away by any other influence, consideration and view. This aspect should always be kept in mind and should always weigh with the examiners while assessing the merits of the answers given by the candidates in the written test. (Para 4)

S. Chatterjee R. K. Roy and Alak Banerjee, for Petitioner; N. K. Roy and Smt. S. Parmar, for the University.

ORDER :— The petitioner who appeared in the admission test of M. D. Course in General Medicine under the University of Calcutta which was held on 14-7-81 at the Institute of Post Graduate Medical Education and Research has come up with this application with this grievance that though out of 75 questions she answered 74 questions correctly and though her academic career was all along brilliant and she was entitled to get the 20 marks set apart for good academic career was not properly considered, rather discriminated upon and as such her name was not included in the list of successful candidates for being admitted in the said M. D. Course in Medicine. It has also been stated in this petition that the examiners did not properly value and/or assess the answer scripts of the petitioner vis-a-vis the answer scripts submitted by the other examinees and as a result the petitioner was not selected in the said admission test and her name was not enlisted as one of the successful candidates in order to get admission in the said M. D. Course in Medicine.

2. Mr. Roy, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Calcutta University, has filed an affidavit in opposition denying those allegations and stating, inter alia, that in accordance with the rules the answer papers of all the examinees including the petitioner were duly assessed by the examiners and there has been no discrimination in the matter of assessment of the answer papers. It has been submitted that the marks were given on these answers after proper assessment of the same. It has also been submitted by Mr. Roy that in accordance with the rules for the answers which were not correct half marks have been deducted against each of the incorrect answers in accordance with the rules. Referring to the case of the petitioner Mr. Roy submitted that she secured 50 marks for having answered correctly 50 questions and for giving incorrect answers 12 marks were deducted in respect of 24 such incorrect answers. As such she secured only 38 marks and 4 marks were given i.e. 3+1 on assessment of her academic career. In total the petitioner secured only 42 marks and as such she could not secure the qualifying marks for getting her name enlisted in the list of successful candidates.

3. Mr. Chatterjee, however, referring to Annexure A to the affidavit in opposition sworn on behalf of the University submitted in the first place that if the answer scripts of the examinees particularly two of the successful examinees i.e. Shri Apurba Kumar Mukherjee and Shri Roxy Senior whose names appeared in the list in order of merits as 2 and 1 respectively are produced before this Court it would be apparent from the assessment made that the answers that have been given by these examinees though do not tally with the model answers as referred to in Annexure B to the affidavit in opposition were taken into consideration and marks were given on such answers. It has been next commented upon by Mr. Chatterjee that the academic careers of Shri Roxy Senior and Shri Apurba Kumar Mukherjee are not so brilliant as that of the petitioner, still then about 14 marks have been awarded on this count whereas the petitioner has been given only 4 marks and on this count also the marks were not awarded to the petitioner in consideration of her academic career.

4. The whole question that comes up for consideration in this writ application is whether there has been a fair assessment of marks in accordance with the provisions of the rules laid down in this respect. It is well settled that to assess marks on the answer scripts is exclusively the affair of the examiners appointed by the University and this Court will not intrude upon or it will not be just and proper for this Court to say on merits whether the answer scripts were properly assessed or not. But one thing still remains to be considered by this Court. If the rules for assessment of the answer scripts and the giving of marks on such assessment are done arbitrarily, in utter violation of the rules and also in a manner which smacks of discrimination on the face of it then certainly this Equity Court will interfere and will make appropriate orders so that such arbitrary and discriminatory acts and also acts in contravention of the rules and norms that have been set out by the University by setting them aside and/or by cancelling them and by directing the University by the issue of a mandate to exercise its discretion in accordance with the extant rules and procedure. The allegations that have been made in this case by Mr. Chatterjee that there has not been a proper observance of the rules and procedure for assessment of marks by the University, if correct, certainly this Court will interfere. But in view of the fact that the classes of M. D. Course in Medicine have already commenced since September, 1981, and almost half of the session 1981-82 is over, considering this aspect of the matter it will not be fit and proper to enter into the merits and if it is found otherwise to interfere in this matter at this stage. But it appears curious to this Court that while ascertaining the merit test apart from the assessment of the answer scripts and giving marks thereon it is really something extraordinary that some candidates have been given marks by several lots in 2 or 3 lots on the ground of the brilliant academic careers whereas others were not given the same. There is no indication how the authorities considered the merits and why one candidate was given marks on assessment of his academic brilliance several times by several lots, not in one lot, this really creates some suspicion in the mind of the Court. It is really expected that those who aspire to sit for the admission test for the highest course in medicine are not students of ordinary intelligence but are students of some greater merit and brilliance so far as their academic careers are concerned. Therefore, in deciding such cases the University should proceed being fully conscious and aware of its duties and responsibilities in this regard and should see that they should not proceed in such a fashion that it will create disappointment or it will unnecessarily debar a brilliant student from getting admission in this highest course. It will be appropos to say in this connection that while selecting candidates for this highest course of study the only idea before the University should be to choose the best students in consideration of their academic achievements not being swayed away by any other influence, considerations and bias. This aspect should always be kept in mind and should always weigh with the examiners while assessing the merits as expressed in the answers given by the students in the written test.

5. With these observations, as I have said already that the session has already started and almost half of the session is already over, I am not inclined at this stage to interfere in this matter. However, if this petitioner appears in the next test for getting herself admitted in the M. D. Course in Medicine or in any other discipline the authorities concerned will consider her answer scripts free from any bias and any prejudice and will consider impartially the merits of the answers to be given by this student and will also weigh the academic brilliance of this petitioner while assessing marks on her academic career.

6. The application is thus disposed of.

(A) Contract Act (9 of 1872), Ss. 17 and 16 — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104 — No allegation in plaint that Karta of family got lease deed executed by mother of minor plaintiff by practising fraud or collusion — Certificate that document was read over and explained to her — Necessity.

Plaintiffs did not allege in the plaint that the defendant who was Karta of the joint family got lease deed executed by minor plaintiff's mother by practising fraud or collusion. She appeared before court and gave evidence. She also signed the document on her behalf and on behalf of her minor son. As she is not a parda-nasin or illiterate woman, it is not necessary for the defendant to prove that the contents of the document were read over and explained to her. Omission of giving certificate that the document was read over and explained to her is not material.

Rathindra Prasanna Sanyal and Amresh Chandra Bhattacharyya, for Appellant; Ram Mohan Bhattacharjee, Anilnanda Mukherjee and Basanta Kumar Datta, for Respondents.

B. N. MAITRA, J.— The plaintiffs allege that the disputed property originally belonged to one Abdul Sobhan Khan and after his death that property was acquired by many persons. Gopal Chandra Saha was the father of defendant No. 1, Mahabir, and grandfather of plaintiff No. 1. In 1928, Gopal expired leaving Mahabir, Haralal (son) and one Milan Bala, defendant No. 2, who is the widow of his predeceased son, Krishnalal Saha. Haralal died in 1354 B.S. leaving his widow and son (plaintiff No. 1), Haripada Saha, Gopal Chandra was the owner of premises No. 55, Subal Das Road, 35, Nawabgunj Road, 50/1, Subal Das Road and 47, Nawabgunj Das Road within the Dacca Municipality. Since Milan Bala was not an heir of Gopal Chandra, he made provision for her maintenance by making a gift of 2 rooms of his residential house for her and also providing for a sum of Rs. 6 per month for her maintenance. After partition of Bengal the plaintiffs, defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 migrated to West Bengal. Defendant No. 1 was the Karta of the Hindu joint family. An arrangement was made with the heirs of Abdul Sowan Khan that an exchange would be made. The valuation of the Dacca property was assessed at Rs. 17,000 and of the Dum Dum property in Calcutta at Rs. 22,000. Powers of Attorney were executed. The plaintiffs and defendant No. 1 executed a power of Attorney in favour of the Muslim co-owners. The latter also executed a power of Attorney in favour of defendant No. 1 because the plaintiff No. 1 was a minor and plaintiff No. 2 an illiterate woman. In September, 1950, the parties delivered possession of the respective properties in terms of the power of Attorney. Then defendant No. 1 realised the rents of the disputed property on his behalf and on behalf of the plaintiffs. Then on the 26th Nov. 1956, a document of lease was executed regarding the disputed property at 23/1/B, Dum Dum Road, Calcutta. Since the plaintiff No. 1 was then a minor and his mother an illiterate pardanasin woman, they had to depend entirely on Mahabir in the matter of execution of the lease.

The said plaintiff and defendant No. 1 had moiety share in the Dacca property and consequently they acquired 1/2 share each in the Calcutta property on the footing of the document of such lease. It appears that taking advantage of the minority of the plaintiff No. 1 and illiteracy of the plaintiff No. 2, Haripada committed fraud and it was recited in the Deed of Lease that the plaintiffs had only 1/3rd share and Mahabir had 2/3rd share therein and sum of Rs. 5000 had been paid by him from his own fund. In fact, Mahabir had no much money. That sum was paid by him from the profits of the joint property. The plaintiffs experienced difficulty and they asked for partition. But Mahabir did not comply with the demand. Hence the suit for partition on the allegation that the plaintiffs had 8 annas share in the property in question.

2. Defendant No. 2 Milan Bala filed a written statement supporting the plaintiff's assertions.

3. Defendant No. 1 filed a written statement denying the plaintiffs' allegations. His case is that after the death of Gopal Chandra, Haralal sold his undivided 1/2 share in the premises No. 50, Subal Das Road to a stranger. Haralal also mortgaged premises No. 55, Subal Das Road for Rs. 1000. Defendant No. 1 paid that debt and obtained the deed of mortgage from the mortgagee. Hence Haralal had the liability to pay this dues. After that arrangement for exchange was made, defendant No. 1 spent more than Rupees 4000 from his personal fund. He also paid Rs. 5000 in cash to the Muslim co-owners when the aforesaid deed of lease was finally executed.

4. The learned Subordinate Judge believed the plaintiffs' version and passed a decree in a preliminary form giving a direction for necessary accounts. This appeal is by the defendant No. 1.

5. It has been contended on behalf of the appellants that the deed of lease, Ext. 2, is binding on the plaintiffs and also on the appellant defendant No. 1. Plaintiff No. 2, mother of plaintiff No. 1, is not an illiterate or pardanasin woman. The permanent deed of lease, Ext. 2, was executed by her with full knowledge of its purport and contents. Both the documents were prepared by a lawyer and the lease in question was read over to plaintiff No. 2. Hence the plaintiffs cannot get any decree for 8 annas share in the property. Their share is 1/3rd and hence the decree should be modified accordingly. Plaintiff No. 1 clearly accepted the document of lease, Ext. 2, and admitted therein that the plaintiffs had only 1/3rd share and for the remaining 2/3rds share of the property belonged to him.

6. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent has referred to the well-known case of Hannuman Persuad in (1856) 6 MIA 393. It has been stated there that the guardian can alienate the minor's share or deal with his interest only for the benefit of the estate or legal necessity. There is no such legal necessity or any element of benefit of the minor plaintiff No. 1 when the deed of lease was executed. Reference has also been made to the cases of Chinta Desya v. Bhalku Das in (1930) 51 Cal LJ 465 : (AIR 1930 Cal 591), Sm. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha in AIR 1955 Cal 17 and A. E. G. Carapiet v. A. Y. Derderian in AIR 1961 Cal 359 and Mohini Mohan v. Southern Bank Ltd., reported in (1954) 94 Cal LJ 39. It has been urged that when a person is dealing with a pardanasin illiterate woman, it is for him to show that the contents of the deed were read over and explained to her. It has also been stated that the privilege extended to a pardanasin lady will apply to an illiterate woman, though not pardanasin. Moreover there is no certificate in Ext. 2 that the documents were read over and explained. The omission of giving a certificate that the document was read over and explained to her cannot be lightly treated. If the document is not read over and explained to the plaintiff, defendant No. 1 cannot claim moiety share in the property due to such defects. Defendant No. 1 was the Karta at the relevant time, He had no personal fund when the disputed lease, Ext. 2, was executed.

7. The first question arises, whether the disputed lease, Ext. 2, is binding on the parties. It may be pointed out that there is no averment that the document of lease is not binding on the plaintiffs. The Muslim co-sharers of the Dacca properties have not been made parties to the suit. Plaintiffs did not make appropriate prayer that such document of lease was obtained by practising fraud or collusion.

8. It appears that plaintiff No. 2 is not a pardanasin woman because she appeared before the learned Subordinate Judge and gave evidence. She also signed the document of lease on her behalf and also on behalf of her son and was not an illiterate woman. So the aforesaid cases of Chinta Dasya v. Bhalku Das (AIR 1930 Cal 591) (supra), Sm. Sonia Parshini v. Sheikh Moula Baksha (AIR 1955 Cal 17)

(supra), A. E. G. Carapiet v. A. Y. Derderian (AIR 1961 Cal 359) (supra) and Mohini Mohan v. Southern Bank Ltd. (1954-94 Cal LJ 39) (supra) have no application to the facts of this case. The reason is simple because the plaintiff is not a pardanasin or illiterate woman. This discussion is sufficient for the disposal of the appeal because there is no appropriate prayer in the plaint in this respect.

9. Then about the Dacca properties. It has been pointed out on behalf of the appellant that Haralal executed a mortgage for Rs. 1000 regarding one of the Dacca properties and defendant No. 1 satisfied the dues of the mortgage. According to the provisions of S. 17 (1) (c) of the Indian Registration Act, registration is necessary to extinguish a mortgage for Rs. 1000. But there is an exception, which has been engrafted in cl. (xi) of sub-sec. (2). The endorsement, Ext. A, has been proved in this case to show that the dues of the mortgage were paid. This is admissible in evidence and no registration thereof is necessary in view of cl. (xi) of S. 17 (2) of the Indian Registration Act and cl. (c) of sub-sec. (1) thereof does not apply as the mortgage dues were not extinguished by that endorsement, Ext. A. Moreover, the statement coming from the defendant No. 1 was that the mortgage dues payable by Haralal would be satisfied by defendant No. 1.

10. Then about the next stage of the case. The contract for exchange was arrived at in 1950, but document of lease was executed on 26th November, 1956, vide Ext. 2. Hence title will accrue only on the execution of the document of lease, though in fact they were documents of exchange within the meaning of provision of Section 118 of the Transfer of Property Act. A permanent lease was executed and it appears from the document of lease that the plaintiffs had 1/3rd share and Mahabir was the owner of the remaining 2/3rds share of the property.

11. It is now to be seen whether such admission made by the plaintiff No. 2 has any probative value in the eye of law. Law is that an admission is a substantive piece of evidence. This was stated by the Supreme Court in the case of Bharat Singh v. Mst. Bhagirathi reported in AIR 1966 SC 405 at page 410. It has been stated in that case that an admission is substantive evidence even though the parties are not confronted with such statement, but what weight should be attached to it is a different matter. Of course there is a dissenting note in the judgment of Sitaram v. Ram Chandra reported in AIR 1977 SC 1712. That case is distinguishable because in that case a certified copy of a statement of the witness was sought to be used as his admission. In that view of the matter it has been stated in that case that an admission cannot be admitted in evidence unless the previous statements made be first put to him and liberty is given to him to explain the same. It may be pointed out that in that case of Sitaran, the Supreme Court decisions reported in AIR 1977 SC 409 and in AIR 1974 SC 117 at page 119 were not considered. It has been clearly stated in those cases that when there is an admission, it is not necessary to confront the person concerned with his previous statement. This admission has not been proved to be erroneous. In that view of the matter it must be held that the document of lease, Ext. 2, is a genuine document.

12. The last point is what are the shares of the parties regarding the disputed premises. It has been contended on behalf of the respondent that Milan Bala's father-in-law, Gopal Chandra, made provision for her residence in Dacca town by making gift of two rooms to her. This arrangement was upheld by the parties by giving her two rooms, one by the plaintiffs and another by defendant No. 1. The provision is that after her death these rooms would be returned to the donors respectively.

13. This is common ground that there are 10 rooms in the house. Defendant No. 1 acquired six rooms and plaintiffs three rooms and there was another small room. So there is no difficulty in this respect.

14. P.W. 1 Subhasini Saha, plaintiff No. 2, has stated in her evidence that she was present when their deed of lease was executed. P.W. 3, Santosh, has stated that he was present when the documents were executed. The lawyer Rama Ranjan Chakraborty drafted both the documents. He knows that Rs. 5000 was paid in excess by Mahabir for which he got more share. At once a question was put to him why he did not raise any objection. He stated in evidence that that was their family matter and he did not object to the excess share of Mahabir.

15. P.W. 2, Milan Bala, defendant No. 2, stated that Rs. 5000 was paid. The defence is that both the deeds were read over and explained by the lawyer Ranjan Chakraborty. This version has been corroborated by D.W. 2, Biswanath Paul, who says that the parties signed in the documents in their presence.

16. P.W. 1, Suhasini, has stated in her cross-examination that after the execution of the Deed of Lease, Mahabir had been paying 2/3rds share and plaintiffs 1/3rd share towards cess and taxes. They did not raise any objection to the same for the last 10 years. This conclusively shows that the version given by the defendant No. 1 is true and the terms of Ext. 2, Deed of Lease, were accepted by the plaintiffs and they were acted upon. So the question of fraud is ruled out. Had there been any fraud, plaintiff No. 2 would not have accepted possession of only the four rooms and paid Municipal taxes to the extent of 1/3rd share. The defendant No. 2 has stated that plaintiffs had 1/3rd share. Hence the submissions made on behalf of the respondents cannot be accepted. The decree must, therefore, be modified.

17. The appeal is allowed. It is hereby declared that the plaintiffs and the defendant No. 1 have 1/3rd share and 2/3rds share respectively in the disputed property subject to the right of residence of defendant No. 2 with respect to two rooms allotted to her, as well as her right to get Rs. 6 per mensem for her maintenance out of the income of the property for her life. The judgment and decree appealed against be modified accordingly.

18. There will be no order as to costs.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

Patrick Herbert Van-Hek, Petitioner v.
Mrs. More Ilma Van-Hek, Respondent.

Divorce Suit No. 5 of 1978, D/- 23-12-1981.

Divorce Act (4 of 1869), Secs. 10, 17 — Reference for acceptance of decree of dissolution passed on ground of desertion and adultery — Evidence in support of adultery — Sufficiency — Charge of adultery failing — Decree cannot be sustained on ground of desertion alone.

Where the case in the application for dissolution on ground of adultery was that the respondent wife had been on very friendly and intimate terms with another person, a seaman, from twelve years before the institution of the suit and the evidence read as if that the respondent deserted the matrimonial home twelve years before filing of suit with the sole object of meeting the said seaman as often as she liked, failure of the petitioner husband not to make the said person co-respondent in the suit contrary to the requirement of law on the ground that he could not collect the name and whereabouts of the person in question, would be unacceptable. Further, recommendation for acceptance by the District Judge, of the decree of dissolution on the ground of desertion and adultery would be unacceptable when the case of the husband was that the respondent had been leading an adulterous life by mixing with the seaman in such manner that his prestige was lowered in the estimation of others and the evidence of the petitioner was that 12 years after the desertion he thought of paying a surprise visit and found out the respondent and the seaman in a compromising position and no person came forward to corroborate the story of the petitioner the evidence of the petitioner would not be sufficient to prove the charge of adultery. Furthermore, in such a case, when the allegation of adultery failed the suit for dissolution of marriage under S. 10 must necessarily fail for desertion simpliciter could not be a ground of dissolution under S. 10. (Paras 6, 7)

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— This is a reference under S. 17 of the Divorce Act made by the learned Additional District Judge, 7th Court, Alipore after having passed a decree of divorce in Divorce Suit No. 5 of 1978 of his Court. The petitioner instituted the suit in 1977 on an allegation that the petitioner and the respondent both of whom are Indian citizens professing the Christian faith were married in May, 1944. Since after the marriage they were living peacefully and four children were born to them. The children have attained majority and are now living abroad. Sometime in 1965 the respondent wife picked up acquaintance and intimacy with a seaman and became very friendly with him. She started mixing with the said seaman freely and in such a manner that the petitioner felt humiliated and lowered in the estimation of others. His attempts to correct and mend the wife turned futile. On the 25th Dec. 1965 the respondent left the matrimonial home and went away to her mother's place at No. 1 Motisil Street, Calcutta. She has been residing there ever since and has been leading an adulterous life with the said seaman. It is said that the name and whereabouts of the seaman with whom the respondent is living is not known to the petitioner as the seaman lives away from India in connection with his employment and seldom comes back to India. On these allegations, the petitioner prayed for a decree of divorce under S. 10 of the Divorce Act.

2. The respondent, it appears had entered appearance and filed a written statement denying the allegations but did not eventually contest the claim at the time of hearing. On behalf of the petitioner husband none other than the petitioner has been examined as a witness. He says that he was married with the respondent in 1944; that four children were born unto them; that the respondent was having an affair with a seaman and that she left the matrimonial home in Dec. 1965 to live with her mother at No. 1 Motisil Street, Calcutta, so that she can meet the said seaman as often as she likes. It is also his evidence that his attempts to bring her back failed and he could not make the seaman a party respondent as he could not ascertain his name and whereabouts. He paid a surprise visit on 1-1-1978 when he says he found his wife and the said seaman in a compromising position.

3. On the evidence thus adduced the learned Additional District Judge felt satisfied that the allegations of desertion as far as back in 1965 has been proved and it has further been proved that the respondent is living in adultery with a seaman.

4. The decree so made is now before us upon a reference under S. 17 of the Divorce Act. Notices having been issued from this Court after receipt of the reference, an Advocate appeared for the petitioner although none appears today at the time of hearing. The respondent was duly served.

5. Having considered the case made out in the application for divorce and the evidence on record we are unable to sustain and affirm the decree of dissolution of marriage as passed by the learned Additional District Judge. The case in the application for dissolution is that the respondent has been in very friendly and intimate terms with a particular seaman from the year 1965. The suit was instituted in 1977 i.e. to say nearly 12 years thereafter. The law requires that in the case of a suit for dissolution of marriage by the petitioner husband on the ground of adultery, it is necessary to make the adulterer a co-respondent. In order to evade making the said person a co-respondent it is said in paragraph 22 of the petition that the name and whereabouts of the said seaman is not known to the petitioner as he lives away from India and seldom comes back. The evidence however, suggests otherwise. It reads as if that the respondent deserted the matrimonial home with the sole object of meeting the said seaman as often as she likes. The suggestion obviously, is that they meet too often and too frequently. If that be so, it is difficult to believe that the petitioner husband could not collect the name and whereabouts of the seaman during the period of 12 years that passed between when he first came to know of the relationship between them and the date of institution of the suit. Therefore, we are not satisfied as to the explanation for not making the seaman a co-respondent in this case.

6. This apart the evidence as it is, appears to us to be insufficient to prove the allegations of adultery. The case is that the respondent has been leading an adulterous life by mixing with a seaman in such manner that his prestige was lowered in the estimation of others. But curiously, not a single other person came forward to corroborate the story of the petitioner. His evidence that merely 12 years after the desertion he thought of paying a surprise visit and found out the respondent and the seaman in a compromising position appears to us unbelievable. We are unable to accept the evidence as sufficient to prove the charge of adultery.

7. If that allegation fails the suit for dissolution of marriage under S. 10 of the Divorce Act must necessarily fail for desertion simpliciter cannot be a ground of dissolution under S. 10 of the Divorce Act. In that view of the matter, we are unable to affirm the decree passed by the Additional District Judge. The decree as passed is set aside and the suit is dismissed. Reference is thus disposed of. There will be no order for costs.

ANIL KUMAR SEN, J.:— I agree.

SUDHINDRA MOHAN GUHA, J.:— I agree.

ORDER :— Narendra Nath Pal Choudhury and Biswendra Nath Pal Choudhuri, the plaintiffs, filed this suit against G. L. Malhotra, Bijanendra Nath Pal Choudhuri and Kumar Shankar Pal Choudhuri, the defendants, claiming, inter alia, a decree against the defendant No. 1 for vacant possession of the portion of premises No. 79A, Acharya Jagadish Chandra Bose Road, Calcutta; decree for Rupees 5,000/- as damages against the defendant No. 1; alternatively an enquiry into damages and decree for the amount as may be found due upon such enquiry; a further decree for Rs. 72,549.22 p. against the defendant No. 1 and alternatively decree against the defendant No. 1 for such other sum as may be found fit and proper; decree for mesne profits and future profits at the rate of Rs. 50/- per day on and from the 1st Feb. 1980 till delivery of possession; alternatively, an enquiry into mesne profits and a decree for the sum as may be found due upon such enquiry and other reliefs.

2. The plaintiffs' case is that the said portion of the said premises was demised under a lease in favour of the defendant No. 1 by a registered deed dated the 31st March, 1960 for a period of 21 years on and from April 1960 at an agreed rent of Rs. 350/- per month. The plaintiff alleges further that the defendant No. 1 committed breaches of the covenants and conditions in the said lease, inter alia, as follows :

BZ/CZ/A754/82/VSS/SNY.—H

(a) The defendant No. 1 defaulted in payment of the monthly rent since March 1969. The said default has continued.

(b) The defendant No. 1 has used or permitted the said premises to be used for purposes other than those envisaged in the lease and also has wrongfully installed machinery therein and is carrying on manufacturing activities in the premises.

(c) The defendant No. 1 stored injurious inflammable and combustible materials in the said premises.

(d) The aforesaid wrongful acts of the defendant No. 1 have caused damage to the said premises and constitute a nuisance.

(e) The defendant No. 1 has made structural alterations to the premises by constructing a mezzanine floor without the approval of the plaintiff.

3. By the present application made on a summons dated the 27th July, 1981 the plaintiff seeks to amend the plaint by, incorporating therein the following:—

The term of 21 years under the said lease has expired on the 31st March 1981 by efflux of time and that the defendant No. 1 has failed to deliver up possession of the demised premises on the 1st Apr. 1981 in spite of demands.

4. The defendant No. 1 has affirmed an affidavit on the 28th Aug. 1981 which has been filed in opposition to this application. It is, inter alia, alleged in this affidavit that the suit having been filed on the 28th Aug. 1980, the plaintiff is not entitled to effect the amendment as applied and introduce a cause of action which arose on the 1st April 1981. If the amendment is allowed, the cause of action introduced by the amendment would relate back to the date of institution of the suit.

5. Learned counsel for the plaintiff submitted at the hearing that the amendment sought to be incorporated is based on subsequent facts material to this suit and the Court should take notice of the same to do justice to the parties and to shorten the proceedings. Contentions to the contrary were made on behalf of the defendant No. 1.

6. Several decisions were cited at the bar in support of their respective contentions which are as follows :

(a) Rajeshwar Dayal v. Padam Kumar Kothari reported in AIR 1970 Raj 77. In this case, a suit for eviction of a tenant was filed on the 24th Jan. 1966 on the ground of personal necessity and an application was made to amend the plaint on the ground of alleged default in payment of rent on 3rd Apr. 1967. In disallowing the application a single Bench of the Rajasthan High Court held, inter alia, that the Court has no power either under S. 153 or under O. 6, R. 17 of the C. P. C. to allow an amendment of the plaint to include a cause of action which was not in existence on the date of institution of the suit.

(b) M/s. M. Laxmi & Co. v. Dr. Anant R. Deshpande, reported in AIR 1973 SC 171. This decision was cited for the following observation of the Supreme Court (Para 27) :

"It is true that the Court can take notice of subsequent events. These cases are where the court finds that because of altered circumstances like devolution of interest it is necessary to shorten litigation. Where the original relief has become inappropriate, by subsequent events, the Court can take notice of such changes. If the Court finds that the judgment of the Court cannot be carried into effect because of changes of circumstances the Court takes notice of the same. If the Court finds that the matter is no longer in controversy the Court also takes notice of such event. If the property which is the subject-matter of suit is no longer available the court will take notice of such event. The Court takes notice of subsequent events to shorten litigation, to preserve rights of both the parties and to subserve the ends of justice."

(c) Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu v. Motor & General Traders, reported in AIR 1975 SC 1409. This decision was cited for the following observations of the Supreme Court (Para 4) :

"It is basic to our processual jurisprudence that the right to relief must be judged to exist as on the date a suitor institutes the legal proceeding. Equally clear is the principle that procedure is the hand-maid and not the mistress of the judicial process. If a fact, arising after the lis has come to Court and has a fundamental impact on the right to relief or the manner of moulding it, is brought diligently to the notice of the tribunal, it cannot blink at it or be blind to events which stultify or render inept the decretal remedy. Equity justifies bending the rules of procedure, where no specific provision or fair play is violated, with a view to promote substantial justice — subject, of course, to the absence of other disentitling factors or just circumstances."

"We affirm the proposition that for making the right or remedy claimed by the party just and meaningful as also legally and factually in accord with the current realities, the court can, and in many cases must, take cautious cognisance of events and developments subsequent to the institution of the proceeding provided the rules of fairness to both sides are scrupulously obeyed."

(d) Rameshwar v. Jot Ram, reported in AIR 1976 SC 49, where the Supreme Court observed as follows (Para 8) :

"It is basic to our processual jurisprudence that the right to relief must be judged to exist as on the date a suitor institutes the legal proceeding. This is an emphatic statement that the right of a party is determined by the facts as they exist on the date the action is instituted. Granting the presence of such facts, then he is entitled to its enforcement. Later developments cannot defeat his right. The Court's procedural delays cannot deprive him of legal justice or rights crystallised in the initial cause of action.

Courts can, however, take not of subsequent events and mould the relief accordingly, but this can be done only in exceptional circumstances. Rights vested by virtue of a statute cannot be divested by this equitable doctrine."

(e) Ayesha Khatoon v. Durga Sahaya, reported in AIR 1977 Cal 108. In this case the landlord had filed a suit for ejectment of tenants on the ground of forfeiture of a lease. The suit was dismissed by the trial Court and an appeal was preferred by the landlord. Pending appeal the period of lease expired and the appellant applied for amendment of the plaint by claiming relief on the additional ground of expiry of the lease. This application was filed in the appeal. A Division Bench of this Court held that inasmuch as the Courts were entitled to take notice of subsequent facts and grant relief to the parties accordingly, the same principle should be extended for the purpose of amendment of plaints. This was necessary to shorten litigation and for the ends of justice. The Division Bench referred to the decision of the Supreme Court in Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu (supra).

7. In view of the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in the several judgments noted above and also in view of the judgment of the Division Bench of this Court, which is binding on me, in my view, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed in this application. No doubt the plaintiff is seeking to introduce a cause of action which was not in existence when the suit was filed, but if the Courts are empowered to take note of the subsequent facts there is no reason why the plaintiff should be prohibited from taking advantage of such cognizance by amending his plaint. If the plaintiff is to succeed on his original cause of action and nothing else, as has been urged on behalf of the defendants, then in no case the Court can take note of subsequent facts. The amendments asked for, if allowed, are expected to shorten the proceedings and to prevent multiplicity of proceedings.

8. For the reasons above this application is allowed. There will be an order in terms of prayers (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of the petition. The amendments to be incorporated within a fortnight from date on a signed copy of the minutes of this order on which the Department and the parties will act. The defendant will be at liberty to file an additional written statement within three weeks from the service of the amended copy of the plaint. The plaintiffs undertake to draw up, complete and file their order.

9. There will be a stay of operation of this order for one week.

Application allowed.

SUDHINDRA MOHAN GUHA, J.:— The instant reference has been made by Sri A. K. Chatterjee, District Judge, Burdwan for confirmation of the decree passed in Matrimonial Suit No. 70 of 1976 under the Indian Divorce Act.

2. An application under Ss. 10 and 34 of the Divorce Act, 1869 was presented by the petitioner, Brojendra Kumar Ghosh for dissolution of marriage of the petitioner with respondent No. 1, Mrs. Arpana Ghosh on the ground that she had been guilty of adultery with the co-respondent No. 2, Sri Dilip Sen and for damages amounting to Rs. 2,000/- against the co-respondent.

3. Both the respondent and co-respondent made their appearance before the court below, but ultimately the suit was not contested by them and as a result the decree was passed ex parte.

4. The petitioner is a Christian by religion and both the parties are domiciled in India for all material times. The petitioner alleged that respondent No. 1 who was married to him had been guilty of adultery with co-respondent since the solemnization of marriage between them. The petitioner, who examined himself in court, stated on oath that there was no ground to suspect that the petitioner had in any manner been accessory to the charge of adultery or that he had condoned the same. On evidence the learned District Judge was of the opinion that there was nothing on record to indicate that the petition for divorce was presented and prosecuted in collusion with either of the respondents. On evidence it was found by the learned District Judge that the wife, respondent No. 1, was guilty of adultery. In the circumstances, a decree declaring the marriage of the petitioner with respondent No. 1 (sic) was passed and pronounced. It was also found that there was no unreasonable delay in presenting or promoting the petition or the petitioner had deserted and wilfully separated himself from respondent No. 1 before the adultery or that he had been guilty of wilful neglect or by his conduct had condoned the charge of adultery.

5. The learned District Judge also passed a decree for damages of Rupees 1,000/- against co-respondent No. 2.

6. Having gone through the materials on record we are of the opinion that the decree for divorce under S. 10 of the Divorce Act was rightly passed. The decree for a sum of Rs. 1,000/- as damages under S. 34 of the Divorce Act also appears to have been rightly passed. In the circumstances, we confirm the decree and accept the reference.

7. There will be no order as to costs.

Where the plaintiff who was tenant of the defendant-landlords occupying building situate at Puri in Orissa State was taken to Calcutta by the landlords and he was compelled to sign some papers which he subsequently came to know was a resolution and an agreement whereby he had purported to surrender his tenancy in respect of the disputed building in favour of the owners and the landlords, the suit filed by the tenant for declaration that the agreement was illegal, collusive and void and not binding on tenant could not be said to be not triable by the City Civil Court, Calcutta for want of jurisdiction as contemplated by S. 16 (d). It was apparent that the principal relief asked for by the plaintiff was for a declaration that the said purported agreement and/or resolution was illegal and void and the plaintiff had not asked for the determination of any right to the disputed building. It was not tenant's prayer that he wanted the court to adjudicate upon his tenancy right in the disputed building, though it was true that if the tenant got a declaration that the said purported agreement or resolution was void, his tenancy right in respect of the disputed building under the landlords would be restored but because of that it could not be said that the suit was one for determination of a right to or interest in immovable property. Further there was no question of obtaining any leave for the purpose of filing suit in the City Civil Court, Calcutta as a part of the cause of action had arisen in Calcutta and in view of Cl. (c) of S. 20 the suit could be filed in that Court. Further in the suit there was an allegation of fraud committed within jurisdiction of City Civil Court, Calcutta and the suit could be said to be maintainable from the point of view of accepted principle of law also that the court within whose jurisdiction fraud was committed would be entitled to entertain a suit founded on fraud. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee and Alok Kumar Ghosh, for Petitioner; Sudhis Das Gupta and Amal Chakraborty, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This application under Section 115 of the Civil P. C. has been filed by the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5, and it is directed against order No. 51 dated July 29, 1981 of the learned Judge, 5th Bench, City Civil Court, Calcutta in Title Suit No. 2317 of 1958 holding that the said Court has jurisdiction to try the suit instituted by the plaintiff opposite party.

2. The plaintiff's case in short is that he was at all material times and still is a tenant under the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 of the entire building known as Atindra Dham and situate at Gopal Ballav Road, Sea Beach, Puri at a monthly rent of Rs. 300 payable according to the English Calendar month. The defendants Nos. 6 to 9 are the sub-tenants under the plaintiff. On August 31, 1977, the defendant No. 4, one of the landlords of the plaintiff, took him to the Hongkong

House, Calcutta and he was compelled to sign some papers. Subsequently, the plaintiff came to know that he was made to execute a resolution and/or an agreement whereby he had purported to surrender his tenancy in respect of the disputed building in favour of the owners and landlords. Under that agreement, a sum of Rs. 16,000 was payable to the plaintiff by the said defendants as consideration for the surrender. In the suit, the plaintiff has, inter alia, prayed for the following reliefs:

(i) Decree be passed declaring that the purported resolution and/or agreement dated 31st Aug., 1977 at the meeting held at Hongkong House office of the defendant No. 9 is illegal, collusive and void and is not binding upon the plaintiff.

(ii) Declaration that the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 have committed breach of the purported agreement dated 31st Aug., 1977 held at the office of Bharat Refineries Employees' Co-operative Society at Hongkong House and the plaintiff had right to cancel and has cancelled the said agreement in the alternative.

(iii) Decree declaring that the purported resolution and the purported agreement dated 31st Aug., 1977 has not affected in any way the plaintiff's tenancy right in respect of the premises Atindra Dham at Puri under the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 * * *

(iv) Permanent injunction restraining the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 from realising any rent from defendants Nos. 6 to 9, different sub-tenants under the plaintiff in the premises Atindra Dham at Sea Coast Puri and from disturbing plaintiffs possession of the said Atindra Dham in any manner whatsoever.

3. The defendants Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 have been contesting the suit by filing a written statement. It has been admitted by them that the plaintiff was a tenant in respect of the disputed building. But it is alleged that the plaintiff has surrendered his tenancy by the said agreement dated Aug. 31, 1977. It is contended by them that the suit cannot be tried by the City Civil Court, Calcutta for want of jurisdiction as contemplated by S. 16 (d) of the Civil P. C.

4. The learned Judge framed an issue as to jurisdiction and tried the same as a preliminary issue. It has been held by the learned Judge that the suit is not one coming within the purview of S. 16 (d) of the Civil P. C. According to him, there is no question as to the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property and, as part of the cause-of-action arose within the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court, Calcutta, that court has jurisdiction to entertain and try the suit. Upon the said findings, the learned Judge decided the issue in favour of the plaintiff. Hence this revisional application under S. 115 of the Civil P. C.

5. Section 16 of the Civil P. C. provides as follows:

"Subject to the pecuniary or other limitations prescribed by any law, suits—

(a) for the recovery of the immovable property with or without rent or profits,

(b) for the partition of immovable property,

(c) for foreclosure, sale or redemption in the case of a mortgage of or charge upon immovable property,

(d) for the determination of any other right to or interest in immovable property,

(e) for compensation for wrong to immovable property,

(f) for the recovery of movable property actually under distraint or attachment, shall be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate."

(The Proviso and Explanation to S. 16 are not relevant for our purpose and are omitted.)

6. It is not disputed on behalf of the defendants that cls. (a) to (c), (e) and (f) of S. 16 have no manner of application to the instant suit. It is, however, contended by Mr. Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the defendants that the suit is one for the determination of a right to or interest in immovable property, that is, the disputed building, and that in view of cl. (d) of S. 16, the suit can only be instituted in Orissa Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the building is situate.

7. Now the question is whether the suit is for the determination of any right to or interest in the disputed building. I have already set out above the reliefs claimed by the plaintiff in the suit. It is apparent that the principal relief asked for by the plaintiff is for a declaration that the said purported resolution and/or agreement dated Aug. 31, 1977 is illegal and void and is not binding on the plaintiff. The plaintiff has not asked for the determination of any right to the disputed building. It is not the plaintiff's prayer that he wants the Court to adjudicate upon his tenancy right in the disputed building. It has been already stated that the defendants have not denied the plaintiff's tenancy right in respect of the said buildings but their case is that the plaintiff has lost his right of tenancy by virtue of the alleged surrender of the same by the impugned agreement dated Aug. 31, 1977. Mr. Banerjee has drawn my attention to prayer (iii) in the plaint whereby the plaintiff has asked for a declaration that the said purported resolution or agreement dated Aug. 31, 1977 has not affected in any way, the plaintiff's tenancy right in respect of the disputed building. This prayer, in my opinion, does not require the Court to decide any right of the plaintiff in the disputed building. The declaration contained in prayer (iii) of the plaint may be said to be a consequential relief. If the Court comes to a finding that the impugned agreement is void, the plaintiff's right of tenancy would continue as before and the declaration as prayed for under that prayer will follow as a matter of course. In considering whether a suit is for determination of any right to or interest in immovable property, the whole of the plaint and the reliefs should be considered. In my opinion, the plaintiff has not sought for any relief which will require the Court to decide any right to or interest in immovable property. It is true that if the plaintiff gets a declaration that the said purported agreement or resolution is void, the plaintiff's tenancy right in respect of the disputed building under the defendants would be restored, but because of that it cannot be said that the suit is one for determination of a right to or interest in immovable property.

8. Mr. Banerjee has placed strong reliance on a Bench decision of this Court in Hadjee Ismael v. Hadjee Mahomed, (1874) 21 Suth WR 303. In that case, the suit was filed in the Original Side of this Court for setting aside a release alleged to have been executed in Calcutta under fraudulent representations made by the first defendant, and for an account and administration of the estate of a deceased Mahomedan who died intestate in Bombay, where he left movable and immovable property. The plaintiff asked for leave under cl. 11 of the Charter of the High Court of 1865. The leave was granted by the trial Court, but on appeal the order of the trial Court granting leave was set aside and the plaint was directed to be taken off the file, so that the plaintiff might file the plaint in the High Court at Bombay. I do not think that the above decision is of any assistance to the defendants, for, in that case, the question was whether the cause-of-action arose wholly in Calcutta. Couch, C. J. who delivered the judgment of the Bench observed:

"Here the cause-of-action cannot be said to have arisen wholly in Calcutta... .. The fraudulent representations which led to the execution of the release may have been made and the release may have been executed here; but the cause-of-action in this case consists of more than that Then where did the release take effect? It would, perhaps be a somewhat far-fetched application of the doctrine to hold that the release operated in Calcutta in regard to the plaintiff's share of the movable property. It certainly could not do so in regard to the share in the immovable property, which apparently formed the greater portion of what the plaintiff claimed to be entitled to. That was in Bombay, and that part of the cause-of-action arose there. In such a case as the present, I think the cause-of-action in respect of the immovable property arose in the place where the release took effect, and the suit comes within that part of the clause which provides that the leave of the Court must be obtained."

It is clear from the above observation that though a part of the cause-of-action arose in Calcutta, the greater part arose in Bombay where the property was situated. It was not held that the suit was for land within the meaning of cl. 11 of the Charter. But it was held that greater part of the cause-of-action arose in Bombay where the release took effect. After considering the facts and circumstances, their Lordships took the view that the leave should not be granted. In the instant case, a part of the cause-of-action has arisen in Calcutta. There is no question of obtaining any leave for the purpose of filing the suit in the City Civil Court, Calcutta, for, in view of cl. (c) of S. 20 of the Civil P. C. the suit can be filed in that Court as part of the cause-of-action has arisen in Calcutta.

9. The next decision which has been relied on by the defendants is Messrs. Moolji Jaitha and Co. v. K. S. & W. Mills Co., AIR 1950 FC 83. In that case, the suit was filed in the Original Side of the Bombay High Court. The prayers (a) and (b) of the plaint of that suit were as follows:

"(a) That it may be declared that the said land (particularised in para 8) belonged and are the properties of the plaintiff company and the defendants have no beneficial interest therein.

(b) That the defendants may be ordered to execute all such documents and deeds and do such acts as may be necessary for transferring the said lands to the name of the plaintiff."

The majority view that was expressed by Kania C. J., Patanjali Sastri and Fazal Ali, JJ. was that the suit was not a suit for land within cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. It has been observed by Kania C. J. that in order to see whether a suit covered by the expression "suit for land" in cl. 12, it has to be considered whether it is for the purpose of obtaining a direction for possession or a decision on title to land, or the object of the suit is something different but involves the consideration of the question of title to land indirectly. It is observed by Patanjali Sastri J. that the words "suit for land or other immovable property" in cl. 12, besides obviously covering claims for recovery of possession or control of land, are apt to connote also suits which primarily and substantially seek an adjudication upon title to immovable property or determination of any right or interest therein. In this connection, I also like to refer to the observation of B. K. Mukherjea J., although he was in the minority. It has been observed by his Lordship that the words "suit for land" mean a suit for establishing title to land of any interest in the same or for possession or control thereof; and the decree sought for must be intended proprio vigore to be enforceable against and binding on the land itself. On the basis of the above interpretation of the expression "suit for land or other immovable property", it cannot be said that the instant suit is a suit for land or other immovable property, even assuming that the said expression is synonymous with the provision of S. 16 (d) of the Civil P. C.

10. In Probirendra Mohan Tagore v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 Cal 767 (SB) the plaintiff instituted the suit in the Original Side of this Court challenging the notification dated Oct. 30, 1952 issued by the Bihar Government under the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950. By the said notification, the estate of the plaintiff under the Bengal Settled Estates Act, 1904 in so far as the lands situate in Bihar were concerned, had vested in the State of Bihar. The estate of the plaintiff also included lands situate in Calcutta. It was held that the suit was really a suit for lands situate in Bihar and this Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Further, it was held that although the estate of the plaintiff under the Bengal Settled Estates Act, 1904 included properties within Calcutta, no injury or threatened injury to such properties having been alleged in the plaint, no part of the cause-of-action arose within Calcutta. It, therefore, appears that in that case, it was held to be a suit for land situate wholly within the State of Bihar. That case, therefore, is of no help to the defendants.

11. In the instant suit also there is an allegation of fraud. In other words, the suit is founded on fraud and the fraud has been alleged to have been committed within the jurisdiction of City Civil Court, Calcutta. It is now an accepted principle of law that the Court within whose jurisdiction fraud is committed will be entitled to entertain a suit founded on fraud. From that point of view also the City Civil Court had jurisdiction to try the suit.

12. For the reasons aforesaid, this application fails, and it is dismissed. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

Application dismissed.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA AND
C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

Union of India and another, Appellants
v. Chinoy Chablani and Co. Respondent.

A.F.O.O. No. 331 of 1976, D/- 19-2-1981.

(A) Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 230, clause (3) — Contract as to contrary — Presumption under — Principal, a Foreign Company entered into contract with third party without knowledge and consent of agent — Agent acting subsequently for discharge of consignment — Presumption that contract existed by and between agent and third party cannot be raised merely because principal cannot be sued.

The statutory presumption of a contract between the agent and the third party by legal fiction cannot be extended to cover a case where the principal has entered into the contract directly. In cl. (3) the word "principal" has been used in relation to the agent and not otherwise. The expression "though disclosed" have reference to the agent's act. S. 230, clause (3) does not cover a case where the principal has entered into the contract himself and not through the agent. If the principal would enter into the contract directly with the third party there could not be any question of the principal being required to be disclosed as a principal. In such event, the agent could not possibly come into the picture at all and, as such, the agent could not be made liable by creating a legal fiction whereby a contract would be presumed to exist by and between the agent and the third party. If the agent has not done anything in the formation of the contract he could not be made liable without his knowledge and consent by statutory fiction contained in cl. (3). In such a case, the Legislature could not be said to have exonerated a principal who has himself entered into the contract by foisting his contractual liability on to the agent without his knowledge and consent by means of statutory presumption that a contract existed by and between the agent and the third party simply because the principal contracting party could not be sued. Case law discussed. (Paras 14, 21, 22)

(B) Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 230 — Contract to contrary — Presumption — Maxim expressio unius exclusio alterius does not apply to clauses 1 to 3 of Section 230. (Maxim — Expressio unius exclusio alterius). (Para 19)

(C) Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 230, clause (3) — Expression "Principal" — Cannot be sued — Meaning of — Territorial extension of it.

The expression "principal..... cannot be sued" does not bear a restricted meaning so as to confine the question to the territories in India only. The said expression has a wider amplitude and would cover cases where the principal can be sued in a foreign country as well.

D. K. Sen, for Appellants,

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J.:

This is an appeal from the judgment and order of Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. dated March 15, 1976 (reported in AIR 1976 Cal 467). The learned Judge allowed the application and directed the plaint to be taken off the file. The application before him was made praying for such an order, inter alia, on the ground, that the plaint did not disclose any cause of action and, alternatively for dismissing the suit on the ground that this Court had no jurisdiction to try or to entertain the suit. The petitioner in the further alternative prayed for stay of the suit.

2. The point involved in this appeal relates to the interpretation of S. 230 (3) of the Contract Act, 1872. The appellant No. 1 and the Food Corporation of India, the appellant No. 2 filed the suit against the respondents who were carrying on business, inter alia, as steamer agents of one Black Sea Steamship Company of U.S.S.R. The said Steamship Company was the owner of the vessel "S. S. SUDGA". The plaintiff-appellant No. 2 acted on behalf of the Ministry of Agriculture, Government of India in respect of all importations of fertilizers and food-stuffs. According to the plaintiffs, on October 31, 1973 one Mineral and Metal Trading Corporation of India Ltd. had shipped for and on behalf of the Ministry of Agriculture, Union of India on board the said vessel 81956 bags of Urea and further 820 empty spare bags from the Port of Odessa in U.S.S.R. to be carried to any Port in India. A Bill of Lading was issued by the said Black Sea Steamship Company which agreed to carry the same in accordance with the terms and conditions mentioned in the said contract of carriage.

3. The said vessel had discharged at Visakhapatnam 51933 bags of urea of which certain quantities were cut and torn and certain quantities contained sweepings only from and out of the said consignment. She completed discharge of the goods in the port of Calcutta also to the extent of 28747 bags of which 3201 were cut and torn and further 50 bags contained sweepings only. The same were duly surveyed at both the ports of Visakhapatnam and Calcutta. According to the plaintiff, the loss occurred thereby was due to the negligence and wrongful acts of the carriers and the plaintiffs-appellants claimed a sum of Rs. 73,285 from the respondent who were acting as the Steamer Agents.

4. In paragraph 10 of the plaint, the plaintiffs-appellants have pleaded:

"The said Black Sea Steamship Company appears to be the concern of U.S. S.R. and as such cannot be sued in India. In the circumstances, the defendant or its agents is liable and is sued as such."

5. The above, in short, is the frame of the suit. In short, although the contract was entered into with the said Shipping Company which issued the bill of lading but the said document did not mention anything about the respondent Chinoy Chablani & Co. which acted as the agents in the Calcutta Port for discharging the said consignment from the said vessel as the steamer agents.

6. The defendant-respondent herein contends that the contract of carriage was entered into by and between the appellants and the Black Sea Steamship Co. which issued the bill of lading. The defendant-respondent merely acted as the steamer agent and, accordingly, it could not have been sued in any event. No privity nor any jural relationship was established by and between the plaintiffs-appellants and the defendant-respondent.

7. On behalf of the appellants, it is contended that even though the defendant-respondent did not enter into the contract, still it became liable by reason of the legal fiction created by statute as would appear from the second paragraph of S. 230 of the Contract Act whereby such a contract would be presumed to exist in a case where the principal, though disclosed, could not be sued.

8. To appreciate the argument, it would be convenient to set out S. 230 of the Contract Act which runs as follows:—

"230. In the absence of any contract to that effect, an agent cannot personally enforce contracts entered into by him on behalf of his principal, nor is he personally bound by them,

Such a contract shall be presumed to exist in the following cases:—

(1) Where the contract is made by an agent for the sale or purchase of goods for a merchant resident abroad;

(2) Where the agent does not disclose the name of his principal;

(3) Where the principal, though disclosed, cannot be sued."

9. It is further contended that this is a case where the said Shipping Company belonged to the Soviet Government and as such it could not be sued in India. Accordingly, this case would fit in with and would attract cl. (3) of the second paragraph of S. 230. It is further contended that whether or not such a principal could be sued in view of S. 86 of the Civil P. C. would be a matter to be gone into at the hearing of the suit but there is sufficient pleading in para. 10 of the plaint, as set out above, by virtue whereof the plaint should not be ordered to be taken off the file at such initial stage.

10. The first and the foremost question to be determined in this matter is whether in a case, where the principal has entered into the contract but the agent has not, a contract would be presumed to exist as between the agent and the third party, viz., the appellants herein, so as to make the agent liable by attracting cl. (3) of S. 230. The learned Judge of the Court below has held that in order to make an agent personally liable, the first pre-requisite is that there must be a contract entered into by an agent on behalf of the principal. Indeed, S. 230 of the Contract Act is in respect of cases where the agent has entered into the contract as the contracting party vis-a-vis a third party. The section deals with the agent's rights and liabilities in respect of his acting as such agent. This section does not in any way deal with a contract where the principal has entered into the contract directly with a third party. In such a case the question of agency does not in any way come up for consideration.

11. In general it is an undisputed proposition that only the parties to the contract can be made liable in case of any breach thereof and a contract can be enforced only by and against the parties thereto; but when it comes to the law of agency the position becomes different. Ordinarily the agent can neither personally enforce the contract entered into with third parties nor can he be made liable in respect thereto when he has entered into the contract on behalf of his principal as such agent. It is the principal and the principal alone who, under such circumstances, becomes the main contracting party and as such becomes liable in case of breach and also becomes entitled to sue in his personal name unless the agreement provides to the contrary.

12. Under Section 230, however, the agent under certain circumstances would become personally liable to the third party. Such liabilities have been enumerated in the second para. of the said section on the basis of presumption that such a contract with the agent existed. The second para. deals with the liabilities of an agent where an agent has entered into the contract and not where the principal has entered into the contract directly with the third party. The second para. does not deal with any case of enforcement of the contract by the third party where the contract has been entered into by him with the principal.

13. Clause (1) of the second para. of the said section creates no difficulty. The language creates no ambiguity. It specifically provides therein that the liability of the agent would only arise under that clause where the contract has been made by the agent. With regard to clauses (2) and (3), however, it is not mentioned so specifically and, the same would require to be construed in relation to the whole of the section to find out their true meaning and import. In respect of clause (2) the language thereof primarily suggests that the agent is a party to the contract with the third party inasmuch as the principal is not disclosed. Accordingly, the question of the principal entering into a contract does not arise at all. The third party in the contract knows the agent to be the principal although the agent is not so acting vis-a-vis his principal. Under such circumstances, the law presumes such an agent to be the principal contracting party and not to be an agent vis-a-vis the third party. Under such circumstances, a contract will be presumed to exist by and between the agent and the third party in which a third party would be entitled to look forward to the agent as a principal contracting party.

14. In my opinion, cl. (3) is directly linked up with cl. (2) of the second para of S. 230. It is a corollary to cl. (2) and the two clauses must be read together in the context of the whole section. Cl. (3) relates to a case where the principal is disclosed in entering into the contract with the third party. The statutory presumption of a contract by legal fiction cannot be extended to cover a case where the principal has entered into the contract directly. In cl. (3) the word "principal" has been used in relation to the agent and not otherwise. The expression "though disclosed" must obviously have reference to the agent's act. The question of disclosure here cannot be an act of the principal if the principal has to be disclosed. He has to be disclosed by an act of the agent.

15. Chapter X of the Contract Act, 1872 containing the group of sections from 182 to 238 deals with agency and the rights and obligations of the principal and of the agent. The group of sections from Ss. 226 to 230 deals with the effect of agency on contracts with third parties. Section 226 provides that contracts entered into through an agent and obligations arising from acts done by the agent are enforceable in the same manner and would have the same legal consequences as if the contracts were made and the acts were done by the principal personally. Thus, it is clear, that a contract entered into through an agent is not enforceable against the agent but only against the principal. Under S. 231 if a person enters into a contract with an agent not knowing that he is an agent, the agent's principal may require the performance of the contract by the other contracting party and the other contracting party also has the same rights as against the principal which he would have had against the agent if the agent had been the principal. But if the principal discloses himself before the contract is completed, the other contracting party has also the right to refuse to fulfil the contract in certain circumstances.

16. Section 230 has two parts. The first part provides that an agent can neither personally enforce nor he is personally bound by contracts entered into by him on behalf of his principal unless there is a contract to the effect that the agent may personally enforce or be bound by such contracts. The second part of the section engrafts an exception to the above rule. It says that although there is no specific contract to the effect that the agent may personally enforce the contracts or be personally bound by them, yet the law will presume the existence of such a contract that the agent may personally enforce the contracts and be bound by them in the three cases mentioned therein. As observed hereinabove, in order to appreciate the scope and effect of the section, the two parts of the section cannot be read disjunctively but have to be read as a whole.

17. In the first case the words "where the contract is made by an agent for the sale or purchase of goods" are merely descriptive of the nature of the contract. The above read in the context of the entire section would read; "a contract to the effect whereby the agent may personally enforce contracts and be personally bound by them shall be presumed in contracts entered into by the agent on behalf of his principal where the contract is made by the agent for the sale or purchase of goods for a merchant resident abroad." Similarly the second case read in the same manner would read; "a contract to the effect whereby the agent may personally enforce contracts and be personally bound by them shall be presumed in contracts entered into by the agent on behalf of his principal where the agent does not disclose the name of his principal". The third case would accordingly read: "a contract to the effect whereby the agent may personally enforce contracts entered into by him on behalf of his principal and be bound by them shall be presumed where the principal, though disclosed, cannot be sued."

18. It was observed by the Supreme Court in Umed v. Raj Singh reported in AIR 1975 SC 43....."but it is equally well settled and authorities abound in support of it — that in order to ascertain the true intention of the legislature the court must not only look at the words used by the legislature, but also have regard to the context and the setting in which they occur."

19. There is no question of any redundancy in the first case in the second part of S. 230 nor the maxim expressio unius exclusio alterius has any application in interpreting the three cases in the second part of Sec. 230 or any of them. Neither is there any possibility of two interpretations in the section. It may be pertinent in this context to refer to two other sections of the Contract Act, namely, S. 233 and S. 234. S. 233 provides that in cases where the agent is personally liable the party dealing with the agent may hold either the agent or the principal or both of them, liable. An option is given to the other party to the contract. Under S. 234 where the other party to the contract while entering into the contract with the agent induces the agent to act upon the belief that the principal will be only liable. He cannot afterwards hold the agent liable and again if he induces the principal to act upon the belief that only the agent will be liable he cannot afterwards hold the principal liable.

20. In my opinion, there is both principle and logic in providing for the statutory presumption of contract so as to make the agent and not the principal personally liable in respect of contract vis-a-vis the third party in respect of the three cases enumerated under the said section. The third party's rights are protected by reason of the difficulties that might be created in respect of contracts which are envisaged thereunder. The third party's rights will not suffer any loss or prejudice if the agent is personally made liable in respect of such cases. The section further provides that if the parties to the contract would so intend they can agree to make the agent personally liable even without recourse to the principal. Likewise, under such circumstances the parties can also confer on him the right to enforce such contract personally in his own name. That will depend on the terms of each contract.

21. In any event, by any stretch of imagination it could not be contended that the said cl. (3) would cover a case where the principal has entered into the contract himself and not through the agent. If the principal would enter into the contract directly with the third party there could not be any question of the principal being required to be disclosed as a principal. In such event, the agent could not possibly come into the picture at all and, as such, the agent could not be made liable by creating a legal fiction whereby a contract would be presumed to exist by and between the agent and the third party. If the agent has not done anything in the formation of the contract it is difficult to see how the agent could be made liable without his knowledge and consent by statutory fiction of such a nature. It is difficult to imagine why the legislature should think of exonerating a principal who has himself entered into the contract by foisting his contractual liability on to the agent without his knowledge and consent by means of statutory presumption that a contract existed by and between the agent and the third party simply because the principal contracting party could not be sued.

22. To my mind, to accept the appellant's contention would be disastrous for the agents who might be otherwise foisted with heavy liabilities without their knowledge and consent. If the argument advanced on behalf of the appellant would be accepted, nobody would think of acting as a handling agent or a shipping agent or for any other purpose inasmuch as he might be saddled with heavy liability at the sweet will of the third party. The legislature would hardly intend to foist such liability on the agent even though he has not directly, participated in the formation of the contract.

23. In the case of Twycross v. Dreyfus reported in (1877) 5 Ch. D. 605 it was held that an agent could not be sued in the absence of a principal. Mr. D. K. Sen, on behalf of the appellant contends that the Indian law in this respect is different from the English common law because under Cl. (3) of S. 230 a legal fiction has been created by Statute so as to make the agent liable in a case when the principal, though disclosed, cannot be sued. The language in S. 230 (3) is nothing but a legal fiction and the Court has to presume liability in the manner as provided therein. The Court has to examine for what purpose the fiction is created and after ascertaining the same, the Court has to assume all facts and consequences which are incidental to the giving effect to such a fiction. Mr. Sen has referred to the Supreme Court decision in the case of State of Bombay v. Pandurang Vinayak reported in AIR 1953 SC 244 at page 246. According to Mr. Sen the Statute has gone so far as to provide for his liability even though the agent has not acted personally. He is presumed to have acted, though not acted in fact. The expression "such a contract" in the second paragraph of the section would refer to the opening words herein, viz, "in the absence of a contract to that effect." That contract means a contract whereby the agent has agreed to take upon himself the liability arising out of the contract on behalf of the principal or the principal has agreed that the agent would personally enforce the contract entered into by the agent on behalf of the principal.

24. Mr. Sen has gone even to the extent of contending that by virtue of his position as an agent, wherever he might be, he can be sued by the said party even in a case where he has not been made a party to the contract in any manner entered into by and between the principal and the third party once it is proved that such a principal cannot be sued. It is difficult to appreciate the arguments advanced by Mr. Sen. Such a construction, if made, would require the language of the Statute to be changed altogether by inserting various words into the Statute. Under such circumstances, the first and the second paragraphs could hardly be read in a harmonious manner and the exceptions engrafted in the general principle and the legal fiction and/or the presumption in cl. (3) of the second paragraph must necessarily give rise to an anomalous position which the legislature could not have intended to provide therein.

25. That being the position, I have no hesitation to hold that the learned Judge of the court below was quite correct in his findings on this point. As observed hereinabove, the contract of carriage was entered into by and between the appellants and the principal, viz., the said Black Sea Steamship Company of U.S.S.R. by issuing the said bill of lading and there is no mention therein of the respondent as the agent or otherwise. Mr. Sen has referred to several decisions but in all such decisions the contracts were entered into by the agent but that is not the case here. Such cases are : B. K. Gupta v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 286; Dharmeswar Kalita v. Union of India, AIR 1955 Assam 86; Durga Prasad Manna Lal v. Cawnpore Flour Mills Co. Ltd., AIR 1929 Oudh 417. Mr. Sen has also referred to several Supreme Court decisions on the point as to how a statute has to be construed under the circumstances. Such decisions are to be found in the cases of N. T. Veluswami Thevar v. Raja Nainar, AIR 1959 SC 422; Shri Ram Ram Narain v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 459; AIR 1963 SC 550, R. G. Jacob v. Republic of India; AIR 1964 SC 166, Ghanshyamdas v. Regional Assistant Commissioner, Sales Tax; AIR 1964 SC 1781, V. S. Rice & Oil Mills v. State of Andh Pra; AIR 1972 SC 2284, S. Narayanaswami v. G. Punnerselvam; Umed v. Raj Singh, AIR 1975 SC 43; Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes (12th Edition) 293 to 297; Craies on Statute Law (6th Edn.) 108.

26. In my opinion, the principles enunciated in the said decisions are well-known and it is not here to discuss the same in details.

27. Mr. Sen next contends that under cl. (3) of S. 230 the expression "cannot be sued" should be restricted to mean "cannot be sued in India". It is contended that the principal being in a foreign State could not be sued except with the consent of the Central Government, as provided by S. 86 of the Civil P. C. According to Mr. Sen, whether in a case like this, the consent of the Central Government could be obtained or not could be a relevant matter for consideration at the stage of the trial of the suit herein but such a question cannot be decided at this stage and on the basis thereof the plaint cannot be ordered to be taken off the file as ordered by the court below. The pleading as set out hereinabove is good enough to cover all possible points that might be raised at the trial of the suit. Mr. Sen has further argued that inasmuch as cl. (3) is restricted to cases in India alone, it is irrelevant for the purpose of the suit to consider whether or not the principal in this case could be sued by the appellants in U.S.S.R.

28. In my opinion, in view of our finding in respect of the first point, it is not necessary to decide this point. In any event, I am of the view that the expression 'principal.....cannot be sued' does not bear a restricted meaning so as to confine the question to the territories in India only. The said expression has a wider amplitude and would cover cases where the principal can be sued in a foreign country as well, as is the case here. There is no pleading to that effect to suggest that the principal here could not be sued even in U.S.S.R. Furthermore, the plaintiffs-appellants herein got the opportunity to state in this application whether or not the Central Government was approached to give its consent or whether such consent could not have been obtained in any event for suing the foreign principal.

29. The result, therefore, is that the appellants cannot succeed and the appeal must be and is hereby dismissed with costs.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 1, Rr. 3, 10 (2) — Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27 — Suit for divorce against husband on ground of adultery — Alleged adulteress made a co-respondent — Damages also claimed against her — Alleged adulteress held, was a proper and necessary party — Her name could not be struck off under O. 1, R. 10 (2).

The Rule relating to joinder of the adulterer as a co-respondent proceeds on public policy to prevent collusion. Considered in the light of provision of O. 1, R. 3, C. P. C., the woman with whom the husband was alleged to have committed acts of adultery, held, was rightly joined in the suit particularly in view of the claim for damages against her. In view of such a claim she was not merely a proper party but a necessary party. As such she could not claim that her name should be struck off under O. 1, R. 10 (2) of the Code. (Paras 27, 28)

(B) Special Marriage Act (43 of 1954), Ss. 27 and 41 — Calcutta H. C. Rules, R. 10 — R. 10 is not ultra vires the rule making power — Wife's suit for divorce on ground of adultery — Woman with whom husband is alleged to have committed acts of adultery can be impleaded as co-respondent in terms of R. 10.

G. A. Wilson-de Rose, for Petitioner;
Ajoy Roy with S. Dube, for Opposite Parties.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— This revisional application at the instance of a co-respondent in a Matrimonial Suit is directed against an order rejecting her prayer for striking out her name from the category of co-respondent.

2. Opposite party No. 1 instituted the suit for a decree of divorce against opposite party No. 2 on the ground of adultery under S. 27 of the Special Marriage Act, 1954. In this suit the wife opposite party No. 1 alleged acts of cruelty and adultery on the part of the husband opposite party No. 2. It is further alleged that the husband committed acts of adultery with the petitioner herein who was made a co-respondent in the suit. The wife also claimed damages against the co-respondent.

3. In this suit, the petitioner co-respondent filed an application under O. 1, R. 10 of the Civil P. C. for striking out her name. It was contended before the court below that there is no provision in the Special Marriage Act permitting joinder of a woman as a co-respondent in a wife's suit for divorce on the ground of adultery and that the Rules framed under the Act does not contemplate such a procedure and even if it intended to do so, it acted in excess of the powers conferred by the Act.

4. The prayer was resisted by the wife upon a reference to R. 10 of the Rules framed by the High Court. The learned Trial Judge overruled the contention of the petitioner co-respondent and rejected her prayer for striking out her name. Hence the revisional application.

5. Mr. Dey Roze appearing on behalf of the petitioner argued that any Rule providing for impleading a woman as co-respondent is ultra vires the Rule making power of the High Court conferred by S. 41 of the Act, that the power of the High Court in framing rules is limited by the provisions of O. 1, R. 3 of the Code and the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act, that the wife has no legal form of relief available against a woman having or intending to have sexual intercourse with the husband and as such no legal proceedings can be instituted against such a woman. It was further contended that R. 10 as framed by the High Court must be restricted in its application to a male co-respondent when read along with Rr. 18 to 24 of the Rules.

6. This application has been seriously contested by the wife respondent No. 1.

7. In order to appreciate the points involved it would be convenient to bear in mind the relevant provisions of the Special Marriage Act and the Rules framed thereunder.

8. Section 27 (1) (a) of the Act entitles either party to the marriage to present a petition for divorce on the ground that the respondent has, after the solemnisation of the marriage, had voluntary sexual intercourse with any person other than his or her spouse.

9. Unlike the Indian Divorce Act there is no Special provision that upon such a petition presented by a husband, the petitioner shall be required to make the alleged adulterer a co-respondent unless excused.

"41. Power of High Court to make rules regulating procedure.

(1) The High Court shall, by notification in the official Gazette, make such rules consistent with the provisions contained in this Act and the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, as it may consider expedient for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of Chapter V, VI and VII.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing provision, such rules shall provide for—

(a) the impleading by the petitioner of the adulterer as a co-respondent on a petition for divorce on the ground of adultery, and the circumstances in which the petitioner may be excused from doing so;

(b) the awarding of damages against any such co-respondent;

(c) the intervention in any proceeding under Chapter V or Chapter VI by any person not already a party thereto;

(d) the form and contents of petitions for nullity of marriage or for divorce and the payment of costs incurred by parties to such petitions; and

(e) any other matter for which no provision or no sufficient provision is made in this Act, and for which provision is made in the Indian Divorce Act, 1869."

10. Different High Courts framed different set of rules under the rule making power conferred by this section. Necessarily the rules framed by the different High Courts could not be and are not identical. For the present we are concerned with the rules framed by this High Court.

11. R. 10 lays down that "In every petition for divorce on the ground of adultery the alleged adulterer shall be impleaded as a co-respondent. "The provisions to this rule are unnecessary for our present purpose and need not be referred to.

12. Rr. 17, 18 and 19 relate to a counter claim by the respondent for relief under S. 35 of the Act. R. 20 provides that when the answer of the husband alleges adultery by the petitioner, such answer shall state the name, address and description of the alleged adulterer.

13. R. 24 provides that when a decree for divorce is passed on the ground of adultery, the court may in its discretion award such damages against the co-respondent found guilty of the adultery, as it may think fit and proper.

14. Mr. De Roze in the first place argued that clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of Sec. 41 (2) must be read ejusdem generis with clause (e) and consequently the powers of the High Court in framing the rules must be limited by and confined to the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act under which no woman can be impleaded as a co-respondent. To confine the powers of the rule making authority in the manner suggested would be contrary to the provisions of Sec. 41 (1), which lays down that the rules should be consistent with the provisions of the Special Marriage Act and the Civil P. C. sub-section (2) and the clauses thereunder merely enumerate the subjects regarding which the rules may be framed.

15. This apart, even if the expression "any other matter" referred to in clause (e) is read to mean a matter of the same kind or nature as enumerated in clauses (a) to (d), that also would be of no assistance. Impleading an adulterer as a co-respondent is a matter covered by cl. (a). This is again a matter on which some provision is made in the Indian Divorce Act (vide S. 11) but no sufficient provision is made in the Special Marriage Act. It is not, therefore, incompetent for the High Court to frame rules on such matters. And in fact some of the High Courts have framed rules in this regard in a manner not consistent with the Indian Divorce Act. For example, under the rules framed by the Patna High Court where a wife's petition alleges adultery with a woman named and contains a claim for costs against her, she shall be made a respondent in the cause. Similarly under the rules of the Bombay High Court it is competent for a female to intervene in a wife's petition where the husband is charged with adultery with such named female person. We are unable to agree that such rules are ultra vires being in excess of the powers conferred by S. 41.

16. Then it was contended that the very concept of different High Courts framing different set of rules in respect of a Central Act is opposed to common sense because in that event there would be different set of rules governing the same field within the country. Mr. De Roze therefore suggested that there should be one body authorised to frame rules so that they may be the same every where in the country. This contention too cannot be supported for the simple reason that what should have been the law is not within the sphere of our present enquiry. That apart it is not inconceivable for different High Courts to frame different set of rules under a central statute. In fact Civil P. C. itself authorises different High Courts to frame their own rules in regard to certain matters and the rules thus framed are not always uniform. Nonetheless they are good and binding.

17. Mr. De Roze then argued that R. 10 quoted above refers to an adulterer and not an adulteress and consequently the rule is referable only to a male adulterer. Here again we are unable to agree with him. According to the accepted rules of interpretation and the provisions of the General Clauses Act, the use of the masculine gender here includes the feminine as well. It is significant to note that the rule begins with the words "in every petition for divorce". The rule therefore, covers both a petition by the husband as also a petition by the wife.

18. Mr. De Roze then pointed out that the construction put by the learned Court below to R. 10 is in direct conflict with the provisions of R. 20. S. 35 of the Act enables a party to the action to make a counter claim, by way of an answer. R. 20 provides that where the answer of the husband alleges adultery by the petitioner, obviously meaning thereby the wife such answer shall state the name, address and description of the alleged adulterer. Since there is no corresponding provision in regard to the answer of the wife containing an allegation of adultery by the petitioner husband, it was argued that in order to give an effective meaning to R. 10, it should be confined to the case of a male adulterer only.

19. Such contention might have been possible but for some other provisions in the Rules. R. 24 empowers the Court to award damages against a co-respondent when a decree for divorce is passed on the ground of adultery. The decree referred to in this rule is not confined to a decree passed on a husband's petition only. It applies to a petition for divorce at the instance of the wife as well. Consequently the combined effect of Rr. 10, 20 and 24 is that in a petition for divorce whether at the instance of the husband or the wife the adulterer if known should be named. While there may be a compulsion in the case of a petition by the husband there is none in the case of a petition by the wife. There is no prohibition either. On the other hand the claim for damages against the present petitioner, as laid in the suit makes it all the more necessary that she should remain on record.

20. The decisions cited by Mr. De Roze in support of his contentions do not appear to be relevant. The case of Razia Begam v. Sahebzadi Anwar Begam, AIR 1958 SC 886 is beside the point. There the appellant asked for a declaration that she was the legally wedded wife of respondent No. 3 and that she was entitled to maintenance from him. Respondent No. 3 in his written statement did not dispute that the appellant was married to him. At this stage respondent No. 1 claiming to be the lawful wife of respondent No. 3, and respondent No. 2 claiming to be the son of respondent No. 3 by respondent No. 1 filed an application for being added under O. 1, R. 10 (2) as persons interested. In view of the fact that a suit for a declaration of status of this kind, the parties actually before the Court are not the only persons affected but that it affects the future generation as well, it was held that they could be joined as persons interested. In the present matter before us we are concerned with the question of exclusion of a party as unnecessary and not the contrary.

21. The case of Yusuf Abdul Aziz v. State of Bombay, AIR 1954 SC 321 again is a case which decides a point entirely irrelevant for our purposes. It only lays down that Arts. 14 and 15 of the Constitution read together validates the provisions of S. 497 of the Penal Code which prohibits the woman from being punished as an abettor. Mr. De Roze wanted to argue that since a woman cannot be punished as an abettor in a criminal prosecution for adultery, she ought not to be subjected to answer a similar allegation in a civil action. In fact the whole argument of Mr. De Roze is that an alleged female adulteress is not liable to any action either Civil or Criminal and hence she cannot be made a party to the suit.

22. Whether she can be prosecuted or not as an abettor is provided for in the Penal Code itself. She is not. But that does not by implication mean that no relief can be claimed against her in other forums. The Penal Code exonerates her from entirely different considerations. In framing the law the authors of the Code said "The condition of the woman of this country is, unhappily, very different from that of the women of England and France; they are married while still children; they are often neglected for other wives while still young. They share the attentions of a husband with several rivals. To make laws for punishing the inconstancy of the wife, while the law admits the privilege of the husband to fill his Zennana with woman is a course which we are most reluctant to adopt". The reasoning may not hold good any longer today. Polygamy is gone. The evils which the framers of the law had in their mind no longer exist and it is time when the question of exemption should be re-appraised.

23. That however, is a different issue altogether. Impleading the petitioner in a wife's suit for divorce cannot be equated with the provisions of the penal code. Therefore, this decision relied on by Mr. De Roze is of no avail.

24. The next case cited, Sobha Ram v. Tika Ram, AIR 1936 All 454 lays down that a suit by the husband for damages against a person for enticing away his wife, is competent. Instead of supporting the petitioner it indirectly supports the case of the respondent. This decision holds that a husband has a right to the society of his wife and the infringement of the right by any other person is a tort. Conversely it may perhaps be said that a person — male or female — who infringes the right of the wife to the society of her husband is equally answerable.

25. The case of Ananda Lakshmi v. Narasimham, AIR 1975 Andh Pra 80 decides a different point altogether.

26. Finally Mr. De Roze relied on the case of Ramsay v. Boyle, (1903) 7 Cal WN 504. In that case the question was whether in a wife's petition for dissolution of her marriage with her husband on the ground of the latter's adultery, the court has jurisdiction to allow the lady with whom such adultery has been alleged to intervene as a party respondent. That was a suit under the Indian Divorce Act which contained special provisions as to who should be made a party and who need not. Their Lordships while holding that though a grievous injustice is done to a person whose conduct is under investigation while he is not able to say a word in his defence, regretted their inability to help the petitioner. That was because of the law as enacted. On principle their Lordships were against the contentions now put forth by Mr. De Roze.

27. There is yet another aspect of the matter from which the matter may be looked into. O. 1, R. 3 of the Code provides that all persons may be joined in one suit as defendants where (a) any rights to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist against such persons, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative and (b) if separate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise. Considered in the light of such provisions it seems that the petitioner was rightly joined in the suit particularly in view of the claim for damages against her. In view of such a claim she is not merely a proper party but a necessary party. A necessary party is one without whom no order can be made effectively while a proper party is one in whose absence an effective order can be made but whose presence is necessary for a complete and final adjudication on the questions involved in decision.

28. The Rule relating to joinder of the adulterer as a co-respondent proceeds on public policy to prevent collusion. In that sense the petitioner is a proper party. In order to facilitate the Court in considering the claim for damages, the petitioner is a necessary party. Therefore in any view of the matter it seems the petitioner cannot claim that her name should be struck off under O. 1, R. 10 (2) of the Code.

29. In the result the revisional application fails and is hereby dismissed.

30. The Rule is discharged.

31. There will be no order for costs.

32. Let the order be communicated to the Court below forthwith.

Bimal K. Banerjee, for Appellant; S. K. Biswas, for Respondents.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The petitioner made an application for revocation of the probate. His allegation is that his father, Panchkari, died on the 22nd Oct., 1940, leaving the petitioner as son of his first predeceased wife, opposite party No. 2 Nripanandini as his widow and some children by his second wife. Panchkari inherited the premises No. 8/1, Ghosepara Lane, from his father. He had another house at Mahinath Para Lane and 18 bighas of arable land at Garbhawanipur within the Police Station Amta. From one month before his death he was lying bed-ridden and at last on 22-10-1940 he expired. One week before his father's death the opposite party No. 1 in collusion with opposite party No. 2 took advantage of the bad state of health of his father and with a view to depriving him of the property, obtained Panchkari's thumb-impressions on the alleged fraudulent will said to have been executed on 20-10-1940. Actually that will was obtained by exercising undue influence and Panchkari had no knowledge of its contents. Opposite party No. 1 Bhabesh used to manage Panchkari's affairs. A few days before Panchkari's death, Bhabesh obtained petitioner's signature on a blank piece of paper on the false representation that the same would be used for settlement of some properties. There was no citation of that probate case on him. The land at Garbhawanipur was the petitioner's personal property. On the 26th April, 1957, he first came to know of alleged fraudulent and forged will in course of a domestic quarrel.

2. Opposite party Nos. 1-3 denied the petitioner's allegations. The defence is that the will was duly executed and attested. Panchkari executed the same voluntarily and with full knowledge of its contents. He had testamentary capacity to execute the same. The petitioner put his thumb impression on the will as an attesting witness.

3. The learned Subordinate Judge rejected the petitioner's contention and dismissed the suit with costs. Hence this appeal by the petitioner.

4. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant has stated that the learned Subordinate Judge has referred to certified copies, Exts. B and B

(1), and stated that in view of the contents of those documents there would be a presumption of service of citation. In fact, that is not at all a presumption of law. Reference has been made to the case of Promode Kumar Roy v. Sephalika Dutta reported in AIR 1957 Cal 631 to show that the court can go into the question of genuineness of the will. The court has to see whether the will was a genuine document and if the court's conscience has been satisfied. Reference has also been made to the case of (1971) 75 Cal WN 63 at page 66. It has been contended that the suspicious circumstances have not been removed. It is true that by executing the document (Ext. D) the petitioner stated that in fact a probate had been granted, but such statement has no value in the eye of law because, in the case of Brinda Chowdhraim v. Radhica Chowdhraim reported in (1885) ILR 11 Cal 492 at page 494 it has been stated that mere notice or knowledge of the probate proceeding before its grant is not sufficient to refuse the petitioner's application for revocation of the grant. The case reported in (1941) 45 Cal WN 44: (AIR 1941 Cal 353) (Manindra Chandra Roy Chowdhury v. Gopi Ballav Sen) has also been cited. It has been contended that the alleged scribe or attesting witnesses have not been examined. The beneficiaries are also the widow and children of Panchkari's second wife. By executing the alleged will, which was obtained by practising fraud and undue influence, the petitioner has been deprived of a share in the 'ancestral' property. So it is a fit case for revoking the grant of probate and there was no citation on him.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents has joined issue and stated that the will was a genuine document and there are no suspicious circumstances.

6. The date of alleged execution of the will is 22-10-1940 and the probate was granted on the 15th July, 1941. The petitioner had knowledge of the grant of the probate as will appear from his own document (Ext. D) executed by him in favour of Rash Behari Bhattacharya, O.P.W. 3, on 29-9-1954, that is, about 13 years after the probate was granted. At once it strikes one's mind, if there is a taint of fraud or collusion, why the petitioner avoided the court and failed to apply for revocation of the probate so long. There is no explanation why after making such statement in 1954 about the grant of probate, he waited till 1959, when the present case was filed. This unexplained delay is fatal to this case and proves the hollowness of the petitioner's allegations.

7. The learned Subordinate Judge referred to the illustration (a) of Sec. 114 of the Evidence Act and considered the entries in the certified copies, Exts. B and B (1). He was justified in doing so because the petitioner himself stated in the aforesaid document (Ext. D) executed on 29-9-1954 that his father had executed a will and a probate had been granted, vide the para 11 of that document. There is no statement therein that document is vitiated by fraud or collusion or undue influence. So the presumption of service of citation can also be inferred by the court on account of the statement made in the document (Ext. D).

8. Then about the case of Brinda v. Radhica (1885 ILR 11 Cal 492) (supra). That case has no application to the facts of the present one because the petitioner had knowledge of the probate after it had been granted by the court. In this case the petitioner himself admitted in the document (Ext. D) about the grant of the probate. There is an admission of the execution of the will and of the grant of the probate in exhibit D. In the Supreme Court Cases reported in AIR 1966 SC 405, AIR 1977 SC 409, AIR 1974 SC 117 at page 119 and in AIR 1977 SC 1712 it has been stated that an admission made by a party is substantive evidence of the fact admitted therein.

9. Let us now consider what the petitioner has stated about the alleged admission in that document (Ext. D). It will appear from the decision of Hidayatullah, J., reported in (1960) 2 SCA 153: (AIR 1960 SC 100) and of Sarkaria, J., reported in AIR 1979 SC 861 that an admission, though not conclusive is decisive on the point unless it is successfully withdrawn or proved to be erroneous. P.W. 1, Bibhuti, is the petitioner. He has admitted in his cross-examination that he sold the property to Rash Behari Bhattacharya on the 29th Sept., 1954, and he referred to the will in that kobala. After making the statement he cannot turn round and say at present that his father did not execute the will in question or it was obtained by fraud and undue influence. His admission has not been withdrawn or proved to be erroneous.

10. In the latest case of Sm. Indu Bala Bose v. Manindra Chandra Bose, reported in (1982) 1 SCC 20: (AIR 1982 SC 133)

it has been stated that where there are no suspicious circumstances, the fact that the scribe was not called or no evidence was offered as to who called the writer of the will, is of no importance.

11. We generally agree with the observations made by the learned Subordinate Judge and find that there are no suspicious circumstances. Two houses and a land are the subject matter of the disputed will. Petitioner sold one of those houses and the land as well. That shows that the provisions of that will were acted upon.

12. P.W. 1, Bibhuti, says that the will is a forged one. But he is constrained to admit that his thumb-impression appears in the disputed will. There is no manner of doubt that he also is an attesting witness to its execution.

13. P.W. 2, Nandalal Halder, says that Panchakari, who was seriously ill, lost power of speaking 7 days before his death. But he is a man of straw and his evidence cannot be believed.

14. O.P.W. 1, Satya Charan Mayur, is an attesting witness and is a graduate of the University of Calcutta. He says that the will was written by Tarapada Karati. It was read over to Panchkari by Santosh Panja, the executor understood the contents thereof and then he put his thumb impression therein. He is corroborated by O.P.W. 2, Bhabesh, who is the opposite party No. 1. We believe their statements.

15. We, therefore, find that the court's conscience has been satisfied. The Will is a genuine document and it was not obtained by practising fraud or undue influence. So the prayer for revoking the grant was rightly refused.

16. The appeal is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

BANERJEE, J.— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Manindra Nath Ghosh, for Petitioner;
Bhupendra Kumar Panda, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This application is directed against the order dated 5th December, 1981 passed by Sri D. Pal, Subordinate Judge, 1st Court, Howrah in T. S. No. 17 of 1946 rejecting the petitioner's application under Section 151, C. P. Code.

2. Tulsi Charan Jati filed the above suit for partition of the dwelling house and other lands. The preliminary decree was passed on June 16, 1947. Thereafter on or about 11th April, 1940 Tulsi sold his undivided four annas interest in the suit property to Gostha Behari Sadhukhan, father of the petitioner. On or about June 27, 1959 the opposite party filed an application under Section 4 of the Partition Act for pre-emption of the sale which was allowed. Later on the opposite party was directed to deposit Rupees 9,000 towards valuation of the property to be pre-empted.

3. A kobala was thereafter executed by the Court in favour of the opposite party. The opposite party prayed for delivery of possession with the help of police. The petitioner came up with the application under Section 151, C. P. Code objecting to the prayer of such delivery of possession. That was however rejected.

4. It is contended by Mr. Manindra Nath Ghosh, the learned Advocate for the petitioner that a proceeding under Section 4 of the Partition Act being a suit a final decree has to be drawn up and engrossed in non-judicial stamp before execution.

5. It is further contended that the learned Court below misread the order of the High Court. What their Lordships observed was that no decree need be drawn up in Letters Patent Appeal No. 20 of 1974 which was dismissed and not to mean that no final decree need be passed in the Partition Suit. Mr. Ghosh is perfectly justified in his contention. It was never intended by their Lordships that no final decree need be passed in the suit pending before the Subordinate Judge.

6. Mr. Bhupendra Kumar Panda, the learned Advocate for the opposite party argues that the petitioner without moving the superior Court against the order granting police help has come up with an application under Section 151, C. P. Code on some vague allegations. It is also contended by Mr. Panda that no question of making final decree arises, because the opposite party was allowed pre-emption in respect of undivided 4 annas share in possession of the petitioner. According to him the opposite party has his ancestral share in the dwelling house and to this 4 annas undivided share of the petitioner has been added and it is only after delivery of possession of the undivided 4 annas share that the Commissioner for partition can make partition and grant separate allotment to members of the Jati family and after that only the question of drawing up final decree would come in.

7. Under Section 44 of the Transfer of Property Act the purchaser of the share of a dwelling house was not entitled to joint possession or other common or part enjoyment of the house. But the purchaser in this case was successful in taking possession of the undivided 4 annas share in the dwelling house. So on an application under S. 4 of the Partition Act in Court directed the sale of 1/4th share of the petitioner in favour of the opposite party and in fact, a sale deed was executed by the Court in favour of the opposite party.

8. In Surendra Nath Achar v. Ram Chandra Hazra, reported in (1971) 75 Cal WN 195 it is held that the proper stage for making the application under S. 4 of the Partition Act would be when application for final decree for partition by appointment of a Commissioner to effect partition by metes and bounds has been made. If an application under Sec. 4 of Partition Act is made proper direction to the Commissioner should be that after allotments have been fixed the lot to which plaintiff will be entitled need have to be valued for exercise of the rights by defendants under S. 4 of the Partition Act. In this case there has already been a transfer of the petitioner's share in favour of the opposite party by the Court. Now the question is whether he can take delivery of possession before the final decree.

9. Unless there is a final decree and an allotment in favour of the petitioner, the petitioner cannot become the sole and exclusive owner of the portion transferred to him — so unless there is an allotment in favour of the petitioner, he continues to be the joint owner and in joint possession of the entire dwelling house. Accordingly, on such allotment the petitioner loses all interest in other plots. Thereafter the opposite party — pre-emptor can step into the shoes of the petitioner, and not before that. Exactly similar was the observation in the case of Gour Chandra Ghosh v. Prasanna Das, reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 743. Their Lordships at page 746 of the report observe as follows:—

"The parties, therefore, when they make an actual division by taking possession by metes and bounds according to the allotments, mentioned in the sale decree (Ext. 13), effect in law, a partition on those terms, amicably and without writing, and this will be an effective partition in law as between them conferring title to the respective allotments."

10. Thus in this view of the matter the opposite party by virtue of pre-emption cannot take delivery of unascertained portion of the dwelling house, as there was no regular partition. So, in agreement with Mr. Ghosh I would hold that the opposite party should not be allowed to take delivery of possession of the unascertained portion of the dwelling house in 4 annas share by police help.

11. The application is allowed without costs. The impugned order is set aside.

Application allowed.

Anehakana Sur and others, Petitioners
v. Abani Bhusan Sur and others, Respondents.

C. O. 3954 of 1981, D/- 24-2-1982.

Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 214 (1) (b) — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47 — Suit for recovery of profits misappropriated by Receiver — Suit decreed ex parte — Death of decree-holder and judgment-debtor — Execution filed by successors-in-interest of decree-holder — Amount claimed is not debt — Succession certificate is not necessary in execution proceeding.

A person appointed as Receiver in respect of a "Jalkar" in a Partition suit was found to have misappropriated the profits arising out of the "Jalkar". One of the parties to the partition filed a suit against the Receiver for recovery of the amount misappropriated. The suit was decreed ex parte. Both the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor died thereafter. The successors-in-interest of the decree-holder filed execution for realization of the decretal dues. The successors-in-interest of the judgment-debtor filed an objection under S. 47 of C. P. C., contending that in view of S. 214 of the Succession Act, execution could not proceed except on production of the succession certificate.

Held, that the claim in the suit was apparently not a claim for a liquidated sum. To all intents and purposes it was a suit for accounts. An action claiming an account is not an action for recovery of debt and is not covered by S. 214 of Succession Act. In order to sustain proceeding in execution by heirs of deceased decree-holder, therefore, a succession certificate is not necessary, irrespective of whether the decree has been put into execution before or after death of the decree-holder. Case law discussed.

In order to attract bar of S. 214 (1) (b) of Succession Act the application must be for execution of a decree or order for payment of debt. A decree for payment of a debt presupposes a debt existing before the passing of the decree. A judgment-debt created by the decree itself is outside the purview of S. 214 (1) (b).

Rabindra Nath Mitra and Debasis Mitra, for Petitioners; Manmohan Mukherjee, for Respondents.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— This revisional application at the instance of the judgment-debtors raises a short question whether the Decree-holder opposite parties are entitled to proceed in execution of a decree obtained by their predecessor-in-interest without production of a Succession Certificate.

2. The judgment-debtors (hereinafter called the petitioners) raised an objection that the execution case was not maintainable. This objection under S. 47 of Civil P. C. was registered as Misc. Case No. 6 of 1980 of the 7th Court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore and the learned Subordinate Judge has, by his order dated Aug. 31, 1981 overruled the contention. Hence the revisional application.

3. The application has been heard on notice to and upon contest by the opposite parties,

4. The controversy arose under the following circumstances and there is no dispute as to the facts leading to the controversy. The predecessor-in-interest of the opposite parties instituted a suit for recovery of damages being M. S. 10 of 1966. The principal allegation in the suit was that Dilip Kumar Sur, the predecessor-in-interest of the petitioners was appointed receiver in respect of a Jalkar in a Partition suit between the predecessors of the parties and that while acting as such Receiver the said Dilip Kumar Sur, Receiver misappropriated the profits arising out of the Jalkar which he was bound to refund. On such allegation Amiya Kumar Sur, predecessor-in-interest of the opposite parties instituted M. S. 10 of 1966 for realisation of a sum of Rs. 36,498.45. The suit was decreed ex parte on 14-3-1967, in favour of Amiya Kumar Sur. The decree-holder Amiya Kumar Sur died on Nov. 30, 1975 whereupon the opposite parties filed a money execution for realisation of the decretal dues, against the present petitioner, Dilip Kumar Sur having died on 21-5-1968. The petitioners filed an objection under S. 47 of the Code contending inter alia, that in view of the provisions of S. 214 of the Succession Act the execution could not be proceeded with except on production of a succession certificate. The learned Subordinate Judge has rejected the objection by the order impugned.

5. There is no dispute that the claim in the Money suit was a claim for recovery of damages in the hands of a Receiver who was alleged to have misappropriated the profits while in possession as Receiver. Apparently it was not a claim for a liquidated sum. To all intents and purposes it was a suit for accounts. Question is whether such a claim is a 'debt' within the meaning of S. 214 of the Succession Act. An action claiming an account is not an action for recovery of debt. Debt implies a present obligation to pay a liquidated sum of money. A claim for an unliquidated sum can hardly be called a 'debt' (see Sabju v. Noordin, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 139).

6. Mr. Mitter appearing on behalf of the petitioners referred to the case of Sahadev v. Sk. Sakhawat, (1908) 12 Cal WN 145 in support of his contention that production of a succession certificate is necessary. The facts of this case were entirely different. There, after a preliminary decree had been made in a mortgage suit, the mortgagee died and his sons were substituted on the record and an order absolute was made in their favour. The proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property being insufficient, they applied for a personal decree for the balance. It was held that until the applicants obtained a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act no such decree could be made in their favour. Such a view was taken because there could be no doubt that there was a 'debt' and the whole debt accrued due on the date fixed for repayment in the bond. Even though the creditor was bound to seek a particular remedy in the first instance for the satisfaction of his claim but nevertheless the debt was all the while in existence and in full vigour. The right of realisation as against the debtors personally did not give a separate and independent cause of action, the debt being one debt only. This decision therefore cannot assist the petitioners in contending that claim for unliquidated damages is a debt.

7. The next case relied on, Bancharam v. Adya Nath, (1909) 13 Cal WN 966 is similarly clearly distinguishable on facts. It was held in this case that in the case of a debt existing in the life of a creditor which did not become payable until after his death, his heirs cannot obtain a decree without the production of a certificate. The distinguishing feature of the case is the existence of a debt in the life of the creditor.

8. In the case of Bisseswar v. Durgadas, (1905) ILR 32 Cal 418 it was held that a suit for accounts is not a suit for the recovery of a debt within the meaning of S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act and that it was an abuse of language to call such a liability as debt (see also Penta Reddi v. Anki Reddi, (1899) ILR 22 Mad 144 (Notes)).

9. Hence it is apparent on the authorities cited that the claim in the money suit was not a claim for the recovery of a debt.

10. Mr. Mitter however, next contended that the petitioners being the heirs of the judgment-debtor under decree obtained in the Money Suit, the opposite parties, who are the heirs of the judgment creditor, since deceased, would be required to obtain a Succession Certificate before realising the debt. He conceded that the position might have been different had the execution case been initiated during the lifetime of Dilip Kumar Sur and Amiya Kumar Sur and the petitioners were substituted on the record of the execution case. To us it seems that the fact that the decree has been put into execution after their death does not improve matters for the petitioners.

11. That this is so would be clear upon a reading of S. 214 of the Succession Act. It provides that no court shall (a) pass a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt to a person claiming on succession to be entitled to the effects of the deceased person or to any part thereof, or (b) proceed, upon an application of a person claiming to be so entitled, to execute against such a debtor a decree or order for the payment of his debt, except on proof of one of the five kinds of representative title enumerated in the section.

12. The use of the expressions "such a debtor and his debt" in cl. (b) referred to hereinbefore make it abundantly clear that the 'debt' referred to cl. (b) is referable to a "debt" as in cl. (a). In other words, unless the original claim in the suit which was the foundation for the decree was a 'debt', cl. (b) would not be attracted. And we have already indicated that the original claim for damages on accounting could not come within the meaning of 'debt'. Consequently, in order to sustain a proceeding in execution by the heirs of the deceased decree-holder, a succession certificate would not be necessary.

13. Mr. Mitter finally referred to the case of Tarak Dasi v. Batta Krishna Roy reported in AIR 1964 Cal 42. This decision instead of supporting the case of the petitioners goes very much against them. It supports the view we have taken by holding that in order to attract the bar of S. 214 (1) (b) the application must be for execution of a decree or order for payment of a debt. A decree for payment of a debt presupposes a debt existing before the passing of the decree. A judgment debt created by the decree itself is outside the purview of S. 214 (1) (b). Although the decree that was sought to be executed there was one for costs, the principle why S. 214 (1) (b) would not operate as a bar has been clearly explained and we concur with the view so taken.

14. Such being the position, there is nothing to interfere with the order impugned in this revisional application. The application is accordingly dismissed.

15. There will be no order for costs.

16. Let the order be communicated to the court below forthwith.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Revision application dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 380

M. N. ROY, J.

Krishna Narayan Das and others, Petitioners v. Additional District Magistrate etc. and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 4256 (W) of 1977, D/- 9-7-1981.

(A) West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Sec. 3 — Order under S. 3 — Giving of prior notice and hearing to person affected, not contemplated — Remedy of aggrieved party is to complain to authority concerned after service of order under S. 3 (2). (Para 11)

(B) West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Sec. 3 (1) — Public purpose — What constitutes public purpose — Requisition order — Issuance of rolled up order without scoring out irrelevant purposes — Order not sustainable. (Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 6).

It is true that it is impossible to define precisely the expression 'public purpose'. All the facts and circumstances of a case will have to be clearly examined in order to determine whether a public purpose has been established. Prima facie, Government is the best judge as to whether a requisition was for a public purpose, but they are not the sole judge. The Courts will have jurisdiction and it will be their duty to determine the matter, whenever a question or any dispute on that aspect is brought up or canvassed. In deciding such question or any fact, on a challenge to requisition order being thrown, the Court will thus have to see also whether opinion was formed duly and bona fide. In fact, the provisions of the Act, do also contemplate such formation of opinion. The public purpose involved behind or in a requisition proceeding, will also have to be proved, if the act or action, as taken, is required to be sustained or supported.

The purposes of a requisition order would be that by reading the same or going through the same one should be in a position to follow and ascertain whether the requisition was ordered for purposes of drainage, irrigation, road construction or transport. The absence of striking out a purpose or purposes not required or unnecessary and issuance of a rolled up requisition order, as in the instant case, would establish a case of non-application of mind of the authorities concerned, apart from vagueness. The requisitioning authority should file an affidavit explaining purposes for which requisition was made and how mind was applied. No such affidavit having been filed in the instant case the order of requisition was quashed. (1966) 70 Cal WN 503, Rel. on. (Paras 11, 15)

(C) West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), S. 3 (1) and Preamble — Requisition of land which was a tank used for pisciculture — Validity. (Land Acquisition Act (1894), Ss. 4 and 6).

The land requisitioned was a tank which was used for rearing fish and pisciculture. The defence of Special Land Acquisition Collector was that as the bed of the tank was dried up or was drying up, it was temporarily leased out to a third party for augmenting source of revenue. It was unauthorised under the Act. There was no compliance with the preamble of the Act which provides for requisition and speedy acquisition of land. As the definition of 'land' in S. 3 (a) of the Land Acquisition Act does not include fishery, the said Act cannot be invoked by State Government for requisition of the land in question. When the requisition in question was not admittedly for the purpose of a fishery or for letting out the same for that purpose, the lease of the fishery was highly improper, irregular, unauthorised and mala fide. Requisition order in respect of such land had to be quashed. (Paras 13, 14, 15)

Samarendra Kumar Dutta and Sujit Kumar Laik, for Petitioners; Debaprasad Mukherjee, for Respondents.

ORDER :— The petitioners, who have claimed to be the owners of the lands (hereinafter referred to as the said lands), as involved in the order of requisition (hereinafter referred to as the said order), under S. 3 (1) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), obtained this Rule on 9th Aug.

1977. At the time of the issue of the Rule, no interim order was granted, but liberty was given, to ask for appropriate interim order, on notice to the other side and although such prayer for interim order was made, the same was not entertained. The respective particulars of the petitioners, whereby they entered into and possessed their shares in the said lands and so also the names of their respective vendors have been duly disclosed in the petition.

2. It has also been stated that the purchase of petitioner No. 3, Sri Binapani Dasi from her vendor was in respect of a tank measuring more or less .93 acre in Plot No. 40 and the bank of the tank along with garden measuring more or less .36 acre in Plot No. 36/1492. That apart, one Banka Behari Rajak, father of petitioner No. 4, Sm. Jyotsna Dasi and that also of the petitioner No. 2 Kamal Krishna Rajak, possessed the said tank as a lessee. It has in short been stated and claimed that after the purchase as aforesaid, the petitioners have been occupying the said tank, bank of the same and the garden and have reared fish. It has been stated, further that the tank in question, has been used and utilised for pisciculture or fishing and so also the bank of the same, for operations attached to the same. The petitioners have stated that the tank would be about .93 acre and the bank of the same would be about 1.20 acres, thus the total area of the tank and the bank of the same would come to about 2.13 acres. It has been stated by the petitioners that the tank in question was not used for purposes other than what has been mentioned above and more particularly for domestic and irrigation purposes and the tank in question was not adjoining to any homestead. The petitioners categorically claimed that the tank in question would be a fishery in terms of the definition in S. 2 (3) of the West Bengal Fisheries (Requisition and Acquisition) Act 1965 (hereinafter referred to as the said 1965 Act), which defines "Fishery", as any land whereon water is confined naturally or artificially whether periodically or throughout the year for pisciculture or for fishing and includes a 'tank' 'fishery' as defined in the Explanation to cl. (e) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 6 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act, 1953, as also the fish in such fishery or 'tank-fishery', but does not include a tank not exceeding one acre in area adjoining a homestead and used for purposes of irrigation or domestic purposes :

3. It was the case of the petitioners that on or about 12th Jan. 1977, they received notices signed by the respondent authorities concerned as issued under S. 3 (1) of the said Act, intimating the purpose of the requisition, to be for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community, viz. for providing proper facilities for transport/communication/irrigation/drainage, for acquisition for stock yard offices and godowns (PWD) Roads Department at Suri, in the District of Birbhum. It has been alleged by the petitioners that such requisition was not bona fide and in fact the same was made in a mala fide way, manner and intention or at the machination of Shri S. K. Mondal, Executive Engineer, PWD Roads, Respondent No. 4, who had the idea and intention to enjoy the fish as grown by the petitioners. In fact, it has been alleged, at least on two given dates, the said Respondent No. 4, caught fish by engaging his men from the tank of Shri Banku Behari Rajak, for which General diary entries have been lodged. That apart, it was claimed by the said Banku Behari Rajak, that there was fish worth about Rs. 8,000/- to Rs. 10,000/- in the tank.

4. It was alleged by the petitioners that in or about the month of June 1977, they came to learn from the office of the Executive Engineer concerned, that the lease of the said tank was granted to one Dharendra Dhibar, Respondent No. 6, for three years and on hearing such, necessary demand for justice was made.

5. It was claimed and contended by the petitioners that the said Act, was neither attracted nor applicable in the case of the said tank, as the same was a tank fishery within the meaning of the said 1965 Act and as such, apart from other infirmities, the requisition as challenged, was made in colourable exercise of power of the Respondent No. 4, Executive Engineer. The petitioners, in view of the admitted fact of letting out the tank fishery to Respondent No. 6, after requisitioning the same for the purposes as mentioned above, claimed the same to be mala fide too. Such charge of mala fide nature was sought to be established, as there were other lands lying and available for the purpose and according to the petitioner even though these lands were much more and better suited for the purpose and object of the requisition, they were not touched and on the other hand, the said tank has been sought to be requisitioned by the authorities concerned at the instance of the Respondent No. 4, Executive Engineer and that too for the purposes of a private individual like the said Respondent No. 6.

6. Shri Priya Lal Aich, Special Land Acquisition Collector, Suri, Respondent No. 2 (hereinafter referred to as the said deponent), had initially filed on affidavit-in-opposition dated 28th Jan. 1978, for his behalf and on behalf of Respondent Nos. 1, 4 and 5, claiming himself to be acquainted with the facts, as he was looking after the case. There has been no affidavit filed by the Executive Engineer, Respondent No. 4 and for that, Mr. Dutt, appearing in support of the Rule, made serious comments. In fact, he commented, that the allegations of mala fide, as duly made against that Respondent or his conduct have not been duly controverted.

7. The said deponent has stated that the petitioners received the notices of requisition on 11th and 12th Jan. 1977 and the fact of rearing fish in the said tank, was not known to the respondents. He has also stated that the instant requisition was not made at the instance of the Respondent No. 4, Executive Engineer or that the said officer had the idea or intention to enjoy the fish of the tank as alleged. In fact, it has been stated that when possession of the said tank was taken on 15th Jan. 1977, there was no fish in the tank. The said deponent has of course admitted that the tank in question was leased out to Respondent No. 6, for a period of three years. He has denied the allegation that the fish of the tank was caught by the Respondent No. 4 or by his men and at his instance. The said deponent has also claimed that the said Act was applicable in this case and the same was duly applied. The said affidavit-in-opposition was replied to by the petitioners by their affidavit-in-reply dated 8th March 1978 and in this affidavit, they have not pleaded any new fact.

8. There was another supplementary-affidavit dated 7th April 1978, filed by the answering Respondents, which was allowed to be filed by the order dated 12th May 1978 and in the circumstances as mentioned therein. In this affidavit, the said deponent has stated that the requisition in question was pure and simple for public purpose and the plot number of the concerned tank under requisition, would be 36 and not 40 as alleged. He has stated further that the Birbhum Highway Division Office was started in September, 1972 and prior thereto, there was one sub-divisional office at Suri (Tilpara), under the control of the Executive Engineer, Burdwan High way Division. There was no Divisional P. W. (Roads) Departments' Office in the district of Birbhum and such division was created by splitting up of works of construction of Roads of Birbhum District separately from those of Burdwan District and in the process of developing such Divisional Office into a full-fledged one, it was necessary that some lands adjoining and contiguous, be requisitioned for the sake of convenience and that place was most suited for properly guarding the costly materials and was also suitable for the office site.

9. It has also been stated that the requisition in question was also absolutely necessary for storing and stocking for measurement of road construction materials and also for construction of godowns and offices required for road building purposes, apart from erecting building for offices and for proper development of the District Office as mentioned above. The said deponent has further stated that since the bed of the tank became very much shallow and filled up in many places and the ultimate object and aim was to fill-up the tank and to construct in near future, structure for godowns and offices for the safety and preservation of road building materials, so after taking possession on 15th Jan. 1977, a lease to the Respondent No. 6 was granted on 23rd June, 1977, as he was the highest bidder, at Rs. 600/-, for three years, subject to the right of termination with notice. This settlement, according to the said deponent, was done in accordance with PWD Code and also the general convention of the Department and for public purpose, apart from earning extra revenue for the time being. In their reply dated 30th May 1978, to the said supplementary affidavit, the petitioners have denied all the material allegations and claimed that the purposes as disclosed now, were neither bona fide nor genuine or proper. It has also been claimed that the said deponent has made untrue statements, when he has stated about the settlement of the tank to the Respondent No. 6 being the highest bidder, as there was no tender or auction at all.

10. The total land would be .93 and 2.13 acres i.e. 3.06 acres and the notice under the said Act was received by the petitioners. Those lands have also been claimed to have been purchased by the petitioners. In the pleadings and the facts as mentioned hereinbefore, Mr. Dutt, appearing in support of the Rule contended firstly, that the requisition in question, was beyond the scope and purview of the said Act and in any event, S. 3 of the said Act, which is to the following effect:—

3. (1) If in the opinion of the (State) Government or any person authorised in this behalf by the (State) Government it is necessary so to do for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community or for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, irrigation or drainage, the (State) Government or the person so authorised, as the case may be, may, by order in writing, requisition any land and may make such further orders as appear to it or to him to be necessary or expedient in connection with the requisitioning :

Provided that no land used for the purpose of religious worship shall be requisitioned under this section.

(2) An order under sub-section (1) shall be served in the prescribed manner on the owner of the land and where the order relates to land in occupation (of an occupier, not being the owner of the land, also on such occupier).

(3) If any person fails to comply with an order made under sub-sec. (1), the Collector or any person authorised by him in writing in this behalf shall execute the order in such manner as he considers expedient and may,—

(a) if he is a Magistrate, enforce the delivery of possession of the land in respect of which the order has been made to himself, or

(b) if he is not a Magistrate, apply to a Magistrate or, in Calcutta as defined in clause (11) of Section 5 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, to the Commissioner of Police, and such Magistrate or Commissioner, as the case may be, shall enforce the delivery of possession of such land to him, had or has no application in the facts of the Case. Mr. Dutt secondly contended that the impugned order of requisition or the proceedings relating thereto, was absolutely null and void, bad and unauthorised, apart from being illegal and irregular, as there was abject non application of mind and the order in question was as vague as the same could be. He, thirdly, submitted that since the requisition of fishery, if at all, was governed and guided by the provisions of the said 1965 Act, so the action for requisition of the tank fishery as taken under the said Act was unauthorised, improper and without jurisdiction and fourthly, it was contended by Mr. Dutta that there was no public purpose involved in the instant requisition and the entire action was taken or resorted to in colourable use and exercise of power, authority and jurisdiction. That apart, Mr. Dutta claimed the process of requisition in this case, to be a mala fide one.

11. In support of his first and second submissions as mentioned above, Mr. Dutt referred to the preamble of the said Act and so also to the provisions of Section 3 of the same. The said Act was enacted, for making provisions for the requisition and speedy acquisition of land, which, in terms of Section 2 (b1) has the same meaning as in the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, for certain purposes viz. for the purposes of maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community and for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, irrigation and drainage and S. 3 of the same lays down, how and in what manner the power of requisition, is to be exercised. The preamble of the said Act and S. 3 of the same as mentioned above, do specify the different purposes, for which the provisions of the said Act, can be put into action or shelter under the same can be taken in a given case of requisition, and the said Act or the provisions of the same or the machineries under the same cannot be employed, for requisitions other than those as mentioned or contemplated under the said Act or specified therein. In any event, the public purpose involved behind or in a requisition proceeding under the said Act, will also have to be proved, if the act or action, as taken, is required to be sustained or supported. In terms of the determinations in the case of Narendra Nath Tripathy v. State of West Bengal, (1974) 78 Cal WN 397, it has been observed that the said Act is intended to provide for the requisition and speedy acquisition of land for certain purposes, inter alia of maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, irrigation or drainage. A perusal of the relevant provisions of the Act indicates that there is no express provision for a hearing before an order of requisition is made. The application of the principle of natural justice also appears to be excluded by necessary implication and if a contemplated requisition in public interest is on a vast scale affecting innumerable persons it may not be possible nor practicable to afford any opportunity for hearing before requisition except at the cost of frustrating the scheme which is the basis of requisition. In such cases there will be no scope for affording any opportunity of hearing before requisition which by reason of attending circumstances will oust the application of the principles of natural justice. The views as expressed in the above case, on notice and principles of natural justice, have, in fact been followed in the case of Sushila Debi Fomra v. State of West Bengal, (1980) 84 Cal WN 661 and in that case, it has also been observed that the said Act does not contemplate the giving of notice to and hearing the person affected before making an order under Section 3 of the Act. Such a provision is not implicit in the Act. The only remedy available to the aggrieved person is that he is at liberty to make a representation to the authority concerned after the order is served under Section 3 (2). On the submissions as aforesaid or in support of them, Mr. Dutt, made a further reference to the order of requisition, wherein all the purposes were kept and maintained and were not scored through. That, according to him, was enough to establish the allegations of non-application of mind and vagueness or to establish the invalidity or irregularity of the concerned order. The affidavit filed by the respondents has not appropriately answered the effect of the allegations categorically made for non-striking out the eventualities not required by the requisition in question. The purposes of a requisition order would be that by reading the same or going through the same, one should be in a position to follow and understand or ascertain, in terms of the determinations in the case of Pramatho Nath Mukherjee v. State of West Bengal, (1966) 70 Cal WN 503, whether the requisition was ordered for the purpose of drainage, irrigation, road construction or transport. The absence of such striking out the interest, purposes or the purposes not required or unnecessary and the issuance of a rolled up requisition order would establish a case of non-application of mind of the authorities concerned, apart from vagueness. The above being the position, it was expected that the requisitioning authority should have filed an affidavit, at least explaining the purposes, for which the requisition was made and how mind was applied. Unfortunately, there is no such affidavit filed and the defence as put forward, which have been mentioned hereinbefore, and were referred to by Mr. Mukherjee, were not very convincing.

12. Since it was claimed and established by Mr. Mukherjee that the lands as requisitioned in their entirety, were not fishery, but such fishery formed a part of the lands as requisitioned, the third submissions of Mr. Dutt, as referred to hereinbefore, would not be available in their entirety, in respect of or against the requisition and the same in my view, would thus be available only in respect of the part or portion of the requisition order, covering the fishery and that too for the reasons as mentioned hereinafter.

13. If the object of the requisition was for construction of office buildings or such buildings as mentioned in the affidavits, then the submissions of Mr. Dutt and more particularly on his fourth submission that there was no public purpose involved behind the requisition in question, cannot be accepted. It is true that it is impossible to define precisely the expression 'public purpose'. All the facts and circumstances of a case will have to be clearly examined in order to determine whether a public purpose has been established. Prima facie, the Government is the best judge as to whether a requisition was for a public purpose, but they are not the sole Judge. The Courts will have jurisdiction and it will, in my view, be their duty to determine the matter whenever a question or any dispute on that aspect is brought up or canvassed. In deciding such question or any fact, on a challenge to the requisition order being thrown, the Court will thus have to see also whether opinion was formed duly and bona fide. In fact, the provisions of the said Act, do also contemplate such formation of opinion. The defence of the answering respondents in the instant case was that, as the bed of the tank was dried up or was drying up, so the same was temporarily leased out to the respondent No. 6, as he was the highest bidder for augmenting the source of revenue. This, in my view, would not certainly establish a public purpose, rather demolish such purpose, if the same was the real basis of the requisition. In fact, so far the tank or the lands covering the same, that was the only defence. Such defence, in my opinion, was not bona fide and the defence as taken, supports the fifth submissions of Mr. Dutt on mala fide. When the requisition in question was not admittedly for the purpose of a fishery or for letting out the same for that purpose, the lease of the fishery as given to the respondent No. 6 of a portion of the requisitioned lands, was highly improper, irregular and unauthorised. Such lease as granted, has expired, even then, I have no other alternative but to hold as aforesaid, as the said subsequent leasing out to the Respondent No. 6, was not bona fide. While on this aspect, it should be noted that Mr. Dutt referred to the determinations in the case of Sailendra Nath Roy v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1980 Cal 13. In that case, lands were sought to be acquired for the purpose of providing facilities for transport and widening of road and in the alternative, for maintenance of supplies and services essential to the life of community and the settlement of those lands were made in respect of small traders, displaced as a result of some other acquisition. It has been observed that such settlement cannot be said to be connected with or incidental to the facilities for transport and widening of road and in the alternative for maintenance of supplies and services essential to the community.

14. A fishery, in the light of the Bench determinations in the case of Pasupati Roy v. State of West Bengal, (1973) 77 Cal WN 157: (AIR 1974 Cal 99), does not come within the purview of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 as the definition of land in that Act does not include fishery as such in that view of the matter it cannot be said that the said Act could be invoked by the State Government for the purpose of requisition of all the lands as involved in this case. At least a portion of the lands as requisitioned or a part thereof, was a tank, which was used for rearing fish and pisciculture, which fact was also established from the action of the respondents, in leasing out the said part or portion to the respondent No. 6 for such purposes and that fact or act or action would thus establish that requisition of the lands, in so far as they related to the lands covering the tank, which was used or after requisition intended to be used for the purposes as aforesaid through the respondent No. 6, was inappropriate and unauthorised under the said Act. Apart from the above, if a part or portion of the land, as in this case, was leased out to a third person for augmentation the source of revenue, which was the case of the answering Respondents, then, there was in my view, no compliance with the preamble of the said Act, which provides for the requisition and speedy acquisition of land.

15. For what has been indicated above, the requisition so far the lands covering the tank concerned, which was used for the purposes as mentioned above, was bad, void and irregular, apart from being without jurisdiction, unauthorised and mala fide and the order of requisition in respect of the other lands suffered from the necessary infirmities of non-application of mind as the order in question was a roiled up one and the irrelevant purposes have not been scored through or struck off.

16. So the Rule succeeds and the same is made absolute for the reasons as mentioned above. There will be no order as to costs.

17. This order will not prejudice the Respondents now, to proceed in the matter of requisitioning the lands in accordance with law, if they so intend or are so advised.

Rule made absolute.

M/s. West Bengal Decorating Co., Petitioner v. M/s. Damodar Das Daga, Opposite Party.

C. O. No. 3790 of 1981, D/- 10-3-1982.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 37, R. 3 — Summary procedure — Procedure for appearance of defendant — Suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered — Leave to defend filed beyond time — Condonation of delay, (Limitation Act (36 of 1963), S. 5).

Where a suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered was held to be within the purview of O. 37, C.P.C. and was permitted to be continued under the summary procedure the delay in filing the application for leave to defend was condoned since the order was passed before the summons was served on the defendant, and the defendant was under the impression that the order was passed by the Judge in his administrative capacity and while entering appearance the defendant had challenged the jurisdiction of the court. (Para 8)

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 37, R. 1 — Applicability — Suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered — It does not come within meaning of O. 37. (Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930), S. 55).

CZ/DZ/B212/82/SMA/MVJ

A suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered which is not founded on a written contract cannot be said to arise on an enactment. Therefore, such a suit does not come within the meaning of O. 37, AIR 1963 Cal 9, Disting. (Para 16)

A cause of action does not arise under or on an enactment unless it arises out of and depends on the enactment, so that the plaintiff must show both in stating and in proving his case that his right to recover stands on the enactment. The claim of the nature as made in the instant suit cannot be said to arise on an enactment. It arises from the contract of sale and the breach thereof. It is apparent upon a reading of S. 55 of Sale of Goods Act that the claim, for the price of the goods really arises from the terms of the contract of sale. It would be unreasonable to hold that because the Act enables the seller to sue the buyer for the price, the claim must be held to arise on the enactment. (Para 14)

AIR 1963 Cal 9 15, 16

S. N. Sanyal, for Petitioner; G. S. Tandon and V. N. Bajpayee, for Opposite Party.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— These two revisional applications, both at the instance of the defendant of Com. Suit No. 510 of 1979 of the City Civil Court, are directed against two Orders dated Jan. 11, 1980 and September 23, 1981.

2. The plaintiff opposite party instituted the above suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered together with interest, under O. 37, C.P.C. The learned Registrar of that court being not certain whether such a suit could be instituted under O. 37, placed the matter before the Bench for orders. The court by its order dated January 11, 1980, held that the unpaid price of goods sold is in the nature of a 'debt' and the liability arises out of an enactment, viz, the Sale of Goods Act. Hence, in view of the amended provisions of O. 37 it was held that the suit came within the purview of that order.

3. Thereafter the summary procedure for suits under O. 37 was adopted and the summons having been served, the defendant petitioner entered appearance and filed an application under sub-rule (5), R. 3, O. 37 praying for leave to defend the suit unconditionally. The defendant claimed in the said application that the plaintiff's claim was fictitious and that the defendant had a substantial defence to put forth. It was also claimed that such a suit could not come within the meaning of O. 37 of the Code. This application for leave to defend was filed beyond time and the defendant also explained the reason for the delay and prayed for condonation of the same.

4. By the order dated Sept. 23, 1981 the learned Judge, held "the cause shown by the defendant for the delay in filing the application for leave is considered sufficient. Permission should therefore be granted to the defendant to defend the suit on furnishing security to the extent of Rs. 11,500."

5. On such findings the learned Judge allowed the defendant's application and granted leave to defend the suit on condition of furnishing cash security of Rs. 11,500 which represented the total claim in the suit.

6. Being aggrieved the defendant filed a revisional application challenging the propriety and correctness of the Order. Subsequently a separate application was filed challenging the order dated January 11, 1980 by which order the suit was found to be governed by the provisions of Order 37 of the Code. This second application was obviously filed beyond time and was accompanied by an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.

7. All the applications have been heard together on notice to and upon contest by the plaintiff opposite party.

8. In the application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act, it has been pleaded that the order dated January 11, 1980 was passed before the summons was served on the defendant, that the defendant was under the impression that the order was passed by the learned Judge in his administrative capacity and that while entering appearance the defendant had challenged the jurisdiction of the court, in passing the order permitting the suit to continue under the summary procedure. Having heard the learned Advocates, we are inclined to condone the delay in challenging the first order in the peculiar circumstances of the case.

9. The delay being condoned we are now concerned with the more important question namely whether such a suit really comes within the meaning of O. 37. The contention of the petitioner is that it does not while Mr. Tandon in opposing the applications contends that in view of the amended provisions of the Code, the suit falls well within the class of suits contemplated by Order 37.

10. Before coming to consider this aspect of the matter, we may at once point out that the second order dated September 23, 1981 suffers from an apparent infirmity in so far as the learned Judge does not appear to have at all considered whether or not the defendant had succeeded in making out a substantial defence at all. But this however is a question which we may be required to consider if at all it is found that the suit comes within the meaning of Order 37.

11. Admittedly the suit could not come under the provisions of Order 37 as it stood prior to amendment. By the amendment, the scope of Order 37 has been enlarged and extended to include the specified classes of suits enumerated in the amended provisions.

12. Sub-rule (2) of Rule 1 of Order 37 as it now stands reads as follows:

"(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-rule (1), the Order applies to the following classes of suits, namely,—

(a) Suits upon bills of exchange, hundies and promissory notes;

(b) Suits in which the plaintiff seeks only to recover a debt or a liquidated demand in money payable by the defendant, with or without interest, arising—

(i) on a written contract; or

(ii) on an enactment, where the sum sought to be recovered is a fixed sum of money or in the nature of a debt other than a penalty;

13. It is obvious that clause (a) has no application. In invoking clause (b) sub-clause (i) also has to be excluded because it is nobody's case that the claim is founded on a written contract. Therefore the suit may be held to come under Order 37 only if it can be shown that the plaintiff is seeking to recover, by the suit, a debt or a liquidated demand in money arising on an enactment.

14. By referring to Section 55 of the Sale of Goods Act, Mr. Tandon contends that the claim arises under the provisions of the said Act. In fact that was the finding of the learned Judge when he passed the first order impugned before us. Section 55 (1) of the said Act provides as follows "where under a contract of sale the property in the goods has passed to the buyer and the buyer wrongfully neglects or refuses to pay for the goods according to the terms of the contract, the seller may sue him for the price of the goods". It is apparent upon a reading of the section aforesaid that the claim for the price of the goods really arises from the terms of the contract of sale. It would be unreasonable to hold that because the Act enables the seller to sue the buyer for the price, the claim must be held to arise on the enactment. That it is not so is apparent on the language of the section itself. A cause of action does not arise under or on an enactment unless it arises out of and depends on the enactment, so that the plaintiff must show both in stating and in proving his case that his right to recover stands on the enactment. In our view the claim of the nature as made in this suit cannot be said to arise on an enactment. It arises from the contract of sale and the breach thereof.

15. Mr. Tandon drew our attention to a somewhat analogous provision contained in Chapter XIII A of the Rules of the High Court at Calcutta in its Original Side and argued upon a reference to the case of Mitra Mukherjee & Co. v. Ajit Kumar, AIR 1963 Cal 9, that a suit for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered really falls within the category of a summary suit contemplated by Chapter XIII A of the Rules.

"1. The provisions of this Chapter shall not be applicable save to suits.—

(A) in which the plaintiff seeks to recover a debt or liquidated demand in money payable by the defendant with or without interest arising—

(i) on a contract express or implied; or
(ii) on an enactment where the sum sought to be recovered is a fixed sum of money or in the nature of a debt other than a penalty; or

16. In spite of the seemingly similar words used in the Rule aforementioned and the provisions of Order 37 of the Code, there is a world of difference in so far as cl. (i) is concerned. Clause (i) of Order 37 relates to a suit arising on a written contract whereas cl. (i) of R. 1 of Chapter XIII A relates to a suit arising on a contract express or implied. The case of Mitra Mukherjee & Co. (supra) has to be read in the context of this difference. This apart, that case, though arising out of a claim for recovery of price of goods sold and delivered, and brought under Chapter XIII A of the High Court Rules (Original Side), considered the question of appealability of an order directing furnishing of security to the extent of the claim in the suit. It holds that such an order is appealable and if on appeal such an order is set aside, the decree that was drawn up pursuant to the non-compliance with the order, will automatically disappear. The decision did not consider under which particular clause of Rule 1, the suit was categorised as a summary suit. The trial proceeded on the footing that it was a summary suit. It is likely and that seems to be more plausible, that it was so held because the claim rested on a contract of sale which was implicit on the transaction itself. Since Chapter XIII A also relates to suits arising on a contract express or implied, it may be that such a suit was found to be governed by Chapter XIII A, of the Rules. But there is no such provision in Order 37 of the Code. Suits arising on an implied contract are outside its scope. It will bear repetition that in the suit before us the plaintiff does not appear to have founded his claim on a written contract. An implied contract is outside the perview of Order 37. We have found already that the claim of the plaintiff cannot be said to arise on an enactment. Therefore it is difficult to see how such a suit could come within the meaning of Order 37.

17. Such being our view, the order dated January 11, 1980 can hardly be sustained. If that order fails, and fail it must, the subsequent order dated September 23, 1981 must necessarily fail.

18. In the result the revisional applications succeed. Both the impugned orders are hereby set aside. The suit should now proceed under the ordinary procedure. Since the defendant has already entered appearance, although in response to a summons issued under Order 37, it will not be necessary to serve him afresh. The defendant may now be directed to file his defence, if any, straightway.

19. The applications are thus disposed of.

20. There will be no order for costs.

21. The order be communicated to the court below forthwith.

AIR 1970 SC 1417 8, 10

N. R. Chatterjee with Miss Muku Chatterjee, for Appellants; P. K. Ghose, for Respondent.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— The appellants M/s. United Investment Corporation a partnership firm and its partner Smt. Bandana Suraiya have, in this appeal, challenged the propriety of the order of D. K. Sen, J., whereby the learned Judge discharged the Rule Nisi issued on the application of the appellants under Article 226 of the Constitution.

2. By an indenture of lease dt. July 16, 1962 Mehta Suraiya (P) Ltd., granted a lease of a piece of land measuring 10 cottahs 2 chittacks 28 sq. ft. comprised in premises No. 14/1B, Ezra Street, Calcutta to the appellant firm for a period of 33 years. It is provided in the lease that the rent for the first three years would be Rs. 700/- per month and thereafter, for the remaining thirty years the rent would be at the rate of Rs. 2,500/- per month. Under the lease, the lessee was to use the demised premises for the construction of a building thereon for office and/or residential purposes according to the map or plan duly signed by the parties and for letting out the same. It was enjoined that the lessee was to erect and complete the building within a period of three years from the date of the lease. Cl. (n) of para 1 of the lease provides that the lessee shall deliver up his full possession of the demised premises and the messuages and buildings to be erected thereon at the expiration or sooner determination of the lease. Cl. (d) of para 3 of the lease is a renewal clause under which the lessee would be entitled to have the lease renewed for a further term of 33 years and on the expiry of the said term for another term of 33 years by serving before the expiry of each term three months' notice on the lessor. The rate of rent, however, would remain the same, namely, Rs. 2,500/- per month. Cl. (e) of para 1 of the lease provides as follows:

"To bear pay and discharge all such Government and Municipal rates and taxes and/or assessments which are now imposed or charged or may hereafter be imposed or charged by the Municipality or competent authority on the demised premises and the messuages and buildings to be erected thereon whether payable by the owner or occupier and also to bear and pay all other outgoings and demands whatsoever now imposed or charged or hereafter to be imposed or charged for or in respect of the demised premises and the messuages and buildings to be erected thereon as aforesaid"

3. It thus appears that the lessee was to pay both shares of the municipal taxes in respect of the building that would be constructed by it upon the demised land. Indeed the lessee, that is, the appellant firm has since constructed a building and let out the same. The appellant firm has been realising rents from the sub-tenants.

4. From time to time, the annual value of the building was assessed by the Calcutta Corporation. In 1966-67 the annual value that was assessed by the Calcutta Corporation was Rs. 5,30,874/-. The appellants preferred an appeal before the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta and, on such appeal, the annual value was reduced to Rs. 5,06,874/-. Thereafter, the appellant did not prefer any further appeal to this Court. In other words, the said valuation which was to take effect from the third quarter of 1966-67 became final. In the writ petition, however, the appellants have challenged the said valuation as determined by the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta.

5. Thereafter, in 1968-69 there was a general revaluation and a notice u/s. 180 of the Calcutta Municipal Act 1961 was served upon the appellant firm.

6. By the said notice it was proposed to increase the annual value of the said premises to Rs. 7,07,726/- with effect from 4th quarter 1968-69. The appellants preferred an objection against the enhancement of valuation. Upon such objection, the Special Officer of the Calcutta Corporation reduced the annual value to Rs. 5,30,469 with effect from 4th quarter 1968-69. The appellants have also challenged this valuation of the premises.

7. It was contended on behalf of the appellants before the learned Trial Judge at the hearing of the writ petition that the appellant firm was illegally treated as the owner of the said premises No. 14/1B, Ezra Street, Calcutta, for the purpose of assessment of annual value of the premises. In other words, the contention of the appellants was that the Calcutta Corporation was not entitled to take into consideration the rents realised by the appellant firm from its sub-lessees treating it as the owner of the said premises comprising the building which was erected by it at its own costs. The learned Judge, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the submissions made on behalf of either party, overruled the said contention and, as stated already, discharged the Rule Nisi. Hence this appeal.

8. The principal point that is involved in this appeal is whether the appellant firm can be treated as the owner of the building being premises No. 14/1B, Ejra Street, Calcutta. Mr. N. R. Chatterjee, learned counsel, appearing on behalf of the appellants submits that the appellant firm being a lessee cannot be treated as the owner of the building and the rents realised by the appellant firm cannot be taken into consideration for the assessment of the annual value of the building. In support of his contention much reliance has been placed by the learned counsel on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Corporation of Calcutta v. Life Insurance Corporation of India, AIR 1970 SC 1417. In that case, the Supreme Court observed that in determining the assessment of the annual value the assessing authority was not concerned with the rent which the tenant might receive from his sub-tenant and that it was the gross rent which the owner might realise by letting the land or building under a bargain uninfluenced by "extraneous considerations" which determined the annual value.

9. On the other hand, it has been contended by Mr. Ghosh, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the Corporation of Calcutta that the appellant firm can be treated as the owner in view of S. 5 (53) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951. S. 5 (53) of the Act defines the term "owner" as follows:—

(53) "Owner" includes the person for the time being receiving the rent of any land or building or of any part of any land or building, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any person or society or for any religious or charitable purpose, or as a receiver or who would so receive such rent if the land, building or part thereof were let to a tenant.

10. Admittedly, the appellant firm has been realising rents from its sub-lessees of the building in question. The firm, therefore, comes within the definition of the term "owner". It is true that in the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the Corporation of Calcutta v. Life Insurance Corporation of India, (AIR 1970 SC 1417) (supra) it has been laid down that the rent which the owner may realise by letting the land or building can only be taken into consideration for the purpose of assessment of the annual value and not the rent realised by the tenant from its sub-tenant. In that case, the tenants M/s. Firpo Ltd., did not construct the building in question. The building was constructed by the landlord. Admittedly, the landlord was the owner of the building. The building was not, for the first time, let out by the tenants M/s. Firpo Ltd., to their sub-tenant, but it was let out by the landlord to M/s. Firpo Ltd. In the instant case, however, the building in question was admittedly constructed by the appellant firm and the firm for the first time let out the same after it was constructed. In the circumstances, the above decision of the Supreme Court is distinguishable on facts from the instant case where, the building has been constructed by the lessee and the lessee lets out the building for the first time to its tenants. The assessing authority will, therefore, be entitled to take into consideration the rents realised by the lessee from its sub-lessees. In that sense, the lessee may be treated as the owner of the premises in view of S. 5 (53) of the Calcutta Municipal Act.

11. We do not think that any writ petition is maintainable for quashing the annual value of the premises that was ultimately fixed by the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta on an appeal preferred by the appellants to that court. A further appeal lay to this Court against the order of the Presidency Small Cause Court, Calcutta fixing the annual value of the building in question. As stated already, no appeal was preferred by the appellants to this Court. In the circumstances, that order became final. So far as the assessment of annual value of the building which was to take effect from the 4th quarter of 1968-69 is concerned, we are of the view that the assessment has been done in accordance with law treating the appellant firm as the owner of the building in question. No other point has been urged in this appeal.

12. For the reasons aforesaid, this appeal is dismissed. In view of the facts and circumstances of this case, there will be no order as to costs.

13. Mr. Chatterjee prays for a certificate for appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 134A of the Constitution. In our opinion, no substantial question of law of general importance is involved in this appeal. The oral prayer for a certificate is disallowed.

(A) W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Ss. 13 (2), 16 (2) — Protection to sub-tenants against eviction — Availability — Sub-tenant giving notice under S. 16 (2) is only entitled to protection — Requirement of notice cannot be dispensed with.

Under S. 13 (2) the Legislature had made it incumbent for the sub-tenants to give notice of their sub-tenancies in order to be entitled to claim protection thereunder. As such no court can dispense with fulfilment of such a statutory requirement by taking the view that since the landlords were aware of the sub-tenancy it is immaterial whether a notice under sub-sec. (2) of S. 16 had been given or not. To apprise the landlord of such sub-tenancy is not the only object behind the provision in S. 16. The more important object behind the provision is to render the issue of subletting whether pre-Act or post-Act uncontroversial so that none can set up a frivolous claim of subletting when he has not given any notice nor can a landlord who has been served with such a notice wrongfully deny the subletting. Amarendra Nath Basu, for Appellants;
Amarendra Narayan Bagchi and Tarak
Nath Roy, for Respondents.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— This is an appeal under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is directed against the judgment and decree dated March 15, 1971 (reported in AIR 1971 Cal 425), passed by our learned brother S. K. Dutta, J., thereby dismissing an appeal from appellate decree No. 218 of 1964 preferred by defendants Nos. 3 and 4 in a suit for eviction. The said defendants are the appellants now before us. The short point which arises for our consideration in this appeal is as to whether the said defendants who have been found to be in occupation of different parts of the suit premises as sub-tenants since before the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 but who had not given any notice of such sub-tenancy under S. 16 (2) of the said Act, would be entitled to protection against eviction.

2. The respondents Nos. 1 and 2 before us (hereinafter referred to as the plaintiffs) instituted Title Suit No. 251 of 1957 for eviction against their tenant, the respondent No. 3 before us (hereinafter referred to as the defendant No. 1) on two fold grounds of default and wrongful subletting. In this suit the present appellants defendants Nos. 3 and 4 (hereinafter referred to as the said defendants) were made parties as they claimed to be sub-tenants in respect of the suit premises though they had not given any notice of their sub-tenancy under S. 16 (2) of the said Act.

3. In the suit two sets of written statements were filed — one on behalf of the defendant No. 1 and the other on behalf of the said defendants. The defence of the defendant No. 1 was struck off under the provision of S. 17 (3) of the said Act and the suit was contested by the said defendants. They claimed themselves to be sub-tenants — the sub-tenancy in their favour being created by the erst-while tenant since before 1956 with the consent and knowledge of the plaintiffs and, as such, they are entitled to protection against eviction.

4. The two courts below concurrently found that the said defendants came to occupy the suit premises as sub-tenants since before the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, and that again to the knowledge of the plaintiffs and their employees. But as the said courts further found that these defendants had failed to comply with the mandatory provision of S. 16 (2) of the said Act, they were not entitled to any protection against eviction under the provision of S. 13 (2) of the said Act, which protects only such sub-tenants as had given notice of their sub-tenancies under the provision of S. 16 of the said Act. The two courts thus concurrently decreed the plaintiffs' suit against all the defendants including the said defendants and they preferred the above second appeal to this court. Our learned brother concurred with the view expressed by the two courts below and dismissed the second appeal. The said defendants, however, obtained leave under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and on the basis thereof the present appeal has been preferred by them. The material issues of fact being concluded by the concurrent findings of the courts below, the only point for our consideration now is as to whether under the law the said defendants can claim any protection against eviction by virtue of their position as sub-tenants under the defendant No. 1.

5. Mr. Bose appearing in support of this appeal has raised two points. In the first place it has been contended that the objects of a notice under S. 16 (2) of the Act being one to apprise the landlord of the existence of the sub-tenancy that was otherwise fulfilled upon the findings of the courts below that the plaintiffs had due knowledge of the existence of such sub-tenancy since before the 1956 Act. Hence, according to Mr. Bose irrespective of whether a notice under S. 16 (2) of the Act was served on the landlord or not, the said defendants are entitled to protection under S. 13 (2) of the said Act. Alternatively, it has been contended by Mr. Bose that in view of the amended provision of S. 40 of the said Act, the said defendants are entitled to protection against eviction under the provision of S. 13 (2) of the W. B. Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the Act of 1950). Both the points thus raised by Mr. Bose have been strongly contested by Mr. Bagchi appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs/respondents.

6. So far as the first point raised by Mr. Bose is concerned, S. 13 (1) of the said Act, in cl. (a) contemplates that a tenant is liable to be evicted where he transfers, assigns or sublets in whole or in part the leasehold premises without the previous consent in writing of the landlord. Section 13 (2), however, provides as follows :

"(2) Sub-tenants, if any, referred to in S. 16 who have given notice of their sub-tenancies to the landlord under the provision of that Section shall be made parties to any suit or proceedings for the recovery of possession of the premises by the landlord :

Provided that except in cases covered by cl. (f) or cl. (g) of sub-sec. (1), no decree or order for ejectment shall be passed against any such sub-tenant unless any of the grounds mentioned in cls. (b) to (e) and (h) apply to him."

7. On the terms of sub-sec. (2) of Section 13 as aforesaid, the legislature had made it incumbent for the sub-tenants to give notice of their sub-tenancies in order to be entitled to claim protection thereunder. In our view, no court can dispense with fulfilment of such a statutory requirement by taking the view that since the landlords were aware of the sub-tenancy it is immaterial whether a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 16 of the Act had been given or not. To apprise the landlord of such sub-tenancy is not the only object behind the provision in Section 16. Had it been so sub-sec. (1) of S. 16 would not have provided that even where a subletting is made with the consent of the landlord in writing after the Act, such a sub-tenant also is to give notice of such subletting in the manner prescribed. The more important object behind the provision is to render the issue of subletting whether pre-Act or post-Act uncontroversial so that none can set up a frivolous claim of subletting when he has not given any notice nor can a landlord who has been served with such a notice wrongfully deny the subletting. In cases of pre-Act subletting sub-s. (3) again goes on to provide that where such subletting is without any consent in writing of the landlord and the landlord denies to have given any oral consent the Controller shall on an application made to him in this behalf either by the landlord or the sub-tenant within two months from the date of receipt of the notice by the landlord or the issue of the notice by the sub-tenant as the case may be by order declare that the tenant's interest in so much of the premises as has been sublet shall cease and that the sub-tenant shall become a tenant directly under the landlord. Thus in cases of pre-Act subletting where there is no consent of the landlord in writing, the statute made a further provision for determination of any dispute regarding such sub-tenancy being with or without the consent of the landlord by the Controller and the landlord's right to dispute the sub-tenancy under sub-sec. (3) is dependent upon service of the notice on him. The object of S. 16, on the whole was to provide a scheme and a machinery to render it certain as to who are the sub-tenants that would be entitled to relief under the other provision of the Act, namely, S. 13 (2) thereof. Such being the legal position, in our view, our learned brother S. K. Dutta, J., and so also the courts below were right in their views that in the absence of any notice given under S. 16 (2) of the said Act, the pre-Act sub-tenants like the said defendants are not entitled to the protection under S. 13 (2) of the said Act. The first point raised by Mr. Bose, therefore, must fail and is overruled.

8. We now proceed to consider the second point raised by Mr. Bose. According to Mr. Bose, unlike S. 14 of the present Act, there was no statutory bar to sub-letting under the provisions of the Act of 1950 by a tenant of the first degree. Section 13 (2) of that Act further provided that "where any premises or any part thereof have been or has been sublet by a tenant of the first degree.....if the tenancy of such tenant is lawfully determined otherwise than by virtue of a decree in a suit obtained by the landlord by reason of any of the grounds specified in cl. (h) of the proviso to sub-sec. (1) of S. 12, the sub-lessee shall be deemed to be a tenant in respect of such premises or part, as the case may be, holding directly under the landlord of the tenant whose tenancy has been determined, on terms and conditions on which the sub-lessee would have held under the tenant if the tenancy of the latter had not been so determined." According to Mr. Bose this provision of the Act of 1950 confers a right upon a sub-tenant like the said defendants to be deemed to be a tenant directly under the landlord in the event there is a decree for eviction against the original tenant as in the present case not based on a ground contemplated by cl. (h) to the proviso to sub-sec. (1) of S. 12 of the Act of 1950. Mr. Bose contends that such a right has been saved by the amended provision of S. 40 of the said Act of 1956. Reliance is placed upon sub-sec. (2) of S. 40 which reads as follows :

"Notwithstanding the repeal of the said Act (a) any proceeding pending on 31st day of March 1956 may be continued, or

(b) any proceeding or remedy in respect of any right, privilege, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture or punishment under the said Act and relating to the period before such repeal may be instituted or enforced as if the said Act had been in force and had not been repealed or had not expired."

According to Mr. Bose when the said defendants had a right under the Act of 1950, to be deemed to be tenants directly under the landlords on lawful determination of the tenancy in favour of defendant No. 1 otherwise than by virtue of a decree for eviction obtained by reason of the grounds specified in cl. (h) to the proviso of S. 12 (1) of the 1950 Act, the necessary proceeding or the remedy provided in the said Act is saved by cl. (b) of sub-sec. (2) of S. 40 of the said Act of 1956. Reliance is placed by Mr. Bose on a Bench decision of this court in the case of Ram Khilan Das v. Smt. Radharani Dasi (1980) 1 Cal LJ 197 : (AIR 1980 Cal 131).

9. On a careful review of the legal position we are, however, unable to accept the above contention raised by Mr. Bose. Since the Act repealed was itself a temporary statute the legislature instead of relying upon the usual saving clause as contained in S. 4 of the Bengal General Clauses Act, incorporated a special saving clause in sub-sec. (2) of Section 40 of the said Act. It was pointed out by the Special Bench of this Court in the case of Tarak Chandra Banerji v. Ratan Ghosal, 61 Cal WN 263 : (AIR 1957 Cal 257) that the object of introducing such a saving clause is to save pending proceedings and authorise new institutions for the enforcement of rights and liabilities accrued under the Act of 1950 notwithstanding the repeal or the expiry of that Act. Section 40 (2) (b), therefore, intended to keep alive such of the provisions of the Act of 1950 as provided for proceedings or remedies in respect of any right, privilege, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture or punishment which accrued or were incurred under the Act of 1950 for the limited purpose of enforcing such rights, privileges, obligations etc. This is clear on the language of the clause itself when it refers to "any right, privilege, obligation, liability, penalty, forfeiture or punishment under the said Act and relating to the period before such repeal". On the facts of the present case, we fail to appreciate what right had accrued in favour of the appellants under the Act of 1950 and before its repeal and what are the provisions thereof which the appellants can avail of for enforcement of any such accrued right. It may be that under the provisions of the proviso to Ss. 12 (1) (c) and 13 (2) of the Act of 1950 a sub-tenant under a tenant of the first degree would become a tenant directly under the superior landlord when the tenancy in favour of the tenant of the first degree is lawfully determined otherwise than by virtue of a decree in a suit obtained by the landlord by reason of any of the grounds specified in cl. (h) of the proviso to sub-sec. (1) of S. 12. But such a right did not accrue in favour of or vest in the sub-tenant on the sub-letting itself but was contingent upon a lawful determination of the tenancy in favour of the tenant of the first degree and obviously having regard to the other provisions of the Act of 1950. Undisputedly in the present case the tenancy in favour of the appellants landlord, that is the tenant of the first degree (as contemplated by the Act of 1950) was not so determined when the Act of 1950 was in force. It was determined only by a decree obtained by the landlord under the provisions of the new Act, viz., the said Act of 1956, long after the repeal of the Act of 1950. In that view, it cannot be said that any right under the proviso to S. 12 (1) (c) or S. 13 (2) of the 1950 Act did at all accrue in favour of the appellants on the date that Act was repealed so that the provisions of S. 40 (2) of the said Act could be invoked for initiating any proceeding for enforcement of such a right.

10. Strong reliance is placed by Mr. Bose on a Bench decision of this court in the case of Ram Khilan Das v. Radha Rani Dasi (AIR 1980 Cal 131) (supra) which no doubt lends some support to the contention of Mr. Bose. We have carefully read the said decision more than once but with due respect to the learned Judges it appears to us that they have not given any independent reason of their own when they held, "The sub-tenancy in question did not cease and rights and obligations of sub-tenants under S. 12 (1) (c) and S. 13 (2) of the 1950 Act remained unimpaired", but appears to have held as such approving the decision of a learned single Judge on the point at issue rendered in the case of Samad Mistri v. Md. Omed, (unreported judgment in C. R. No. 1992 of 1974). In the case before the learned single Judge the point at issue, however, was not the same. In Samad's case the decree for eviction against the tenant of the first degree was one passed in terms of the provisions of the Act of 1950 which was held to be applicable to such a suit. The determination of the tenancy in favour of the tenant of the first degree having been made under the provisions of the Act of 1950, it was held by the learned single Judge that the right under S. 13 (2) of the Act of 1950 vested in the sub-tenant. The fact that in the said case the tenancy in favour of the tenant of the first degree was lawfully determined under the provisions of the Act of 1950, is a point of important difference which was unfortunately overlooked by the learned Judges deciding the case of Ram Khilan Das when they thought that the point raised before them was the same as was raised before the learned single Judge. Though normally we would have been bound by the Bench decision as in the case of Ram Khilan Das, we do not feel ourselves so bound because the said decision is based upon non-consideration of the Special Bench decision referred to hereinbefore which according to us clearly explains the effect and implication of S. 40 (2) of the said Act and which we prefer to follow in deciding the point.

11. In the result, both the points raised by Mr. Bose in support of this appeal fail, the appeal fails and is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— I agree.
Appeal dismissed.

True, a statutory tenant cannot be put in the same position as that of a contractual tenant but nevertheless, as soon as the tenancy of a contractual tenant is determined by notice to quit and a suit is instituted against him and he is relegated to the position of a statutory tenant he does not lose the right to enjoyment of electricity and water supply which are the essential services available to all tenants. Until a tenant is evicted from the suit premises he is entitled to enjoy the same and if the landlord discontinues with these services he may apply for restoration by making a proper application before the court: AIR 1980 Cal 108, AIR 1965 SC 414, AIR 1968 SC 471 and AIR 1977 Cal 318, Refd. ORDER:— This application is in respect of an order being order No. 9 dt. 27th August, 1981 passed by the learned Munsif, First Court at Sealdah in Title Suit No. 290 of 1981. The opposite party Mahadeo Prasad Agarwala landlord of 30/5, Kankurgachi Road, C.I.T. Scheme No. VII, P.S. Fulbagan, Calcutta instituted a title suit No. 290 of 1981 against the applicant, petitioner in the first court of the learned Munsif in respect of the suit property for eviction on several grounds, namely, default, subletting etc. In the suit the applicant petitioner filed an application u/s. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure for restoration of his electricity which was enjoyed from the metre of one Shri Newrang Rai Fatehpuria and he claimed that he enjoyed electricity exclusively from that metre (consumer No. being 47088040106) since the inception of his tenancy. The petitioner applicant alleged that his supply had been cut off by the landlord opposite party on 4th August, 1981 at 4 p.m. and hence the application u/s. 151, C.P.C. for restoration. An objection was raised by the opposite party (to) this application on the ground that the consumer number which is quoted above does not belong to the tenant and in fact although the tenant had a right to enjoy electricity as a tenant and that as the metre stood in the name of another tenant the same cannot be restored without offending the provision of the Calcutta Electricity Act. The learned Munsif dismissed the application of the applicant observing that the petitioner applicant had been enjoying electricity in the suit premises illegally. The court cannot place the seal of legality upon such illegal use by allowing the petition u/s. 151, C.P.C. The learned Munsif observed that the defendant had a right to get electricity supplied at the suit premises at his own cost by submitting a proper application before the Calcutta Electricity Supply Corporation. Against this order of the learned Munsif the petitioner applicant has come up in revision. On behalf of the petitioner it is submitted that the order is illegal and rejection of the application u/s. 151, C.P.C. of the applicant petitioner is illegal and not justified in law. Mr. Mukherjee appearing for the applicant submits that a tenant had been enjoying electricity in the suit premises from the said metre as the same had been allotted to the tenant by the landlord himself and that this has been enjoyed for a considerable period without any hindrance and, therefore, it did not lie in the mouth of the landlord to say that the tenant was enjoying electricity illegally and hence the supply had been stopped and cannot be restored. Moreover, it has been argued by Mr. Mukherjee that enjoyment of electricity forms part of the tenancy and disconnection of the electric supply gives a right to the tenant to pray for restoration not only under the general law but also under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. The applicant petitioner is a statutory tenant inasmuch as a suit is going on against him for eviction after, his tenancy had been determined by a legal notice to quit. Nevertheless so long as he is not evicted from the suit premises he has a right to enjoy all the amenities which he had enjoyed as a tenant. It has been argued further by Mr. Mukherjee that the enjoyment of the electricity by the tenant applicant is not merely for a temporary period but forms a part and parcel of his tenancy rights and, therefore, until evicted from the suit premises, he is entitled to pray for restoration of the same. Accordingly, the learned Munsif should have allowed the application u/s. 151, C.P.C. by giving an order for restoration of electric supply from the metre from which he was getting his electricity so long, instead of directing him to take a separate metre in his own name directly from the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. Mr. Roy Chowdhury appearing for the opposite party has strenuously argued that the order of the learned Munsif in rejecting the application u/s. 151 is valid and that the applicant petitioner can make an application for getting electricity from the Corporation directly without taking the consent of the landlord instead of insisting upon restoration of the same from the old metre which was in the name of an ex-tenant. Further, Mr. Roy Chowdhury argued that the provisions of S. 34 or any other section of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act providing for amenities to a tenant are not available to a statutory tenant. He can only claim protection from eviction from the suit premises so long as a decree has not been passed against him by a competent court. In this connection, Mr. Roy Chowdhury has referred to two cases of this Court and also a decision of the Supreme Court. The cases referred to by him are reported in AIR 1977 Cal 318 and AIR 1980 Cal 108. The former is by M. M. Dutt, J. and the latter is by G. N. Ray, J. It may be pointed out that so far as the judgment of G. N. Ray, J. is concerned, his Lordship's attention has not been drawn to the earlier decision reported in AIR 1977 Cal 318. In that case M. M. Dutt, J. held that when an application for restoration of electric supply is made by a tenant under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2, C.P.C. his application should not be rejected on the ground that a special remedy is provided u/s. 34 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and there cannot be any curtailment of any general right by S. 34 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. That application was rejected on the ground that it was not maintainable in view of the provision of S. 34 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. This was held to be illegal and accordingly set aside. Mr. Roy Chowdhury has conceded that even if the general law is available to the statutory tenant under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2, in any event no such application was made before the learned Munsif and the relief u/s. 151, C.P.C. cannot be availed of under the circumstances. Now referring to the decision reported in AIR 1980 Cal 108. His Lordship has elaborately dealt with the rights of a statutory tenant and Mr. Roy Chowdhury placed reliance upon this decision particularly the observation made in the said judgment that a statutory tenant does not enjoy the same position as that of a contractual tenant. The Legislature does not intend that the statutory tenant will be treated at par with a contractual tenant under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Accordingly, after the determination of tenancy, the statutory tenant cannot make an application u/s. 8 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act for determination of fair rent by the Rent Controller. In this decision however the question of enjoyment of amenities such as meter and electricity by a statutory tenant did not come up for discussion. Furthermore one of the considerations which weighed (with) his Lordship in holding and very rightly too that a statutory tenant cannot be equated with the contractual tenant is that the defence of that tenant was struck out u/s. 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. However, his Lordship for the general proposition relied upon several decisions of the Supreme Court which are reported in AIR 1965 SC 414 and also AIR 1968 SC 471. On a consideration of the arguments of Mr. Roy Chowdhury, I am in agreement with him that a statutory tenant cannot be put in the same position as that of a contractual tenant but nevertheless, I have not come across a decision wherein it has been held that as soon as the tenancy of a contractual tenant is determined by notice to quit and a suit is instituted against him and he is relegated to the position of a statutory tenant he ceases to have any right to the enjoyment of electricity and water supply which are the essential services available to all tenants. Until a tenant is evicted from the suit premises he is entitled to enjoy the same and if the landlord discontinues with these services he may apply for restoration by making a proper application before the court. In this case, as pointed out by Mr. Mukherjee, he made an application for restoration for supply of electricity from the metre from which he was enjoying but when it was brought to the notice of court that that metre was in the name of a person who was an ex-tenant, the learned Munsif refused to restore connection in respect of that metre but he gave leave to the tenant applicant to make an independent application for getting a separate metre from the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and it is stated before me that his application has been granted by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. But inasmuch as the main metre board is within the control of the landlord and in view of his previous experience of obstruction by the landlord, the tenant is apprehensive that unless he is given some sort of protection he will not be able to instal a new metre in the suit premises. In view of this and for the end of justice, I think I may add a direction upon the landlord not to interfere or obstruct the installation of the new metre by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation to the premises of the tenant. I, specifically put a question to Mr. Roy Chowdhury to be answered by him on behalf of his client who has been attending Court all along whether he has any objection to the installation of a new metre for the tenant. Mr. Roy Chowdhury said that there has been no obstruction by his client previously and there should be no apprehension of any obstruction in the future but he did not specifically undertake on behalf of his client to place no obstruction at the time the new metre (is) to be set up by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. In such a state of affairs, I think that it is necessary to give a direction that the landlord will not put any obstruction to the setting up of the new metre by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and that those who will come from the Electric Supply Corporation will be given access to the metre board. Until the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation sets up a new metre for the tenant, the landlord may give temporary connection from the old metre from which electricity was so long enjoyed by the tenant if by doing so there is no contravention of any provision of the Act. This arrangement will stand until a new metre is installed. With this observation I dispose of the application upholding the orders passed by the learned Munsiff.

2. Let two plain copies of the order, countersigned by the Assistant Registrar (Court), be given to the learned advocates for both sides, as prayed for.

Revision allowed.

The Court has discretion to permit examination of a witness under Section 154 of the Evidence Act when it is satisfied from the manner in which the witness gives evidence that he is not desirous of telling the truth and that it is necessary to give such permission to elicit the truth. Inconsistent or contradictory statements of the witness are not the only ground for permitting examination under Section 154 of the Act. AIR 1977 SC 170 and AIR 1976 SC 294, Relied on. (Para 8)

(B) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 73 — Service by Post — Postal peon denying that he has made any endorsement that notice was refused — Signature of peon on envelope and on his deposition in Court compared — Comparison justified. (Paras 6, 9)

(C) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Sec. 100 — Second appeal — Finding of fact based on mere inadequacy or insufficiency or improper assessment of evidence — Cannot be interfered by reappraisal of evidence. (Para 10)

Inderjit Mondal, for Appellant; Samarendra Banerjee, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— This is an appeal by the defendant from the decision of the learned Additional Subordinate Judge, Bankura affirming the decision of the learned Munsif, 1st Court, Bankura in Title Suit No. 92 of 1974 for ejectment of a premises tenant, arrears of rent and compensation.

2. The plaintiff brought the suit on 9-9-1974 alleging that the defendant was a monthly tenant in the suit premises comprising a drawing room and eastern portion of a covered verandah of the plaintiff's building in holding No. 315A of Lohar Moholla of Bankura Municipality at a monthly rent of Rs. 25/- per month payable according to Bengali Calendar month; that the defendant defaulted in payment of rent since Chaitra, 1377 B. S.; that the plaintiff reasonably requires the suit premises for his own occupation as owner; and that a valid notice of ejectment was served on the defendant by registered post on behalf of the plaintiff which the defendant refused to receive, terminating his tenancy on the expiry of Sraban, 1381 B. S.

3. The defendant filed a written statement denying the alleged grounds of ejectment and the service of the notice to quit.

4. The defence of the defendant against delivery of possession was struck out under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (hereinafter called the Act) by the trial Court's order No. 31 dated 12-7-1976 as the defendant's deposits of rent with the Rent Controller were admittedly invalid deposits and the defendant did not comply with Section 17 (1) of the Act or raise any dispute under Section 17 (2) of the Act. Thereafter, the defendant contested the suit only on the point of service of the notice of ejectment, the validity of which was not challenged. The defendant denied on oath the tender and refusal to accept the notice to quit sent by registered post on behalf of the plaintiff. The plaintiff examined the postal peon who was permitted to be cross-examined by the plaintiff under Section 154 of the Evidence Act. The plaintiff also examined another witness (P.W. 5) who testified to the tender of the notice by the postal peon to the defendant and the latter's refusal to accept it.

5. Both the Courts below have concurrently found on a consideration of the evidence and circumstances of the case that the notice of ejectment was duly served on the defendant as he refused to accept it when tendered to him on 6-7-1974. The trial Court has decreed the suit for ejectment on the ground of default in payment of rent under Section 13 (1) (i) of the Act with a finding that the ground of reasonable requirement of the plaintiff for his own occupation has not been proved. His claim of the arrears of rent and compensation has also been decreed. The decision of the Court of first instance has been affirmed by the first appellate Court which has rejected the cross-objection of the plaintiff respondent, challenging the trial Court's finding on the point of the plaintiff's reasonable requirement of the suit premises for his own occupation.

6. It has been submitted on behalf of the appellant before this Court that the trial Court followed a wrong procedure in permitting the plaintiff to cross-examine P.W. 2 the postal peon although the witness did not make any inconsistent or contradictory statements in his evidence and the defendant objected to his examination under Section 154 of the Evidence Act. In this connection reliance has been placed on the decision in the case of Rabindra Kr. Dey v. State of Orissa, reported in AIR 1977 SC 170. It is further submitted that P.W. 5 being a chance witness of the alleged tender and refusal of the notice, no reliance could be placed on his evidence without corroboration from a credible source. The next submission on behalf of the appellant is that the trial Court has erred in comparing the signature below, the purported endorsements of refusal on the registered envelope with the signature of the postal peon below his deposition in Court. Lastly, it is submitted that as there can be no presumption of service in view of the defendant's denial on oath of tender and refusal of the notice and the postal peon's positive evidence that the endorsement of refusal is not his, the Courts below have erred in holding that registered envelope containing the notice of ejectment had been served on the defendant. The learned Advocate for the respondent has sought to repel those contentions.

7. In this case, there is evidence that the notice of ejectment was sent by registered post prepaid to the correct address of the defendant, namely, the grocery shop of the defendant by the side of a shop named Bikash Radio at Lalbazar (Bankura Town) which according to D.W. 1 the defendant was his address. P.W. 2 is the postal peon who got the registered letter from the Post Office for service on the defendant. He was cited by the defendant but was examined by the plaintiff. He has said that the defendant was known to him, although the defendant in his evidence has denied that fact. There are several endorsements on the registered envelope (Ext. 1/1). One of them is a penned through endorsement in Bengali signifying that the owner of the shop was not there and it is dated 5-7-74. P.W. 2 has admitted that he made the said endorsement. There are also endorsements reading as "Absent" dated 5-7-74 and "Refused" dated 6-7-74. PW 2 has denied that he made or signed any such endorsement. At that stage, the Court permitted cross-examination of P. W. 2 by the plaintiff under Section 154 of the Evidence Act. In cross-examination P. W. 2 was not in a position to deny or affirm that he dealt with the registered envelope on 6-7-74. He has admitted that he went to the defendant's shop on 5-7-74 for the first time. He has further admitted that according to the rules a registered letter is to be kept by the postal peon for seven days in case the addressee is not found, apparently for further attempt at service before its return to the Post Office for being sent back to the sender. But P. W. 2 has said that he returned the registered envelope on 5-7-74 to the Post Office. That is not the probable conduct of a senior postal peon who was going to retire two years later. The plaintiff called for the records of the Post Office relating to the service of the registered letter in question but they were not available as the records were destroyed under the rules. P. W. 5 is a resident of the locality of the defendant's shop. He has deposed to the effect that on 6-7-74 he visited the shop of the defendant as he used to have business transactions with the defendant and that he saw P. W. 2 tendering a registered envelope to the defendant who refused to accept it. The learned Munsif has considered the evidence of P. Ws. 2 and 5. He has compared the signature below the endorsement of refusal on the registered envelope with the signature of P. W. 2 the postal peon, below his deposition and found that the signature below the endorsement is of P. W. 2. He has come to the conclusion that the postal peon has tried to suppress the truth and help the defendant. Relying on the evidence of P. W. 5, the learned Munsif has found that the registered envelope containing the notice of ejectment was tendered to the defendant and the defendant refused to accept it and so it was duly served on the defendant. The Court of appeal below has concurred in the finding of the learned Munsif considering the evidence as a whole and relying on the evidence of PW 5. He has taken into account the improbability of P. W. 2's returning the registered envelope to the Post Office on 5-7-74 as the defendant was not present in his shop without further attempt to serve it on him in the face of the rules requiring him to keep it for seven days for such attempts.

8. In my view, the submission made on behalf of the appellant that the trial Court erred in permitting examination of P. W. 2 under S. 154 of the Evidence Act is not acceptable. Both the decision in the case of Rabindra Nath Dey v. State of Orissa, reported in AIR 1977 SC 170 relied on by the appellant and the decision in the case of Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, reported in AIR 1976 SC 294 cited on behalf of the respondent support the proposition that the Court has discretion to permit examination of a witness under S. 154 of the Evidence Act when it is satisfied from the manner in which the witness gives evidence that he is not desirous of telling the truth and that it is necessary to give such permission to elicit the truth. Inconsistent or contradictory statements of the witness are not the only ground for permitting examination under S. 154 of the Act. It has been held that the Evidence Act leaves the matter entirely to the discretion of the Court and such discretion is unqualified and unfettered to be exercised liberally for extracting the truth.

9. Regarding the objection taken to the comparison of hand writing by the learned Munsif, in my view, the Court is competent to compare the disputed writing with the admitted writing under S. 73 of the Evidence Act in order to appreciate properly, the evidence produced to prove the service of notice.

10. I cannot accept the appellant's contention that P. W. 5 being a chance witness is unworthy of credit if his testimony is not corroborated by other reliable evidence. It appears that the courts below have not regarded P. W. 5 as a chance witness. There is nothing to show that he was a friend of the plaintiff or he had animus against the defendant. The evidence of a chance witness is not necessarily incredible. It requires cautious approach and scrutiny when he is a partisan witness (vide Bahal Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 2032, para 10). The court of appeal below has not committed any error of law in relying on the evidence of P. W. 5 in the context of other evidence and circumstances of the case. In view of such evidence, the courts of fact have not accepted the defendant's testimony denying refusal of the registered notice. This Court cannot reassess the value of the evidence and interfere with the finding of fact on reappraisal of the evidence in Second Appeal (P. B. Desai v. C. M. Patel, AIR 1974 SC 1059, para 6). The finding of fact based on mere inadequacy or insufficiency or improper assessment of evidence does not involve an error of law so as to leave the question open to interference in Second Appeal (Harnath v. Dhanoo Devi AIR 1975 Cal 98).

11. In the result, I hold that there is no sufficient ground to interfere with the concurrent finding of the courts below that the notice of ejectment was duly served on the defendant. No other point has been raised on behalf of the appellant.

12. The respondent has filed a cross-objection challenging the concurrent finding of the two courts that the plaintiff has failed to prove reasonable requirement of the suit premises for his own occupation. The learned Advocate for the respondent has not pressed the cross-objection.

13. The appeal is therefore, dismissed. The cross-objection is also dismissed as it is not pressed. The defendant is allowed time till the last day of Aswin, 1389 B. S. to vacate the suit premises.

14. No order is made as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 400

G. N. RAY, J.

M/s. Serajuddin & Co., Petitioner v. Union of India and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 2348 (W) of 1979, D/- 21-4-1982.

Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (67 of 1957), Ss. 8, 30 — Mineral Concession Rules (1960), R. 22 — Application for renewal of lease — Deemed rejection thereof as not considered within stipulated period — Revision — Central Govt. allowing revision remanding application for renewal to be decided on merits — Renewal granted by State Govt. and matter put for approval before Central Govt. — Order refusing to grant approval — Validity.

An application for renewal of a mining lease was filed before the State Govt. The application was deemed to have been rejected as it was not considered within the stipulated period under R. 22 of the Rules. The petitioner company filed revision before the Central Govt. The revision was allowed and the case was remanded to the State Govt. with a direction to decide the application for renewal on merits. Afterwards, the State Govt. granted the renewal and put the matter before the Central Govt. for its approval. The Central Govt. refused to grant approval on the ground that the area covered by the mining lease in favour of the petitioner company, was required for public sector exploitation.

Held, that the refusal by the Central Govt. to grant approval to the renewal of lease was not invalid. Simply because by allowing the revision, the State Govt. was directed to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits, it cannot be said that by necessary implication, the Central Govt. agreed to accord approval if the State Govt. was inclined to grant a renewal. Initially the State Govt. did not express any view and did not reject the application for renewal made by the petitioner company on merits but such rejection was only a deemed rejection because of non-consideration of the said application within the stipulated time. The Central Govt. intended to have the views of the State Govt. on merits of the case and for the said purpose directed the State Govt. to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits. The Central Govt. had certainly the right to grant or refuse approval after getting the views of the State Govt. (Paras 6, 7)

The power of the Central Govt. under the Act and the Rules is very wide and the same is not fettered by the desire and or the decision of the State Govt. (Para 7)

Also, it cannot be said that if the State Govt. has followed the guidelines as referred to in S. 8 of the Act and has not taken into consideration any extraneous matter and thereafter comes to any decision either in favour or against the grant of a lease, the Central Government is to accept such decision as a matter of course. The Central Govt. for proper reasons, may not accept the decision of the State Govt. although such decision was taken on proper consideration of the relevant facts after following the guidelines. There is no manner of doubt that the decision of the State Govt. cannot be lightly brushed aside by the Central Govt. and it is reasonably expected that such decision of the State Govt. which is the owner of the Mines, must have an anxious consideration by the Central Govt. for a harmonious relation of the States and the Centre. If, however, the Central

Govt. does not agree with the decision of the State Govt. and overrides its decision for a valid reason, it cannot be said that the Central Govt. has over-stepped its limit. (Para 7)

In the instant case, the Central Govt. has refused to grant approval on the ground that the area in question should be better utilised by the public sector undertaking, and it cannot be said that such consideration is not amenable to any reason. Whether such exploitation by a public sector undertaking will be more useful in the greater interest of the country or not, is not to be considered by the Court and the Court should not embark upon the uncharted ocean of public policy. ORDER :— This writ petition is directed against refusal by the Government of India to accord approval for the renewal of a Mining Lease of the petitioner Company by the Government of Orissa under the provisions of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957 read with the Mineral Concession Rules, 1960. It appears that sometime in the year 1944, the petitioner applied to the then Raja of Keonjhar Estate for grant of a Mining Lease in respect of Mangane Ore over an area of about 3329.40 acres in several mouzas in Champua Sub-Division of the said Estate. On 29th Dec. 1947, the Raja of Keonjhar granted a Mining Lease for the Manganese Ore to the petitioner for a period of 10 years commencing from 1st Nov. 1946 with an option of renewal for a further term of 15 years. On 8th June, 1949, the Government of Orissa annulled the said Mining Lease. On 14th July, 1949, the Government, however, allowed the petitioner to continue mining operations in the said area on payment of rates and royalties in accordance with the terms and conditions of the said Mining Lease and promised to grant a new Lease to the petitioner in accordance with the policy to be laid down by the Government of India for leasing out Mines. It, however, appears that subsequently by an order dt. 3rd July, 1951, the State Government of Orissa withdrew and cancelled the said order. The petitioner company however submitted to the State Government of Orissa its terms and conditions of compromise and to settle the dispute mutually. On 12th June, 1952, the State Government of Orissa intimated its acceptance of the said terms and conditions of the Mining Lease and the said terms and conditions were also reduced and embodied into a written agreement known as Subsidiary Agreement. In Dec. 22, 1952, the said Subsidiary Agreement was executed and registered at Keonjhar and under the terms of the said Agreement, the petitioner company surrendered about 830 acres out of the demised area of 3329.40 acres and the petitioner company became lessee for the balanced area viz. 2499.40 acres for a term of 20 years with effect from November 1, 1946 with a stipulation that the State Government would grant and the petitioner company would take a renewed lease for a further period of 20 years. As the period of lease was not consistent with the existing law the Controller of Mining Lease for India directed that the petitioner's Mining Lease should be for a period of 20 years from 1st Nov. 1946 and the renewal of the said lease could be regulated according to the law and rule in force at the time of such renewal. On 28th Oct. 1965, the petitioner company made an application for first renewal for 20 years from 1st Nov. 1966 under the provisions of R. 22 (2) of the Mineral Concession Rules, 1960. As within the stipulated period such application of the petitioner company, was not considered by the State Government, it was deemed under the provisions of the said Mineral Concession Rules that the said application of the petitioner had been rejected by the State Government of Orissa. The petitioner company thereafter made an application for revision before the Central Government under the said Mineral Concession Rules, 1960 against the deemed rejection of the application of the petitioner for renewal of the said lease by the Government of Orissa. It appears that the said revision application was allowed by the Central Government and by an order dated 26th June, 1968, the Central Government passed an order remanding the petitioner company's application for renewal to the State Government of Orissa directing the State Government to consider the petitioner company's application for renewal on merits and to pass suitable orders thereon at an early date. It appears that after consideration of the case of the petitioner company on merits for renewal of the said lease, the Government of Orissa by its Memo dated 1st October, 1969 informed the Central Government that the State Government of Orissa had decided to grant renewal of the said Mining Lease for Manganese Ores to the petitioner company and the State Government sought for approval for such renewal of the Mining Lease by the Central Government. It also appears that on 27th March, 1973 the petitioner company submitted a petition to the Central Government through the State Government under R. 63 of the Mineral Concession Rules, 1960 requesting the Central Government to consider the merits of the petitioner company's case for grant of renewal of the said Mining Lease and to accord necessary approval and/or sanction for the same. On 26th Oct. 1973 the State Government passed an order rejecting the application of the petitioner company for renewal of the said lease on the ground that the Central Government had advised the State Government to reject the said application for renewal as the area in question was required for public sector exploitation. The petitioner company thereafter challenged the said order of rejection of the petitioner's application for renewal of lease under Art. 226 of the Constitution in this Court and a Rule being Civil Rule No. 3608 (W) of 1973 was issued by this Court on the said application under Article 226. It appears that the said Rule was made absolute by this Court and the impugned order dated 26th Oct. 1973 passed by the State Government of Orissa and also the order passed by the Central Government refusing to grant approval were quashed by this Court. It was directed by this Court in the said order that the Central Government should hear the petitioner within two months from the date of the order after giving notice of hearing to the petitioner and in the mean time, parties would maintain status quo. It appears that on 10th Sept. 1977 the petitioner company made a representation to the Central Government inter alia explaining the background of the application of renewal of the said Mining Lease and the petitioner company also requested that pursuant to the order passed by this Court a suitable date might be fixed for giving the petitioner a personal hearing. But the petitioner contends that the Central Government, however, failed to comply with the direction of this Court and did not give the petitioner any hearing within the specified date. It also appears that in the representation, the petitioner company also pointed out that when the State Government of Orissa, on consideration of the merits of the application, intended to grant the first renewal of lease for 20 years it was not open to the Central Government to deny any approval which it had granted by necessary implications at an early stage. In Nov. 1977, the petitioner company was given a hearing before the Joint Secretary, Department of Mines, Central Government and by a communication dated 26th March, 1979 the Central Government regretted its inability to accord approval for the renewal of the said lease as the area was required for development in the public sector. The petitioner company thereafter again moved this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India against the said decision of the Central Government refusing to grant approval to the renewal of the said Mining Lease as desired by the Orissa Government and the instant Rule has been issued by this Court.

2. It appears that during the pendency of the Rule, the Manganese Ore (India) Limited, a public sector undertaking, made an application for addition of party and by an order dated 22nd Aug. 1979, the said Manganese Ore (India) Limited (hereinafter referred to as MOIL) was added as a party respondent to the Rule.

3. Mr. Deb being ably assisted by Mr. Balai Chandra Roy appearing for the petitioner company contends that against the deemed refusal by the Government of Orissa to consider the application of the petitioner company for renewal of the said Lease in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Mineral Concession Rules, 1960, the petitioner company made an application for revision before the Central Government and the Central Government allowed the said application for revision and directed the State Government of Orissa to consider the application for renewal made by the petitioner company on merits. Mr. Deb submits that it is, therefore, quite evident that the Central Government had no objection of its own against the grant of renewal of the said lease in favour of the petitioner company and it only gave a green signal to the State Government of Orissa to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits and to take a decision as to whether or not the State Government of Orissa was inclined to grant the renewal of the lease as prayed for. Mr. Deb submits that the State Government of Orissa thereafter considered the case of the petitioner company on merits and decided to grant renewal of the said lease subject to accord of formal approval by the Central Government in accordance with the provisions of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, 1957 read with Mineral Concession Rules, 1960. Mr. Deb submits that in the facts of this case, the accord of approval by the Central Government was only a formality under the said Act and the Rules and in the backdrop of events there was no scope for the Central Government to refuse approval when the State Government had agreed to grant the renewal. Mr. Deb contends that in the facts of the case it must be held that by directing the Government of Orissa to consider the case of the petitioner on merits against an earlier order of deemed rejection by the State Government, the Central Government, by necessary implication, made it quite clear that subject to the willingness of the State Government to grant renewal, the Central Government had the required approval for the renewal of the said Mining Lease. Mr. Deb submits that in the circumstances, the Central Government was not entitled to hold back its approval on any ground whatsoever at a later stage. Mr. Deb also submits that under R. 58 of the Mineral Concession Rules, a reservation for public sector undertaking or for Government Company can be made after giving notification in the official gazette for the said purpose. Such power is also circumscribed by R. 49 of the Mineral Concession Rules, 1960. This R. 58 of the Mineral Concession Rules has, however, come by amendment and at the relevant time when the Central Government refused to accord approval on the ground of reservation of the area for public sector exploitation the said R. 58 was not in force. Mr. Deb also contends that under Sec. 17 of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, the Central Government after consultation with the State Government may undertake prospecting or mining operation in any area not already held under any lease or prospecting licence, and if the Central Government proposes to do such prospective and mining operation it shall, by notification in the official gazette, specify the boundaries and/or areas of operation. In the instant case, no such notification has been made and as such there cannot be any reservation for any public sector exploitation. Mr. Deb also submits that the petitioner company has been carrying out mining operations for a pretty long time and there has not been any complaint whatsoever against the petitioner company for such mining operations and the Government of Orissa has also expressed its satisfaction for the manner in which the petitioner company has been working out the mining operations. The petitioner company has also paid rates and royalties to the State Government regularly and the Orissa Government has also expressed its willingness to grant renewal of Mining Lease in favour of the petitioner company. Mr. Deb has also pointed out that previously other areas were made available to MOIL for exploitation of the Manganese Ores but MOIL failed to utilise such offer and the Orissa Government is not, therefore, interested in getting the area in question exploited by MOIL. It is also contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner company that the Manganese Ores are principally consumed by the public sector undertakings including the Steel Authority of India and the export of Manganese Ores are also controlled by the Central Government in various ways. It is also contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner that there is no allegation against the petitioner company that the petitioner company is not carrying out the Mining operations scientifically or effectively thereby causing losses of the material resources of the country. In the circumstances, the refusal by the Central Government is absolutely arbitrary and without any valid reason and for extraneous reasons not authorised under the Act and the Rules. Mr. Deb has also submitted that this Court in exercise of powers in the writ jurisdiction can direct the Central Government to grant approval of lease and it is no longer necessary to direct the Central Government to consider afresh the petitioner's application for renewal. In support of the contention that in appropriate case this court can straightway direct the Central Govt. to accord approval for renewal of Mining Lease, Mr. Deb has referred to the decisions of the Supreme Court made in the case of P. Bhooma Reddy v. State of Mysore reported in AIR 1969 SC 655 and Union of India v. M/s. Anglo Afghan Agencies reported in AIR 1968 SC 718.

4. Mr. Dipankar Gupta, the learned counsel appearing for the Government of Orissa, has also contended that against the deemed refusal by the State Government of Orissa the petitioner company made an application for revision and the Central Government allowed the said revision application of the petitioner company and directed the State Government to dispose of the petitioner company's application on merits and when on such consideration of merits, the State Govt. was inclined to grant renewal it was not open to the Central Govt. to refuse permission to grant such renewal of lease. Mr. Gupta contends that the Supreme Court in the case of Amritlal Nathubhai v. Union Govt. of India reported in AIR 1976 SC 2591 has clearly held that the State Government being the owner of Mines has inherent right to exploit the Mines within its territory and for the said purpose the State Government can reserve any land. Mr. Gupta submits that apart from the fact that the State Government is the owner of the Mines and Minerals lying within the boundary of the State, the State Government has also primary interest to see that the Mining Lease and/or renewal of the same is given to a proper party. The State Government has direct interest in the dead-rent, royalty, sales tax relating to the transactions of the Minerals and the State Government has also share in the income-tax realisation from the operators of mines. It has also a direct interest in the proper development of Mines and Minerals in the State as such development will open a venue of employment of the residents of the State. The State Government has also a secondary interest in the general prosperity of the country and earning of foreign exchange by export of Minerals. Mr. Gupta submits that omnibus reservation for exploitation by public sector undertaking and/or Government Undertakings cannot be made by the Central Government. Under S. 8 of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, several guidelines have been laid down for the purpose of granting lease by the State Government. He submits that it cannot be contended that although the power of the State Government to grant a mining lease is controlled or circumscribed by the guidelines, the power of the Central Government to refuse approval or to accord approval is unfettered. Mr. Gupta submits that the only reasonable interpretation of S. 8 will be that in exercising its power to accord or to refuse approval, the Central Government will only ensure that the State Government has followed the guidelines in basing its decision and no extraneous consideration has been made by the State Government. Mr. Gupta submits that where the State Government has followed the guidelines and has not contravened any provision of the Act and the Rules and has not also taken into consideration of any extraneous matter and has come to a decision either in favour or against the grant or renewal of a mining lease, then there will be no occasion for the Central Government to interfere with the decision of the State Government. As in the instant case, the State Government has not taken into consideration any extraneous matter and on consideration of the merits of the case as directed by the Central Government earlier, has agreed to grant renewal, there was no occasion for the Central Government to refuse approval of the same.

5. Mr. Bhaskar Gupta, the learned counsel appearing for the Union of India, has drawn the attention of this court to the directive principles as embodied in Art. 39 of the Constitution. He submits that under Art. 39 (b) the ownership and control of the material resources of the community will be so distributed that the common good is best served. Art. 39 (c) provides that the operation of the economic system should be done in a way that it does not result in the concentration of wealth and means of production detrimental to the common interest. Mr. Gupta contends that under Entry 23 of List II of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution, regulation of mines and mineral development can be made by the State Legislature subject to the provisions of List I and under Entry 54 of List I of the Seventh Schedule, regulation of mines and mineral development to the extent to which such regulation and development under the control of the Union is declared by Parliament by law to be expedient in the public interest, is to be made by the Parliament. Under S. 2 of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act, such declaration has been made by the Parliament. Mr. Gupta has placed various sections of the Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act for the purpose of showing that it was the clear intention of the Parliament to have ultimate control of the Central Government over the Mines and Minerals in different States. He refers to the provisions of S. 4A of the said Act and contends that in the matter of termination of Mining Lease, the opinion of the Central Government is final and it has only been provided for that before forming the opinion, the Central Government will consult with the State Government. It also appears from S. 5 of the said Act that even in the matter of prospecting licence, the approval of the Central Government is necessary. The proviso to Section 6 (1) also lays down that if the Central Government is of the opinion that in the interest of development of mineral it is necessary so to do, the Central Government may for reasons recorded in writing, permit any person to acquire one or more prospecting licence. S. 7 deals with the prospecting licences and S. 8 deals with the mining lease and both the provisions are similar. Even in the matter of prospecting licence, it appears from the proviso to S. 7 (2) that no renewal of prospecting licence can be made except with the approval of the Central Government. Similarly in the matter of grant of mining lease, a similar proviso has been added to S. 8 (2) of the Act. Mr. Gupta also draws the attention of the Court to sub-sec. (3) of S. 8 and submits that the Central Government may authorise renewal if in the interest of mineral development such renewal is necessary. Under S. 13, power has been given to the Central Government to make rules in respect of mines and minerals. Under S. 17, the Central Government has been given special power to undertake prospective and mining operations in certain land. S. 18 (1) lays down that it will be the duty of the Central Government to take such steps as may be necessary for the conservation and development of minerals in India. Sub-sec. (3) of S. 18 provides that all rules made under the said Section shall be binding on the State Government. S. 13 gives the power to the Central Government to refuse any order which has been passed by the State Government under the said Act and S. 31 empowers the Central Government to relax the provisions of the Act and the Rules in special cases if in its opinion, the Central Government holds that in the interest of mineral development it is necessary to relax the provisions of the rules. The Central Government has also the right to grant or renewal of lease on terms and conditions different from the terms and conditions laid down in the Rules made under S. 13 of the Act. Mr. Gupta, therefore, submits that if the scheme of the Act is scrutinised, it will be quite evident that the Parliament has intended that the Central Government will have the absolute right or control over the mines and minerals in the country. The power of the Central Government under the Act is very wide and the same is not fettered by the desire or decision of the State Government. Mr. Gupta contends that under R. 54 of the Mineral Concession Rules, the Central Government acts as a revisional tribunal against any order passed by the State Government. The order of the Central Government in exercise of power of revision therefore leaves no discretion to the State Government either to refuse or to grant the mining lease to an applicant. In this connection, Mr. Gupta refers to the decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Dharam Chand Jain v. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1976 SC 1433. Mr. Gupta submits that if the power of revision or control can be passed by the Central Government after the order is passed by the State Government it will not be amenable to any reason that similar power cannot be exercised by the Central Government before any order is passed by the State Government. Mr. Gupta submits that if in its wisdom, the Central Government feels that for proper development of mines and minerals and better utilisation of the same it will be desirable that exploitation of such mines and minerals should be made by the public sector, the Central Government can certainly refuse approval of grant of any lease in favour of any other person and in the scheme of the Act, the Central Government certainly has unfettered discretion and power and no challenge can be made against the exercise of such power by the Central Government. He also submits that the decision of the Central Government that the area in question should be exploited by the public sector undertakings is also in conformity with the directive principle of the Constitution.

6. Mr. Sanghi, the learned counsel appearing for the MOIL, supports the aforesaid contentions of Mr. Gupta appearing for the Union of India. It may be noted here that Mr. Roy, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner company has contended that when the Orissa Government has expressed its intention not to grant any lease in favour of MOIL, the MOIL cannot have any interest in the area in question and consequently the MOIL cannot have any locus standi in the instant Rule. Mr. Sanghi however submits that in a dispute raised by the petitioner company and also by the Government of Orissa, that no reservation can be made for a public sector undertaking, MOIL who has been identified as the public sector undertaking for which such reservation has been made, has certainly an interest in the litigation before this Court and as such it cannot be contended that the MOIL has no locus standi. He also submits that MOIL has been added as party respondent by this Court and the party respondent being bound by the adjudication to be made, must have a right to place its case before the Court. Mr. Sanghi contends that Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act and the Mineral Concession Rules contain a complete code in respect of grant or renewal of a prospecting licence as well as a mining lease. He submits that there is no fundamental right to carry out mining operations but the rights to carry out mining operations are created and controlled by the aforesaid Statutes and no person can claim any right in mines or minerals except those created or conferred by the Statute. He submits that renewal of lease is nothing but grant of lease for a further period and for the said contention, he refers to a decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Kangra Valley State Corporation Ltd. v. State of Punjab reported in (1969) 3 SCR 165. Mr. Sanghi submits that reservation need not be made expressly, and if an area is not included in the register as referred to in R. 58 or 59 of the Mineral Concession Rules, such non-inclusion in the register will only mean that the area is not open to public. Mr. Sanghi submits that simply because the State Government was directed to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits, it cannot be contended that by necessary implication, the Central Government agreed to accord approval if the State Government was inclined to grant a renewal. Mr. Sanghi submits that initially the State Government did not express any view and did not reject the application for renewal made by the petitioner company on merits but such rejection was only a deemed rejection because of non-consideration of the said application within the stipulated time. The Central Government intended to have the views of the State Government on merits of the case and for the said purpose directed the State Government to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits. Mr. Sanghi submits that the Central Government had certainly the right to grant or refuse approval after getting the views of the State Government and he refutes the contention of Mr. Dipankar Gupta appearing for the State of Orissa that if on consideration of relevant facts and circumstances and following the guidelines contained in Section 8 of the Act, the State Government either agrees to grant or refuse to grant a mining lease, the Central Government cannot override the decision of the State Government. Mr. Sanghi submits that under the scheme of the Act, the Central Government has been made final authority in the matter of grant or renewal of a mining lease and/or prospecting licence and if such exercise of the ultimate discretion of the Central Government is not made maliciously or capriciously, then no objection can be raised against the exercise of power by the Central Government. Mr. Sanghi submits that in its wisdom the Central Government has thought it desirable that Manganese Ores in the area in question should be exploited by the public sector undertaking and not by any private individual or a company. The Court cannot question the wisdom of the Central Government in this regard and it cannot also be contended that the reason for not allowing the petitioner company to exploit the Manganese Ores from the area in question is wholly capricious and unamenable to any reason whatsoever. Accordingly, no interference is called for by the writ court and the Rules should be discharged.

7. After considering the respective submissions made by the learned counsels appearing for the parties, it appears to me that under the Act and the Rules framed thereunder, the Parliament has ensured that in the matter of development of mines and minerals in the country the Central Government will have an ultimate control and such control is not fettered by the decision of the State Government. In my view, Mr. Bhaskar Gupta is justified in his contention that the power of the Central Government under the Act and the Rules is very wide and the same is not fettered by the desire and or the decision of the State Government. It cannot be contended that if the State Government has followed the guidelines as referred to in S. 8 and has not taken into consideration any extraneous matter and thereafter comes to any decision either in favour or against the grant of a lease, the Central Government is to accept such decision as a matter of course. In my view, the Central Government for proper reasons, may not accept the decision of the State Government although such decision was taken on proper consideration of the relevant facts after following the guidelines. There is no manner of doubt that the decision of the State Government cannot be lightly brushed aside by the Central Government and it is reasonably expected that such decision of the State Government which is the owner of the Mines, must have an anxious consideration by the Central Government for a harmonious relation of the States and the Centre. If, however, the Central Government does not agree with the decision of the State Government and overrides its decision for a valid reason, it cannot be contended that the Central Government has over-stepped its limit. In the instant case, the Central Government has refused to grant approval on the ground that the area in question should be better utilised by the public sector undertaking, and it cannot be contended that such consideration is not amenable to any reason. Whether such exploitation by a public sector undertaking will be more useful in the greater interest of the country or not, is not to be considered by this Court and the Court should not embark upon the uncharted ocean of public policy. In my view, the Central Government was quite within its right in refusing to accord approval for the renewal of the mining lease in favour of the petitioner company, although the State Government of Orissa had decided to grant such lease in favour of the company. Mr. Sanghi, in my view, is justified in his contention that by directing the State Government to consider the case of the petitioner company on merits, the Central Government did not express any opinion by necessary implication that it had agreed to grant renewal in favour of the petitioner company, provided the State Government was willing. In my view, after getting the views of the Orissa Government on merits the Central Government could take one view or the other and if it had taken a decision against the renewal of the mining lease in favour of the petitioner company because the Central Government was of the view that the Manganese Ores in the area in question should be better exploited by the public sector undertakings, no illegality has been committed by the Central Government. Accordingly, no interference is called for by the writ court and the Rule is discharged. There will be no order as to costs. All interim orders passed in the Rule, stand vacated.

ANIL K. SEN AND S. N. SANYAL, JJ.

Smt. Sudha Mukherjee, Appellant v. Sankar Chatterjee, Respondent.

A. F. A. D. No. 344 of 1981 with C. R. No. 510 of 1981, D/- 4-6-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 6, R. 17 — W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13 (3A) — Amendment of plaint — Suit for eviction on ground of subletting — Ground of reasonable requirement could not be added in view of S. 13 (3A) — Amendment of plaint adding ground of personal requirement after lapse of three years as required by S. 13 (3A) allowed — Order allowing amendment is illegal. AIR 1979 Cal 221, Overruled.

The plaintiff purchased the suit premises and the defendant was in occupation of the premises as a pre-existing tenant. The plaintiff sought eviction on ground that the tenant had transferred, assigned or sublet portions of the premises. During pendency of this suit the plaintiff filed an application for amendment of the plaint seeking to incorporate the ground of reasonable requirement for own use and occupation which was allowed. The objection of the tenant defendant that such a ground was not admissible to the plaintiff in the suit which was filed within 3 years from the date of the plaintiff's purchase was overruled by the Munsif. He was of the view that the application for amendment having been filed beyond 3 years from the date of the plaintiff's purchase, plaintiff's suit for eviction on the grounds incorporated by the amendment must be deemed to be instituted on the date when such an application for amendment was filed and since that was beyond 3 years from the date of purchase there was no bar to the plaintiff's getting eviction on the ground so incorporated.

Held, that the order allowing the amendment was illegal. AIR 1979 Cal 221 Overruled. AIR 1975 SC 1146, Distinguished. (Para 11)

In the instant case when the plaintiff instituted the suit within 3 years from the date of her purchase she knew that under the law she could not institute the suit if it was based upon her own requirement. Having known as such she adopted the procedure of filing the suit on an irrelevant ground and completing the interlocutory steps to make the suit ready for hearing and at the same time taking advantage of resulting lapse of time, she filed the application for amendment to bring in the real ground in support of her claim for eviction. In substance, the amendment so sought for was solely for the purpose of circumventing the legal bar incorporated by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the Act, which well barred the suit on the date it was instituted if the real ground in support of such a suit had been pleaded in the plaint. As such the amendment sought for could not have been allowed. The amendment should not have been allowed also for the reason that the amendment if allowed would not alter the date of institution of the suit. Hence the consequence of allowing the amendment would be introducing an infirmity which would render the suit not maintainable in law. (Para 9)

S. P. Roy Chowdhury, S. Chatterjee, Aloke Banerjee and Tapan Kr. Roy, for Appellant; B. C. Dutt and Samir K. Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— This appeal from an appellate decree has been referred to us by a learned single Judge of this court as he was unable to share the view expressed by another learned single Judge in the case of Haripada Das v. Sristidhar Chakraborty, AIR 1979 Cal 221. The present appeal arises out of a suit for eviction which was decreed by the trial court but was dismissed on an appeal by the tenant defendant. The plaintiff is the appellant now before us.

2. The plaintiff purchased the suit premises on Dec. 2, 1975. At the time of such purchase the tenant defendant was in occupation of the suit premises as a pre-existing tenant. By a notice dated May 22, 1977, the plaintiff determined the tenancy in favour of the tenant defendant with the expiry of June 1977 and such a notice being a combined notice under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and S. 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, the plaintiff instituted the suit for eviction, being Title Suit No. 560 of 1977 of the 1st Court of the learned Munsif at Sealdah on August 19, 1977. On the plaint as originally filed, such eviction was sought for on the sole ground that the tenant defendant had transferred, assigned and/or sublet portions of the ground floor to several persons without the previous consent in writing of the landlord. During the pendency of this suit on March 14, 1979, the plaintiff filed an application for amendment of the plaint under O. 6, R. 17 read with S. 151 of Civil P. C. By the amendment, the plaintiff sought to incorporate two more additional grounds in support of her claim for eviction, namely, (i) that the plaintiff requires the suit premises for her own use and occupation, in as much as, she purchased the property with a view to reside there with the members of her family she having no other alternative suitable accommodation of her own and (ii) that the plaintiff requires the suit premises for building and rebuilding. Such an amendment was allowed by an order dated March 27, 1979.

3. The suit was contested by the tenant defendant who denied all the material allegations made in the plaint. The allegation of subletting was specifically denied and the claim for eviction on the ground of requirement or for building and rebuilding was contested on the ground that such a claim is not bona fide and is not admissible in view of the provision of sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act.

4. On the evidence led by the parties both the courts have concurrently overruled the plaintiff's claim of eviction based on the ground of subletting or the plaintiff's requirement for building and rebuilding. Neither of those two grounds according to the courts below could be substantiated by the plaintiff on the evidence led by her. The learned Munsif, however, decreed the suit upon a finding that the plaintiff had been able to make out the ground of reasonable requirement for her own use and occupation and for the use and occupation of the members of her family. The objection on the part of the tenant defendant that such a ground is not admissible to the plaintiff in the present suit which was filed within 3 years from the date of the plaintiff's purchase was overruled by the learned Munsif primarily relying upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerjee v. Anita Pan, AIR 1975 SC 1146. He was of the view that the application for amendment having been filed beyond 3 years from the date of the plaintiff's purchase, plaintiff's suit for eviction on the grounds incorporated by the amendment must be deemed to be instituted on the date when such an application for amendment was filed and since that was beyond 3 years from the date of purchase there was no bar to the plaintiff's getting eviction on the ground so incorporated.

5. The tenant defendant preferred an appeal. The court of appeal, it appears, upheld the plaintiff's case of requirement for her own use and occupation particularly in view of the admission of the defendant tenant in the cross-examination. But the learned judge in the court of appeal below failed to agree with the learned Munsif that sub-sec. (3A) of Section 13 would not stand in the way of plaintiff getting a decree for eviction in the present suit on the ground incorporated by the amendment. According to the learned judge of the court of appeal below the ratio of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerji v. Anita Pan (supra) would not be applicable to a suit instituted after the amendment of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act by the Amending Act of 1969, when not only sub-sec. (3A) was introduced but original Section 13 (1) (f) was made into Ss. 13 (1) (f) and 13 (1) (ff). In that view, the learned judge in the court of appeal below held that the suit is hit by the provision of sub-sec. (3A) of Section 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act and he accordingly allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit. Feeling aggrieved, the plaintiff-landlord has preferred the present appeal.

6. Mr. Roychowdhury appearing in support of this appeal has strongly contended that the court of appeal below was not justified in holding that the ratio of the Supreme Court decision in the case of B. Banerji v. Anita Pan (AIR 1975 SC 1146) (supra) is not applicable to a post-Amendment Suit. According to Mr. Roychowdhury, the principle laid down therein with regard to filing of fresh pleadings and the effect thereof would be equally applicable to all suits whether instituted prior to or after the Amending Act came into force which was retrospective in operation. That apart, according to Mr. Roychowdhury, all amendments are not necessarily retrospective and when the court is entitled to take notice of subsequent events and allow the parties to mould their pleadings in the light of subsequent events, in the present case the learned Munsif was fully justified in allowing the amendment by way of incorporating new grounds in support of her claim of eviction on a day when the legal bar to the pleading of such grounds in support of such a claim stood removed by efflux of time. According to Mr. Roychowdhury such an amendment takes its effect on the date it is made. Reliance is placed by Mr. Roychowdhury on those lines of cases where the court has either taken notice of subsequent events or had allowed to amend the plaint to incorporate new grounds in support of the original claim where such grounds arose subsequently. Particular reference is made to cases for recovery of possession on the ground of forfeiture of a lease where pending the suit the lease having expired the court had allowed the lessor to seek recovery of possession based on such expiry of the lease.

7. Mr. Dutt appearing on behalf of the tenant defendant has contested the point thus raised by Mr. Roychowdhury. According to Mr. Dutt the ratio of the Supreme Court decision in the case of B. Banerji v. Anita Pan (supra) is not applicable to a suit like the present one which had been filed after the amendment of the statute. Referring to the application for amendment itself Mr. Dutt has contended that the plaintiff instituted the suit really basing her claim on her own requirement on August 19, 1977, in breach of the bar already incorporated in the statute by way of sub-section (3A) though she circumvented the bar by not pleading the ground of requirement at the date of the institution but incorporating the same by a subsequent amendment. Such an amendment, according to Mr. Dutt, was neither bona fide nor permissible in law. In the case before the Supreme Court the suit for eviction having been filed before the amendment of the statute, the Supreme Court found that the bar under sub-sec. (3A) could have no application to such a suit but the suit would fail because of the amendment, in as much as, the ground on which the suit was instituted was lost by the amendment. In such a situation the Supreme Court allowed the parties to incorporate fresh pleadings making out a case in the light of the amended statute and since such a ground cannot refer back to the date of the institution of the suit, it was held that the suit must be deemed to have been filed on the date the fresh pleading is filed. Such a principle can hardly be used for the purpose of circumventing a bar to the institution of a suit incorporated by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act. It has further been contended by Mr. Dutta that general principles relied on by Mr. Roychowdhury laid down by courts with regard to amendment having regard to subsequent events can have no application where the amendment has been sought for for the purpose of circumventing a statutory bar.

8. We have carefully considered the rival contentions put forward before us. In our view the dispute now raised before us has to be considered from two angles, viz., (1) whether such an amendment could have been lawfully allowed and (2) even if such an amendment be allowed whether the suit would still be hit by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act 1956. On the point of amendment though strong reliance is placed on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of B. Banerji v. Anita Pan (AIR 1975 SC 1146). We do not think that the said decision can be of any help to the appellant. In the said decision, the Supreme Court upheld the constitutional validity of the retrospective operation of the Amending Act after overruling the contrary view expressed by this Court. Having done so, in para 27 of the judgement the Supreme Court considered the effect of the amendment on the pending litigation. The Supreme Court observed that the suits, there under consideration, as instituted in the year 1961 or 1964 would not be hit by sub-sec. (3A) as incorporated by the Amending Act of 1969 notwithstanding its retrospective operation because that sub-section prohibited suits for recovery of possession by transferee landlords on any of the grounds mentioned in cl. (f) or cl. (ff) of sub-sec. (1). But neither of those two grounds constituted the ground for eviction in those suits because such were the new grounds incorporated by the Amending Act which were not in existence prior to 1969. The Supreme Court, however, proceeded to hold that even then the suit must fail on the bar of S. 13 (1) because the ground on which those suits were instituted were lost by the amendment. It is only in that background when the plaintiffs in suits pending since before the amendment were found to be non-sued by the change incorporated by the Amending Act that the Supreme Court prescribed a just resolution of the complex situation by filing of fresh pleadings in accordance with the changed law. The Supreme Court held that in such cases the plaintiffs should be allowed to file fresh pleadings averring grounds as contemplated by the Act as amended and proceed with the suit on such grounds. Since a suit on such a ground could be instituted only after the amendment and not earlier that the Supreme Court held that fresh pleadings being filed the suit must be deemed to have been instituted on such grounds on the date of filing of such fresh pleadings. Supreme Court made it further clear that 'institution of a suit earlier has to be ignored for this purpose since that was not based on grounds covered by cls. (f) and/or (ff) and is not attracted by sub-sec. (3A)'. The position, however, is totally different in a case like the present one now under consideration. Here the ground for eviction was available to the plaintiff on the day the suit was instituted but the law prohibited the plaintiff from instituting a suit on such a ground before the expiry of 3 years from the date of her purchase. The prohibition was against instituting the suit on such a ground of requirement. Such a prohibition is being circumvented when the plaintiff institutes the suit pleading a different ground though her real intention is to get a decree on such a ground of requirement which is well established by the fact that she incorporates such a ground into the pleading by subsequent amendment and when she obtains the decree on such a ground. Unlike the case before the Supreme Court here the ground being available to the plaintiff the law had incorporated a prohibition and to allow the amendment is to circumvent the prohibition and not resolve a complexity brought about by the statute as in the case before the Supreme Court. It is not a case where the earlier institution of the suit can be ignored because of non-existence of the grounds on which the claim of eviction rests.

9. Mr. Roychowdhury may be right in his contention that in law to do justice between the parties and in order to shorten the litigation the court not only takes note of subsequent events but also allows amendment of pleadings in the light of such subsequent events where it is shown that the original relief claimed has by reason of subsequent change of circumstances become inappropriate or that it is necessary to have the decision of the court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten the litigation or to do complete justice between the parties and it becomes incumbent upon a court of justice to take notice of event which has happened since the institution of the suit and to mould its decree according to the circumstances as they stand at the time the decree is made and leave to amend may be granted for this purpose. (See Rai Charan v. Biswanath, AIR 1915 Cal 103). But this is a principle adopted as an exception to the general rule that an action must be tried in all its stages on the cause of action as it existed at the commencement of the action. Such a principle cannot, however, be invoked to nullify the effect of a statutory prohibition as in sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act. Looking at the substance there is no subsequent event in the strict sense of the term. Upon the plaintiff's application for amendment she had purchased the house as she needed it for her personal use and occupation. When she instituted the suit within 3 years from the date of her purchase she knew that under the law she could not institute the suit if it was based upon her own requirement. Having known as such she adopted the procedure of filing the suit on an irrelevant ground and completing the interlocutory steps to make the suit ready for hearing and at the same time taking advantage of resulting lapse of time, she filed the application for amendment to bring in the real ground in support of her claim for eviction. In substance, the amendment so sought for was solely for the purpose of circumventing the legal bar incorporated by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, which well barred the suit on the date it was instituted if the real ground in support of such a suit had been pleaded in the plaint. As such the amendment sought for could not have been allowed. There is one more reason why the amendment should not have been allowed. The amendment if allowed would not alter the date of institution of the suit. This will be so for reasons given hereinafter. Hence the consequence of allowing the amendment would be introducing an infirmity which would render the suit not maintainable in law. Though the single Bench decision of this Court in the case of Haripada Das v. Sristidhar Chakraborty, (AIR 1979 Cal 221) well supports the contention of Mr. Roychowdhury on the point, we are, with due respect to the learned judge, unable to share the view expressed therein. We, therefore, hold that in the present case the trial court erred in law in allowing the amendment as it did on March 27, 1979.

10. We now proceed to consider the other aspect, viz., whether the amendment when allowed would render the suit not maintainable because the bar under sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act would be attracted to such a suit. In our considered opinion the answer to the above question must be in the affirmative. The amendment allowed was made only to add new grounds in support of the original claim for recovery of possession on eviction of the tenant defendant. Such an amendment does not alter the nature of the suit nor does it bring in new parties. Those new grounds again are not strictly new in the sense of those accruing after the institution of the suit. In our view it is well settled that even in cases of such amendments, the date of original presentation of the plaint continues to remain the date of the suit. In cases of amendments which do not change the nature and character of the suit or do not attract S. 21 of the Limitation Act, there is no resultant change of the date of the suit. (See Peary Mohan Mukherji v. Narendra Nath Mukherji, (1909) 37 Ind App 27 and Mohini Mohan v. Bangsi, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 580 (PC). In cases where the court takes note of subsequent events or allows grounds which arise subsequently to be pleaded in support of the original claim, the court, does so in the absence of any legal bar as an exception either to shorten the litigation or do complete justice to the parties; that, however, does not ordinarily mean that the date of institution of the suit is altered or that the suit itself is made post-dated. This position is made further clear where in cases of legal bar existing on the date of institution of the suit like those in S. 80 of Civil P. C. or S. 69 of Partnership Act, such bar is not removed by taking of subsequent steps to cure the defect and a consequent amendment pleading such subsequent removal of the defect. Reference may be made to the decisions in the cases of M. S. A. S. Mudaliar v. East Asiatic Co. Ltd., AIR

1936 Mad 991 and Ebrahimbhai v. State, AIR 1975 Bom 13, (para 12). In this view even of the amendment, the suit would be hit by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, and the learned judge in the court of appeal below was right in holding that the suit should be dismissed on that ground.

11. In the result, the only point raised by Mr. Roychowdhury must fail for reasons given, the appeal fails and is dismissed. Plaintiff-appellant's suit for eviction stands dismissed as the ground of subletting could not be substantiated on evidence led by her and the suit in so far as it is based on grounds incorporated by the amendment is concerned, is hit by sub-sec. (3A) of S. 13 of W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Parties do bear their costs throughout.

12. Since the appeal is disposed of, the Rule becomes infructuous and is, accordingly, disposed of.

S. N. SANYAL, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

ORDER:— In this application the petitioner is challenging an order dated December 23, 1980 passed in Miscellaneous Appeal No. 246 of 1980 by the District Judge, Burdwan. By the said order the learned District Judge allowed the appeal filed by the opposite party No. 1 against an order dated Dec. 22, 1980 passed by the learned Munsif, Second Court, Burdwan in Title Suit No. 313 of 1980 refusing to grant an ad interim injunction as prayed for by the opposite party No. 1. The said suit was filed by the opposite party No. 1 for certain declarations and also for an injunction restraining the governing body of the Burdwan Raj College from giving effect to its resolution dated Dec. 22, 1980 terminating the services of the opposite party No. 1 as Principal of the said College. The prayer for ad interim injunction was disallowed by the trial court and the trial court directed notices to be issued to the defendants and fixed the hearing of the injunction after one week. Against the said order the opposite party No. 1 preferred the miscellaneous appeal to the Court of the District Judge who allowed the appeal and granted an ad interim injunction. Against this appellate order the petitioner has filed this application.

2. Elaborate arguments were advanced by the learned Advocates for the parties in support of their respective contentions on the merits of the case. It is not necessary nor is it desirable to enter into the merits of the case and express any opinion at this stage, as that may prejudice either of the parties at the final hearing of the suit.

3. Mr. Chatterjee, learned Advocate for the petitioner has contended that the order of ad interim injunction granted by the lower appellate court cannot be sustained inasmuch as the opposite party No. 1 in his plaint as well as in the application for injunction did not truly and faithfully state all the relevant facts. He therefore contended that the opposite party No. 1 being guilty of suppression of material facts, his application was liable to be dismissed in limine. It was contended that the opposite party No. 1 had earlier moved this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution and obtained a Rule and a limited order of injunction. By that order of injunction this Court directed that the opposite party No. 1 would be entitled to get his remunerations as previously drawn by him, but he would not act as the Principal of the College. The opposite party No. 1 mentioned about the Rule which was obtained by him from this Court, but he did not mention the limited order of injunction which was granted by this Court. It was further contended that the letter of the opposite party No. 1 dated 22/24 Nov. 1978 addressed to the Secretary, Education Department, Government of West Bengal, was also not disclosed by the opposite party No. 1. The statement made by the opposite party No. 1 in paragraph 6 of his petition for temporary injunction was not consistent with this letter. Other instances of suppression of material facts were also urged by Mr. Chatterjee in support of his contention that the application for temporary injunction was liable to be dismissed in limine. In support of his contention Mr. Chatterjee has relied upon the leading decision on this point in The King v. The General Commissioners for the Purposes of the Income Tax Acts for the District of Kensington reported in (1917) 1 KB 486 which has been followed by subsequent decisions by this Court as well as by other High Courts and the Supreme Court (See Ratan Chandra Nayak v. Adhar Biswas reported in (1952) 56 Cal WN 302 : (AIR 1952 Cal 72); Mishri Debi Agarwal v. Asstt. Collector of Central Excise reported in (1967) 71 Cal WN 385 and Bimal Kumar Sur v. State of West Bengal reported in (1976 Lab IC 796) (Cal). It has been observed in Rex v. Kensington Income-tax Commissioners ((1917) 1 KB 486), the decision of the King's Bench Division referred to above that "it is perfectly well settled that a person who makes an ex parte application to Court.....is under an obligation to the Court to make the fullest possible disclosure of all material facts within his knowledge and if he does not make that fullest possible disclosure, then he cannot obtain any advantage which he may have already obtained by means of the order which has thus wrongly been obtained by him. That is perfectly plain and requires no authority to justify it."

4. In the present case it is quite clear from the plaint as well as the application for injunction that the opposite party No. 1 did not disclose the various correspondence and orders which were made from time to time as contained in the annexures to the present revisional application. That being the position in view of the principle of law laid down as stated above, an order for an ad interim injunction cannot be made in favour of the opposite party No. 1. The order passed by the lower appellate court cannot therefore be sustained.

5. This application is accordingly allowed, the order passed by the learned District Judge is set aside and that of the learned Munsif is restored. The learned Munsif is directed to hear out the application for temporary injunction within four weeks from the date of receipt of this order after giving the parties an opportunity to file their respective affidavits.

6. There will be no order as to costs in this application.

Application allowed.

M. M. DUTT AND AMITABHA DUTTA, JJ.

Shethia Mining & Manufacturing Corporation Ltd., Appellant v. Khas Dharmaband Colliery Company Pvt. Ltd., Respondent.

Appeal No. 449 of 1979. D/- 30-4-1982.

Limitation Act (36 of 1963), Art. 122 — Conditional order to file affirmed affidavit within stipulated time, on failure of which suit would stand dismissed — Failure of appellant — Appellant filing it on liberty given to him subsequently by Court — Respondent alleging that suit stood dismissed in view of conditional order — Application by appellant for condonation of delay and to proceed with hearing — Would not be barred by Art. 122. (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 148).

On 7-2-1972, the appellant filed a suit against the respondent. The respondent entered appearance in the suit and filed its written statement. On July 30, 1975 the appellant affirmed an affidavit of documents. The said affidavit was not, however, filed by the appellant. On Aug. 5, 1975 the Court below directed the appellant to file the affidavit of documents within 10 days and further directed that in default the suit would stand dismissed. A long time after the expiry of the period of 10 days, that is to say, on April 24, 1976, the respondent consented in writing to the filing of the affidavit of documents. On April 30, 1976 the Court below granted liberty to the appellant to file the affidavit of documents which was affirmed on July 30, 1975 and the appellant filed the same on that date. Subsequently on mentioning the suit for hearing by the appellant, the suit was not fixed as it was alleged by the respondent that the suit stood dismissed by virtue of order of 5-8-1975. The appellant filed the application for condonation of delay in filing such affidavit and to proceed with hearing etc. which was dismissed as barred by limitation under Art. 122. The respondent had not made any complaint against the order of 30-4-1976.

Held, that Art. 122 would not be applicable to such application. After the said order dated April 30, 1976 was passed, there was an implied extension of the time to file affidavit of documents and also the recalling of the order dated Aug. 5, 1975 under which the suit was directed to be dismissed in default of the affidavit of documents being filed within the period allowed. It could not be said that the court had no power to extend the time after the expiry of the period of 10 days within which the appellant was directed to file its affidavit of documents. It would not be correct to say that in procedural matters the Court becomes powerless after the expiry of the period mentioned in a conditional order. Case law discussed.

R. C. Deb, Batchwat and R. N. Mitra, for Appellant; Bhabra and P. K. Das for Respondent.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This appeal has been preferred by the appellant, Shethia Mining & Manufacturing Corporation Limited against the order dated July 3, 1979 of a learned single Judge of this Court whereby the learned Judge dismissed the application of the appellant filed on Dec. 7, 1978.

2. On Feb. 7, 1972, the appellant filed a suit against the respondent in the Original Side of this Court praying for a decree for Rs. 12,25,615.62, being the balance of the price of the goods sold and delivered by the appellant to the respondent. The respondent entered appearance in the suit and filed its written statement. On July 16, 1975, the respondent applied before the Court below for discovery of documents by the appellant. It appears that on July 30, 1975, the appellant affirmed an affidavit of documents. The said affidavit was not, however, filed by the appellant. It is the case of the appellant that the affidavit, after it was affirmed, was sent by the appellant to its Directors in Bombay for their approval, but it was lost sight of and so it could not be filed. Be that as it may, on Aug. 5, 1975 the Court below directed the appellant to file the affidavit of documents within 10 days and further directed that in default the suit would stand dismissed.

3. The affidavit of documents which was affirmed by the appellant on July 30, 1975 was not filed within 10 days that was allowed by the learned Judge. A long time after the expiry of the period of 10 days, that is to say, on Apr. 24, 1976, the respondent consented in writing to the filing of the affidavit of documents. On Apr. 30, 1976 the Court below granted liberty to the appellant to file the affidavit of documents which was affirmed on July 30, 1975 and the appellant filed the same on that date. Thereafter, the appellant gave notice to the respondent for mentioning the suit for hearing and in terms of the said notice on Nov. 20, 1978, the suit was mentioned by the appellant for fixing a date of hearing. It was, however, contended on behalf of the respondent that the suit stood dismissed by virtue of the order dated Aug. 5, 1975. In view of the said contention, the hearing of the suit was not fixed and that led to the appellant to the filing of an application, inter alia, praying for the following reliefs :

(1) Liberty to the appellant to proceed with the hearing of the suit;

(2) Extension of time to file the affidavit of documents till April 30, 1976 and

(3) Condonation of delay in filing its affidavit of documents which had been affirmed on July 30, 1975.

The said application was opposed by the respondent.

4. The learned Judge, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case and submissions made on behalf of either party, came to the finding that the application was barred by limitation under Art. 122 of the Limitation Act, 1963. It was held by the learned Judge that the order dated Aug. 5, 1975 was final and binding, and that the same having been perfected, the Court could not exercise its inherent power to set it aside. The learned Judge observed, inter alia, that the default clause having become operative, there was no room for the application of the inherent power. Upon the said findings, the learned Judge dismissed the said application. Hence, this appeal.

5. The principal ground which weighed with the learned Judge was that the application was barred by Art. 122 of the Limitation Act. Article 122 prescribes a period of 30 days for filing an application for the restoration of a suit or appeal or application for review or revision, dismissed for default of appearance or for want of prosecution or for failure to pay cost of service of process or to furnish security for costs. It is apparent that the provision of Art. 122 does not in terms apply to the application with which we are concerned. The application is one for extension of time and/or for a direction for the hearing of the suit or condonation of the delay in filing the affidavit of documents. Art. 122 has, therefore, no manner of application. The learned Judge was, therefore, not right in holding that the application was barred by Art. 122 of the Lim. Act. Before we consider other points, it is significant to notice one fact, viz., that the respondent consented in writing to the filing of the affidavit of documents. It is, however, the case of the respondent before us that the said consent was obtained by the appellant by suppression of some facts. In the trial Court, no such plea was taken on behalf of the respondent. For the first time it is alleged before us that the respondent was misled to give its consent in writing for the filing of the affidavit of documents. We have considered the allegation of the respondent and we are of the view that there is no merit in the plea that the respondent was misled to give its consent in writing to the filing of the affidavit of documents.

6. Another significant fact which has not been considered by the learned Judge is that long after the order dated Aug. 5, 1975 was passed, Sabyasachi Mukherji, J. by his order dated April 30, 1976 granted liberty to the appellant to file the affidavit of documents which was affirmed on July 30, 1975 and, as stated already, by virtue of that liberty the appellant filed the affidavit of documents. That order has not been recalled or set aside. Indeed, no complaint was made by the respondent against the said order dated April 30, 1976. It is, however, argued before us that the appellant procured the said order from the learned Judge without disclosing that the suit stood dismissed by virtue of the order dated Aug. 5, 1975. We do not know what representation was made by the appellant before the learned Judge, but all that we want to point out is that the respondent also did not bring to the notice of the Court that the said order was procured by the appellant by suppression of material facts. In our opinion, it is now too late to say that the order was passed by the learned Judge at the instance of the appellant who suppressed the fact of the dismissal of the suit. In the circumstances, we are unable to accept the contention of the respondent that the said order should be ignored. The learned Judge has not considered the effect of the said order. In the face of the said order, we are afraid, the learned Judge had no jurisdiction to hold that the suit stood dismissed. It is clear that after the said order dated April 30, 1976 was passed, there was an implied extension of the time to file affidavit of documents and also the recalling of the order dated Aug. 5, 1975 under which the suit was directed to be dismissed in default of the affidavit of documents being filed within the period allowed.

7. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that as the consequence that has been indicated in the order dated Aug. 5, 1975 had taken place, the Court became functus officio and had no jurisdiction to entertain any prayer for extension of time. Indeed the contention is that the Court had no power to extend the time after the expiry of the period of 10 days within which the appellant was directed to file its affidavit of documents. This contention, in our opinion, is not sound. It is true that sometimes in a procedural matter the Court has to pass a conditional order, that is to say, an order in terrorem for the purpose of compelling a litigant to comply with the procedure and thereby avoiding prolongation of the suit or proceeding, but that does not mean that in such matters the Court is powerless to extend the time which it had initially granted.

8. In Mahanth Ram Das v. Ganga Das, AIR 1961 SC 882, the Supreme Court made the following observation (para 5):

"Such procedural orders, though peremptory (conditional decrees apart) are, in essence, in terrorem, so that dilatory litigants might put themselves in order and avoid delay. They do not, however, completely estop a Court from taking note of events and circumstances which happened within the time fixed."

Again, in a recent decision of the Supreme Court in Chinnamarkathian v. Ayyavoo, (1982) 1 SCC 159 : (AIR 1982 SC 137), the Supreme Court on an interpretation of S. 148 of the Civil P. C. has observed that the true purport of conditional orders is that such orders merely create something like a guarantee or sanction for obedience of the court's order but would not take away the court's jurisdiction to act according to the mandate of the statute or on relevant equitable considerations if the statute does not deny such consideration. Under Sec. 148 of the Civil P. C., the Court has undoubtedly the power to grant extension of time even after the expiry of the period initially granted. There is a similar provision under R. 46 of Chap. 38 of the Original Side Rules which confers a power on the Court or a Judge to extend time even though the application for extension is not made until after the expiration of the time appointed or allowed. In this connection, it may be said that there is some difference between extension of time in a procedural matter and extension of time in regard to a conditional decree which has also been noticed by the Supreme Court in Mahanth Ram's case (supra), the relevant observation having been already set out above. In our opinion, it is wrong to think that in procedural matters the Court becomes powerless after the expiry of the period mentioned in a conditional order. If any contention in this regard is accepted that may operate harshly against bona fide litigants and will hinder justice. We are, therefore, of the view that the learned Judge was not right in entertaining the view that the Court had no power to extend time after the conditional order had taken effect.

9. For the reasons aforesaid, we set aside the order of the learned Judge and allow the application for extension or for condonation of delay. The delay in filing the affidavit of documents is condoned. We direct that the affidavit of documents shall be accepted. Further, we direct that the Court below will proceed with the hearing of the suit in accordance with law. The appeal is allowed. The appellant shall, however, pay the costs of this appeal to the respondent, hearing fee being assessed at 30 G.Ms.

10. After the judgment was delivered Mr. P. K. Das, learned counsel who was assisting Mr. Bhabra, the learned senior counsel for the respondent, takes a point against the maintainability of the appeal. It may be stated that at the very outset when Mr. Bhabra was not present, Mr. Das took the point. After the appellant's counsel finished his submissions in support of the appeal, we called upon Mr. Bhabra to reply. Mr. Bhabra, however, did not argue any point against the maintainability of the appeal, although he made his submissions on other points. In the circumstances, we had no occasion to consider the question of maintainability of the appeal, nor was there any scope for calling upon the appellant for a reply on the point. Had Mr. Bhabra taken or raised the point as to the maintainability of the appeal, we would have surely considered the same after calling upon the appellant to reply to the point, if thought necessary. We are, therefore, not at all inclined to consider the point as to the maintainability of the appeal as submitted by Mr. Das, after the delivery of the judgment and in the absence of Mr. Bhabra.

11. Mr. Das prays for a certificate for appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 134A of the Constitution. We do not think that any substantial question of law is involved in this appeal, nor do we think that any point is required to be decided by the Supreme Court. The oral prayer for a certificate for appeal to the Supreme Court is, accordingly, disallowed. We also disallow the prayer of the respondent for stay of operation of this judgment.

AMITABHA DUTTA, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

ANIL K. SEN AND
B. C. CHAKRABARTI, JJ.

Sushil Chandra Sur and others, Appellants v. Smt. Sadhana Bakobi and another, Respondents.

F. M. A. Nos. 926-928 of 1975, D/- 8-4-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 47 — W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13 (1) — Suit to evict tenant on ground of default in payment of rent and requirement of premises for rebuilding — Compromise decree — No indication that Court while passing decree applied its mind as to existence of statutory ground of eviction — Decree is nullity and cannot be executed — Executing Court cannot go behind decree.

Under S. 13 (1) the Court cannot pass a decree for eviction except on one or more of the grounds enumerated in the section. Therefore it is the existence of one or more of the statutory grounds that confers jurisdiction on the Court to pass a decree for eviction. Where in the suit for eviction on the grounds of default in payment of rent, subletting and requirement of the premises for rebuilding the Court even before the filing of the written statement and recording of any evidence passed a compromise decree entitling the plaintiff to execute it and take possession of the premises through Court if on notice the tenant failed to vacate and there is nothing on the record or in the compromise decree itself to show that the Court had, before passing the decree, applied its mind and satisfied itself that a statutory ground for eviction did in fact exist the decree would be null and void and as such not executable. The mere fact that the Court recorded having heard the Advocates before recording the compromise is by itself not sufficient to show that the Court had applied its mind as to the existence of the statutory grounds far less that it was satisfied in that regard. The executing Court is not entitled to entertain any evidence to see if there was a good ground for eviction. It is not competent to go behind the decree. At the most it may look into the materials on the record to see if there was some material on the basis of which the Court could have been satisfied as to the existence of a statutory ground of eviction, (1969) 2 SCR 432, AIR 1970 SC 838, AIR 1970 SC 794 and AIR 1973 SC 1311, Rel. on.; AIR 1974 SC 471 and AIR 1978 SC 952 and (1981) 85 Cal WN 120, Dist. (Paras 11, 14, 16)

B. C. Datta and G. N. Chandra, for Appellants; Sudhin Das Gupta and R. S. Mishra, for Respondents.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J. :— These three appeals are directed against a common judgment dated Aug. 24, 1974 by which three miscellaneous cases, arising out of three objections under S. 47, C. P. Code were disposed of.

2. Facts are not very much in dispute. The appellants instituted three ejectment suits in the City Civil Court, Calcutta for eviction of the respondents from different portions of premises No. 125, Canning Street, now known as 125, Bip-labi Rash Behari Road, Calcutta, which the respondents held as tenants under the plaintiff-appellants. They are Ejectment Suits Nos. 1129/65, 1130/65 and 1138/65. The grounds upon which the claims for eviction were founded were default in the payment of rent and reasonable requirement of the landlord for purposes of building and rebuilding. There was an additional ground in suit No. 1129/65 namely that the tenant had illegally and unauthorisedly sublet portions of the tenanted premises. All the three suits were decreed on compromise shortly after the defendants entered appearance. They did not file any written statements. The terms of the compromise were identical in all the cases and the material part of it runs as follows:—

"1. That the above suit be decreed with costs by consent of parties on the following terms and conditions:—

(a) That the defendant will vacate the suit premises within one month from the receipt of the notice from the plaintiffs.

(b) That the defendant will pay up all arrears of rent, if any, within one month from the date and current damages to the plaintiffs, month by month within the fifteenth of the following month at the existing rate of rent.

(c) That if the defendant fails to vacate the suit premises after receipt of the notice from the plaintiffs as mentioned in cl. (a) above or fails to pay up all arrears of rent and current damages within the period mentioned in cl. (b) above, the plaintiffs will have the liberty to execute the decree and take possession of the suit premises through court.

(d) That the plaintiffs will have the liberty to withdraw all monies from court deposited in the above suit to their credit."

3. In one of the suits there was a minor defendant and permission was sought for entering into compromise on behalf of the minor defendant.

4. These compromise petitions which were filed before the Registrar of the court, on being placed before the Bench the court passed orders decreeing the suits on compromise and further directing the sole name to form part of the decrees. In the suit in which leave to compromise on behalf of the minor was filed, there was a further order granting the leave as the terms appeared to be legal.

5. All these 3 suits were thus disposed of on compromise on different dates in 1965. Admittedly the plaintiffs subsequently served notices on the defendants requiring them to vacate and they not having vacated applications for recovery of possession by execution of the decree were filed. They are Ejectment Execution Cases Nos. 445 of 1972, 219 of 1972 and 235 of 1972. The defendants on being served with notices under O. 21, R. 22 of the Code, entered appearance and filed separate objections under S. 47 which were registered as Misc. Cases Nos. 58/72, 98/72 and 149/73 respectively.

6. Besides some minor objections, the common stand taken by all the defendants judgment-debtors was that the decree in each of the suits was a nullity in so far as the court not having found that any of the grounds enumerated in S. 13 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act existed, had no jurisdiction to pass the decree. The plaintiffs (decree-holders) resisted the misc. cases on the plea that the judgment-debtor having consented to the decree being passed were estopped from questioning the validity or legality of the same.

7. All the three misc. cases were heard analogously and disposed of by the order appealed against. It appears that both parties adduced some evidence in support of their respective contentions. The learned Judge, relying on the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in the cases of Bahadur Singh v. Muni Subrat, (1969) 2 SCR 432, Kausallya Debi v. K. L. Bansal, 1969 (2) SCR 1048: (AIR 1970 SC 838); Ferozilal v. Man Mal, AIR 1970 SC 794 and K. K. Chari v. Sheshadri, AIR 1973 SC 1311, found that there was nothing to indicate that the court while passing the decree had applied its mind to the question as to whether any of the grounds upon which the claim for eviction was founded, existed or not, and not having found that it really existed was incompetent to pass the decrees. The decrees were accordingly found to be null and void and as such not executable. On that view the objections under S. 47, C.P.C. were allowed and the execution cases were struck off. The other objections urged before the executing court without success, need not be adverted to as they were not pressed before us.

8. Being aggrieved at the decision the plaintiffs-decree-holders have preferred these present appeals. These appeals have been heard analogously and this judgment shall govern all of them.

9. Mr. Dutt appearing in support of the appeals contended that it is not necessary that there should be a positive and affirmative finding that there exists a ground for eviction but that what is required is to see whether the court was satisfied as to its existence. It was argued that the satisfaction of the court need not necessarily be manifested by a positive judicial finding and that if there are intrinsic materials on the record to justify an inference that the court had applied its mind, that would be sufficient to confer jurisdiction on the court to pass the decree. Mr. Dutt in this context also drew our attention to the evidence adduced by the parties in the misc. cases and argued that the evidence would indicate that really a ground for eviction existed.

10. Mr. Das Gupta in opposing the appeals on the other hand argued that the decrees were passed at a very initial stage of the suits, that there is no material on record either in the shape of admissions or otherwise to justify any inference as to the existence of any of the grounds on which the claim for eviction was founded. He argued that the evidence given during the hearing of the misc. cases could not be looked into for the purpose of finding that the court was satisfied as the time when the decrees were passed.

11. Section 13 (1) of the W. B. P. T. Act provided that no court shall pass a decree except on one or more of the grounds enumerated in the section. It is therefore clear that it is the existence of one or more of the grounds that confers jurisdiction on the court to pass a decree for eviction. From a conspectus of the decisions relied on by the learned Judge in the court below the principle that emerges is, that if at the time of passing of the decree there was some material before the court, on the basis of which the court could be prima facie satisfied about the existence of a statutory ground for eviction it will be presumed that the court was so satisfied. The principle has been further explained and elucidated in the case of Nagindas v. Dalpatram, AIR 1974 SC 471. It has been held there:

"such material may take the shape either of evidence recorded or produced in the case, or, it may partly or wholly be in the shape of an express or implied admission made in the compromise agreement itself."

In that case the compromise contained an admission of a material fact which constituted a ground for eviction. It was laid down in that case that if on the face of it the decree does not show that existence of such material or jurisdictional fact, executing court may look to the original record of the trial court to ascertain whether there was any material furnishing a foundation for the trial courts' jurisdiction to pass the decree it did.

12. In a still later case, Suleman v. Umarbhai, AIR 1978 SC 952, it was held that where there are abundant intrinsic material in the compromise itself that the decree passed upon its basis was not in violation of the Act but was in accordance with it, the compromise decree was not a nullity and could be executed on non-compliance, 13. In a more recent decision of this court in the case of Biswa Bhushan v. Kusum Agarwalla, (1981) 85 Cal WN 120, this Court held that it is the existence of the ground for passing a decree for eviction under S. 13 (1) of the W. B. P. T. Act and the satisfaction of the court as to such existence which confers jurisdiction on the court to pass a decree and that such jurisdiction is not dependent on the recording of such satisfaction in the judgment/decreed itself.

14. Mr. Dutt relied particularly on the last mentioned cases to build up an argument that the defendant judgment-debtor must, in the facts of the case, be presumed to have conceded the existence of a ground for eviction. We are however unable to agree with Mr. Dutt on this point, we have already indicated the terms of the compromise in details. There is no admission in the compromise as to the existence of any of the statutory grounds the proof of which alone could confer jurisdiction on the court to pass a decree. On the contrary the reference to arrears "if any" in Cl. (b) of the compromise suggests that the factum of arrears even, far less a default for more than 4 occasions within a period of 12 months as alleged, was not admitted. There is no reference to the requirement of the landlord for purposes of building or rebuilding. Apart from the compromise agreement there is no question of any other material being on the record from which a legitimate inference as to the existence of a ground for eviction, could be made. It will bear repetition that the suits were compromised even before the written statements were filed. No evidence was recorded. In such circumstances we are unable to look to any other material except the compromise itself and we have already indicated that the agreement leads us no where so far as the jurisdictional fact is concerned.

15. The cases of Nagindas v. Dalpatram (AIR 1974 SC 471); Suleman v. Umarbhai (AIR 1978 SC 952) and Biswa Bhushan v. Kusum Agarwalla ((1981) 85 Cal WN 120) stand on different footing. In the former two cases the court found that there were clear admissions as to the existence of a ground for eviction which could be spelt out from the compromise petition itself. In the last mentioned case the facts were still stronger. There the court had gone into the issue of default while disposing of an application under S. 17 (2). That was a part of the proceeding in the suit and the satisfaction of the court was explicit on the records of the proceedings. Consequently non-recording of such satisfaction once again while passing the decree ex parte after the defence against delivery of possession had been struck out, could not render the decree a nullity. None of these cases therefore can assist the decree-holder to support a contention that the decrees were in accordance with law.

16. This apart, there is nothing on the record to show that the court had, before passing the decree, applied its mind to the relevant fact and satisfied itself that a statutory ground for eviction did in fact exist. Mr. Dutt contended that the trial Court had heard the learned advocates before recording the compromise and that he must have been satisfied upon hearing the advocates that a ground existed. We do not think that the mere fact that the learned Judge had recorded having heard the advocates before recording the compromise, by itself and without more is a sufficient pointer to the fact that he had applied his mind as to the statutory requirements, far less that he was satisfied in that regard. Mr. Dutt then referred to the evidence recorded in the misc. cases and argued that the evidence suggests that in reality a ground for eviction as provided in S. 13 (1) was there; we do not think that we would be justified in looking into such evidence to ascertain whether or not a good case for eviction existed at the time when the decrees were passed. The executing court is not entitled to entertain evidence to see if there was a good ground for eviction. The executing court is not competent to go behind the decree. At the most it may look into the materials on record to see whether there was some material on the basis of which the court could have been satisfied as to the existence of a statutory ground of eviction. To allow the executing court to go beyond that limit would be to exalt the Executing Court to the status of a super court sitting in appeal, over the decision of the trial Court (see Nagindas v. Dalpatram (AIR 1974 SC 471) (supra)).

17. Mr. Dutt however was fair enough to concede this position but argued that the evidence may be looked in the interest of equity. Principles of equity cannot be invoked to override a statutory requirement. The evidence which was not on the record at the time when the decrees were passed, cannot be availed of to confer jurisdiction on the court to make the decree. This contention of Mr. Dutt must also therefore fail.

18. In the result the appeals fail and are hereby dismissed.

19. The defendants (respondents) will now be entitled to contest the suits by filing written statement. The learned trial Judge shall give reasonable opportunity to the defendants to file written statements and the suits shall thereupon proceed from the stage of filing of the compromise petitions.

20. There will be no order for costs in these appeals.

21. No formal decrees need be drawn up.

A. K. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Appeals dismissed.

(A) Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 56A — Constitution of India, Art. 245 — S. 56A providing for appointment of committee to administer affairs of municipality — S. 56A is not illegal or unconstitutional as conferring uncontrolled power or as colourable piece of legislation or for not providing tenure of committee.

Section 56A providing for appointment of a committee to administer the affairs of the municipality is not a colourable piece of legislation. It has been incorporated for tiding over the exigency created under certain circumstances when the elected Commissioners cannot hold the office and there is difficulty in holding election. As the duration of such exigency cannot be precisely anticipated no period for which the committee constituted under S. 56A will continue has been provided. S. 56A therefore does not become invalid for not mentioning the tenure of the committee. Moreover fixation of tenure may defeat the very purpose of S. 56A. There is indication in S. 56A as to when and under what circumstances the committee is to be appointed and the number of members and their disqualifications have also been prescribed. Though a better guideline may have been given for exercise of power under S. 56A it cannot be said that the provision is wholly uncontrolled or uncanalised and as such liable to be struck down. Therefore S. 56A cannot be challenged on the ground of being illegal or unconstitutional. AIR 1954 SC 215 and AIR 1965 SC 1017, Ref.

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), Section 56A — Prayer for writ of quo warranto — Assumption of office by members of committee challenged — Statutory authority for assumption of office under S. 56A established — Prayer for writ must fail.

The prayer for the issue of a writ of quo warranto to prevent the members of the committee appointed by Govt. to administer affairs of the municipality must fail if statutory authority for constituting the committee and assumption of office by the members under S. 56A is established. For the purpose of a writ of quo warranto it is not necessary to investigate the legality or validity of the provisions of the statute under which the assumption of office is made. Such investigation may be made for the purpose of issuing writs in the nature of mandamus or certiorari. AIR 1969 SC 302, Rel. on; AIR 1970 Ker 312, Ref.

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), Section 56A — Appointment of committee by Govt. under S. 56A to administer affairs of municipality — Selection of members from political party by which Govt. was formed — Validity.

In a democratic set up the Govt. elected by one or a few political parties while appointing a committee under S. 56A to administer the affairs of the municipality may reasonably select members professing faith in the political party or parties by which the Govt. was formed and such selection would not per se be illegal or bad justifying interference under Art. 226. If, however, it is shown that the Govt. in selecting the personnel has left out eligible candidates simply on the score of political affiliation and has selected persons not otherwise suitable there may be occasion to presume mala fide action. AIR 1971 Delhi 73, Ref. (Para 8)

(D) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), Section 56A — Committee appointed under S. 56A — Transfer of Midwives from one ward to other by Committee — Validity.

The transfer of Midwives from one ward to other and allotment of residential accommodation to them at a particular place by the Committee by the Govt. under S. 56A to administer the affairs of the municipality cannot per se be said to be illegal or mala fide so as to call for interference under Art. 226.

Braja Gopal Chakraborti, for Petitioners; A. P. Chatterjee, D. C. Chakraborty and Ashit Kumar Goswami, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2; Mukul Prakash Banerjee and Mrs. Monjula Chaudhuri, for Respondents Nos. 3 to 32.

ORDER:— The petitioners in the instant writ petition are Midwives working in the Howrah Municipality. An order of transfer of the petitioners to different wards of the Howrah Municipality was passed by the President of the Howrah Municipality on June 3, 1980 and in the instant writ petition, the legality and validity of the said order of transfer has been challenged by the petitioners on the allegation that the constitution of a committee to administer the affairs of the Howrah Municipality under S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act was illegal and void and as such the members of the said illegal committee had no jurisdiction to assume their offices and discharge their duties and functions as members of the said committee. Consequently, the order of transfer passed by the President of the said Committee was illegal and void. It appears that the Howrah Municipality was governed under the provisions of the Bengal Muni-icipal Act, 1932. A new Act, namely, Howrah Municipal Act, 1965 was enacted by the State Legislature making the Howrah Municipality a Corporation and elections were held in respect of the said Howrah Municipality since converted to a Corporation sometime in May, 1967. But the Corporation could not be constituted because the said Howrah Municipal Act was challenged before this Court in a writ proceeding whereupon a Rule being Civil Rule No. 548 (W) of 1967 was issued by this Court and an interim order was also passed by this Court. It appears that Howrah Municipal Act, 1965 was thereafter repealed and in the year 1974, electoral rolls of the Municipality had also been prepared. As the State Government contemplated for an establishment of a Municipal Corporation for the city of Howrah and adjoining areas, a comprehensive bill, namely, the Howrah Municipal Corporation Bill, was drafted by the Legislative Department of the State. A draft bill for the amendment of the Bengal Municipal Act was also taken. Simultaneously a draft bill for amending Calcutta Municipal Act was also made. It appears that the Bengal Municipalities Amendment Bill was passed by the West Bengal Legislative Assembly and the assent of the said Bill was given by the President of India on 1st Jan., 1981 and the new Act has now come into force. Under the provisions of the said amended Act, elections in 87 Municipalities out of 93 Municipalities in the State of West Bengal have already been held. As the earlier election of the Howrah Municipality was abortive, the State Government in order to run the administration of the Howrah Municipality appointed an Executive Officer under S. 67A of the Bengal Municipal Act sometime in the middle of 1967 and such appointment was extended from time to time. It is the case of the State Government in the instant Rule that as it was contemplated to introduce a comprehensive bill relating to the Howrah Municipality, no election could be held in respect of the Howrah Municipality before the proposed bill was enacted and the assent of the President was received. But in 1977, the State Government thought it desirable that instead of administering the Municipality with the help of an Executive Officer, an Advisory Committee should be appointed and according to the State Government, such Advisory Committee was constituted under Notification dated 30th Aug., 1977. It appears that the Constitution of the Advisory Committee was challenged and the State Government rescinded the said Notification appointing an Advisory Committee. Thereafter, with a view to have popular voice in the civic administration, pending regular election, the State Government issued notification dated 28th Feb., 1978 appointing a committee of 30 members under the provision of S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932. It appears that one Sri Sureswar Dutta challenged the validity of the said notification appointing a committee of 30 members in the Constitutional Writ Jurisdiction of this Court in Matter No. 336 of 1978. The said Rule was disposed of on 30th Jan., 1979 and the decision of the said case has since been reported in (1979) 1 Cal LJ 565. It appears that no appeal was preferred against the said judgment but the time to hold election as contained in the operative part of the said judgment was extended from time to time by the trial Court. Ultimately an appeal was preferred against the order extending the period to hold election up to 31st Jan., 1981 and the Court of Appeal held that after the disposal of the Rule the trial Court had no jurisdiction to extend the period as referred to in the operative part of the judgment. It appears that the previous committee appointed under S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act was cancelled and by Notification dated 1st Aug., 1980 another committee under S. 56A was constituted and it may be noted in this connection that in the subsequent committee under the said notification dated 1st Aug., 1980 most of the members of the previous committee were included.

2. The petitioners in the instant Rule contend that the impugned order of transfer is unreasonable, mala fide and capricious and as such even on merits, the said order of transfers cannot be sustained in law. The petitioners also contend that as the constitution of the committee under S. 56A was illegal and without jurisdiction the said committee had no authority to assume the office and administer the affairs of the Howrah Municipality. Accordingly, the order of transfer passed by the President of the said Committee is per se illegal and void. The petitioners have therefore also prayed for a writ in the nature of quo warranto directing the respondents Nos,

3 to 32, namely, the members of the Committee appointed under S. 56A in Aug., 1980 to vacate the office and not to hold the office and administer the affairs of the Howrah Municipality.

3. Mr. Chakraborti, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioners, has contended that S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act is ultra vires the Constitution and also the Bengal Municipal Act. It is contended that the provision of S. 56A is a colourable piece of legislation attempted to achieve something indirectly which it cannot achieve directly. It is also contended that the provision of S. 56A is arbitrary as no guideline has been laid down either for ascertaining the reasons for the constitution of a Committee or the selection or choice of the members of the committee by nomination. The learned counsel has also contended that the provision of S. 56A is liable to be struck down because no time limit has been fixed for the tenure of the Committee to be appointed under S. 56A. As a result, the ratepayers of the Municipality may be perpetually denied of their right to vote and elect their own representatives for the administration of the Municipality. Mr. Chakraborti has further submitted that provision of S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act is a direct negation of the principles of the parent Act, namely, the Bengal Municipal Act and it destroys the integral scheme enshrined in the main Act. It is also contended that the provision of S. 56A has created a double standard for the administration of the Municipality one by the elected representatives for a limited period and another by the nominated members under S. 56A for an indefinite period. He also submits that S. 56A suffers from the vices of excessive delegation of unguided, uncontrolled and uncanalised power to the executive which enables the executive Government to abdicate its basic statutory duty contrary to the other provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act. It is also contended in this connection that the Legislature itself cannot abdicate its constitutional responsibility by conferring an unguided power on the executive. Mr. Chakraborti has also submitted that the Notification appointing a committee under Section 56A is bad because the selection of the members of the committee has been made with no intelligible differentia, thereby offending Art. 14 of the Constitution. Mr. Chakraborti has submitted that under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act the tenure of the Commissioners of the Municipality is fixed by the provision of the Statute, but the period of tenure of the Committee to be appointed under S. 56A has not been fixed and the State Government, if it so desires, can go on extending the period of tenure of the committee thereby depriving the ratepayers to hold the election and select their representatives for administering the affairs of the Municipality. It has also been contended by Mr. Chakraborti that about the selection of the members of the committee there is no guideline and the State Government has been given an absolutely free hand in selecting the members of the Committee according to its own choice. Such unguided and uncanalised power given to the Executive must be held to be bad on the vice of excessive delegation. Mr. Chakraborti has submitted that unfortunately since 1967, the popular representatives elected by the ratepayers of the Municipality could not hold their office and administer the affairs of the Municipality. The State Government appointed executive Officers under S. 67A of the Bengal Municipal Act and got the Municipality administered by such executive officers from time to time. He submits that simply because the State Government felt that a more comprehensive Act relating to the affairs of the Howrah Municipality should be passed by the State Legislature and simply because such a bill was introduced in the Legislative anvil, there was no reason to hold back the election of the Municipality on the basis of the existing Act and the appointment of the Committee under S. 56A on the plea that the election of the Municipality could not have been held is devoid of any substance. As such, even assuming that the provision of S. 56A is not ultra vires, there was no reasonable ground for appointment of the Committee under S. 56A and the purported notification appointing a committee under S. 56A must be held to be a colourable exercise of power. Mr. Chakraborti has submitted that in the writ proceeding initiated at the instance of Sri Sureswar Dutta as referred to hereinbefore, this Court specifically observed that within a specified time the election of the Municipality must be held and the committee should not be allowed to function beyond the prescribed period. The State Government in order to circumvent the said direction given by this Court again appointed a Committee under S. 56A on 1st Aug., 1980 by cancelling the previous committee. Although the previous committee was cancelled and a new committee was sought to be set up by notification dated 1st Aug., 1980, in reality, the State Government retained the same old committee because excepting about 4 members, all the members of the previous committee were included in the new committee. Such action on the part of the State Government, according to Mr. Chakraborti, is nothing but fraud on the statute and a glaring example of colourable exercise of power.

4. So far as the merits of the impugned order of transfer are concerned, Mr. Chakraborti has contended that the services of the petitioners are transferable but any order of transfer must be subject to the convenience of the concerned members of the staff on one hand and public interest on the other. It is contended by the petitioners that orders of transfers are always passed long ahead of the actual date of transfer. But in the instant case the impugned order of transfer was passed on June 3, 1980 and the transfer was sought to be given effect to immediately. Such order of transfer in the middle of year was made only to ensure great hardship and inconvenience of the petitioners without any administrative necessity. It is also contended by the petitioners that the petitioners were asked by the other impugned order consequent to the order of transfer namely order dated July 7, 1981 to shift to Giribala Memorial Free Primary School situated in Ward No. VIII although it was not physically possible for the petitioners to render public services in different wards while staying in Ward No. VIII together. It is contended by the petitioners that services of the Midwives are to be rendered round the clock and there should not be any communication gap between the public who require the services of the petitioners as Midwives and the petitioners. It is also contended by the petitioners that there is no transport facility to cover the distance between different wards and the petitioners being ladies, it will be unsafe to move around through different wards particularly at night and if prompt services cannot be given by the petitioners, the very purpose may be frustrated and at times their delayed arrivals may prove fatal.

5. Mr. Mukul Prokash Banerjee, the learned counsel appearing for the respondents Nos. 3 to 32, namely, the members of the impugned committee appointed under S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act, contends in the first place that the Committee under S. 56A was appointed under Notification dated 28th Feb., 1978. Thereafter, such committee under S. 56A had continued all along and the administration of the Municipality was made by the Committee appointed under S. 56A. The petitioners being employees of the Municipality were under the administrative control of the members of the committee appointed under S. 56A ever since 1978 but at no point of time the petitioners challenged the authority of such committee to hold the office. It is only in 1981 that the instant writ petition was filed by the petitioners. Accordingly, there is an inordinate delay in moving the writ court and on that score alone the writ petition should be dismissed. He submits that the power of the High Court to issue writ under Art. 226 of the Constitution is discretionary and if there is no satisfactory explanation for the inordinate delay the High Court may reject the petition, more so if the High Court is of the opinion that the issue of the writ as prayed for will lead to public inconvenience and interference with rights of others. For this contention, Mr. Banerjee has referred to the decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Ashok Kumar Mishra v. Collector, Raipur reported in AIR 1980 SC 112. Mr. Banerjee also contends that as the State Government contemplated to amend the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act and as it was contemplated to constitute the Howrah Municipality differently and to hold elections after the amendment of the Act, the State Government was quite justified in not holding the elections earlier. He submits that no useful purpose would have been served in holding an election of the Howrah Municipality under the existing Act and thereafter to scrap the election when the proposed amendment was effected. Accordingly the affairs of the Municipality had been administered by an executive officer appointed under S. 67A. Subsequently the State Government thought it desirable to have the affairs of the Municipality administered not by a single individual namely the Executive Officer but a member of local persons and for the said purpose a committee under S. 56A was appointed in 1978. Mr. Banerjee submits that although in the writ proceeding initiated by Sri Sureswar Dutta, this Court observed that the election should be held at an early date, such election could not be held for reasons beyond the control of the State Government and in deference to the observation and direction of this Court made in the said decision in Sureswar Dutta's case, the earlier committee appointed under S. 56A was dissolved by the State Government and a new Committee was formed. It is immaterial if in the new Committee, a large number of the members of the earlier committee were included. Mr. Banerjee has contended that every Government has a right to appoint members of the committee according to its own choice and in the absence of any material establishing want of good faith on the part of the Government in the selection of the personnel of the committee, the constitution of the committee cannot be held to be bad. For this contention, Mr. Banerjee has referred to a decision of the Delhi High Court made in the case of Durga Chand v. Administrator reported in AIR 1971 Delhi 73. Mr. Banerjee also submits that the power under S. 56A can be exercised not only where the order of the Court stands in the way of holding election but also in a case where election cannot be held for other reasons and 'other reasons' referred to in S. 56A are not similar to the reasons of pendency of legal proceedings or injunctions issued therein. He also contends that if the decision of the constitutional question is not absolutely necessary, the writ court will not decide such question. For this contention, he refers to a decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Union of India v. C. Damani & Co. reported in 1980 SCC (Supp) 707: (AIR 1980 SC 1149). Mr. Banerjee also contends that a prayer for a writ of quo warranto must fail if an authority of law can be shown for the purpose of assumption of office. It is not necessary to examine any further the validity of the law on the basis of which the authority is assumed. Such question may be gone into if the writ for mandamus or certiorari is to be issued. For this contention, Mr. Banerjee relies on a decision of the Kerala High Court made in the case of Alex Beets v. M. A. Urmese reported in AIR 1970 Ker 312. In this connection, Mr. Banerjee has also referred to the decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Abdul Rahim Khan v. Sadasiva Tripathi reported in AIR 1969 SC 302 where the Supreme Court has held that the scope of quo warranto is very limited namely whether or not the appointment in question is by a proper authority and in accordance with the law. If there is an express statute governing such appointment, such appointments will be a sufficient answer to the motion for a writ of quo warranto even if the order of appointment is otherwise bad being violative of Article 16 of the Constitution. Hence, invalidity though may be heard in a motion for a certiorari or prohibition cannot be heard in a writ of quo warranto.

6. Mr. Chatterjee, the learned Senior Standing Counsel appearing for the State respondents, has supported Mr. Banerjee in the aforesaid contentions raised by him. He has also submitted that it is incorrect to contend that there is no guideline in the matter of selection of committee members under S. 56A and the provisions of S. 56A suffer from the vice of excessive delegation of unguided, uncontrolled and uncanalised power. For appreciating the scope and import of S. 56A and the contention of respective parties, the provisions of S. 56A are set out hereunder:—

56A. Appointment of Committee in case of failure of or delay in holding general election— (1) Whereafter the expiry of the term of office of the Commissioners of a Municipality under sub-sec. (1) or sub-sec. (5) of S. 56, the State Government is of opinion that by reason of the order of a court preventing the holding of a general election of Commissioners in the Municipality or setting aside such election or for any other reason, there is no likelihood of a new body of Commissioners being formed within a reasonable time to take over municipal administration, the State Government may, if it thinks fit so to do in the public interest, by order, appoint a committee consisting of the same number of members as the Commissioners of the Municipality to take charge of the administration of the affairs of the Municipality in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the rules and bye-laws made thereunder,

(2) No person shall be appointed as a member of the committee if he is subject to any of the disqualifications mentioned in S. 22. * * *

Referring to the provisions of S. 56-A, Mr. Chatterjee submits that the discretion of the State Government is controlled in various ways. The number of the members of the Committee and the disqualification of such members have been provided for and the circumstances under which appointment of the committee can be made have also been indicated. Even assuming that there might have been further guidelines for a better exercise of the power, it cannot be said that there is no guideline whatsoever for the purpose of exercising power under S. 56A and as such S. 56A is liable to be struck down on that score. Mr. Chatterjee has also contended that the petitioners have failed to produce any material to show that the members of the committee appointed under S. 56A belong to a political party or simply on political consideration other eligible persons have been left out. In order to bring home of a case of mala fide action, sufficient materials must be disclosed by the petitioners. He submits that out of 30 members of the committee, 14 are the members who were elected earlier but because of the challenge of the said election in a court of law, they could not assume office as Commissioners. Mr. Chatterjee also submits that S. 56A does not evade the spirit of the Act but it really provides for administration by the members of the public at a point of time when for circumstances indicated in Section 56A, it is not possible to hold election of the Municipality and/or to get the Municipality administered by the elected Commissioners. He also submits that right to be elected is not a fundamental right but such right is governed by the Statute. Hence, if a right which is created by the Statute is taken away by the Statute itself, no objection can be raised. Mr. Chatterjee also submits that S. 56A is not bad but the same has been enacted to tide over the exigencies when the elected Commissioners cannot administer the affairs of the Municipality but at the same time there is a necessity of administration of the Municipality by a democratic body. Mr. Chatterjee contends that if exercise of power under S. 56A has not been made properly then such mala fide exercise of power may be quashed but the contention of the petitioners that S. 56A is ultra vires and as such assumption of powers by the respondents Nos. 3 to 32 is illegal and without jurisdiction, is wholly untenable. Mr. Chatterjee has submitted that legislative enactment involves different stages and it is often time consuming. He has also drawn the attention of the Court that in the instant case although the West Bengal State Legislature passed the Amendment Act the same could not be operative because it took quite long time for getting the assent of the President. On instruction, Mr. Chatterjee has submitted that the State Government has no intention to hold back the election of the Commissioners of the Howrah Municipality under the provisions of the amended Act. A supplementary affidavit has also been filed on behalf of the State respondents and it has been contended therein that the State Government intends to hold election of the Howrah Municipality as early as practicable under the provisions of the amended Act, but such holding of election will take a few months for complying with various formalities and the reasons for such time to hold the proposed election have also been explained in the supplementary affidavit.

7. In reply to the contention raised by Mr. Banerjee and Mr. Chatterjee, appearing for the respective respondents, Mr. Chakraborti contends that if the provision of a Statute has a possibility to be abused or misused by the concerned authority because of unguided and uncanalised power given therein, the said provision is liable to be struck down even if the action actually taken under the said Statute is quite reasonable and the concerned authority has in fact acted with prudence. He contends that unguided discretion patently violates the doctrine of equality. Mr. Chakraborti also submits that it is true that the presumption is in favour of constitutionality of a legislative enactment and it has to be presumed that the Legislature understood and appreciated correctly the needs of the people. But when on the face of it, there was no classification at all and no attempt has been made to select any individual or group with reference to any differentiating attribute peculiar to that individual or group and not possessed by the others, this presumption will be of little or no assistance. For this contention, he refers to the decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of Ram Prasad v. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1954 SC 215. Mr. Chakraborti contends that the provision of Sec. 56A is a colourable piece of legislation and it is not correct to contend that the provision is legal and valid. He contends that colourable legislation is a legislation which the legislature has enacted by transgressing its legislative powers in a covert or indirect manner and it adopts a device to outstep the limits of its power. He submits that under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act, the Commissioners of the Municipality have a fixed tenure and the extension of such tenure is also fixed by the provisions of the Statute. The affairs of the Municipality cannot be administered by the elected Commissioners beyond the term of their tenure but by the provisions of Section 56A, the State Legislature in an indirect manner had provided for administration of a Municipality by some persons without any time limit. This is a device to outstep the limits of its powers. For this contention, Mr. Chakraborti refers to a decision of the Supreme Court made in the case of I. P. Vajravelu Mudaliar v. Special Deputy Controller for Land Acquisition reported in AIR 1965 SC 1017. Mr. Chakraborti has also contended that there is no question of acquiescence or estoppel in the instant case so far as the petitioners are concerned. It is nobody's case that the petitioners had the occasion to know the invalidity of the constitution of the Committee but even after coming to know of such illegality of the constitution of the committee, the petitioners accepted the said committee and submitted to its jurisdiction. Mr. Chakraborti also contends that in a writ of quo warranto mere delay should not be fatal if the assumption of office is illegal and without authority of law. The moment such illegal assumption of jurisdiction is established, such person should be prevented from assumption of office by the appropriate writ in the nature of quo warranto.

8. After giving my anxious consideration to the respective submissions made by the learned counsel for the parties, it appears to me that S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act is not a colourable piece of legislation. The said provision has been incorporated in order to tide over exigencies or circumstances where the election of the Municipality cannot be held or the elected Commissioners cannot discharge their duties and functions. It also appears to me that there is indication in S. 56A as to when and under what circumstances the Committee under S. 56A is to be appointed. The number of the members of such committee and their disqualification have also been prescribed. In my view, the learned standing counsel is justified in his contention that a better guideline might have been given in the matter of exercise of power under S. 56A but it cannot be contended that the provision is wholly uncontrolled or uncanalised and as such the same is liable to be struck down. It also appears to me that S. 56A has been incorporated in the statute for tiding over the exigency created under certain circumstances when the elected Commissioners cannot hold the office and there is difficulty in holding election. As the duration of such exigency cannot be precisely anticipated no period for which the committee constituted under S. 56A will continue, has been prescribed. If the exigency for which the committee was constituted comes to an end and there is no impediment to hold regular election or assumption of office by the elected Commissioners, then there will be no occasion for continuance of the Committee under S. 56A. The continuance of the Committee beyond any period of exigency may be questioned and in an appropriate case such continuance may be a case of mala fide exercise of power. But Section 56A does not become invalid for not mentioning the tenure of the Committee. It may be noted that the fixation of tenure of the Committee constituted under S. 56A may defeat the very purpose of S. 56A. I am also inclined to accept the contention raised by Mr. Banerjee appearing for the respondents Nos. 3 to 32 that the provision of S. 56A is an answer to the assumption of power by the respondents Nos. 3 to 32 and a prayer for writ of quo warranto must fail if the statutory authority for assumption of office under S. 56A is established. For the purpose of a writ of quo warranto, it is not necessary to investigate the legality or validity of the provisions of the Statute under which the assumption of office is made and such investigation may be made for the purpose of issuing writes in the nature of mandamus or certiorari. About the selection of personnel of the members of the committee, it does not appear to me that the petitioners have produced any material on the basis of which it can be held by this Court that the State Government has acted mala fide and/or in abuse of the powers given under S. 56A in selecting the members of the committee. It appears that 14 members were elected as Commissioners of the Municipality in the earlier election which was held illegal by a court of law. In a democratic set up a Government elected by one or a few political parties may reasonably select persons professing faith in the political party or parties by which the Government is formed and such selection is not per se illegal or bad. If, however, it can be shown that the Government in selecting personnel or in the matter of exercising discretion has left out the eligible candidates simply on the score of political affiliation and has selected persons who are not otherwise suitable, there may be occasion to presume mala fide action. It may be noted here that a Government although elected by one or few political parties nevertheless remains a Government of all the people of the State and as such it has a basic duty to represent the cause of the State in an unbiased manner. In the aforesaid circumstances, it does not appear to me that the provision of S. 56A of the Bengal Municipal Act is illegal or unconstitutional and the challenge of the petitioners in this regard must fail. So far as the merits of the case are concerned, it may be noted that the Municipality has specifically contended before this Court that at night no Midwives will be required to attend any call and transport to any from the patient's house from the residence of the Midwives will be arranged by the Municipality. It has been specifically submitted by the learned counsel appearing on behalf of the Municipality that when a call for a Midwife is received at the Municipality's office, the Municipality sends Ambulance Car with necessary assistants to pick up the particular Midwife and takes her back from the patient's house. The learned counsel for the respondents Nos. 3 to 32 has also submitted that the question of personal hardship of any of the petitioners can always be considered if a representation to that effect is made and the case of such hardship is brought home. In the aforesaid circumstances, it does not appear to me that the transfer of Midwives from one ward to other and the allotment of residential accommodation to them at a particular place are illegal and mala fide on the face of them. Accordingly, no interference is called for and this Rule fails and is discharged. It is, however, reasonably expected that the respondents Nos. 3 to 32 should give anxious consideration to personal problems and/or hardship of the petitioners who have rendered long useful service to the Municipality and whose services may still be utilised by the municipality very effectively. There will be no order as to costs in this Rule.

A.F.O.D. No. 107 of 1976, D/- 2-3-1982.

Evidence Act (1 of 1872), Ss. 101-104 — Will — Burden of proof — Presence of suspicious circumstances makes initial onus heavy — Judicial conscience must be satisfied. (Succession Act (1925), Section 264).

Presence of suspicious circumstances makes the initial burden of proving the Will heavy and judicial conscience must be satisfied. In the instant case Will in question is a simple one and there was a natural dispensation in favour of executant's brother's sons with whom she was residing. Evidence on record established that she had physical and mental capacity. There was no evidence to show that there was any invariable practice that the draft of Will had to be preserved; Held, no importance need be attached to non-preservation of draft of Will, more so when a long time has elapsed. Discrepancy as to who read over the Will and overwriting in the circumstances of the case are not material and the conscience of court has been satisfied. Probate ordered to be granted to executor. AIR 1959 SC 443	6

P. B. Chatterjee and A. N. Basu, for Appellant; S. N. Mukherjee and M. K. Das, for Respondents.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The plaintiff is the alleged executor of the Will of one Kiron Sashi Dasi. He has alleged that on 15-5-1968 she executed a Will and appointed him executor. Then on 16-6-1968 she died childless at Gormi, P. S. Dum Dum. The beneficiaries of the Will are her brother's sons.

2. The defendants Nos. 5 and 6 contested the suit by filing a written statement. It has been alleged inter alia that she has no mental and physical capacity to execute the alleged Will. She was bed-ridden for more than six months before the execution of the alleged Will. She was under the supervision and care of the defendant Broja Bala Dasi. It was a forged and fabricated Will with a view to depriving her natural heirs.

3. The learned Additional District Judge rejected the plaintiff's contention and dismissed the suit by observing that the suspicious circumstances had not been removed. Hence this appeal by the executor.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that there are no suspicious circumstances. The learned Judge did not consider the contents of the registered sale deed Ext. B executed and registered by her on 17-5-1968. That conclusively shows that she had physical and mental capacity to execute the sale deed on 17-5-1968, which had been executed only two days after the execution of the alleged Will Ext. 2. The case has been proved by the evidence given by P.W. 2 Bijay.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent has stated that Kiron Sashi was about eighty at the execution of the alleged Will. She was a childless and illiterate lady. No relation was consulted when the Will was executed. The evidence of P.Ws. cannot be believed. The draft of the Will has not been produced. There is discrepancy as to who read out the contents of the alleged Will Ext. 2 to her. Further there is discrepancy regarding the date of execution of the alleged Will because it appears from the Will Ext. 2 that there is an overwriting whether it is executed on the 1st Jaistha or 2nd Jaistha, 1375 B.S.

6. It is true that presence of suspicious circumstances makes the initial onus heavy. It is in connection with Wills that present such suspicious circumstances that the decision of the English Courts often mentioned tests of the satisfaction of judicial conscience. This has been stated in the case of Barry v. Butlin in (1838) 2 Moo PC 480 and followed by Gajendragadkar, J. in the case of H. Venkatchala v. Thimmajamma reported in AIR 1959 SC 443.

7. P.W. 1 Probodh was the alleged executor. He says that Kiran was his father's sister and after her husband's death she lived at Gorui. P.W. 2 Bijay Narayan says that the Will was written by P.W. Adhir in his presence and he was an attesting witness. He has been corroborated by P.W. 3 Adhir, who is the scribe. He says that he scribed the Will according to the instruction given by Kiran. It is true that there is discrepancy as to who read over the alleged Will Ext. 2 to Kiran. But this is a minor one and not a major discrepancy.

8. About non-production of the alleged draft of the Will the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant has referred to the latest case of Indubala v. Manindra Chandra reported in AIR 1982 SC 133 at p. 136 to show that where there is no evidence to show that there was any invariable practice that the draft of the Will had to be preserved, that question was of no importance. Kiran Bala was an illiterate aged widow. A long time has expired and at this stage of the proceedings it is immaterial if the draft of the alleged Will was not produced.

9. Let us now turn to the evidence given by the objectors. D.W. 1 Narendra Das has stated that Kiran was not at Hoogly on 17-5-1968, though that statement is being belied by contents of the registered sale deed Ext. B executed by her on 17-5-1968. There her address has been given as Hooghly Jagudaspara. That document is very important because it was executed on the 3rd Jaistha 1375 B. S. corresponding to 17-5-1968, that is, only two days after the execution of the alleged Will on 15-5-1968. In such circumstances, it has been rightly contended on behalf of the appellant that she had physical and mental capacity on 15-5-1968. This version finds corroboration from the statement of D.W. 1 Narendra Das, who has stated in his cross-examination that when that sale deed Ext. B was executed, Kiran was in sound mind. Of course he has stated that Kiran's house at Jagudaspara was not broken. It has been pointed out on behalf of the appellant that she had executed the registered kobala Ext. B on 17-5-1968 because her house at Jagudaspara had been razed to the ground. There is no manner of doubt that D.W. 1 Narendra Das is not at all a witness of truth. This is evident from the fact that the deed itself Ext. B reveals that both Narendra Das and Bhabendra Nath Das, sons of Panchanan Das, are the confirming parties to that document. The discrepancy about 1st and 2nd Jaistha is not material, as the English date was correctly written in the Will.

10. It is a simple Will, which contains no complications. There was a natural dispensation in favour of Kiran's brother's sons. She was residing there. It is, therefore, clear that the conscience of the Court has been satisfied that the evidence given by P.Ws. on this is acceptable. We believe this evidence and find that the disputed Will Ext. 2 was duly executed and attested, that Kiran Sashi had testamentary capacity at that time and it is not at all a forged and fabricated document.

11. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against are set aside and the suit is decreed. Let a probate be granted to the plaintiff-executor with a copy of the Will annexed.

12. There will be no order as to costs.

13. The records be sent down to the court below as early as possible.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

R. N. Mitra and A. K. Ganguly, for Petitioner; A. N. Banerjee and T. K. Sen Gupta, for the State.

ORDER:— This application is at the instance of the petitioner who is one of the co-owners of the plots Nos. 13851 and 13852 of khatian No. 4494, mouza Behala challenging the validity of the notice of requisition issued u/s. 3 of the West Bengal Act II of 1948 i.e. West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948 whereby these lands along with other plots of lands were notified for requisition for public purposes mentioned in the said notice at annexure A to the petition on the ground that the land in question purported to be requisitioned for a purpose were being utilised for another purpose viz. for construction of Behala Police Station which has been demolished on account of widening of the Diamond Harbour Road.

2. The facts in brief are as follows. The aforesaid plots of lands along with other lands were notified for requisition u/s. 3 (1) of the said Act for the purposes viz. for widening Diamond Harbour Road at Behala and also for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community and/or for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, etc. This requisition notice was served admittedly in 1974 and thereafter the work was taken up for widening the road and the Diamond Harbour Road was completed also long before. The petitioner has stated that when the authorities concerned came to implement the requisition notice in respect of these particular lands of the petitioner and his co-owners they raised objection and thereafter they have come before this Court with the instant writ application on 26-6-81.

3. A Rule was issued and an interim order was made restraining the respondents from proceeding any further on the basis of the notice which has been annexed as annexure A to the petition for a period of two weeks with liberty to pray for extension of the interim order on notice to the respondents on the same application. On 24-11-81 after hearing the learned Advocates for both the parties the interim order was vacated. Then an application for restoration was filed and that was heard on 9-12-81. The application for restoration was however not allowed.

4. Mr. Mitra, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner, has made a twofold submission before this court. His first submission is that the concerned authorities cannot proceed to construct buildings on the lands in question for the purpose of accommodating the Behala Police Station which is not a purpose mentioned in the notice of requisition. In other words, Mr. Mitra has contended that the action of the respondents is wholly arbitrary, illegal and bad inasmuch as they purport to use the land for a purpose other than that mentioned in the requisition notice. In support of this submission Mr. Mitra cited a decision reported in AIR 1980 Cal 13. Mr. Mitra next submitted that in the impugned notice only one purpose was mentioned i.e. for widening Diamond Harbour Road and as such the land in question cannot be used for purposes not mentioned therein. It has been also submitted by Mr. Mitra that the notice was served only on the petitioner who is admittedly one of the owners of these two plots and as such the petitioner alone has come up before this Court to assail the said notice without impleading the other co-owners of the said lands. This non-impleading the other co-owners according to the submission of Mr. Mitra does not in any way invalidate the instant writ application. Mr. Mitra further submitted that there is delay in moving this application undoubtedly but the petitioner immediately when the respondents tried to implement the order came up before this Court and as such this should be considered and the application should not be rejected on the ground of delay.

5. Mr. Amar Nath Banerjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the State, has, on the other hand, submitted that this application should be rejected on the ground of inordinate delay in coming up before this jurisdiction to challenge the notice which was served on the petitioner as early as on 14-6-74 and the possession of the land was taken on 16-6-74. It has also been submitted in this connection by Mr. Banerjee that after taking possession the respondents have started construction of the building for the Behala Police Station and the construction work was made up to the plinth level when this instant application was made before this Court, therefore on the ground of inordinate delay in coming before this court the application should not be entertained and no relief should be granted. It has been next submitted by Mr. Banerjee, learned Advocate for the State respondents, that the construction of structures for housing a police station i.e. Behala Police Station is a purpose of the State and it is also a purpose allied to, connected with and/or incidental to the purposes to create better living conditions in urban areas as well as for the purpose of maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community which are the purposes mentioned in S. 3 (1) of the W.B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act. Reference has been made in this connection by Mr. Banerjee to a Division Bench decision of this Court. It has been next submitted by Mr. Banerjee that this application will fail for non-joinder of necessary parties as it is evident from the statement made in paragraphs 2 and 5 of the said (sic) petitioner in respect of these plots of lands.

6. The first question that poses itself for consideration is whether this writ application in the facts and circumstances can be entertained by this Court. Admittedly the order of requisition was served on the petitioner in 1974 and according to the State respondents they have taken possession on 16-6-74 which the petitioner of course denies. But it is evident from the statements and averments made in the writ petition as well as in the affidavit in reply that on the date when this application was made the petitioner was not in actual possession of these lands. It is now well settled by several pronouncements of this Court as well as of the Supreme Court that to have relief from this Equity Court one must come at the earliest possible opportunity. In the instant case since June 1974 till June 25, 1981 the petitioner did not take any steps to agitate this matter before this forum. The explanation that has been given and also the submissions that have been made by the learned Advocate for the petitioner on this score are in my opinion not sufficient for this purpose. Therefore, on the ground of inordinate delay I am constrained to hold that this Rule will fail.

7. Now regarding non-joinder of necessary parties I am not inclined to refuse relief sitting in this equity jurisdiction and as such I am unable to accept the contentions put forth by the learned Advocate on behalf of the State on this score, more so when the order u/s. 3 (1) of the impugned Act was served by the State only on the petitioner and not on any of his co-sharers.

8. Coming to the merits, the argument of Mr. Mitra is that there has been a diversion of purpose in the matter of use of the land for the purpose of making structures for accommodating Be-hala Police Station which purpose was not mentioned in the order u/s. 3 (1) of the said Act and as such the entire order is bad being illegal and unwarranted. To consider this submission in its proper perspective it is necessary to consider whether the purpose for which the lands in question are being utilised is a purpose connected with or incidental to the purposes mentioned in S. 3 of the Act viz. "for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community, for creating better living conditions". It has been stated in the affidavit in opposition sworn on behalf of respondent No. 2 that the purpose for which the land is being used is connected with and/or incidental to the aforesaid purposes. Mr. Banerjee has also submitted that the construction of house to accommodate a police station is a purpose allied to creation of better living condition in urban areas. In my opinion there is substance in this contention. My attention was also drawn to the decision in (1980) 2 Cal LJ 19 (Sm. Sushila Devi Fomra v. State of West Bengal) where the requisition of the premises was made for the purpose of the State Transport Corporation. A challenge was thrown on the ground that it is not a purpose envisaged in S. 3 (1) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act. It has been held by a Division Bench of this Court that "It is the duty of the State to make suitable arrangement for road transport and for that purpose the State Transport Corporation has been created. Any requirement of the Corporation is the requirement of the State. In these circumstances it is difficult to accept the contention of the appellant that the purpose for which the requisition has been made is not the purpose of the State Government and as such the order of requisition should be quashed on that ground. We hold that the land can be requisitioned or acquired for the purposes of the State Transport Corporation under the provisions of the Act. The contentions of the appellant is accordingly overruled." The decision in the case of Sailendra Nath Ray v. State of West Bengal, (AIR 1980 Cal 13) is distinguishable on facts because in this case the requisition u/s. 3 of the said Act was made for the purpose of requisitioning land for settlement of small traders displaced as a result of some other acquisition. Question arose whether requisition of land for such a purpose was a purpose falling within the meaning of S. 3 (1) of the said Act. It has been held that the settlement of the displaced small traders is not connected with or incidental to either of the aforesaid purposes i.e. providing facilities for transport and widening of road and in the alternative for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community. This judgment therefore does not apply to the facts of the instant case inasmuch as as has been stated hereinbefore the lands of the petitioner are used for the purpose of construction of building for housing the Behala Police Station which has been demolished for widening Diamond Harbour Road.

9. For the reasons aforesaid the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner having failed this Rule fails. It is therefore discharged. No order is made as to costs. All interim orders are vacated.

Rule discharged.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE AND

RAMKRISHNA SHARMA, JJ.

M/s. Martin Harris (Pvt.) Ltd., Appellant v. M/s. Elgin Properties, Respondent.

A.F.O.D. No. 259 of 1980, D/- 11-2-1982.*

W. B. Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13 — Eviction — Tenant surrendering leased premises — Possession of two rooms in such premises not handed over — Claim that he became statutory tenant of such rooms — Not sustainable — He could be treated only as licensee — Protection against eviction would not be available. (Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 107, 111).

The tenant at his own had surrendered the premises to the landlord. However, the possession of two rooms in the said premises was not handed over. Subsequently the landlord filed a suit for eviction against him. It was alleged by the tenant that he was a continuing tenant in the said rooms and could not be evicted under S. 13.

Held, that the tenant could not be said to have become statutory tenant of those two rooms, but he was a mere licensee. He would not be entitled to any protection against eviction under the Act. Case law discussed. (Paras 9, 13)

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J.:—

M/s. Martin Harris (Pvt.) Ltd., the defendant-appellant, had been a lessee in respect of premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road under successive leases periodically granted by the Official Trustee, West Bengal as Trustee of the Estate of D. A. David for the Davidean Girls' School. Lastly, on 13th of July, 1968 the Official Trustee, West Bengal had granted to the defendant-appellant lease of the said premises with retrospective effect from 1st of January, 1965 up to the 31st of Dec., 1968. The said lease in favour of the defendant-appellant was not renewed for any further period. On 21st April 1969 the defendant-appellant wrote to the Official Trustee of West Bengal the following letter:

"Dear Sir,

Re: 1B, Asutosh Mukherjee Road.

We wish to surrender the tenancy rights of the above premises with immediate effect. Please arrange to take possession.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,

For Martin & Harris (Private) Ltd
Illegible Director. "

2. The defendant-appellant in para. (9) of their written statement pleaded that on the expiry of the aforesaid lease there was holding over of the tenancy in respect of the entire premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road on and from 1st of Jan., 1969 as a tenant from month to month. The defendant further averred in the said paragraph that since it had decided to deliver vacant possession of the major portion of the said tenancy, it did so on 30th of April 1969 and kept in its possession two rooms in the said premises. According to the defendant, as such its tenancy continued under the Official Trustee of West Bengal in respect of the said two rooms.

3. On 20th Sept., 1974 the Official Trustee, West Bengal by a registered deed granted a lease in favour of M/s. Elgin Properties, the plaintiff-respondent of the entire premises No. 18, Asutosh Mookerjee Road for a term of 21 years with retrospective effect from 1st of May, 1969. The plaintiff respondent had demanded from the defendant appellant payment of occupation charges in respect of the two ground floor rooms in premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road in possession of the defendant. The defendant by a letter had denied its liability. Thereafter, the plaintiff by a registered letter dated 17th July, 1975 had purported to terminate the alleged licence in favour of the defendant appellant for occupying the said two rooms and thereafter on 7th of April, 1976 instituted a suit against the defendant in the 4th Court of the Subordinate Judge, Alipore for recovery of vacant possession by evicting the defendants from the said two rooms described in the Schedule B of the plaint, for recovery of Rs. 72,542/- as occupation charges and also for recovery of further sums on account of mesne profits tentatively valued at Rs. 100/- up to the actual date of recovery of possession of the suit rooms. The defendant had contested the said suit, inter alia, denying that the defendant was a mere licensee in respect of the said two suit rooms and it claimed to be still a tenant under the Official Trustee, West Bengal in respect of the suit premises. The defendant also had denied its liability to pay occupation charges or mesne profits to the plaintiff.

4. The learned Subordinate Judge, 4th Court, Alipore has decreed the suit in part and has ordered that the plaintiff would get a decree for recovery of khas possession and also a decree for Rupees 43700/- against the defendant for occupation charges. The learned Subordinate Judge has also granted in preliminary form a decree for mesne profits. Being aggrieved, the defendant has preferred the instant appeal.

5. Mr. Ginwala, learned advocate for the appellant, has submitted that the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act applied to the defendant's tenancy under the registered lease dated 13th July, 1968 which was for a term of three years. Therefore, even after the expiry of the term of the said lease, the defendant had continued to be a statutory tenant. After the defendant had given vacant possession of the major portion of the Premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road its continued occupation of the two ground floor rooms in the said premises by operation of law must be deemed to be as a statutory tenant. Therefore, according to Mr. Ginwala, the plaintiff appellant (respondent 3) under sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act was not entitled to recover possession of the said two rooms from the defendant appellant except upon establishing any one or more of the grounds set out under the proviso to said sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the Act. The defendant was neither a licensee nor a trespasser and, therefore, the instant suit brought by the plaintiff respondent ought to fail. Mr. Ginwala however did not make any submission regarding the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge for recovery of occupation charges and mesne profits.

6. Even if it is assumed that after the defendant's registered lease was expired by efflux of time, the defendant had continued as a tenant and enjoying protection under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, as a statutory tenant the defendant had surrendered the said tenancy. Undisputedly, after the lease for a term of 3 years in its favour had expired by efflux of time, the defendant company by its said letter dated 21st April, 1969 had informed the Official Trustee that it wished to surrender its tenancy rights with immediate effect and had requested the Official Trustee to arrange to take possession. In view of the clear language of the said letter and the conduct of the parties proved in the case, we find no substance in the submission of Mr. Ginwala that the defendant's said letter (Ext. 1) contained a mere promise to do something in future. We have already referred to para 3 of the defendant's written statement wherein it had admitted that it had decided to deliver vacant possession of the major portion of its tenancy and it had done so on 30th of April, 1969 keeping in its possession two rooms in the said premises. The defendant's said letter (Ex. 1) had been marked as an exhibit on admission. In our view, the aforesaid act of the parties amounted to surrender of the tenancy of the suit premises held by the defendant under the Official Trustee. The defendant had yielded up his tenancy interest and the landlord, Official Trustee, had accepted the same. Therefore, there was a valid mutual agreement resulting in surrender of the defendant's tenancy which the defendant was holding after the expiry of the term of its lease dated 13th July, 1968. Even if the defendant did not immediately deliver to the Official Trustee its possession of the two ground floor rooms, the defendant's tenancy stood determined by implied surrender. It is settled law that implied surrender or surrender by operation of law occurs, (1) by the creation of new relationship or (2) by relinquishment of possession (vide Mulla on Transfer of Property Act, 6th Edn., page 744. See also observations in Muhammad Ibrahim v. Bani Madhab Mullick, AIR 1952 Cal 196, para 11, and in Sm. Sailabala Dassee v. H. A. Tappassier, AIR 1952 Cal 455, para 19). Mulla on Transfer of Property Act, 6th Edn., at pages 744 and 745 has, inter alia, pointed out that implied surrender is put on the ground of estoppel and the intention of the parties is immaterial. It has been further pointed out that relinquishment of possession operates as an implied surrender. There must be a taking of possession but not necessarily a physical taking out something amounting to a virtual taking possession.

7. We find no substance in the appellant's submission that although in pursuance of its letter dated 21st April, 1969 (Ext. 1), it had delivered to the lessor, Official Trustee, West Bengal, the possession of the entire Premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road except the two rooms, the defendant continued to be a statutory tenant under the Official Trustee. In Halsbury's Laws of England (3rd Edn.), Vol. 23, para 1415 at p. 687, it has been observed "Any arrangement between the landlord and the tenant which operates as a fresh demise will work as a surrender of the old tenancy; and this may result from an agreement under which the tenant gives up part of the premises and pays a diminished rent for the remainder provided a substantial difference is thereby made in the conditions of the tenancy (vide Jones v. Bridgman (1878) 39 LT 500, Re: Savile Settle Estates (1931) 2 Ch 210 at page 216).

8. It is not necessary for us to examine the correctness of the submission of Mr. Ginwala, learned advocate for the appellant, that a part surrender of the lease is recognised in law. The learned advocate had relied upon the observations in para 1223 at page 557 of Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Edn., which deals with the question of apportionment of rent in case of cessation of possession of a part of premises by a lessee. Surrender under S. 111 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act consists of yielding up lessee's interest to the lessor by mutual agreement. Secondly, the defendant-appellant by its letter (Ext. 1) dated 21st April, 1969 had categorically expressed its intention to surrender its tenancy rights of Premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road without any reservation. The defendant has neither pleaded nor proved any mutual agreement by which it was granted a tenancy in respect of the two rooms in its occupation. Defendant's only witness, Rammurti, DW 1, in his examination-in-chief stated that defendant did not surrender the tenancy of the property. But during cross-examination, DW 1, admitted that he was not present at the time of surrender. He also had no talk with the Official Trustee, West Bengal on behalf of the defendant about the nature of its possession. Admittedly, after delivering possession of the major portion of the suit premises, the defendant did not pay any rent either to the Official Trustee or thereafter to the plaintiff. In fact, the defendant neither pleaded nor proved that there was ever any agreement regarding payment of rent or other terms of the alleged tenancy claimed by the defendant in respect of the said two rooms.

9. We reject the contention of the learned advocate for the appellant that by operation of law the defendant had become a statutory tenant in respect of the said two rooms. The defendant's previous lease admittedly stood determined and by mutual consent he had yielded up major portion of the premises and thereby he had surrendered his tenancy which might have been continuing by the operation of West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956.

10. Mr. Ginwala, learned advocate for the appellant, is not correct in his submission that after the expiry of the aforesaid registered lease the defendant's tenancy was a statutory one and, therefore, the defendant continued in possession as a tenant until any decree or order for eviction had been made by a court of a competent jurisdiction. The West Bengal Premises Act, 1956 provides for regulation of certain incidents of tenancies governed by the said Act. Section 13 (1) of the said Act has, inter alia, provided that no decree or order for recovery of possession of any premises shall be made by any court in favour of the landlord against a tenant excepting on one or more of the grounds set out thereunder. But as at present advised, we find no legal impediment in the way of the tenant himself voluntarily and lawfully surrendering his tenancy and amicably yielding up possession. Therefore, in the instant case when the defendant yielded up possession of the entire Premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road excepting two rooms in the suit and the plaintiff landlord accepted the same, the defendant's tenancy which was continuing by operation of law stood determined at the instance of the tenant.

11. The decision in V. Dhanapal Chettiar v. Yesodai Ammal, AIR 1979 SC 1745, upon which Mr. Ginwala has placed his reliance, does not really support the case of the appellant. The controversy in the said case centered round the question whether a notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act was at all necessary to be given by the landlord before getting a decree or order for eviction against a tenant protected under any State Rent Control Act. The Supreme Court in the said case has held that such a notice under S. 106 by the landlord was unnecessary and a mere surplusage and making out a case under the Rent Control Act for eviction of the tenant by itself is sufficient. Untwallia, J. in para 5 of his judgment in V. Dhanapal Chettiar's case (AIR 1979 SC 1745) (supra), had clearly recognised that under the T. P. Act purely as a matter of contract a lease comes into existence but there has been appreciably inroad on the freedom of contract. Untwallia, J. further held that none of the State Acts has abrogated or affected the provision of S. 107 of the T. P. Act which lay down how leases are made. We have already held that by reason of the defendant expressing his intention in writing to surrender his tenancy and to deliver immediate possession (vide Ext. 1) and thereafter yielding up possession of the demised premises except two rooms which was accepted by the then lessor, the defendant's tenancy stood determined. There was no provision in the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act by which relationship of landlord and tenant between the defendant and the then owner, Official Trustee, West Bengal in respect of the said two rooms in defendant's occupation could be created, continued or imposed upon the Official Trustee or the persons claiming under it. The defendant could have claimed a new tenancy in respect of the said rooms by establishing that there was a fresh contract between the parties. In the facts of this case the defendant's occupation of the two rooms by itself to make the defendant either a contractual or even a statutory tenant between the Official Trustee, on the one hand, and the defendant, on the other, there was neither any registered instrument nor any agreement accompanied by delivery of possession of the said two rooms to the latter. Therefore, the defendant could not claim that he was a tenant in respect of the said two rooms. The expression 'tenant' under S. 2 (h) no doubt includes any person continuing in possession after termination of his tenancy or in the event of such person's death such of his heirs as were ordinarily residing with him at the time of his death. Not only persons against whom any decree or order for eviction has been made by a Court of competent jurisdiction but also a tenant who has surrendered his tenancy and no longer continuing in possession are excluded from the category of contractual and statutory tenants.

12. After the defendant had surrendered his tenancy rights and had delivered possession of the premises except two rooms, the defendant neither pleaded nor proved that his said occupation of the two rooms was based on any contract. The Deputy Official Trustee by his letter dated 27th Jan. 1971 addressed to the defendant (Ext. 9), inter alia, stated that the defendant had not yet made over vacant possession of the room on the ground of the premises which had been retained at the time of delivery of vacant possession on surrendering the lease. Vacant possession of the rooms found in occupation of Sri Arun Ghosh and M/s. Caxton & Co. was also not delivered. The Deputy Official Trustee had inter alia requested the defendant to vacate the rooms still in defendant's occupation and to settle occupation charges until delivery of possession. The defendant did not deny the receipt of the said letter and never sent any reply disputing the correctness of the assertions made in the said letter (Ext. 9). After obtaining lease from the Official Trustee the plaintiffs by their letters (Exts. 3a and 3b) had again called upon the defendant to settle up occupation charges in the rooms occupied by the defendant with leave and licence. It is significant that the defendant in reply did not categorically deny that its occupation of the said rooms was under a leave and licence. But by its letter (Ext. 3) dated 18th Mar. 1975 the defendant merely denied liability in respect of the contention in the plaintiff's letter dated 1st Mar. 1975 (Ext. 3b). The defendant also did not deny the assertions made in the subsequent letters of the plaintiff dated 31st May and 1st June, 1975 (Exts. 3d and 3e) that it was liable to pay occupation charges in respect of the suit rooms as a licensee under the plaintiff. Prior to the suit, the defendant did not assert that by contract or by operation of law it had become a tenant in respect of the disputed rooms. At the trial, the defendant did not allege or prove any agreement of tenancy in respect of the said rooms. As the defendant failed to prove a tenancy based on contract, it cannot successfully defend the plaintiff's claim for recovery of possession. Since there was no contract of tenancy, the defendant cannot claim that the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act either imposed or continued the defendant's tenancy upon the plaintiff landlord.

13. The plaintiff also proved that it had obtained a decree for eviction against M/s. Caxton & Co. who had been previously a sub-tenant in respect of a portion of the ground floor of Premises No. 1B, Asutosh Mookerjee Road under the defendant. The High Court had also affirmed the said decree against the said M/s. Caxton & Co. The defendant was made pro forma defendant in the said suit. In the circumstances, we hold that the defendant was a mere licensee and did not enjoy any protection against eviction under the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and the court below rightly decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff respondent.

14. We, accordingly dismiss this appeal without any order as to costs.

15. After the judgment is delivered, the learned Advocate for the appellant prays for a certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution of India. We do not consider that the case involves any substantial question of law of general importance and, therefore, in our opinion, the said question does not need to be decided by the Supreme Court.

16. Accordingly, we reject the oral prayer for certificate.

17. On the prayer of the learned Advocate for the appellant, we direct that the operation of the judgment and decree shall remain stayed for two months. During the period stay would operate the appellant would be bound to comply with the interim order granted in this Court.

18. Let the records be sent down expeditiously.

Mrs. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

Shyam Sundar Kajaria, Plaintiff v. Eastern Commercial Corporation, Defendant.

Suit No. 512 of 1975, D/- 9-2-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 6, R. 17 and O. 1, R. 10 — Application for amendment of plaint for impleading a person as defendant — Amendment when can be allowed — Considerations.

Where an application for amendment of plaint for impleading R as defendant is filed, the main consideration is whether or not the presence of R is necessary to enable the Court to effectually and completely adjudicate upon and settle the questions involved in the suit. A proper party is one without whose presence the questions in the suit cannot be completely and effectually adjudicated upon. If he is neither a necessary party nor a proper party, the court has no jurisdiction to add him as a party.

DZ/EZ/B552/82/VSS/MVJ—H

In the instant case, no order can be passed on plaintiff's application inasmuch as R is neither a necessary party nor a proper party to be joined in as a defendant. In view of the fact that the alleged claim of R stands barred by laws of limitation, it would not be proper and fair to add him as a party to this suit filed by plaintiff for recovery of amount lent and advanced on Khatapeta account to defendant. ORDER :— This is an application by the plaintiff Shyam Sundar Kajaria for amendment of the plaint. The suit was filed by Shyam Sundar Kajaria for recovery of a sum of Rupees 60,656/- and for other consequential reliefs. It was the positive case of the plaintiff, as made out in the plaint, that on 3rd Dec. 1974 and on 18th Dec. 1974 the plaintiff lent and advanced short term commercial loan on Khatapeta account to the defendant amounting to Rupees 25,000/- and Rupees 30,000/- respectively, aggregating Rs. 55,000/-. The defendant agreed to repay the said sum with interest at the rate of 15%. Acknowledging receipt of the said loan the defendant executed Purjas at the request and direction of the plaintiff in the name of Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla. The defendant acknowledged its liability to pay with interest at the rate of 15%. Inasmuch as according to the plaintiff the defendant failed and neglected to make payment of the said loan in spite of demands, the plaintiff had been compelled to file the present suit and the suit was filed on the 9th September, 1975.

2. After the suit was in part heard, an application was taken out for examination of the plaintiff's witness on commission. Examination of witness on commission had been concluded. Now an application has been taken out by the plaintiff for amendment of the plaint impleading therein Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla as a party defendant. In paragraph 8 of the proposed amended plaint the plaintiff had stated that the plaintiff did not make any claim in this suit against the defendant No. 2 Ramdeo

Prosad Agarwalla, who was sought to be impleaded in order that the issues involved in the present suit may be adjudicated upon in his presence. However, from the averments made in the petition, it appears that no ground has been disclosed by the petitioner for which the proposed amendment has been sought for. The said Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla, according to the petitioner, also known as Ramdeo Kajaria, is the brother of the plaintiff who had already deposed in the suit on commission. Save and except the averments in paragraph 8 of the petition that in view of the nature and character of the defence taken by the defendant, the petitioner had been advised to take out this application for necessary amendment, no other ground whatsoever has been stated therein. Although it has been stated in the petition that the proposed amendment would not prejudice the defendant in any way but the fact remains that the claim, if any, of the said Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla against the defendant today stands barred by the laws of limitation. There are no compelling circumstances which have been set out in the petition for allowing such an amendment even after the laws of limitation have set in. Order 1, R. 10 sub-rule (2) provides as follows :

"The Court may at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such term as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, be struck out, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added."

The facts disclosed in the petition do not indicate that the said Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla is a necessary party who ought to have been joined as a party defendant inasmuch as his presence before this Court is not necessary in order to effectually and completely adjudicate upon and settle all questions involved in this suit. It is the definite case of the defendant as made out in the written statement that the present transaction in suit has no connection whatsoever with the transaction that the defendant had with Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla. It is the case of the defendant in the written statement that the plaintiff had no transaction and/or dealing with the defendant on any occasion as no money was lent and advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. The defendant did not execute any purja at the request or direction of the plaintiff in the name of Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla acknowledging receipt of the loans nor acknowledged liability in respect thereof. In paragraph 3 it has been stated that the defendant borrowed a sum of Rs. 55,000/- from one Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla by executing relevant documents and upon production of the original purjas, it was the case of the defendant, that the defendant paid up the loan in two instalments. The defendants craved reference to various correspondence that passed between B. M. Bagaria, Solicitor acting on behalf of Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla and the defendant. From the said correspondence it would appear, according to the defendant, that the transaction that the defendant had with Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla had no connection whatsoever with the transaction that had been stated by the plaintiff in the plaint. In the circumstances the defendant Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla is not a necessary party and his presence is not required for the purpose of proper adjudication of the disputes between the plaintiff and the defendant. In the case reported in AIR 1974 Cal 358 it had been held that a person is not to be added as a defendant merely because he or she would be incidentally affected by the judgment. The main consideration is whether or not the presence of such a person is necessary to enable the Court to effectually and completely adjudicate upon and settle the questions involved in the suit. If the question at issue between the parties can be worked out without any one else being brought in, the stranger should not be added as a party. Similar view had been expressed in the case reported in (1981) 1 Cal LJ 252 : (AIR 1980 Cal 106) where it has been held by a Division Bench of this High Court that the Court would surely not encourage any attempt to implead a party who may be called a spectator or a dummy defendant. The plea of bringing one on record simply to watch proceedings is not proper. Similar views have been expressed in the case reported in AIR 1968 Mad 287 where in paragraph 2 it has been observed that a proper party is one without whose presence the questions in the suit cannot be completely and effectually adjudicated upon. If he is neither a necessary party nor a proper party, the court has no jurisdiction to add him as a party. In view of the facts and circumstances of the case it appears that no order can be passed on the plaintiff's application inasmuch as Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla is neither a necessary party nor proper party to be joined in as a defendant without whose presence the dispute by and between the plaintiff and the defendant cannot be adjudicated effectually and completely by this Court. In view of the fact that the alleged claim of Ramdeo Prosad Agarwalla as on today stands barred by the laws of limitation, it would not be proper and not fair to add him as a party to this suit.

3. In the circumstances, I dismiss this application with costs.

D. K. Sen with T. K. Basu, for Appellants.

M. M. DUTT, J. :— This appeal has been preferred by the Director of Enforcement, Enforcement Directorate, Calcutta, and others against the judgment of A. N. Sen, J. (as His Lordship then was) whereby the learned Judge struck down the two notices, one dated Nov. 22, 1963 and the other dated May 18, 1967 issued under Sec. 19 (2) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947.

DZ/EZ/B669/82/VSS/SNV

2. The notice dated Nov. 22, 1963 was struck down on the ground that the authority issuing the notice had not applied its mind before issuing the said notice under S. 19 (2) of the Act. So far as the notice dated May 18, 1967 is concerned, it was held to be invalid as the authority issuing the notice was not empowered to issue the same under S. 19 (2) of the Act. After considering the submissions made on behalf of the appellants, we are of the view that the learned Judge was justified in striking down the notices on the ground that the same were not issued in conformity with the provisions of S. 19 (2) of the Act. The learned Judge directed the Customs Authorities to return to the respondents writ petitioners the documents which were not relevant for the purpose of the pending cases against the respondents under the Customs Act and the Customs authorities were ordered and directed to return all such documents to the respondents writ petitioners on the expiry of the period of three months from the date of the order of the learned Judge, if within the said period no valid notice under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was served on the respondents writ petitioners by the appropriate authority, requiring production or making over of the documents in the custody and possession of the Customs authorities. In our view also, the appellants should be given an opportunity to issue notices in accordance with law and in compliance with the direction given by the learned Judge. In the circumstances, we direct that the documents should be returned by the Customs authorities to the respondents writ petitioners on the expiry of a period of two months from date unless valid notices in accordance with law are issued by the appropriate authorities concerned requisitioning the documents within the said period. The notices, if issued, shall specify the documents which are considered to be relevant by the authorities concerned.

3. The appeal is disposed of as above.

4. There will be no order as to costs.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI AND

C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

I. T. C. Ltd., Appellant v. George Joseph Fernandez and another, Respondents.

Appeal No. 75 of 1981, D/- 3-2-1982.*

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), S. 34 — Stay of suit — Application for — Court has discretion to decide validity of contract impugned as void, in summary proceedings of application under S. 34 — Charterparty agreement in respect of imported trawlers — Charterer undertaking to repair refrigeration system of trawlers — Contract cannot be said to be void on ground of mutual mistake as to defects in refrigeration system — S. 14 of Limitation Act — Applicability of, to arbitration proceedings. (Imports and Exports (Control) Act (18 of 1947), S. 5; (ii) Limitation Act (1963), S. 14).

While determining in an application for stay of suit whether the matter is arbitrable or not within the arbitration clauses agreed between the parties the Court should confine itself to the pleadings and not embark upon the examination of the question whether the case pleaded was correct or genuine or not, it is also true that where a issue arose as to whether the contract which contained the arbitration clause was arbitrable or not whether that issue be decided in a suit or application under S. 34 was a matter of procedure and the Court must exercise the discretion in this matter properly. (Para 7)

A charterer of two fishing trawlers imported under import licence which imposed certain obligations on the owner filed a suit to have the charterparty contract with arbitration clause, declared void on the ground that the same was entered into under a mutual mistake of fact as to an essential condition of trawlers, i.e. their refrigeration system and also on the ground that there was violation of Import and Export Control Act in respect of the contract and on the ground that the modification of the agreement was illegal. The contract was entered into after obtaining permission of the Chief Controller of Imports and

Exports. Under the contract the trawlers were to be delivered to the charterer to ascertain the repairs to be carried out to the trawlers for making them fully operational without any defect whatsoever and also to ascertain the cost of such repairs and thereafter to undertake the repairs at the cost of the owner and bring them to fully operational condition without any defect including all aspects of refrigeration equipment. The trawlers were accordingly delivered to the charterer and repairs were carried out. There was no allegation and no proof during the long period that preceded the institution of the suit as to what actually were the defects in the refrigeration system which could not be repaired or which made the trawlers different from what the parties had agreed to take under the contract. The plaintiff charterer was used to using trawlers and they had technical advice and inspection of trawlers before. Indeed in this background there was nothing else in view of the statement in the annual report of the charterer company for the year that ended after chartering of trawlers which specifically referred to 'two Mexican Trawlers' and it was stated therein they had certain initial defects and these had been overcome. The owner of the trawlers filed an application for stay of suit and a single Judge of the High Court accepted it by holding that there was no mutual mistake while entering into the agreement as to basic condition of the trawlers, i.e. refrigeration system of the trawlers and the matters were arbitrable under the wide arbitration clause in the contract. The exercise of discretion in determining the validity of the contract in summary proceedings under S. 34 was challenged.

Held : (i) the single Judge was not in error in holding that there was no mutual mistake whereby the contract could be avoided. The averments made in the pleadings in the background of the facts and circumstances of the case and the admitted documents do not make out a case of such a mutual mistake as to the quality of the thing contracted for which affected the assent of the parties, if that was so, then it could not be said that even if these defects were there, these defects would not make the contract a contract for a thing for which the parties did not bargain. As there was no case of fraudulent misrepresentation

there was no scope for any allegation of mutual mistake or mistake of the plaintiff charterer. (Para 7)

(ii) As in the original charterparty agreement there was permission of the Chief Controller the subsequent modification of the agreement in respect of the rental to be paid thereunder was not such which affected in view of the fact that the owner of the license had fulfilled the obligations imposed upon him before entering into the agreement and, therefore, there was no non-compliance with the provisions of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act. (Para 8)

(iii) As the counsel for the owner of trawlers gave an undertaking not to raise the question of limitation before arbitration, in the facts and in the circumstances of the case and in view of the principles embodied in S. 14 of the Limitation Act which are applicable to arbitration there was no ground for not exercising the discretion in favour of the owners under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act on the plea that claim of the charterparty might become barred before the arbitrator. Dipankar Gupta with Bhaskar Gupta, for Appellant; A. C. Bhabra with B. L. Vyas, for Respondent No. 1.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— This is an appeal from a judgment and order passed by Mr. Justice Salil Kumar Roychoudhury on 11th of February, 1981 granting the stay asked for and directing the parties to take immediate steps for initiation of the reference under the arbitration agreement contained in the contract mentioned in the plaint. The judgment was passed on an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 for stay of Suit No. 736 of 1978 instituted by I. T. C. Ltd. v. G. J. Fernandez. Before I refer to the relevant averments in the plaint it will be important to understand the background under which this application came to be made. The suit was filed on 29th of September, 1978 by the Charterer, for a declaration that the contract and modifications mentioned in the plaint were void and illegal and a decree for Rs. 39,64,341/- or an enquiry as to what amount was due to the plaintiff. In that suit instituted by I. T. C. Limited there were two defendants namely, G. J. Fernandez who was defendant No. 1 and secondly, Canara Bank, defendant No. 2. George Joseph Fernandez being the defendant No. 1 made an application on 24th of April, 1979. George Joseph Fernandez was the absolute owner of two fishing Trawlers Avemaria I and Ave Maria II registered under Nos. 1567 and 1568 dated the 30th of January, 1974 with the Registrar of Indian Ships, Cochin. The said trawlers were imported by the said petitioner under an import licence No. P/CG/2062299 dated 3rd of March, 1971. As good deal of arguments were advanced on the conditions of licence it would be relevant to refer to some of the relevant provisions of the licence. The licence was headed "Industry Processed Food (Fishing)". Under Column No. 2 the description and quality of the goods were indicated as two Nos. of fishing trawlers as per list. The approximate value of CIF was stated to be Rs. 23,55,000/- only. The period of shipment was indicated 12 months the date of issue and revalidated up to 6th of January, 1973. The licence was granted, under Govt. of India, Ministry of Commerce and Industry Order No. 17/55 dated 7th of December, 1955 as subsequently amended, issued under the Import and Export Control Act, 1947 and was without prejudice to the application of any other prohibition or regulation affecting the importation of the goods which might be enforced at the time of their arrival. In the instruction columns it was stated that the provision which was inapplicable should be struck off. It was further stated that the licence was issued from file No. CGIII/25/143/71. In column I which was not struck off, indicated as follows:—

"(i) This licence is issued with an initial validity period of twelve/twenty-four months from the date of issue. It will be revalidated at or before the end of the said period of twelve-twenty-four months, for a further period of two-one year(s), upon request provided the licensing authority is satisfied that a firm order has been placed on and accepted by the foreign supplier but shipment could not be effected within the initial validity period of the licence. Normally the validity period will not be extended beyond three years from the date of issue.

(ii) This licence will be subject to the conditions in force relating to the goods covered by the licence, as described in the relevant import Trade Control Policy Book, or any amendment thereof made up to, and including, the date of issue of the licence, unless otherwise specified.

(iii) It is also the condition of this licence that:—

(a) where an irrevocable letter of credit is opened by the holder of licence to finance the import of any goods covered thereby, then the authorised dealer in foreign exchange through whom the credit is opened shall be deemed to be a joint holder of this licence to the extent of the goods covered by the credit.

(b) The goods imported under this licence will be utilised in the licence holder's factory and that no portion thereof will be sold to or be permitted to be utilised by any other party or pledged with any financier other than Banks authorised to deal in the foreign exchange and State Financial Corporation provided that particulars of goods to be pledged are reported by the licensee in advance to the licensing authority.

(c) a half yearly return in the attached pro forma shall be furnished by the licensee to the Director of Statistics, Office of the Chief Controller of Imports & Exports, New Delhi, indicating the actual imports and remittance made against the licence as on 28th February, and 31st August, each year. The return for each half year shall be furnished within a period of 15 days from the close of the half year as indicated."

Clause (d) of sub-clause (iii) was not printed because it was not applicable. Column (iv) is also not relevant. Cl. 3 was as follows:—

"3. The licence shall also be subject to the conditions mentioned in APP 31 to the ITC Hand Book of Rules and Procedure 1970."

Clauses 4 and 5 are also not relevant for our present purpose. The Code of export conditions attached to the import licence in question contained, inter alia, the following clauses:—

"1. The proprietor of the licensee firm shall give a personal guarantee to the effect that the value of the export of fish and fish products during a period of seven years from the date of acquisition of the trawlers will not be less than Rupees 47,10,000/- (Rupees forty-seven lakhs and ten thousand only) and that the licensee shall become a member of the Marine Products Export Promotion Council, if already not a member and shall continue to be a member during this seven year period and shall send periodical returns to the Council and the Ministry of Foreign Trade and Dy. CCI & E, Ernakulam, giving information regarding export preformance. The above exports should be over and above the licensee's present level of exports. and if, and will be in addition to any export obligation the licensee might have given in respect of any other import of capital goods or otherwise".

"6. The licensee shall furnish to the Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, Ernakulam, before clearance of the goods, imported against this licence, from Customs, the personal guarantee and the Bank Guarantee stipulated in paras 1 and 2 above."

"7. The goods covered by this import licence shall not under any circumstances be released by the Customs authorities unless the personal guarantee and Bank Guarantee as stipulated in para 6 above has been furnished by the licensee."

It appears that sometimes after the grant of the licence the fishing trawlers were imported from Mexico and were hypothecated to Canara Bank. It appears from the reading of the plaint that the said defendant No. 2 being the present respondent No. 2 was made only a pro forma defendant to the suit. On the 21st of March, 1977 there was a Charterparty Agreement between the owner namely, defendant No. 1, and the petitioner herein and the I. T. C. Limited for letting the trawlers for a term of 2 years from the date of actual delivery on certain terms. As the contentions of the parties turn on the effect of these terms it would be appropriate to refer to some of the terms. In the recital it was stated that this was a Bare Boat Charterparty made on the 21st of March, 1977 between defendant No. 1, the proprietor and I. T. C. Limited and it was stipulated that the defendant No. 1 would be described in the agreement as the owner and I. T. C. Limited would be described as the Charterer. The recital further went on to observe as follows:—

"3. The owner has undertaken to obtain permission in writing of the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, Government of India and the No-objection Certificate of the Canara Bank for chartering the trawlers to the Charterers."

"1. The owner shall obtain the permission in writing of the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, Government of India and the No-objection Certificate from the Canara Bank to charter the trawlers to the charterer. This agreement shall receive from the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports and from the Canara Bank permission and No-objection Certificate respectively."

"2. Within 7 days of the receipt of the approval of the JOCIE or the No-objection Certificate from the Canara Bank whichever is later the owner shall deliver the said trawlers to the Charterer at the Port of Vishakhapatnam for carrying out an inspection of the said trawlers by its Authorised Agents to ascertain the repairs to be carried out to the trawlers for making them fully operational without any defect whatsoever and also to ascertain the cost of such repairs. Thereafter the Charterer shall undertake the repairs at the cost of the owner and bring them to fully operational condition without any defect including all aspects of refrigeration equipment. The Charterer will then conduct fishing trials to ascertain the actual condition of the trawlers and in case the condition is fully satisfactory according to the Charterer and the owner furnishes to the Charterer all documents certifying seaworthiness and also supplies sufficient proof that all port charges, pilotages and all pre-conditions to the lawful operations of the trawlers have been complied with the Charter hire shall commence on and from the date the fishing trials are ended.

The cost of the repairs as mentioned above shall be borne by the charterer initially who will have the right to set off and adjust the said cost against the first quarterly instalment of the charter hire reserved hereunder and as stipulated hereinafter and if there is any balance left, it will be adjusted against the subsequent monthly instalments in their entirety until the cost of repairs undertaken by the charterers shall be fully set off and adjusted against charter hire reserved hereunder."

Clause 3, Clauses 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 are not relevant for our present purpose. Clause 10 was as follows:—

"10. (1) The charterer shall pay to the owner for the use and hire of the trawlers Rs. 50,000 per trawler per month from the date of actual delivery and acceptance of each trawler to the charterer at Vishakapatnam. The charter hire shall be payable in advance every month. However the charter hire for the first three months of the charter period in advance at the time the trawlers are delivered to the charterer in accordance with this agreement. The charter hire shall continue to be paid up to and including the date of re-delivery of each trawler to the owner at Vishakapatnam (unless lost/sunk). The charterer will have no right to adjust the charter hire charges against the deposit paid by it to the owner or against any other claims of the charterer, except as provided in this agreement.

(ii) The charterer agrees to keep a deposit of Rs. one lakh per trawler with the owner during the period of the charter. This deposit will be paid by the charterer at the time of taking delivery of each trawler and will not bear any interest and will be adjusted by the charterer towards the charter hire due to the owner against the last two months of the charter period."

Clauses 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 are not relevant for our present purpose. Clause 18 contained the arbitration clause which was as follows:—

"18. Any dispute or difference at any time arising between the parties hereto in respect of the construction meaning or effect or as to the rights and liabilities of the parties aforesaid hereunder or any matter arising out of this Agreement, shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with and subject to the provision of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940 or any statutory modification or re-enactment thereto for the time being in force and the venue of Arbitration shall be Madras or Calcutta, and not elsewhere and the Award or Awards in such arbitration shall be made a rule of Court of competent jurisdiction at the instance of either party."

It is the case of the respondent to this appeal being the applicant under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, and defendant No. 1 to the suit that by 28th of February, 1976 the export obligation in the licence had been fulfilled and guarantee bond was cancelled by the Chief Controller of Import and Export. It appears further that on 10th of July, 1977 the trawlers were delivered to the charterer for repairs. On 1st of August, 1977 there was a telex message from the charterer to the owner forwarding the message from the Canara Bank by which the bank signified their non-objection to the vessels being chartered subject to the condition that the bank would have the first charge over the said two trawlers and that payment arising out of the Charter Party Agreement such as advance rent and monthly rental were to be channelled through Canara Bank only and the lease agreement, the copies of which were to be given to the bank and the period of the lease agreement to be intimated. The charterer was agreeable to those terms. Thereafter, repairs commenced. It is not clear from the petition as to the actual date. On the 17th of August, 1977 permission was given by the Chief Controller, Import and Export to charter the two vessels at Rs. 50,000 per month per trawler to I.T.C. for a period of 3 years. It would be appropriate to refer to the letter dated 17th August, 1977 which contained as follows:—

"Gentlemen,

With reference to your letter No. EEE; F24; 1010 dated 2nd May, 1977 on the above subject, I write to say that it has been decided to allow the charting of the two trawlers imported by you against your licence No. P/CC/2062299 dated 3rd March, 1971 on a charter rental of Rs. 50,000 per month per trawler to Messrs I.T.C. (India) Ltd. Calcutta for a period of three years."

Thereafter, on 30th of September, 1977 the plaintiff took out insurance cover with effect from 30th of September, 1977. Thereafter formal delivery was given for repairs as it appears from the averments made in paragraph 8 of the plaint about which we shall presently refer. On 12th of November, 1977 there was a letter from the owner to the charterer asking for payment of the hire from October 1, 1977. In that letter written in the trade name of the respondent to the appellant dated 12th of November, 1977 it was stated, inter alia, as follows:—

"The above two trawlers were handed to you for dry-docking and effecting necessary repairs, as early as 10th July, 1977. But, unfortunately there has been undue delay and it is not known when the repairs would be completed.

As you know your Mr. B. P. Singh and our Mr. Fernandez were not in favour of Mr. Sundaram. But in view of the good work done earlier by him in respect of Electronics items, and his assurance that he will do quick work. Mr. Sundaram was accepted for Refrigeration and also Hydraulics' work when Mr. Fernandez was here last, he made it clear to Mr. Sundaram that the whole Refrigeration System should be made perfect on both trawlers including Hydraulics, through capable men, latest by 25th September, 1977. But this work is still to be completed and we do not know when.

Subsequently we understand, you had engaged Mr. Sundaram for other works also, like Electrical, Electronics, including Auto Pilot, R.T. etc. and for every thing he is looked up to. Unfortunately his men are not regularly present or working, with the result, there is little or no progress.

In view of the fact there has been inordinate delay, you shall make the charter charges, payable to us, which has become effective from 1st October, 1977 for both trawlers, irrespective of when the trawlers will be completely repaired, including the refrigeration and Hydraulic System, or when the same will be sent out to sea for fishing.

Also kindly arrange to pay the Port charges with effect from 1st October, 1977 for both trawlers."

2. By a letter dated 22nd November 1977 the owner again asked the charterer to pay the rental of the two vessels from 1st October 1977 and also for depositing Rs. 2,00,000 and it was stated that Mr. Sundaram who was engaged to carry out the refrigeration work at the instance of the charterer had neither the capacity nor the organisational set up even to commence the work in right earnest. In the letter dated 28th of November, 1977 from the charterer to the owner it was informed that the trawlers had been insured for one year from 30th Sept., 1977 to 28th Sept., 1978. On 2nd of Feb., 1978 there was an agreement between the owner and the charterer modifying the Charterparty dated 21st March, 1977 in certain respects. The said agreement dated 2nd of February, 1978 after reciting the past events stated, inter alia, as follows:—

"Now it is hereby agreed by and, between the parties hereto as follows:—

1. Clause 2 of the Agreement dated 21st March between the parties hereto (hereinafter called the "Original Agreement") will be substituted by the following clause numbered as 2.

The charter hire of the trawlers has commenced from 15th day of January, 1978.

The Charterer has incurred substantial expenses on repairs of the two trawlers which are the subject matter of this agreement. It is strictly understood and agreed between the parties hereto that the owner will bear only Rupees 1,50,000 per trawler of such repair expenses for repairs already carried out up to the date of commencement of the charter hire.

The Charterer will have the right to set off and adjust the abovementioned sum of Rs. 1,50,000 per trawler (i.e. a total of Rs. 3,00,000) against the charter hire reserved hereunder. Such adjustment will commence with effect from the four of the month of the charter and the sum of Rs. 1,50,000 per trawler will be recovered by way of such adjustment in ten equal monthly instalments."

It was stipulated that the charter hire was to commence from 15th of January, 1978 and the owner was to bear the repair expenses to the extent of Rupees 1,50,000 for each trawler to be adjusted against rental from the 4th month of the charter in equal monthly instalments and the rental would be Rs. 53,000 per month from the first month of the year and for subsequent months Rs. 52,000 and the deposit of Rs. 100,000 for each trawler to be kept. It appears that by the first week of February, 1978 Rs. 2,00,000 was deposited and hire of Rs. 4,70,000 up to May, 1978 was paid. Our attention was drawn to a portion of the Director's report of the appellant company for the year ending 31st March, 1978 and it would therefore be appropriate to refer to the said relevant extract which has been printed in the Paper Book at page 178. There it was stated, inter alia, as follows:—

"The company has already established itself as a substantial exporter of Marine Foods. During the course of the year Rs. 3.85 crores worth of Marine foods was exported.

The company acquired two Mexican Trawlers and although there were certain initial difficulties in the commissioning of these boats, these have now been overcome. The two Japanese vessels on charter mentioned in the Director's Report for the previous year have now been purchased and with your Company having chartered two more Mexican Vessels, a fleet of 6 large Trawlers is now operating, thus ensuring a firm basis for the procurement of quality raw materials.

A substantial drop in the prices of exportable shrimps during the financial year adversely affected many of the exporters, including your Company. Prices have however now recovered from the low levels that prevailed at the end of 1977 and the Company can once again look forward to improved trading results."

On 18th of July, 1978 there was a letter from the charterer to the owner sending hire up to July, 1978 against adjustment of the repair charges. On 14th Sept. 1978 the letter from the charterer to the owner stated that the charterparty was illegal and in breach of the permission of the Chief Controller of Import and Export and as such was void. It was also stated that the modification was also void and the charterparty had become impossible of performance and asking the trawlers to be taken back. On 16th Sept. 1978 there was a letter from the owner to the charterer confirming a telegram sent on 16th Sept. 1978 and holding the charterer liable under the agreement and objecting to the unilateral termination of the contract and denying the allegations in the charterer's letter dated 14th Sept. 1978. On 29th of Sept. 1978 Suit No. 736 of 1978 was filed by the charterer against the owner which was the subject matter of the said application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act and is also the subject matter of the present appeal. In paragraph 5 of the plaint it was stated that in or about August, 1977 Canara Bank had intimated that it had no objection to the defendant No. 1 chartering the said trawlers to the plaintiff subject to certain terms and conditions and it was further alleged by the present appellant that all of which were complied with and accepted. It was further stated in the plaint that there was a purported permission granted to the respondent No. 1 to the present appeal by the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports who chartered the trawlers to the plaintiff for a charter rental of Rs. 50,000 per month per trawler for a period of three years. Thereafter, the modifications referred to the charterparty agreement dated 2nd of Feb. 1978 were indicated and it was described as purported modification. Thereafter, the plaint alleged in paragraphs 10, 11 and 12 as follows:—

"10. The said purported permission dated 18th August, 1977 granted by the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports to the defendant No. 1 for chartering the said trawlers to the plaintiff was given under the said import licence of the defendant No. 1. Such purported permission was given subject to two conditions, namely, that the charter rental would be Rs. 50,000 per month and that the charter would be for a period of 3 years. The said purported agreement dated the 21st March, 1977 was in fact for a period of 2 years with an option to the plaintiff to continue the hiring for a further period of 3 years. The said purported agreement, therefore, was in contravention of and contrary to the terms of the said purported permission and consequently the said import licence. The said purported agreement was or is illegal, against public policy and void.

11. Alternatively, or in any event, the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 was contingent contract, the future events on which the contract was contingent being the receipt of the no-objection certificate from the Canara Bank (the defendant No. 2 herein) and the permission of the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports for chartering the trawlers to the plaintiff on the terms and conditions as agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1. The purported permission of the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports did not approve of or give permission in the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 but purported to approve of or give permission for different forms or an agreement containing different terms; and as such, no permission, rated or otherwise was at all given for the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977. In the premises as aforesaid the said agreement was in violation of the provisions of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act 1947 and was and/or became illegal, void and inoperative.

12. The purported modification agreement dated 2nd February, 1978, which, inter alia, provided that the charter rental would be Rs. 53,000, in the first month of the year beginning 15th January, 1978 and Rs. 52,000 per month for the subsequent months, was also in contravention of the said purported permission dated 18th August, 1977 of the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports and consequently in contravention of the said purported licence according to the allegations in the plaint. There was no or no valid permission for the said modification agreement and as such the same was in violation of the provisions of the said Act, as much illegal, against public policy and void.

In paragraphs 14 and 15 it was stated as follows:—

"14. Further, the plaintiff states that after various tests, trials and repair works made on the trawlers it was found in or about August, 1978, that there are several inherent and latent defects in the refrigeration system of the said trawlers, which is an essential part of such trawlers and which such defects were not discoverable by ordinary diligence at the time of entering into the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 or at the time of said purported modification thereof. Those defects are such that without changing the entire refrigeration system and/or without incurring expenses which would be prohibitory, unreasonable and/or prohibitory, it is not possible to remove or rectify the same. The trawlers could not and cannot be made fully operational and free from any defects whatsoever, by making repairs as contemplated by the said purported agreement and the modification thereof. The particulars of some such defects are given in a schedule annexed hereto and marked "C". The plaintiff craves leave to treat the said schedule as a part of this plaint.

15. Further and/or in any event the plaintiff states that the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1, entered into the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 and the purported modification thereof dated 2nd February, 1978 on the basis of essential and fundamental assumption that the trawlers could be made fully operational and free from all defects by effecting repairs so contemplated thereby. Such assumption was mistaken and not true and was subsequently discovered to be so mistaken. In the premises the said purported agreement modified as aforesaid was and is void."

After setting out the other facts as we have mentioned hereinbefore it was claimed that the charterer being the respondent No. 1 to this appeal was bound to pay the compensation for all the advantages which it had received under the said purported agreement dated 21st of March, 1977 and the purported modification thereof and the costs, charges and expenses which the plaintiff has incurred on the said trawlers. It was further alleged that such compensation incurred on the said trawlers was assessed at Rs. 39,64,341 the particulars whereof were given in Schedule 'D'. The said Annexure 'D' was comprised of the following:—

It was further claimed in the alternative in paragraph 19 that in supplying the said trawlers the defendant No. 1 committed a fundamental breach of the said purported agreement dated 31st March, 1977 and the purported modification thereof which went to the root and affected the very substance of the same

"Annexure 'D'

	Ave Maria I	Ave Maria II	Total
1. Charter Hire	2,94,000	2,94,000	5,88,000
2. Deposit	1,00,000	1,00,000	2,00,000
3. Payment against Spares	6,000	87,000	1,35,000(?)
4. Expenses up to 31st August, 1978.	15,38,795	15,04,546	30,41,341
	19,98,895	19,66,046	39,64,341"

and which made performance thereof impossible. Such a breach on the part of the said respondent it was further alleged had produced a situation fundamentally different from which the parties could not have reasonably contemplated when the said agreement and the modifications were entered into. The plaintiff, it was further alleged, had not been able to obtain any benefit out of the said trawlers and the appellant being the plaintiff never was nor was bound by any obligation under the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 and the purported modification thereof and was entitled to and had duly rescinded the same and the plaintiff had in the premises suffered loss and damages which the respondent No. 1 was bound to compensate. It was alleged that such loss and damages were assessed reasonably at Rs. 39,64,341. For this purpose also reference was made to the particulars mentioned in the said schedule. In the further alternative, it was claimed that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the said sum of Rs. 39,64,341 as per particulars given in the Schedule 'D' as money paid to and/or on account of the respondent No. 1 and expenses so incurred. Thereafter, the plaintiff claimed, inter alia, a declaration that the said purported agreement dated 21st March, 1977 and the purported modification thereof dated 2nd of February, 1978 were and are illegal, against public policy and void; for a decree for Rupees 39,64,341-00 as per particulars mentioned in Schedule 'D' or alternatively an enquiry. There was also an enquiry claimed in the further alternative. A letter was written to the charterer by Mr. Sampat Kumar, Advocate for the respondent No. 1 on 9th of Oct., 1978. There was letter prior thereto on the 27th of September, 1978 from the Charterer to Mr. A. N. Huskar, Chairman ITC Limited making the grievance of the unilateral repudiation by the ITC Limited of the contract to charter fishing trawlers. The other relevant letters to which we must refer is the letter dated 23rd of Nov., 1978 nominating one Mr. K. S. Venkataraman, I.C.S., retired Judge of the High Court at Madras as the Arbitrator of the respondent No. 1. This letter was written on behalf of the character being the respondent No. 1 herein. On the 12th of Dec., 1978 I.T.C. Limited replied that this suit had been filed on 29th of Sept., 1978 as indicated before it was not in a position to participate in the arbitration. On the 12th of March, 1981 a letter was written by the respondent No. 1 to I.T.C. Limited which is as follows:—

Dear Sirs,

Whereas by the Bare Boat Charter Party Agreement dated 21st March, 1977 between G. J. Fernandez, Proprietor, Esmario Export Enterprises, Kanand, Quilon, Kerala State and M/s. I. T. C. Limited, Virginia House, 37, Chowringhee, Calcutta-700071, as modified by the agreement dated the 2nd February, 1978 between the said two parties it was agreed inter alia that any dispute, difference at any time arising between the parties hereto in respect of the construction, meaning or effect or as to the rights and liabilities of the parties aforesaid hereunder or any other matter arising out of the agreement shall be referred to arbitration in accordance with and subject to the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940 and the venue of the arbitration shall be in Madras or at Calcutta and not elsewhere.

2. Whereas the dispute have arisen between the said parties arising out of the said agreement.

Now, therefore, I.G.J. Fernandez hereby nominate and appoint Mr. K. S. Venkataraman, I.C.S. Retired Judge of Madras High Court, 'O H M' Prithivi Avenue Madras-600018 as the arbitrator to hear and determine the dispute aforesaid in accordance with the provisions of the said agreement. I call upon you to concur on the said appointment of Mr. K. S. Venkataraman as such Arbitrator.

Please send the reply immediately."

Thereafter, an application was moved under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act for the stay of suit by ITC Limited, the present appellant, on 24th of April, 1979 and after affidavits the matter ultimately was disposed of by the judgment and order of the learned trial Judge dated 11th of February, 1981 as mentioned hereinbefore.

2-A. After setting out the letters the learned Judge observed that the letters indicated that the transaction was given effect to and acted upon by the parties and the parties understood what was the agreement and what were the terms. The learned Judge thereafter referred to the averments made in the plaint the substance of which we have set out hereinbefore. The learned Judge observed that the pleadings required for fundamental breach, mistake and illegality had been pleaded by artful drafting filing the plaint through competent lawyers on legal advice. The learned Judge came to the conclusion that there was no basis for the cause of action in the plaint and of the alleged discovery of mistakes as to the essential conditions that is, the refrigeration system being defective was a patent defect and also illegality, modification, frustration, lack of consideration and impossibility of performance of the contract were all afterthoughts. The learned Judge observed several authorities that was cited before him. A submission was made that these questions could not be gone into in an application under S. 34 nor were these questions capable to be decided on affidavits and where the learned Judge doubted the bona fides of the statements then the matter should have been tried on evidence. The learned Judge thereafter made a categorical finding that in the instant case there was no mistake and in any event there was no question of mutual mistake on the date of the agreement as the fact that the refrigeration system of the said two trawlers needed repairs was known to both the parties and the appellant had undertaken to get the said repairs done at the cost of the petitioner through their nominated repairer about whose competency the respondent No. 1 had doubts. Thereafter, the learned Judge held that there was no question of any mistake at any time of the contract or at any time alleged by the appellant in the plaint. The learned Judge further went on to hold that chartering out a vessel was not contemplated and was not within the operation of Appendix 31 of the hand book and the relevant clauses which were applicable to the present case namely, Clause 5 being one of the conditions regarding the use or disposal of the imported goods stated as follows:—

"Import licences issued to actual users shall be subject to the condition that the licensee shall use the material imported thereunder only for the purpose for which the licence has been issued and no portion thereof shall be sold, disposed of or utilised in any other manner without the written permission of the licensing authority."

1982 Cal./29 IX G—17

Condition 8 was as follows:—

(8) C.G./HKP Licences, i.e. those issued to actual users for import of capital goods, machinery, heavy electrical plant or machine tools shall be subject to the following conditions inter alia:—

(a) the goods imported under the licence shall be utilised in the licence holder's factory at the address shown in the application against which the licence is issued, and for the purpose for which the licence is issued; and that no portion thereof shall be sold to or be permitted to be utilised by any other party or pledged with any financier other than Banks authorised to deal in the foreign exchange and State Financial Corporation, provided that particulars of goods to be pledged are reported by the licensee in advance to the licensing authority.

(b) The import of spare parts against this licence shall be governed by the provisions of paragraph 152 of the Import Trade Control Hand Book, of Rules and procedure in force at the time of shipment of the goods.

(c) The goods covered by this licence shall be used only for the manufacture of..... (name of end product(s) and for the capacity licensed under the Industries (Dev. & Reg.) Act, 1951 or approved by Government.

(d) a half yearly return in the prescribed pro forma shall be furnished by the licensee to the Director of Statistics, Office of the Chief Controller of Imports & Exports, New Delhi, indicating the actual imports and remittance made against the licence as on 28th February and 31st August each year. The return for each half year shall be furnished within a period of 15 days from the close of the half year as indicated." The learned Judge was of the view that the provision appeared to be applicable to raw materials used for manufacturing purposes and also for the transfer, mortgage, sale etc. of plant and machinery, it could be hardly said to apply to charterparty in respect of vessels which were imported for the purpose of deep sea fishing and in fact the same was used accordingly by the charterer and there was no question of any transfer affecting the ownership of the respondent in the licence in any way. Further, the learned Judge held that permission was in fact obtained, it was duly granted and as the modification of the charter party had not affected the essential conditions it was not necessary to obtain further permission. In the premises, the learned Judge was of the view that there was no question of any illegality or any mutual mistake. He referred to several decisions to which attention has been drawn and he thereafter observed that if the validity of the contract was challenged the Court might go into it which might incidentally affect the question of the contract containing the arbitration clause in an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act for stay of the suit. Therefore, having regard to the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of Anderson Wright Ltd. v. Moran & Co. (AIR 1955 SC 53) that the Court could go into the question of the validity of the contract which contained an arbitration clause whether the arbitration clause was valid or not. He, therefore, considered that question and having regard to all the facts he characterised the averments made as afterthoughts and the alleged difference on the question of fundamental breach, if any, according to the learned Judge, was fully covered by the arbitration clause as these related to the breach of the terms of the contract and was within the jurisdiction of the arbitrator within the wide arbitration clause in the present case. He, therefore, was unable to accept the submission that there was no valid arbitration agreement. Therefore the conditions for the fulfilment of stay under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, according to the learned Judge had been fulfilled. He, therefore, granted a stay of the suit and directed the parties to take immediate steps for reference of the disputes to the arbitration.

3. It is the propriety and the correctness of the said decision of the learned Judge which are under challenge in this appeal before us.

4. In support of this appeal it was urged on behalf of the appellant that in order to decide whether stay under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act should be granted or not it was necessary for the Court to consider whether the case as pleaded or the issues as raised in the plaint were within the ambit of the arbitration clause to be adjudicated by the arbitrator and for this purpose the Court must confine itself to the pleadings in the suit and not embark upon the examination of the question whether the case pleaded was correct or genuine or not. It was, secondly, urged that where the issue arose as to whether the contract was void ab initio, and as such the same was not arbitrable, then whether that issue should be decided in a suit or in an application was a matter of procedure and the Court must exercise its discretion properly, having regard to the magnitude and the nature of the evidence required to adjudicate the question. It was submitted that in the instant case it should not have been decided on affidavits in the application because it was urged that the issue as to mistake should not be disposed of summarily, in the facts and circumstances of the case it was better to decide the same in the suit and the issues involved in the suit should not have been decided piecemeal. It was, thirdly, urged that in view of the nature of the pleadings the plea of illegality of the contract as raised in the instant case was not a pure question of law because it involved the adjudication of the facts whether the parties had agreed to obtain the permission. Therefore, in view of the nature of the pleadings and the letters between the parties it was submitted that the question as to mistake which went to the root of the contract or as to illegality involved in this case could not and should not have been decided in this manner. In the premises, it was urged that in exercising his discretion in the manner he has done the learned Judge had proceeded erroneously. It was, further, submitted in support of this appeal that if the suit was stayed and the parties were directed to go before the arbitrator the claim of the plaintiff might be considered to be barred by law of limitation and if that was so then, this was a factor which should be taken into consideration in exercising the discretion of this Court even at the appellate stage in the matter of grant of stay under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act. It was, lastly, urged that the learned Judge overemphasised and was mistaken in taking a wrong view of the conduct of the plaintiff and basing his judgment on hypothesis that the plaintiff had pleaded the case in the manner it had done in order to avoid the jurisdiction of the arbitrator within the arbitration clause. It was, then, urged that the mistake which was pleaded in the facts and in the circumstances of the case was a mistake of such magnitude and was a mutual mistake which went at the root of the contract and made the contract void.

5. Before we consider these contentions our attention was drawn to certain authorities dealing with the question as to how should the Court approach an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, in the facts and in the circumstances of this case. Reliance was placed on behalf of the respondent as well as on behalf of the appellant to the decision of the learned single Judge at that time of this Court in the case of Khusiram v. Hanutmal (1949) 53 Cal WN 505 where it was held that where an application was made under S. 34 of the Indian Arbitration Act for stay of a suit and an issue was sought to be raised as to the formation, existence or validity of the contract containing the arbitration clause, the Court was not bound to refuse the stay but might in its discretion on the application for stay decide the issue as to existence or the validity of the arbitration agreement even though it might involve incidentally a decision as to the validity or existence of the parent contract. Our attention was drawn to the observations of the learned Judge at page 509 of the report where the learned Judge has set out the issues and one of the issues, inter alia, was that the parties were not ad idem and as such there was no contract and there was no arbitration clause. It was, further, pleaded in that case that the contract was void by reason of mutual mistake as to a fact essential thereto. Dealing with this contention at page 513 of the report after reference to several authorities the learned Judge observed that the Court had the power to decide on the application for stay whether an arbitration agreement subsisted for it was the subsistence of the arbitration agreement which alone could give jurisdiction to the arbitrator. Our attention was drawn on the observations dealing with the question as to in what manner the Court should dispose of such a contention. It was submitted that it was held by the learned Judge in that case that whether in a particular case the issue should be decided on affidavit evidence or should be relegated to a suit or the issue should be decided on trial on evidence, must depend upon the facts and the circumstances of a particular case, and must be adjudicated in the background of that particular case. It was open, according to the learned

Judge, to also consider the case as pleaded and find out whether the issues as to formation of the contract had been raised bona fide or merely to avoid the contract. In the facts and circumstances of the case the learned Judge examined the application and refused to grant stay. Our attention was drawn to the observations of this Court in the decision in the case of General Enterprises v. Jardine Handerson Ltd., AIR 1978 Cal 407 where sitting singly I had held that stay should not be granted. In that case Jardine Handerson Ltd., a registered company carried on the business of rendering advisory and technical services for remuneration to various other companies regarding the latter's Provident Fund, Pension Fund, Gratuity etc. M who was an actuary by qualification was an assistant and a whole time employee of the company. M represented that he needed assistance of an independent agent and at his instance an agreement was entered into between the company and General Enterprises under which the latter agreed to work as agent on commission. There was an arbitration clause in the contract for reference of dispute if any, to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Subsequently the agreement was terminated. There was some dispute about payment of commission. The company refused to pay on the ground that the firm of General Enterprises was consisting of the wife and daughter of M and one named lender partner. The contract, it was urged was obtained by fraud. The company filed a suit for a declaration that the contract was void. The General Enterprises referred the dispute to arbitration of Bengal Chamber and Commerce. It also filed an application in the Court under S. 34 of the Act for stay of the suit. In those circumstances, it was held that stay of suit should not be granted. At page 412 I had discussed the several authorities and at page 415 referring to the decision of Khusiram Bannarsi Lal (supra) I had observed that the Court in its discretion in a particular case might decide in S. 34 application as to the existence of the contract. More or less similar view was expressed by Mr. Justice S. K. Roychowdhury in the case of Union of India v. Naresh Chand, AIR 1978 Cal 307 where at pages 309 and 310 the learned Judge reiterated more or less the same principles,

6. Therefore, bearing the aforesaid principles in mind it is necessary to examine whether the allegations as pleaded really avoided the contract or in other words, whether there was any pleading of such latent defect which caused mutual mistake which made the contract void ab initio. In order to appreciate the principles which should be applied in examining the pleadings in this case reliance was placed on the observations in Anson's Law of Contract, 24th Edition and our attention was drawn to page 276 where the learned editor has given instances as to what kind of mistakes avoid the contract. In the examples inter alia in clauses (c) and (d) at page 276 of the book the editor has observed that (c) mistake as to the quality of the thing contracted for and (d) a false and fundamental assumption going to the root of the contract, avoid the contract. At page 280 the learned editor has referred to the decision in the case of Bell v. Lever Bros., 1932 AC 161 to which we shall refer independently later. Our attention was also drawn to the observations as to the mistake as to quality which does not generally avoid the contract and where several examples were indicated. It would be desirable first to refer to the enunciation of the principles on this aspect to the observations in the case of Bell v. Lever Bros. Ltd., 1932 AC 161. There one L. Company which held more than 99% of the share capital of the N Company agreed with one, B that he should be in the service of L Company for a term of years during which he should act as chairman of the board of directors of N Company at a salary of 8,000L a year. They made a similar agreement with an S that he should be vice-chairman of the board at a salary of 6000L a year. While acting as chairman and vice-chairman respectively B and S entered on their own account into secret speculations in cocoa, a commodity in which N Company dealt, of such character, as on the finding of the jury in answer to a specific question, would have justified L Company in terminating the agreement of service and the N Company in dismissing them from their offices of chairman and vice-chairman. Subsequently the N Company became amalgamated with another company and it became necessary to cancel the appointments of B and S as chairman and vice-chairman. Being unaware of the aforesaid breaches of duty by B and S, the L Company agreed to pay to B 30,000L & to S 20,000L as compensation for terminating their services, B and S agreed to accept these sums and they were duly paid. The jury, in answer to a further specific question, found that the L Company if they have been aware of the breaches of duty by B and S would have terminated their agreement and B and S would have been dismissed from their offices without any compensation. The action in which the jury so found was brought in the first instance by the L Company alone and N Company joined in the course of proceedings as co-plaintiffs against B and S claiming rescission of the compensation agreements and re-payment of the sums paid thereunder on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation and alternatively, as the House construed the points of claim, on the ground of unilateral mistake induced by fraud, but not on the ground of mutual mistake innocently made by the defendants so far as they were concerned. There was a specific alternative claim that the agreements of settlement and the payments under them were made under a mistake of fact. The jury negatived the charges of fraud and found that at the time of negotiating the compensation agreements B and S had not in mind their breaches of duty. Wright, J., was of the opinion on the construction of the points of claim that an issue based upon an allegation of mutual mistake was thereby raised and the Court of Appeal being of the opinion that if the issue was not raised the pleadings would be treated as amended in order to raise it, held that the compensation agreements were void having been made under a common mistake as to the legal relation between the parties and each party believing it, contrary to the truth, that one was entitled to claim and the other was bound to pay compensation. The Court of Appeal further held that such a case had not been raised before Wright, J., and each of the defendants owed a duty to the plaintiff to disclose their breaches of duty and their non-disclosure invalidated the compensation agreement. The defendants appealed. It was held first by Lord Blanesburgh, with special reference to the course of the trial and the circumstances of the case, that any amendment of their pleadings to enable the plaintiffs to raise the case of mutual mistake implying good faith on the part of the defendants could not without injustices to them be allowed after an action based exclusively on fraud had failed and accordingly the issue was not open to the plaintiffs in the House of Lords. But on the footing that the points of claim were amended so as to raise them which it was held by Lord Blanesburgh, Lord Atkin and Lord Thankerton (Viscount Hailsham and Lord Warrington of Clyffe dissenting), that the action failed, as to mutual mistake on the ground that the mutual mistake related only not to the subject-matter, but to the quality of the service contracts; as to unilateral mistake, on the ground that the defendants under this contract, of service with the L Company owed no duty to them to disclose the impugned transactions. In this connection it may be instructive to refer to the observations of Lord Atkin at page 217 where the learned Lord had observed that the rules dealing with the effect of mistake on contracts appeared to be established with reasonable clearness and has stated certain instances but at page 218 it was observed by the learned Judge that mistake as to quality of the thing contracted for raised more difficult questions. It was observed that in such a case the mistake would not affect assent unless it was a mistake of both parties and was as to the existence of some quality which made the thing without the quality essentially different from the thing as it was believed to be. Of course it may appear that the parties contracted that the article should possess the quality which one or other or both have mistakenly believed it to possess. But in such a case there was a contract and the enquiry was a different one, being whether the contract as to quality amounted to a condition or a warranty, a different branch of law. His Lordship referred that the principles to be applied were to be found in two cases, and the first one was the case of Kennedy v. Panama etc. Royal Mail Co., (1867) 2 QB 580. The next case was the decision in the case of Smith v. Hughes, (1871) 2 QB 597. It is not necessary to set out in extenso the observations made from the said two decisions which were referred to by Lord Atkin. Then the learned Judge applied these principles to the facts of that case as found by the jury and came to the decision as we have indicated before. Reliance was placed on the observations of Lord

Thankerton at pages 232 onwards. There at page 234 Lord Thankerton had given example that where a horse was bought under a belief that it was sound and if the purchaser was induced to buy by a fraudulent representation as to the horse's soundness the contract might be rescinded. If it was induced by an honest misrepresentation as to the soundness though it may be clear that both vendor and purchaser thought that they were dealings about a sound horse and were in error, yet the purchaser should pay the whole price unless there was a warranty. His Lordship referred to the phrase used "underlying assumption by the parties", as applying in the subject-matter of a contract in the case of Kennedy's case namely, (1867) 2 QB 580 that was applied to the subject-matter of the contract and it might be too widely interpreted to include something which one of the parties had not necessarily in mind at the time of the contract. According to Lord Thankerton this phrase could only properly relate to something which both parties must necessarily have accepted in their mind as an essential and integral element of the subject-matter. In this connection we would do well to refer to the observations of the Privy Council in the case of Sheikh Brothers Ltd. v. Arnold Julius Ochsner, 1957 AC 136 where at page 146 their Lordships of the Judicial Committee reiterated that on behalf of the appellant two points were urged namely, (1) that the mistake was not as to a matter of fact essential to the agreement and (2) that even if the licence in question with which the Judicial Committee was involved was void under S. 20 of the Indian Contract Act, S. 56 thereof was also applicable and therefore on that finding on the fact of the arbitrators with which the members of the Judicial Committee were concerned that the appellant did not know but the respondents might with reasonable diligence might have known of the impossibility, compensation was payable under the third paragraph of S. 56. The Judicial Committee was of the view that having regard to the nature of the contract before their Lordships that it was a kind of joint adventure and as to the provisions in particular of clauses 3 (c), 4 (a), 5, 6 and 11, the Judicial Committee was of the opinion that this was the very basis of the contract that the sisal area should be capable of producing an average of 50 tons a month throughout the term of the licence. In that background the Judicial Committee was of the view that in that case the mistake was as to a matter of fact essential to the agreement,

7. Bearing the principles enunciated in those decisions we have to deal with the contentions urged in support of this appeal. We agree with the submission on behalf of the appellant that in determining in an application whether the matter is arbitrable or not within the arbitration clause agreed between the parties the Court should confine itself to the pleadings and not embark upon the examination of the question whether the case pleaded was correct or genuine or not. It was submitted that in view of the principles enunciated in the several decisions which we have set out hereinbefore rightly that where an issue arose as to whether the contract which contained the arbitration clause was arbitrable or not, whether that issue decided in a suit or application was a matter of procedure and the Court must exercise the discretion in this matter properly. Having regard to the facts and circumstances in this case and the pleadings and the annexures to the pleadings in the suit and the admitted documents, in our opinion, in the facts and in the circumstances of this case, it cannot be said that the Court erred in exercising its discretion to decide the controversy whether the contract being void the arbitration clause was void, in the application, without evidence and on the basis of pleadings only. Such a procedure is warranted by the decisions in appropriate cases which we have noted hereinbefore and in the facts and circumstances of the case, in our opinion, the learned Judge was not in error in exercising his discretion nor it was exercised improperly. It was submitted that the issue as to mistake should not have been disposed of summarily in this case, we are unable to accept this submission. In this case there are certain facts which are apparent from the pleadings and the documents namely, (1) the charterer had inspection of the trawlers, (2) both the parties knew that the trawlers and its refrigeration system required extensive repairs and provisions had been made for the same in the charter party agreement and thereafter, (3) repair works were done and expenses were incurred and such repairs were done under the supervision and investigation of the charterer namely, the plaintiff appellant in this case and thereafter, (4) there was modification of the charter party agreement as pleaded as we have noted hereinbefore. Lastly, the so called latent defects which the plaintiff in the suit and the charterer in this case is alleged to have discovered were inter alia, defective hydraulic drive, defective power generator, defective cooling coil system, other components of the refrigeration system required major repairs and design changes involving 'prohibitive expenses', refrigeration system not capable of achieving 20F in the fish hold due to the system running under vacuum at 20F by reason of inherent defects in the design and causing damage to the system due to suction of brine water into the system. There is no allegation and no proof during the long period that preceded the institution of the suit as to what actually were the defects which could not be repaired or which made the trawlers different from what the parties had agreed to take. We have to bear this in the background of the fact that the plaintiff charterer was used to using trawlers and they had technical advice and inspection before. Indeed in this background when there was nothing else in view of the statement in the annual report of the charterer company for the year ended 31st March, 1978 which specifically referred to 'two Mexican Trawlers' and that they had certain initial defects and these had been overcome, in our opinion, the learned Judge was not wrong in coming to the conclusion that the mistake as pleaded as to quality of the goods was not a mistake of such a nature as to make the thing contracted for something different. As was observed by Lord Atkin in the case of Bell v. Lever Bros., (1932 AC 161) (supra) that though mistake as to quality of the thing contracted for raised difficult question, the mistake would not affect the assent of the parties unless it was a mistake of both the parties and was as to the existence of some quality which made the thing without the quality essentially different from the thing as it was believed to be. In this case confining ourselves even to the pleadings specially the averments made in paragraphs 14 and 15 in conjunction with the other paragraphs and the fact that that prohibitive cost which should have been normally borne by the owner such defect could be cured, in our opinion, the learned Judge was not in error in holding that there was no case of mutual mistake of such a type as to quality of thing contracted for which could have avoided the parent contract which contained in the arbitration clause. It is true that in doing so the learned Judge has incidentally referred to certain conduct of the parties and perhaps it is also true that in an application under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, the court should confine itself to the pleadings, but the pleadings must be construed in the background of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case as apparent from the pleadings, admitted documents and admitted conduct of the parties. Having viewed from that point of view in the light of the principles as referred to in the several decisions and authorities which we have set out hereinbefore in our opinion the learned Judge was not in error in holding that there was no mutual mistake whereby the contract could be avoided. If that is so, then apart from the question of illegality, which we would presently deal with, the other points raised were disputes under the contract or claims under the contract and as such arbitrable. In this connection the pleadings indicated that the plaintiff itself has proceeded on an alternative basis, that the plaintiff has suffered damages for the defects in the machinery and that goes to show that the matters agitated by the plaintiff were matters under the contract and not about the matters as to the existence of the contract. It was submitted that the plaintiff had pleaded certain latent defects and the plaintiff had also pleaded that the plaintiff proceeded on certain basis and as such the plaintiff should be given an opportunity at the trial of the suit to prove the allegations made in this respect and these allegations should not have been summarily rejected. It is true that the learned Judge at places has used language to indicate that the case of the plaintiff was untrue. It may not have been quite appropriate to do so because whether there were such defects which entitled the plaintiff to claim damages or compensation from the owner for defective supply or for the defects in the trawlers, would be matter which should have been best left to the arbit-trators and should not have been prejudged but for our present purpose we must hold that the averments made in the pleadings in the background of the facts and circumstances of the case and the admitted documents do not make out a case of such a mutual mistake as to the quality of the thing contracted for which affected the assent of the parties. If that is so, then it could not be said that even if these defects were there, these defects would not make the contract a contract for a thing for which the parties did not bargain. As there is no case of fraudulent misrepresentation there is no scope of any allegation of mutual mistake or mistake of the plaintiff. The case is not a case for breach of warranty. In that view of the matter, we are of the opinion that the learned Judge was right in so far as he held that the matters were arbitrable apart from the question of illegality of the contract. Before we conclude, we have to observe that the learned advocate for the owner Mr. Bhabra has submitted before the learned trial Judge that the events pleaded in paragraph 15 of the plaint referred to mistake on account of future events. It was submitted that this was a wrong reading upon which the learned Judge proceeded because what was pleaded was that latent defects were made patent or became apparent in subsequent times. It was not a case of mistake as to future events. It is possible that a latent defect might become apparent subsequently and in such a case it could not be said that it was a pleading of mistake as to future events. But in this case we need not proceed on that basis. We have taken the pleadings in the totality and have considered the basis of the pleadings in paragraphs 14 and 15 of the plaint and we are of the opinion that there was no case of any pleading of mutual mistake of such a nature as to quality which could legitimately be said to have affected the assent of the parties to the formation of the contract.

8. The next aspect of the matter that was urged before us and urged before the learned trial Judge that the contract was illegal in view of the provisions of the conditions of licence as contained in Appendix 31 of the Hand Book referred to. Now Clause 5 of Appendix 31 deals with the conditions regarding use and disposal we have set out hereinbefore.

Now, in this case the learned trial Judge has held that chartering out of a vessel was not contemplated in the expression 'sold or disposed or utilised'. Therefore, Appendix 31 would not be applicable and in view of Clause 8 he was further of the opinion that it applied to raw materials used for the manufacturing purpose and also for transfer, mortgage and sale etc, of the plants and machinery. It is not necessary in the facts of this case for our purpose to decide this controversy. By letter dated 17th of August, 1977 as appearing at page 34 issued by the controller such permission for chartering out of the vessel was indeed given. We have set out the conditions. It was submitted that grant of such permission was illegal and in any case the subsequent modification of the agreement as pleaded here was without permission. We are unable to agree. It is significant in this aspect to bear in mind that condition No. 1 of the Code of Export Conditions attached to the import licence of the owner in the instant case which we have set out hereinbefore, imposes certain obligations and those obligations had been fulfilled by the owner in this case. One of the obligations imposed was that the proprietor of the licensee should give a personal guarantee to the effect that the value of the export of fish and fish products during the period of 7 years from the date of acquisition of the trawlers would not be less than Rs. 47,10,000/-. The owner before the date of entering in the charterparty agreement had already fulfilled that obligation. He had exported goods not less than Rs. 47,10,000/-. The conditions, further, imposed that the licensee should become a member of the marine products of the export council and there should be certain other obligations. Now, these obligations had been fulfilled, on the other hand, reliance was placed on these conditions on behalf of the appellant to highlight the submission that these obligations along with the other conditions which we have set out hereinbefore indicated that the permission to import these trawlers and the licence to import the trawlers was granted for actual user by the licensee and not for hiring out and/or chartering out vessels in the manner purported to be done. In other words, the licence was actual user's licence. We are unable to accept. The very conditions which indicated that it could not be dealt in such manner except without the permission of the Chief Controller and prohibition of certain sale or transfer in certain contingencies indicated that there was no absolute bar as such but it could be only done with the permission. Admittedly in this case in the original charterparty agreement there was permission by the letter or communication dated 17th of August, 1977 and the subsequent modification in our opinion, were not such which affected in view of the fact that the owner of the license had fulfilled the obligations imposed upon him in the manner indicated, before the entering into the agreement and therefore there has been no non-compliance with the provisions of the Control Act. We are, therefore, unable to agree with the appellant that in the charterparty agreement or the modification thereof there was such illegality which made the contract void. The finding of the learned Judge that the contract was not illegal as such therefore meets with our concurrence.

9. In aid of the proposition that the contract was illegal our attention was drawn to the provisions of Import and Export Control Act, 1947 after its amendment as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court which made breach of the condition of licence leviable to penalty and as such the contract in this case according to the appellant is illegal. Our attention was in this connection drawn to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Mannalal v. Kedar Nath, AIR 1977 SC 536 where the Chief Justice Ray observed that negative, prohibitory and exclusive words were indicated of the legislative intent when the statute was mandatory. Anything done in breach of it would therefore, it was submitted be illegal. Though we respectfully agree with the principle enunciated but in the facts and circumstances of the case this principle will have no application. Several other authorities were referred to about the illegality of the contract by the learned trial Judge. In the view we have taken it is not necessary to deal with those authorities.

10. Another aspect argued before us which was not argued before the learned trial Judge was that even if we hold that the matters which are the subject matter of this suit are arbitrable we should exercise our discretion against staying the suit, because it was submitted, that if the parties were now relegated to arbitration the claim before the arbitrators might now become barred by laws of limitation. In this connection our attention was drawn to the provisions of sub-sec. (3) of S. 37 of the Arbitration Act and it was contended that an arbitration should be deemed to have commenced when one party to the arbitration agreement served on the other party a notice requiring the appointment of an arbitrator or where the arbitration agreement provided that the reference should be to the person named or designated in the agreement requiring that the difference would be submitted to the persons so named or designated. Therefore, on the one hand it was urged that the claim would become barred by limitation if the matters were now referred to arbitration and on the other hand it was submitted that it would not be so barred. In order to appreciate this controversy it would be necessary to bear in mind certain dates. The alleged discovery of mistake upon the basis of which or the cause of action upon the basis of which this suit had been filed is alleged to have arisen in August, 1978. The suit in question was filed in Sept. 1978. After filing of the suit the application under S. 34 was filed and a stay of the proceedings of the suit was granted pending the disposal of the said application. The judgment of the learned trial Judge granting the stay and allowing the application under S. 34 was delivered on the 11th of February, 1981. Thereupon, an application was moved in the Division Bench for grant of interim stay of the said order and the stay had continued until disposal of this appeal. The appeal was filed on the 27th of March, 1981. On behalf of the respondent it was contended that in any event there was no question of the arbitration proceedings being barred in this case because there was a stay and on this ground under apart from Section 14 of the Limitation Act, the principle of which would be applicable to the proceedings in arbitration, no question of limitation would arise, it was, further, contended that in any event even up to the date of the judgment of the learned trial Judge, according to the plaintiff/appellant the claim in the arbitration proceedings had not become barred. If thereafter, they chose to proceed in this suit and not referred their claim to arbitration then it was the plaintiff's choice and it would not be fair, according to the respondent, to seek the discretion in their favour on that ground. The main question which has to be borne in mind on this aspect is whether the claim would become barred by limitation or not. In this connection our attention was drawn to some of the decisions which have dealt with this question and it would be necessary to refer to the same. In the case of Union of India v. P. K. Agarwalla (1971) 75 Cal WN 767 the Division Bench of this Court consisting of Mr. Justice Sankar Prasad Mitra, as the learned Chief Justice then was, and Mr. Justice Sisir Kumar Mukerjee had occasion to consider this question. There the contract contained an arbitration agreement. It was held by the Division Bench that in so far as claim was ex-contractu the claim was clearly within the ambit of the arbitration clause. In so far as claim under S. 70 of the Contract Act, the transactions out of which the claim arose were entered into by reason of the contract and were referable to the contract. In any event there was sufficiently close connection in that case, according to the Division Bench, between the claims under S. 70 of the Contract Act and the transactions covered by the contract to bring the claim within the arbitration clause. Merely by pleading that the claim arose under the quantum meruit or under S. 70 of the Contract Act, a party could not avoid arbitration. The other question which the Court dealt with we are not concerned in this case and we need not refer to this aspect. It was, further, held by the Division Bench that S. 14 of the Limitation Act was applicable to arbitration. In the context of the arbitration proceedings initiated after a suit had been stayed under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act, the section should be construed to mean that in computing the period of limitation in proceedings before an arbitrator the time during which the plaintiff had been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding whether in a court of first instance or in a court of appeal against the defendant should be excluded, where the proceeding was founded upon the same cause of action and was prosecuted in good faith in a court which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of like nature was unable to entertain. It was, further observed that readiness and willingness to make an application was by itself not evidence of readiness and willingness to do all things necessary for the proper conduct of the arbitration, far less of the readiness and willingness to do so at the time when the proceedings commenced. To hold that whenever an application was made under S. 34 the Court might presume that the defendant was ready and willing to do all things necessary to the conduct of arbitration at the time when the proceedings commenced, an inference which would make the provisions of S. 34 superfluous and meaningless. Mr. Justice Mukherjea expressed the view that a suit which was stayed under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act was a suit which the Court was unable to entertain not from defect of jurisdiction but from 'a cause of like nature'. The jurisdiction of the Court was not ousted by arbitration agreement but the Court by reason of the arbitration agreement declined to exercise jurisdiction. If Section 14 of the Limitation Act applied to arbitration the question whether a claim before the arbitrator was barred or was likely to be barred could not be a relevant consideration in exercising discretion under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act, 1940. In a proper case time spent in prosecuting the suit would be excluded and it would be for the arbitrator to decide whether such time ought to be excluded under S. 14 of the Limitation Act just as would be for the arbitrator to decide whether the claim was barred by limitation. A party before the arbitrator was therefore placed in the same position as regards the defence of limitation as he would be before a court of law. Mr. Justice Sankar Prasad Mitra, as His Lordship then was, did not quite express any opinion on this aspect of the matter but observed that the possibility of a claim being barred by limitation before an arbitrator, was not ordinarily a relevant consideration in exercising the discretion of the court under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act specially in view of S. 37 (1) of the Act but there may be cases in which the Court might have to consider this factor as well and take that into consideration. Mr. Justice S. K. Mukherjea referred to the decision of Mr. Justice A. N. Sen as His Lordship then was in the case of Shalimar Paints Ltd. v. Omprakash, AIR 1967 Cal 372. The learned Judge after relying on certain precedents had expressed the view that it could not be contended that it would be a principle of law, that whenever there was any possibility of the claim being barred the Court should refuse to exercise its discretion to stay the suit, but the possibility of a claim being barred if referred to arbitration on stay of the suit was a relevant and material consideration in exercising the discretion conferred on the Court under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act. Whether such possibility amounted to a sufficient reason for refusing to stay the suit was a question depending upon the facts of each case. Upon these, Mr. Justice S. P. Mitra as His Lordship then was construed the two decisions of the Judicial Committee in the case of Ramduitt Ramkissen v. E. D. Sassoon & Co., AIR 1929 PC 103 and came to the conclusion that S. 14 of the Limitation Act was applicable to arbitration and expressed his view. Thereafter Mr. Justice S. P. Mitra expressed his view in the manner indicated before. The question again cropped up before this Court in the case of Steel Plant Pvt. Ltd. v. Swastika Alloy Steel Ltd., AIR 1978 Cal 386. There the Division Bench consisting of Chief Justice Sankar Prasad Mitra and Mr. Justice Sudhamay Basu expressed the view that the principle regarding grant of stay of proceedings was that without actually taking a step in the proceedings a party wanting a stay had to apply promptly and if he did not that was a ground on which discretion to grant the stay would be exercised against him. The Court also expressed the view that the Court was not obliged to grant stay merely because the parties agreed to submit their disputes under a contract to arbitration. Equitable consideration such as the possibility of claim being barred by limitation might certainly weigh with the Court in exercising the discretion. Grant of stay was entirely a matter of discretion which might be exercised judicially. No inflexible rules could be laid down to govern exercise of such discretion. At the same time when the discretion had been so exercised it should not be readily interfered with. The fact that the appellate Court would have taken a different view would not by itself justify the appellate court to interfere with the discretion of the trial court. The Court also observed that the party desiring stay of proceedings must show that he was and still is ready and willing to do everything necessary for the conduct of the arbitration since the dispute arose and that he should have applied for stay with all promptitude. It is true that mere delay in proceeding with the arbitration was not necessarily a bar to a stay being granted on the application of a party guilty of delay but it could not be said that the question of delay could not be a consideration for exercise of discretion in the matter of stay. But if the applicant seeking stay of proceedings was found to be not ready and willing to submit the dispute to arbitration and heavy amount was involved in the dispute, the stay of suit was rightly rejected. The Court considered the judgment of the Division Bench in the case to which we have just referred. Mr. Justice Sudhamay Basu referred to the observation of Mr. Justice S. K. Mukherjea that the possibility of the claim being barred by limitation was not a relevant consideration. Mr. Justice Basu in that case had agreed with the views expressed by Chief Justice Chagla in the case of Purushottam Das v. Impex (India) Ltd. reported in AIR 1954 Bom 309. Mr. Justice Sudhamay Basu was of the view that the observations of Mr. Justice Mukherjea were obiter and were not shared by the other learned Judge of the Division Bench. Mr. Justice Basu further held that Mr. Justice Mukherjea should not be construed to have expressed any view which is a departure from law as laid down in several decisions to which the learned Judge referred. Apparently Chief Justice S. P. Mitra agreed with this view.

11. In this connection, our attention was also drawn to certain observations of the Full Bench of the Lahore High Court in the case of Bhai Jai Kishen Singh v. Peoples Bank of Northern India, AIR 1944 Lah 136 where the insolvency petition by the petitioner was dismissed on the ground that the act of insolvency alleged to have been committed by the debtor did not fall within S. 6 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Therefore, the time in prosecuting the petition, according to the Court, could not be excluded in computing the period of limitation for a subsequent execution petition by the creditor against the debtor firstly because the reliefs in the insolvency petition and the execution application could not be said to be the same and secondly because the insolvency petition could not be said to have been dismissed by the insolvency Court as a result of its inability to entertain for "defect of jurisdiction or any other cause of a like nature". The Full Bench of the Lahore High Court, further, observed that the words "or other cause of like nature" in S. 14 of the Limitation Act must be read so as to convey the possibility of something ejusdem generis or analogous with the preceding words relating to the defect of jurisdiction. If these words were read along with the expression "is unable to entertain" they would denote that the defect must be of such character so as to make it impossible for a Court to entertain the suit or application either in its inception or at all events as to prevent it from 'deciding it on merit. It was not possible to give an exhaustive list of defects that these words might be taken to cover. But they were such as have got to be decided before the merits of the case could be gone into and they did not necessitate an examination of the merits of the case which might fall within the purview of these words. If on the other hand, the Court had to go into the merits before the case can be dismissed the defect would not come within the ambit of these words. Illustrations of such defects which were covered by the words "or other cause of like nature" in S. 14 might be found in cases where a suit had failed because it was brought without proper leave or because no notice under S. 80 of the Civil P. C. was given or because of non-production of the Collector's certificate required by S. 6 of the Pension Act. These would go to show that although the Court had jurisdiction to decide them, it was unable to entertain them on account of technical defect and it was not possible for the Court to proceed and consider it on their merits. It would follow that if a plaint or a petition did not disclose cause of action it would have to be rejected but the time spent in its prosecution could not be excluded under S. 14. Thus if on the facts the relief asked for by a plaintiff or a petitioner was found by the Courts to have been misconceived either because it was not warranted by the facts mentioned therein or because the facts stated in the plaint or the petition did not disclose a good and complete cause of action and the plaint or petition was consequently dismissed or rejected, the provisions contained in

S. 14 could not be of any help. Our attention was also drawn to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of S. T. Commissioner, U. P. v. Parson Tools & Plants, Kanpur, AIR 1975 SC 1039 where in the context of a particular statute viz., Sales Tax Act which provided for a particular period of limitation for certain proceedings, and as it was not provided, according to the Supreme Court, that the principles of Section 14 of Limitation Act would be applicable to those Tribunals these principles of these provisions would not be applicable. The Supreme Court further observed that if the legislature in a special statute prescribed a certain period of limitation for filing a particular application thereunder and provided in clear terms that such period on sufficient cause being shown, might be extended to the maximum only up to a specified time limit and no further, then the tribunal concerned had no jurisdiction to treat within the period of limitation an application filed before it beyond such maximum time limit specified in the statute by excluding the time spent in prosecuting in good faith and with due diligence any prior proceeding on the analogy of S. 14 (2) of the Limitation Act. Where the legislature clearly declared its intent in the scheme and language of a statute, it was the duty of the Court to give effect to the same without scanning its wisdom or policy and without engrafting, adding or implying anything which was not congenial to or consistent with such expressed intent of the law-giver, more so if the statute was a taxing statute. Reliance was also placed on certain observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Gurdit Singh v. Munsha Singh, AIR 1977 SC 640 where the Supreme Court after setting out the terms of S. 14 observed at page 648 as follows:—

"16. It would be noticed that three important conditions have to be satisfied before the section can be pressed into service. These three conditions are — (1) that the plaintiff must have prosecuted the earlier civil proceedings with due diligence; (2) the former proceeding must have been prosecuted in good faith in a court which from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature was unable to entertain it and (3) the earlier proceeding and the later proceeding must be based on the same cause of action,

17. Now the words "or other cause of a like nature" which follow the words "defect of jurisdiction" in the above quoted provision are very important. Their scope has to be determined according to the rule of ejusdem generis. According to that rule, they take their colour from the preceding words "defect of jurisdiction" which means that the defect must have been of an analogous character barring the court from entertaining the previous suit. A Full Bench of the Lahore High court consisting of Harries C. J., Abdur Rahman, J. and Mahajan, J. (as he then was) expressed a similar view in Bhai Jai Kishan Singh v. People Bank of Northern India, (AIR 1944 Lah 136) (FB) (supra).

18. In the instant cases, it is not denied by the plaintiffs that the Court which tried the previous suits was not precluded from entertaining them because of any defect of jurisdiction. We have, therefore, only to see whether the said court was unable to entertain the former suits on account of any defect of an analogous character. Even a most liberal approach to the question does not impel us to hold that the court trying the earlier suits was unable to entertain them on any ground analogous to the defect of jurisdiction. In Dwarkanath v. Atul Chandra, ILR 46 Cal 870 : (AIR 1919 Cal 381) where the court trying the previous suit had refused to entertain a claim for rent because it was premature, it was held that in a subsequent suit for the aforesaid rent, the plaintiff could not rely upon the provisions of S. 14 (1) of the Limitation Act and say that the time did not run against him while those proceedings were being prosecuted. Again in Pattabhiramayya v. Narayan Rao, (AIR 1960 Andh Pra 625) it was held that the fact that the previous suit was dismissed as the plaintiff had no cause of action was not a ground which was covered by Section 14 (1). Thus it could not be held that the court which tried the previous suits but eventually threw them out as premature suffered from inability or incapacity to entertain the suits on the ground of lack of jurisdiction or any other defect of the like character. Accordingly the exclusion of the period from Dec. 18, 1945 to Aug. 3, 1951 sought by the appellants cannot be legitimately allowed to them while computing the period of limitation."

12. In this case the parties could not go on with the suit because in appropriate cases under the well established legal principles the Courts bind the parties to their bargain when they have made lawful agreement for arbitration. They are not allowed to proceed in a Court of law. Therefore, in a sense they have no jurisdiction to proceed. So taking a proper view of the provision of the section on the basis of ejusdem generis, the suit did not suffer from lack of jurisdiction as such but is not competent to be proceeded because of reasons analogous to that. In our opinion, therefore, provision of S. 14 of the Limitation Act would be attracted and we find in this case that there already has been reference to the arbitration before any period of limitation in terms of the arbitration agreement though that reference was made by the respondent namely, the owner of the trawlers. The preference of the claims by the parties or the concurrence or application to that appointment or application to the Court or preference of counter claim by the present appellant could not thereafter take place because of the order of injunction issued by this Court. That order of injunction still continues. We must however make a note of the statement made by Mr. Bhabra on behalf of the respondent that his client would not take the plea of limitation before the arbitrators in the arbitration proceedings. That statement of the respondent No. 1 is hereby recorded. In that view of the matter, in our opinion, in the facts and in the circumstances of the case and in view of the principles embodied in S. 14 of the Limitation Act there is no ground for not exercising our discretion in favour of the respondent under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act on the plea that claim of the appellant might now become barred before the arbitration proceedings. Whether however, in the arbitration the appellant will succeed on this point would depend upon what view the arbitrator or the arbitrators would take about the conduct of the appellant. We however make it quite clear that we are not expressing our concurrence in any observations made by the learned trial Judge which might indicate that in filing this suit or in prosecuting the same up to this stage the appellant was not bona fide or had acted improperly or not diligently.

13. For the reasons aforesaid we do not find any ground for not exercising the discretion granting the stay under S. 34 of the Arbitration Act which the learned Judge thought it proper and has exercised his discretion on proper grounds.

14. In the premises, this appeal fails and is accordingly dismissed. The costs of this appeal will be cost in the arbitration proceedings.

15. Interim order that was then during the pendency of the appeal will continue for a fortnight.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

ANIL K. SEN AND S. N. SANYAL, JJ.

Union of India, Petitioner v. M/s. Manton Company Ltd., Opposite Party.

Civil Order No. 158 of 1982, D/- 28-5-1982.

(A) Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act (40 of 1971), S. 2 (2) (g) — Unauthorised occupation of public premises — Person in occupation of premises, property of Union of India, from before Union became owner thereof by purchase — Termination of occupant's tenancy by notice to quit — He becomes person in unauthorised occupation of premises. (Para 9)

(B) Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act (40 of 1971), Ss. 2 (2) (g) and 4 (1) — Eviction proceedings under S. 4 (1) — Challenge to proceedings — High Court upholding initiation of proceedings and remanding case for decision on merits — Decision in another proceeding as to another occupant in same houses as being not in unauthorised occupation — Issue in instant proceeding as to nature of occupation not foreclosed.

Where a person started a writ proceeding challenging the proceeding as initiated on a show cause notice under S. 4 (1) on the ground that he was in unauthorised occupation and the High Court upholding the initiation of such proceeding directed its adjudication on its merits, that order made inter partes would be equally binding upon the parties to that writ proceeding and only because in a separate proceeding not inter partes the High Court had upheld the claim of a third party who was in occupation of another part of the same house to be a person not in unauthorised occupation, that decision could not override the express directions contained in the decision inter partes. Consequently, it could not be urged that the issue as to whether the party challenging the proceeding was in unauthorised occupation, was foreclosed. (Para 14)

(C) Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act (40 of 1971), S. 4 (1) — Show cause notice under — Inadvertent error therein as to date of determination of tenancy — Determination of tenancy is not vitiated.

Where in the show cause notice under S. 4 (1) it was expressly and clearly stated that the tenancy in favour of the occupant in respect of the public premises was duly determined on the expiry of the last day of May 1964 by a notice dated 22-4-1964 issued on behalf of the President of India and it was further stated that the occupant was directed to quit and vacate the public premises by the end of May 1964 but he having failed and neglected to do so became a person in authorised occupation of the public premises, an unfortunate mis-print towards the end in the show-cause notice that "As aforesaid your tenancy stands determined with effect from 1-9-1963" would not vitiate either notice to quit or the proceedings. The notice must be read as a whole and as matter of fact the very sentence quoted hereinbefore begins with the words "as aforesaid" thereby referring to what had been said earlier. What had been said earlier states very clearly that the occupant became a person in unauthorised occupation on the determination of tenancy in their favour on the expiry of the month of May 1964, when he failed and neglected to deliver vacant possession of the public premises. As such such error in show cause notice would have nothing to do with the validity of the determination of the tenancy and would not either affect the proceeding for eviction under the provisions of the Act. Q. E. Kabir, for Petitioner; Bankim Chandra Dutta, S. P. Roy Chowdhury and Uma Prosad Mukherjee, for Opposite Party.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— This is an application under Art. 227 of the Constitution at the instance of Union of India (hereinafter referred to as the petitioner) and it arises out of a proceeding for eviction under Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act of 1971).

2. On September 19, 1963, the petitioner purchased premises Nos. 13, 13/1, 13/2 and 13/3, Old Court House Street and Nos. 1, 2 and 2/1, Mangoe Lane, Calcutta. The opposite party herein M/s. Manton Company Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as the opposite party) who was a tenant in occupation of premises Nos. 1, 2 and 2/1, Mangoe Lane and portions of premises Nos. 13, 13/1, 13/2 and 13/3, Old Court House Street, since before such purchase by the petitioner became a tenant under the petitioner on attornment.

3. By a notice to quit dated April 22, 1964, the petitioner determined the tenancy in favour of the opposite party with the expiry of the month of May 1964 and called upon the opposite party to quit, vacate and deliver peaceful possession of the premises in their occupation. The opposite party having failed to comply with the notice, the petitioner on June 10, 1964, started a proceeding for eviction under the provisions of Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1958. The opposite party challenged the said proceeding in a writ petition which ultimately succeeded when that Act of 1958 was struck down on the ground that its provisions were violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution. It was so held on the authority of the Supreme Court decision in the case of Northern India Caterer v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1581. The judgment of this court is reported in AIR 1968 Cal 560.

4. In the meantime, the Act of 1958 was amended by Act XXXIII of 1968 for the purpose of removing the offending elements in that Act. After such amendment a fresh proceeding for eviction was initiated against the opposite party on June 25, 1970, by issue of a fresh show cause notice under S. 4 (1) of the Act of 1958 so amended. The Act of 1958 having been repealed thereafter by the said Act of 1971 (that is, Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971) the proceeding so initiated was continued as one initiated under the said Act of 1971 in view of the provision of S. 20 of the said Act of 1971.

5. The validity of such a proceeding was challenged again by the opposite party in a writ petition in this court which was registered as C. R. 4627 (W) of 1970 on several grounds including the ground that the Act is ultra vires the Constitution, that the proceeding as initiated is without jurisdiction and that the opposite party not being in unauthorised occupation no proceeding under the provisions of the said Act of 1971, could have been validly initiated against them. That Rule came up for hearing before a learned single Judge of this court who by his order dated July 31, 1973, discharged the Rule by upholding the validity of the Act and the initiation of the proceeding thereunder relying primarily upon the later Supreme Court decision in the case of Hari Singh v. Military Estates Officer, Delhi, AIR 1972 SC 2205. The learned single Judge having held that the Estates Officer having jurisdiction to initiate the proceeding under S. 5 (1) of the said Act of 1971, left the question whether the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation or not to be decided by the Estates Officer in the proceeding so initiated. The opposite party preferred an appeal being F. M. A. 756 of 1973 under clause 15 of the Letters Patent but that appeal having failed, the decision of the learned single Judge was affirmed on Sept. 10, 1975. The judgment in the appeal is reported in AIR 1976 Cal 333.

6. After all these proceedings in this court when the interim injunctions were vacated and the proceeding initiated under the provisions of the said Act of 1971 was remanded for disposal on its merits, the Estates Officer served due notices upon the opposite party. They, however, did not appear and on the materials produced by the petitioner the Estates Officer by his order dated Mar. 18, 1976, held the opposite party to be in unauthorised occupation of the disputed premises and directed their eviction under S. 5 (1) of the said Act of 1971. The opposite party preferred an appeal under Sec. 9 of the said Act of 1971 against that order before the learned Chief Judge, City Civil Court, Calcutta, which was Miscellaneous Case No. 1 of 1976. The learned Chief Judge has allowed the said appeal and has set aside the order of eviction passed by the Estates Officer by an order dated Sept. 10, 1981. Relying upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Rajkumar Divendar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 66 and on an unreported Bench decision of this court in the case of Rajput Singh v. Union of India (F. M. A. 760 of 1973 disposed of on 10-8-1981), the learned Chief Judge held that since the opposite party was a tenant in occupation of the disputed premises from before it became public premises by purchase by Union of India, their occupation of the disputed premises does not come within the mischief of the said Act of 1971, and as such, no proceeding thereunder as initiated could have been validly initiated. According to the learned Chief Judge if the opposite party is to be evicted it must be so done by a suit and not by a proceeding under the provisions of the said Act of 1971. The learned Chief Judge incidentally further held that the order of the Estates Officer is not based on any finding that the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation and he further held that when the show cause notice issued on June 25, 1970, purported to terminate the tenancy since Sept. 1, 1963, that is even prior to the purchase by Union of India there could be no valid determination of the tenancy. The order of the Estates Officer having been thus set aside, the petitioner has now moved this court with an application under Article 227 of the Constitution referred to hereinbefore.

7. Mr. Kabir appearing in support of this application has substantially raised two points. In the first place it has been contended by Mr. Kabir that this court in the writ proceeding having upheld the validity of the proceeding as initiated on the show cause notice under S. 4 (1) of the said Act of 1971, it was not open to the learned Chief Judge to hold that no proceeding under the said Act of 1971 could have been validly initiated on such ground as has been assigned by the learned Chief Judge. Secondly it has been contended by Mr. Kabir that even after the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Jain Ink Manufacturing Company v. L. I. C. of India, AIR 1981 SC 670 in which the Supreme Court had explained and distinguished its earlier decision in the case of Rajkumar Divendar Singh (supra), the learned Chief Judge could not have held that only because the opposite party was a pre-existing tenant in occupation, they cannot be in unauthorised occupation even though the authority for the occupation in their favour had been duly determined by a notice to quit. Mr. Kabir has further contended that the Estates Officer recorded his finding that the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation in the very first part of the order itself which has been overlooked by the learned Chief Judge and he has further contended that read as a whole the notice establishes clearly that the tenancy was determined with the expiry of May 1964, and the date September 1, 1963, in the last portion of the notice is clearly and apparently a misprint which does neither affect the notice nor render it ambiguous in any manner.

8. All the points raised by Mr. Kabir have been contested by Mr. Dutt who appears to support the order impugned on behalf of the opposite party. Strong reliance is placed by Mr. Dutt on the unreported Bench decision of this court in F.M.A. 760 of 1973 referred to and relied on by the learned Chief Judge in contending that even if erroneous the said decision forecloses the material issue as to whether the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation of the disputed premises or not. According to Mr. Dutt in that decision when this court had held a sub-tenant under the present opposite party to be a person not in unauthorised occupation notwithstanding the very same notice to quit, it must necessarily be held that the superior interest of the tenant, namely, the present opposite party cannot be that of an unauthorised occupant. According to Mr. Dutt in the absence of any independent ground a sub-tenant under a tenant who had become a person in unauthorised occupation by determination of the tenancy in his favour cannot be held to be otherwise. Mr. Dutt, however, felt much difficulty in supporting the decision of this court in the said F.M.A. 760 of 1973 and in particular the reasons given therein in support of the conclusion which was obviously rendered in total oversight of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Jain Ink Manufacturing Company (supra). According to Mr. Dutt, the petitioner not having challenged the said decision in any further appeal is now bound thereby irrespective of whether it is otherwise a correct decision or not. Mr. Dutt has next contended that the issue as to whether the opposite party is a person in unauthorised occupation or not having been left open in the writ proceeding, the decision therein based on other grounds could not have closed the issue either before the Estates Officer or before the learned Chief Judge as contended by Mr. Kabir. Lastly, it has been contended by Mr. Dutt that the notice to quit having been found to be invalid, the learned Chief Judge was right in setting aside the order of eviction passed under Sec. 5 (1) of the said Act of 1971.

9. Before we proceed to consider the other points raised by the counsel for the respective parties, let us consider how far the learned Chief Judge is correct in his view that the opposite party having come to occupy the disputed premises before the said premises were purchased by the petitioner, they cannot be said to be in unauthorised occupation thereof notwithstanding the subsequent determination of the authority for the occupation by the notice to quit. We think this question is no longer res integra in view of the Supreme Court decision in the case of Jain Ink Manufacturing Company (AIR 1981 SC 670) (supra). It is rather unfortunate that the attention of the learned Chief Judge as also that of the learned Judges of this Court who decided F.M.A. 760 of 1973 was not drawn to the said decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Jain Ink Manufacturing Company (supra). In this decision the Supreme Court was interpreting the provisions of the said Act of 1971 which is now under consideration and the Supreme Court clearly explained and distinguished their own observations in the case of Rajkumar Divendar Singh (AIR 1973 SC 66) (supra) wherein the Act under consideration was a different Act. It was pointed out that those observations were made having regard to the particular terms of the Punjab Act thereunder consideration which made entry into possession in the public premises unauthorised if it was so made otherwise than under and in pursuance of any allotment, lease or grant. Whereas in the Act now under consideration a person who occupies any public premises without any authority for such occupation or even continues to occupy the same after such authority had been determined is said to be in unauthorised occupation in view of the definition clause S. 2 (2) (g) of the said Act of 1971. Thus there exists material difference between the provisions of the two Acts. Though the attention of the learned Chief Judge was drawn to such difference, he failed to appreciate the same and wholly misread the statute in observing that there is no material difference between these two statutes. As a matter of fact dealing with the particular statute the Supreme Court laid down that what is germane for the purpose of interpretation of S. 2 (2) (g) of the said Act of 1971 is whether or not the person concerned was in occupation of the public premises when the said Act came into force irrespective of how and when he came to occupy the same. Thus, we hold that the principal ground on which the learned Chief Judge reversed the decision of the Estates Officer is clearly misconceived and is based upon misreading of the material provision of the said Act of 1971. Such a decision, therefore, can hardly be sustained on such a ground.

10. Next we proceed to consider the other points raised before us. While Mr. Kabir relies upon the previous decision inter partes in the writ proceeding and contends that in view of such a decision, it was no longer open to the opposite party to claim that the impugned proceeding based on show cause notice under S. 4 (1) of the said Act was not validly initiated, Mr. Dutt contests such an objection and in his turn contends that rightly or wrongly this court in F.M.A. 760 of 1973 having held the sub-tenant not to be a person in unauthorised occupation, the tenant/opposite party can no longer be claimed to be so — the petitioner being still bound by that decision. We propose to consider these two contentions separately.

11. In the writ petition the opposite party challenged initiation of the proceeding by issue of a notice under Section 4 (1) of the said Act of 1971. Though the principal ground of attack was that the Act was ultra vires the Constitution, other grounds disputing the jurisdiction of the Estates Officer to initiate such a proceeding were also raised. At the hearing, as it now appears, the only point urged was with regard to the constitutional validity of the Act. That point having been decided against the opposite party, this court left the issue, as to whether the opposite party was in unauthorised occupation or not, to be decided in the proceeding under the Act. According to Mr. Kabir what was left to be so decided was whether there had been a valid determination of the authority to occupy. The point that was raised before the learned Chief Judge, namely, under the definition clause the opposite party would not be a person in unauthorised occupation because they never came into occupation after the premises became public premises by purchase by the petitioner could have been taken in the writ petition and if so taken the notice under S. 4 (1) of the said Act of 1971 would have been set aside for reasons as now assigned by the learned Chief Judge. Even if such a point was not raised, according to Mr. Kabir, such a point must be deemed to have been concluded constructively by the decision in the writ petition. We have carefully considered this point of Mr. Kabir and in our view there may be some substance in such a contention but when for reasons already given we have held that there is no substance in the objection that the opposite party having come to occupy the premises prior to the same becoming public premises cannot be considered to be a person in unauthorised occupation within the meaning of the definition clause, the further point with regard to foreclosing of such an issue raised by Mr. Kabir becomes academic.

12. So far as the point raised by Mr. Dutt is concerned, it appears to us that it rests upon an inadvertent recital of fact in the judgment of this Court in F.M.A. 760 of 1973 when it was stated therein that the appellant in that appeal, Rajput Singh was a sub-tenant under the present opposite party. We called for the original records of that proceeding and it appears to us that in the writ petition moved by Rajput Singh he claimed himself to be a tenant under the vendors of the petitioner and, as such, after the purchase under the petitioner and not under the present opposite party. To quote the first paragraph of the writ petition of the said Rajput Singh he asserted:

"At all material times your petitioner has been in occupation in respect of a portion of premises No. 13, Old Court House Street, Calcutta under respondent No. 1 (Union of India) at a monthly rental of Rs. 300 payable according to English calendar for the purpose of carrying on business there. Originally your petitioner was a tenant under Messrs. Osler Properties Limited, the predecessor-in-interest of the present landlord, the Union of India."

His further case in the writ petition was that while the tenancies of other tenants were determined by notice issued in July 1963, so far as he is concerned, he did not receive any such notice so that there was no determination of his authority to occupy the premises in his occupation.

13. Hence, the basic foundation for the contention of Mr. Dutt is lost because the appellant in that appeal having claimed rights independent of the present opposite party even if he had been adjudged to be a person not in unauthorised occupation, that would not stand in the way of adjudging on merits the issue as to whether the opposite party is in such unauthorised occupation or not, more so when in the decision inter partes this Court directed the Estates Officer to decide that issue.

14. That apart, in the facts and circumstances we are unable to hold that the decision in that case which is not inter partes and which was rendered ex parte against the petitioner as respondent to that appeal would foreclose the issue raised in the present proceeding. It must be remembered that the present opposite party started a writ proceeding challenging the proceeding as initiated on a show cause notice under S. 4 (1) of the said Act of 1971. That application failed up to the appellate stage and this court upholding the initiation of such proceeding directed its adjudication on its merits. Such an order made inter partes is equally binding upon the parties to that writ proceeding and only because in a separate proceeding not inter partes this court had upheld the claim of a third party who is in occupation of another part of the same house to be a person not in unauthorised occupation, that decision cannot override the express directions contained in the decision inter partes.

Moreover, in F. M. A. 760 of 1973, the respondent Union of India had not appeared and the court did not even incidentally go into the question whether the present opposite party was a person in unauthorised occupation or not. An argument built upon an inadvertent observation that the appellant therein was a sub-tenant under the present opposite-party can hardly be supported. Hence, we find no substance in the point raised by Mr. Dutt in this regard.

15. Before we conclude we must deal with the other two reasons assigned by the learned Chief Judge in support of his order. In the first place, he has observed that the Estates Officer had not recorded any finding that the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation of the disputed premises. Having read the order of the Estates Officer carefully we are unable to sustain such a criticism of the said order. As a matter of fact, the order starts on the following terms: "Whereas I, the undersigned, am satisfied for the reasons recorded below that Messrs. Manton & Company Limited are in unauthorised occupation of the premises specified in the Schedule below." Then he records the reasons and in the ultimate paragraph incorporates his order for eviction. Dealing with the reasons he considers the notice dated April 22, 1964, by which the tenancy in favour of the opposite party was determined with the expiry of May 1964. Such being the order of the Estates Officer it would not be fair to say that he had failed to record a finding that the opposite party is in unauthorised occupation of the public premises.

16. So far as the validity of the notice determining the tenancy is concerned, it would appear from the notice on record dated April 22, 1964, that the tenancy was duly determined by such a notice with effect from the expiry of the month of May, 1964. Service of such a notice and sufficiency thereof is not disputed. As a matter of fact, the opposite party did not appear to contest the proceeding either. On the notice to quit itself we find no defect. The defect referred to by the learned Chief Judge is in the show cause notice issued under S. 4 (1) but that defect in our opinion does not affect the proceeding in any manner. In this show cause notice it has been expressly and clearly stated that the tenancy in favour of the opposite party in respect of the disputed premises was duly determined on the expiry of the last day of May 1964 by a notice dated 22-4-64 issued on behalf of the President of India, by the Deputy Director of Estates and Ex-Officio Under Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of W.H. & R., Directorate of Estates, New Delhi. It was further stated that the opposite party was directed to quit and vacate the public premises by the end of May, 1964 but he having failed and neglected to do so became a person in unauthorised occupation of the public premises. Having said all these clearly in the earlier part of the show cause notice there has been an unfortunate mis-print towards the end when it was said "As aforesaid your tenancy stands determined with effect from 1-9-63." It is obvious that instead of writing 1-6-64 there had been an inadvertent error. In our view, however, the notice must be read as a whole and as a matter of fact the very sentence quoted hereinbefore begins with the words 'as aforesaid' thereby referring to what had been said earlier. What had been said earlier we have referred to hereinbefore and there it had been stated very clearly that the opposite party became a person in unauthorised occupation on the determination of tenancy in their favour on the expiry of the month of May, 1964, when he failed and neglected to deliver vacant possession of the public premises. This error in our view has nothing to do with the validity of the determination of the tenancy and does not either affect the proceeding for eviction under the provisions of the said Act of 1971.

17. For reasons aforesaid, we are of the opinion that the order of the learned Chief Judge based primarily upon misconception of the legal position and misinterpretation of the material provision of the statute has resulted in material failure of justice when a proceeding for eviction initiated in the year 1964 culminating in an order for eviction dated March 18, 1976, had been set at naught by the order of the learned Chief Judge impugned in the present application under Article 227 of the Constitution.

18. This application, therefore, succeeds on contest and the impugned appellate order dated Sept. 10, 1981, passed by the learned Chief Judge, City Civil Court, Calcutta, being set aside the order of the Estates Officer dated March 18, 1976, is restored.

19. As prayed for by Mr. Roychowdhary on behalf of opposite party, let operation of this order remain stayed for a period of three months from date,

S. N. SANYAL, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

M. M. DUTT AND MONOJ KUMAR
MUKHERJEE, JJ.

The West Bengal Board of Secondary Education and others, Appellants v. Sm. Basana Rani Ghosh and others, Respondents.

F.M.A.T. Nos. 812 and 955 of 1982, D/- 14-5-1982.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Education — Locus standi — Revision of syllabus for History prescribed for VIIIth Class — Guardians of students can challenge it.

Where syllabus of history for VIIIth Class is changed, the guardians of students cannot be said to have no locus standi to challenge the revised syllabus. The guardians are, admittedly, interested in the education of children. If, according to them, the revised history syllabus for Class VIII is allowed to be taught, it will affect the education of the students of Class VIII so far as the subject of history is concerned. As they are interested in the education of the boys and girls reading in Class VIII, they have locus standi to seek interference of the High Court by a Writ Petition. When the interest of a community is affected by any action of the Government or a statutory authority, any member of the community may complain against that action by the presentation of a Writ Petition in the High Court. It may be that such a member may not be personally affected or his personal right is not infringed. But that will be no ground to throw away the Writ Petition. AIR 1981 SC 298, Foll. (Para 8)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Locus standi — Revision of syllabus of History for VIIIth class — Headmasters' Association sending its representatives on the Syllabus Committee revising syllabus — Writ Petition by Association challenging revised syllabus as violative of fundamental right under Art. 19 (1) (a) and some provisions of W. B. Secondary Education Act — Competent — There being no estoppel against statute, Association cannot be said to be estopped from challenging revised syllabus. (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115). (Para 9)

(C) W. B. Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963), Ss. 19A and 27 (as amended by Amendment Act of 1979) — Revised syllabus of History for VIIIth class framed after amendment of Act — Procedure prescribed under Ss. 19A and 27 not followed — Syllabus is illegal — Cannot be enforced.

The revised history syllabus prescribed for Class VIII is illegal inasmuch as it has been made without following the legal procedure prescribed by amended Ss. 19A and 27. Such a syllabus cannot be prescribed and the educational institutions cannot be directed to follow the syllabus. However, as some schools have prescribed books on history written in accordance with the revised syllabus, and some schools are following books written under the old syllabus, it was directed that so long as the history syllabus for Class VIII is not prepared in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963, as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979, the Board shall not prescribe or insist on the teaching of books written on the basis of the impugned revised syllabus for Class VIII, and it was further directed that the schools which have prescribed the books on history for Class VIII written in accordance with the revised syllabus will be entitled to teach such books for year in question and the schools which are teaching books on history for Class VIII written on the basis of the old syllabus will be entitled to teach the same for the said year. (Paras 10, 14)

Clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A provides that it shall be the duty of the Executive Committee to provide by bye-laws after considering the recommendation, if any, of the Syllabus Committee, the syllabus, the courses of studies to be followed and books to be studied in recognised Institutions and for examinations instituted by the Board in accordance with such regulations as may be made by the Board. Clause (c) of Section 27 (2) casts a duty upon the Board to make regulations in respect of matters referred to in clauses (c), (d), (e) and (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A. Sub-sec. (4) of S. 27, inter alia, provides that no regulation shall be valid unless it is approved by the State Government, and the State Government may, in according such approval, make such additions, alterations and modifications therein as it thinks fit. Thus it is apparent that the Board has to make the regulations, inter alia, in respect of matters referred to in clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A. After the regulations are made by the Board the same will have to be approved by the State Government. So long as the regulations are not approved by the State Government, no steps can be taken by the Board. After the approval of the regulations by the State Government, the Board has to frame bye-laws, prepare syllabus, lay down the courses of studies to be followed, books to be studied in recognised institutions and for holding examinations in accordance with the approved regulations. S. 19A has been introduced in the Act by the Amendment Act of 1979 and the provision of S. 27 has also been amended by the said Amendment Act. As after the amendment of the parent Act, no regulations have been framed by the Board, nor any bye-laws have been prepared and yet, the Board proceeded to set up a Syllabus Advisory Committee which prescribed the syllabus on history for Class VIII, the history syllabus for Class VIII which has been prepared by the Board is violative of the provision of clause (g) of S. 19A read with the provision of clause (c) of S. 27 (2). Further, the revised syllabus cannot be claimed to be valid on the ground that as old regulations have been followed, S. 25 of W. B. General Clauses Act is attracted. That provision is inapplicable as old regulations are inconsistent with the provisions of Ss. 27 (2) (c) and 19A (3) (g) as amended by the Amendment Act of 1979. (Paras 10 and 13)

Somnath Chatterjee, Suproakash Banerjee, Arun Prokash Sirkar and Mrs. Mitali Chakraborty, (in FMAT No. 812 of 1982) and Malay Kr. Basu with A. N. Banerjee (in FMAT No. 955 of 1982), for Appellants; S. K. Acharya, Advocate General with Arun Prokash Chatterjee and Santi Das for State of West Bengal in FMAT Nos. 812 and 955 of 1982; Ajit Kr. Panja with Nirmal Kumar Manna and S. N. Garai, for Respondents in FMAT Nos. 812 and 955 of 1982.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— This appeal has been preferred by the West Bengal

Board of Secondary Education, its President and Secretary against the judgment of a learned single Judge of this Court. By the said judgment, the learned Judge made absolute the Rule Nisi issued on the application of the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

2. The respondents Nos. 1 and 3 are the guardians of two students of Class VIII and the respondent No. 2 is the West Bengal Headmaster Association. In the Writ Petition, the said respondents who were the Writ Petitioners, challenged the validity of the revised history syllabus for Class VIII prescribed by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education. The case of the Writ Petitioners is that in the State of West Bengal, there are two types of schools, namely, one under the Central Board of Education, New Delhi, and the other under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education. The syllabi of the two groups of schools are different, but both of them are in conformity with the syllabus as framed by the National Council of Educational Research and Training, hereinafter referred to as NCERT, an autonomous body under the Ministry of Education, Government of India, New Delhi. The complaint of the Writ Petitioners, in short, is that there has been serious departure in the revised history syllabus for Class VIII from the syllabus that was in force immediately before the revised syllabus. In the revised syllabus, there is no specific mention of any Indian leader—social, religious, literary, scientific or political—whereas names of Marx, Engles, Mao, Sun Yatsen, Chiang, eleven leaders of intellectual renaissance, three leaders of renaissance in Arts, six leaders of renaissance in Science, ten navigators of Europe and three leaders of reformation movement in Europe have been specifically mentioned in the syllabus. The main grievance of the Writ Petitioners is that different phases of freedom movement in India have been covered by only 10 pages out of 135 pages, whereas Bolshevik revolution has occupied 5 pages, Chinese revolution 5 pages and revolution in South East Asia 3 pages. It is alleged that the students who will pass from the Board under the revised syllabus, particularly in history, may be lost in track in Central educational system and may develop separate outlook affecting national integration and national solidarity.

It is contended by them that the revised history syllabus for Class VIII has not been framed in accordance with the provision of S. 27 (2) (c) of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963, as amended by the West Bengal Secondary Education (Amendment) Act, 1979 read with the provision of clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A incorporated in the Act by the said amendment Act. The further challenge to the validity of the revised history syllabus is that it is ultra vires Art. 19 (1) (a) read with Art. 51A (b) of the Constitution of India.

3. The Rule Nisi was opposed by the appellants and also by the State of West Bengal. An application was filed by the West Bengal Publishers' Association for being added as a party respondent in the Writ Petition. It appears from the record that the said application was not disposed of by the learned Judge. The West Bengal Publishers' Association has also filed an appeal against the judgment of the learned Judge.

4. In the affidavit-in-opposition of the appellants, which has been affirmed on Feb. 13, 1982 by Sri Nirmal Sinha, Secretary of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education, it has been averred that the Writ Petitioners, who are the respondents Nos. 1 to 3 in this appeal, have no locus standi to maintain an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution. The case of the appellants is that in order to bring about a national consensus in the field of education through an academic advisory organisation, the Ministry of Education and Social Welfare set up a body called NCERT on Sept. 1, 1961 under the Societies Registration Act, 1860. The NCERT is wholly financed by the Government of India, one of its main objects being to assist and advise the Ministry of Education and Social Welfare in the implementation of its policies and major programmes in the field of education, particularly school education. The NCERT drew up curriculum for the tenure schools and prepared syllabi for Classes VI to VIII and Classes IX to X based on national consensus. The new syllabi were drawn up by high level editorial boards in different school subjects consisting of educationists of repute from different parts of the country and it was hoped that the new syllabi would serve as an effective instrument for initiating the desired educational changes.

5. The Board, in order to keep pace with the changing pattern of Secondary Education, particularly to acquaint the students with the history of mankind appointed an expert committee and a Syllabus Advisory Committee to draw up a new syllabus for Class VIII keeping in view the particular guidelines of the NCERT. The expert committee consisted of 4 educationists/historians of repute for the purpose of drawing up a new syllabus in history for Classes VI to X including Class VIII. The draft syllabus was scrutinized by the Syllabus Advisory Committee consisting of the said four educationists and 2 representatives of each of the 9 Secondary Teachers' Organizations including the representatives of the West Bengal Headmasters' Association. One of the two representatives of the W. B. Headmasters' Association, Sri Bibhas Chandra Mitra, is a co-author of the history text-book for Class VIII written according to the new syllabus. The new syllabus was adopted and approved by the Board and a circular dated July 29, 1981 was issued in that regard.

6. The further case of the appellants as sought to be made out in the affidavit-in-opposition is that as regards the names of Marx, Engels, Mao, Sun Yat-sen, Chiang and other luminaries, it was thought necessary to indicate the said names in the syllabus in connection with the study of other countries to show how important historical personalities have shaped the destinies of nations to which they belonged, just as our national leaders moulded our destinies. It has been stated that the history of Indian freedom movement will be studied in details in Classes IX and X. The syllabus was drawn up and notified by the Board on April 30 and July 29, 1981, to all concerned after a prior intimation about the introduction of the new syllabus in history for Class VIII. The text-books on history prepared by different authors in accordance with the new syllabus have been submitted and the same have been distributed for sale. Most of the students of Class VIII have already purchased such text-books. It is contended that the Writ Petition is not maintainable at the instance of the West Bengal Headmasters' Association which has participated in the preparation of the new syllabus.

7. The learned Judge, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case has come to the finding that the new history syllabus for Class VIII is illegal inasmuch as it has not been prepared in accordance with the provision of S. 27 (2) (c) read with the provision of S. 19A (3) (g) of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979. In considering the question as to whether the revised syllabus is also violative of Article 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution, the learned Judge has taken notice of the report of the Kothari Commission published by NCERT in 1966. The learned Judge has proceeded on the basis that according to the said report there is a drop-out of 40% of students every year at the end of Class VIII. The learned Judge is of the view that these 40% of students would be deprived of any knowledge about the history of India, particularly the freedom movement and the national leaders connected therewith. Reliance has been placed by the learned Judge on the decision of the Supreme Court in Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597. In that case, it has been observed by Bhagwati J. that even if a right is not specifically mentioned in Art. 19 (1) it may still be a fundamental right covered by some clauses in that Article, if it is an integral part of the named fundamental right or partakes of the same basic nature and character of that fundamental right. Relying on the said observation, the learned Judge has taken the view that Art. 19 (1) (a) includes within its reach the right of freedom of thought which, in his opinion, is an integral part of the aforesaid right and partakes of the same basic nature and character. It has been observed by the learned Judge that in a democratic State as that of ours, it is necessary that the pupils who would be the future citizens, should be imparted education in such a manner that they become well conversant with the social, political and religious movements and developments in India, its freedom struggle and its national leaders. In other words, the syllabus should be so devised that the pupils of Class VIII should be well acquainted with the history of India, its freedom movement and its national leaders, who were responsible for bringing in social and political changes in the country which, ultimately, led to the achievement of the freedom of India. In that view of the matter, it has been held by the learned Judge that the new syllabus is violative of Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution. He has, however, overruled the contention of the Writ Petitioners that the new syllabus is also violative of Art. 51A (b) which provides that it shall be the duty of every citizen of India to cherish and follow noble ideas which inspired our national struggle for freedom. In view of his finding that the revised history syllabus is illegal as it has not been prepared in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979, and that the same is also violative of Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution, the learned Judge has made the Rule Nisi absolute. A writ in the nature of Mandamus has been directed to be issued commanding the appellants to forbear from giving any effect to the impugned syllabus. A writ in the nature of Certiorari quashing the impugned syllabus has also been directed to be issued. Hence, this appeal by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education, its President and Secretary.

8. At the outset, Mr. Somnath Chatterjee, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the appellants challenges the locus standi of the writ petitioners to maintain the writ petition. It is submitted by him that the writ petitioners have no legal right to challenge the validity of the revised history syllabus for Class VIII. It has been already pointed out that the writ petitioners consist of two guardians of students reading in Class VIII and the West Bengal Headmasters' Association. It is true that no legal right of the writ petitioners has been infringed or sought to be infringed by the impugned revised history syllabus. But that will not be the proper test for considering the maintainability of the writ petition at their instance. The writ petitioners are, admittedly, interested in the education of children. According to them, if the revised history syllabus for Class VIII is allowed to be taught, it will affect the education of the students of Class VIII so far as the subject of history is concerned. As they are interested in the education of the boys and girls reading in Class VIII, we are of the view that they have locus standi to seek interference of this Court by a writ petition. When the interest of a community is affected by any action of the Government or a statutory authority, any member of the community may complain against that action by the presentation of a writ petition in this Court. It may be that such a member may not be personally affected or his personal right is not infringed. But that will be no ground to throw away the writ petition. It has been observed by the Supreme Court in Akhil Bharatiya Soshit Karmachari Sangh v. Union of India, AIR 1981 SC 298 that our current processual jurisprudence is broad-based and people-oriented, and envisions access to justice through 'class actions', 'public interest litigations', and 'representative proceedings'. We are, therefore, unable to accept the contention of the appellants regarding the locus standi of the writ petitioners to maintain an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution against the impugned history syllabus.

9. The next contention made on behalf of the appellants is that in any event the West Bengal Headmasters' Association having sent their representatives on the Syllabus Committee and having taken part in laying down the history syllabus for Class VIII without any demur, the said Association is estopped from challenging the propriety or the validity of the revised history syllabus. Even assuming that the West Bengal Headmasters' Association is so estopped as contended on behalf of the appellants, yet the writ petition will not be defeated inasmuch as besides the said Association there are two other writ petitioners. Moreover, the challenge of the writ petitioners to the legality of the revised history syllabus is that it has infringed the fundamental right of citizens guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution, and that it is also violative of some provisions of the West Bengal Secondary Education Act, 1963 as amended by the said Amendment Act, 1979. It is now a well settled principle of law that there cannot be any estoppel against statutes. Considered from that point of view, we do not find any merit in the contention of the appellants based on the ground of estoppel.

10. Now we may deal with the question whether the revised history syllabus has been framed in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Secondary Education Act, 1963, as amended by the Amendment Act of 1979. It has been urged on behalf of the writ petitioners, that in preparing the impugned syllabus, the appellants have not followed the procedure laid down in clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A read with clause (c) of sub-sec. (2) of S. 27 of the Act. Clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A provides that it shall be the duty of the Executive Committee to provide by bye-laws after considering the recommendation, if any, of the Syllabus Committee, the syllabus, the courses of studies to be followed and books to be studied in recognized institutions and for examinations instituted by the Board in accordance with such regulations as may be made by the Board. Clause (c) of S. 27 (2) casts a duty upon the Board to make regulations in respect of matters referred to in clauses (c), (d), (e) and (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A. Sub-sec. (4) of S. 27, inter alia, provides that no regulation shall be valid unless it is approved by the State Government, and the State Government may, in according such approval, make such additions, alterations and modifications therein as it thinks fit. Thus it appears that the Board has to make the regulations, inter alia, in respect of matters referred to in clause (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A. After the regulations are made by the Board the same will have to be approved by the State Government. So long as the regulations are not approved by the State Government, no steps can be taken by the Board. After the approval of the regulations by the State Government, the Board has to frame bye-laws, prepare syllabus; lay down the courses of studies to be followed, books to be studied in recognized institutions and for holding examinations in accordance with the approved regulations. Section 19A has been introduced in the Act by the Amendment Act of 1979 and the provision of S. 27 has also been amended by the said Amendment Act. It is not disputed that after the amendment of the parent Act, no regulations have been framed by the Board, nor any bye-laws have been prepared. But the Board proceeded to set up a Syllabus Advisory Committee which prescribed the syllabus on history for Class VIII. There can, therefore, be no doubt that the history syllabus for Class VIII which has been prepared by the Board is violative of the provisions of clause (g) of S. 19A read with the provision of clause (c) of S. 27 (2). In other words, in preparing the history syllabus for Class VIII, the Board has not followed the mandatory provisions of law as contained in the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963, as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979. The impugned history syllabus prescribed for Class VIII is, therefore, illegal inasmuch as it has been made without following the legal procedure. Such a syllabus cannot be prescribed and the educational institutions cannot be directed to follow the syllabus.

11. It is, however, brought to our notice that several books have been written by 171 authors in accordance with the revised history syllabus. It is submitted by Mr. Malay Kumar Basu, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the West Bengal Publishers' Association, that if the syllabus is struck down, the publishers would suffer great hardship. Mr. Chatterjee has also brought to our notice that some schools have prescribed books written in accordance with the revised history syllabus, and that, as a matter of fact, such books are being taught. We are also told that in some schools books written in accordance with the old syllabus have been prescribed and are being taught. In this situation, it has been submitted on behalf of the appellants that the Board will take steps to regularise the matter and legalize the history syllabus for Class VIII in accordance with the provisions of the Act, as amended. It is, however, submitted on behalf of the appellants that so long as that is not done, the books written in accordance with the impugned revised syllabus should be allowed to be taught by different schools under the Board. In this connection, Mr. Chatterjee has placed reliance on the said decision of the Supreme Court in State of Madhya Pradesh v. Ram Ragubir Prasad Agarwal (AIR 1979 SC 888). In that case, the syllabus for "Rapid Reading" was published on June 30, 1978, while the text-books were prescribed in Oct. 1977 in violation of the provisions of Ss. 3 and 4 of the Madhya Pradesh Act 13 of 1973. It was directed by the Supreme Court that the State Government should take a fresh decision under Ss. 4 and 5 of the said Act. Thereafter, Krishna Iyer, J. who delivered the judgment of the Court, observed as follows (at p. 897):—

"These directions take care of the future. But what about the current academic year? To change horses mid-stream may be disastrous. Throughout the better part of the year except for around a month, Government text-books have been in use. The examinations are impending. To harass the young alumni by putting them through fresh books of the respondent (though in circulation last year) is an avoidable infliction. Therefore, for the nonce, Government books for 'Rapid Reading' will continue in this year's classes. We direct so."

12. Relying on the above observation of Krishna Iyer, J., it is contended that as the books have already been published in accordance with the syllabus and, as some schools have prescribed such books, the new syllabus should not be disturbed. In other words, the books which have been written in accordance with new syllabus should be allowed to be taught and, in the meantime, the Board will remove the irregularities, if any, by complying with the procedure prescribed by law.

13. It has been already noticed that the impugned syllabus has been prepared without conforming to the provisions of the Act as amended by the Amendment Act of 1979. In the case before the Supreme Court, there was only one violation, that is to say, the book on 'Rapid Reading' was published before the publication of the syllabus. The said book was followed in different schools and, in view of the fact that the examination was to take place after one month, the Supreme Court did not interfere for that year. In the instant case, however, the provisions of the Act as amended have not at all been complied with. Mr. Chatterjee submits that in preparing the syllabus, the old regulations have been followed and that, in view of S. 25 of the Bengal General Clauses Act, it was permissible to do so. In our opinion, the old regulations cannot be followed. Under the old regulations, it was the Board that was to prescribe, modify or revise the syllabus after considering the recommendations of the Syllabus Committee. Under the amended S. 27 (2) (c), the Board has to make regulations, inter alia, in respect of matters under cl. (g) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 19A which casts a duty on the Executive Committee of the Board to provide by bye-laws, after considering the recommendations, if any, of the Syllabus Committee, the syllabus etc. So, the syllabus has to be prepared by the Executive Committee and not by the Board and that too in accordance with bye-laws. Thus the old regulations are inconsistent with the provisions of Ss. 27 (2) (c) and 19A (3) (g) of the Act, as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979. In our opinion, therefore, S. 25 of the Bengal General Clauses Act is inapplicable and the old regulations made under the unamended provision of S. 27 (2) (c) did not continue to be in force.

14. At the same time, we find that some schools have prescribed books on history written in accordance with the revised syllabus, and some schools are following books written under the old syllabus. After considering these facts and, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in State of Madhya Pradesh v. Ram Ragubir Agarwal, (AIR 1979 SC 888) (supra), we modify the judgment of the learned Judge and direct that so long as the history syllabus for Class VIII is not prepared in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963, as amended by the said Amendment Act of 1979, the Board shall not prescribe or insist on the teaching of books written on the basis of impugned revised syllabus for Class VIII. We direct that the Board shall prepare the history syllabus for Class VIII in accordance with the provisions of the Act by Oct., 1982. It is further directed that the schools which have prescribed the books on history for Class VIII written in accordance with the impugned revised syllabus will be entitled to teach such books for this year. Similarly, the schools which are teaching books on history for Class VIII written on the basis of the old syllabus will be entitled to teach the same for this year.

15. In view of our finding that the revised history syllabus is illegal inasmuch as it has been made without following the legal procedure and in view of our direction to the Board for the preparation of the history syllabus for Class VIII in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 by Oct., 1982, we do not think that we are called upon to embark upon the question as to whether the impugned syllabus offends against the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution. The question as to constitutional validity of the syllabus will arise only when the syllabus has been prepared in accordance with the procedure prescribed by the Act. In the circumstances, we keep the question open.

16. It may be recorded that Mr. Arun Prakash Chatterjee, learned Senior Standing Counsel, appearing on behalf of the State of West Bengal has adopted the arguments of Mr. Somnath Chatterjee, learned counsel for the appellants.

17. The appeal is disposed of as above. There will, however, be no order for costs.

18. The appeal which has been filed by the West Bengal Publishers' Association is also disposed of by this judgment without any order for costs.

MONOJ KUMAR MUKHERJEE, J. :—
I agree.

Order accordingly.

Sankar Prosad Paul Chowdhury, Appellant v. Madhabi Paul Chowdhury, Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 334 of 1979, D/- 27-4-1981.*

(A) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 — Petition by husband for divorce on ground of wife's cruelty — Husband not examining members of his family — Adverse presumption can be drawn against petitioner. (Evidence Act (1872), S. 114 Illus (g)).

The court ought to draw an adverse presumption against the petitioner husband for non-examination of the members of his family who were described as witnesses to be alleged acts of cruelty and insult by his wife. (Para 6)

(B) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 (1) (i) (a) — Expression 'cruelty' — Failure or inability on part of spouse to effectuate sexual intercourse amounts to cruelty.

The expression 'cruelty' within the meaning of S. 13 (1) (i) (a) of the Act is not confined to causing physical acts of cruelty but include mental cruelty. Persistent failure or inability on the part of a spouse to effectuate sexual intercourse without any reasonable cause may amount to cruelty. But in the instant case the petitioner husband has failed to prove by cogent evidence that there was such refusal or inability on the part of the respondent wife to have intercourse with him. Therefore, the Court was right in dismissing the petition under S. 13 (1) of the Act. (Para 8)

(C) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), Ss. 21 and 13 (1) — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 — Petition by husband for divorce on grounds of cruelty — Allegation that there was persistent refusal by wife to have sexual intercourse with him — Amendment of petition sought to incorporate plea of physical deformity or defect in wife — Amendment cannot be allowed.

It is settled law that when the parties had already got full opportunities to adduce evidence, the court of first instance had given ample opportunity to the parties to adduce their evidence, an unsuccessful party cannot be permitted to adduce further evidence to the appellate court to strengthen his case which had not been accepted by the trial court. In the trial court in the instant case the petitioner founded his case of cruelty against the respondent on the ground that she had refused to have sexual intercourse with him and that on several occasions she had assaulted him. So long as the finding of the trial court stands that she did not refuse to have sexual intercourse with her husband the appellant, it is no longer necessary to consider whether her alleged refusal was due to congenital deformity or defect of her sexual organs or because of other reasons. In other words, by praying for inserting a para in his petition the petitioner husband is really endeavouring to get rid of the adverse finding that there had been no persistent refusal by her to have sexual intercourse with the appellant. The petitioner had never alleged in the trial court that sexual intercourse with the respondent was either impossible or most painful. (Para 13)

All proceedings under the Act are regulated by Civil P. C. in view of Section 21 of the Act. It is true that the Court under O. 6, R. 17 of the Code has a wide discretion to grant amendments of pleadings in order to do complete justice between the parties and also to shorten the course of litigation. Such discretion of the court under O. 6, R. 17 is judicially exercised. Amendments of the pleadings at any stage may be allowed which are necessary for determining the questions in controversy between the parties. Further, for the purpose of granting or refusing prayers for amendments of pleadings made by a party, the court is required to consider whether or not, if such amendment is allowed, same would cause any injustice to the other party which cannot be sufficiently compensated by awarding costs.

(Para 9)

The parties to the case have already adduced evidence in full before the trial court which has pronounced its judgment. By praying for amendment of his petition, the appellant is now attempting to adduce evidence about the alleged physical deformity or defect of the respondent wife. The appellant has not otherwise made out any cause for adducing such additional evidence. The petitioner husband cannot be allowed at such belated stage to amend his petition in order to make a new case about the alleged physical deformity or defect of the respondent which was not even consistent with his case in the trial court. Such amendment, therefore, is not only unnecessary for determining the questions in controversy but also if the amendment is granted the same would cause serious prejudice and injustice to the respondent.

(Paras 11, 12)

(D) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 — Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 23, R. 1 — Petition for divorce by husband — Allegation that there was persistent refusal by wife for sexual intercourse — Court finding against him — Application for withdrawal of petition and filing fresh petition on grounds of physical deformity in wife — Held, withdrawal cannot be granted as he cannot be allowed to get rid of adverse findings upon issues made by Court below.

Surathi Mohan Sanyal, for Appellant.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J.:— On April, 1976 the appellant husband had filed a petition in the Court of the learned District Judge, Alipore under S. 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act praying for a decree for judicial separation on the ground that the respondent wife had treated him with cruelty and that she had deserted him. After the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 was enacted, the appellant husband applied in the trial court for amendment of his petition, inter alia, by substituting in place of the prayer for judicial separation a prayer for decree for dissolution of marriage under S. 13 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act. The trial court had allowed the said prayer for amendment. The respondent wife had contested the said suit, inter alia, denying the allegations of cruelty and desertion made by her husband.

2. The learned Additional District Judge, 7th Court, Alipore dismissed the said suit. Thereafter, the plaintiff husband has filed the present appeal.

3. On 10th April, 1981 the appellant petitioner filed an application in this Court praying that he may be permitted to amend his original petition for divorce by inserting para 14 (a). The respondent wife has opposed the appellant's prayer for amendment of the petition.

4. Mr. Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, learned advocate for the appellant, has made three fold submissions before us. His first submission is, that, for determining and the real questions in controversy between the parties, the appellant, even, at this appellate stage, ought to be allowed to amend his petition. According to Mr. Banerjee, such amendment of the petition if allowed is not likely to cause any prejudice to the respondent wife and she might be sufficiently compensated by awarding costs in her favour. Alternatively, Mr. Banerjee has submitted that in the event this court is unwilling to allow the aforesaid application for amendment of the appellant's petition for divorce, the appellant may be permitted to withdraw his said petition under S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. Lastly, Mr. Banerjee has submitted that in his judgment under appeal the learned Additional District Judge has not recorded necessary findings for determining the issues framed in the case.

5. Before we consider whether at this stage the appellant husband ought to be allowed to amend his petition under Sec. 13, we may proceed to set out the questions which were in controversy between them in the trial court. As previously stated, the plaintiff husband had originally prayed for a decree for judicial separation on the ground of cruelty and desertion and subsequently his said petition was altered into one under Section 13 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act. The plaintiff husband in his said petition had stated that on 17th Feb., 1973 the marriage between him and the respondent was solemnised according to Hindu rites. His case was that in spite of her protest only once on 17th of March, 1973 he had cohabited with her. According to the appellant, she had conceived. The appellant further stated that from the day of the Boubhat he had realised that the respondent was mentally irritant by nature and was suffering from complexes. The appellant further stated that in early part of May, 1973 the respondent had undergone abortion on the medical advice of her cousin, Dr. Sudhamoy Seth of Chandarnagar. The appellant also alleged that he had become a victim of physical cruelty and violence as the respondent often inflicted blows and slaps on him. She had also threatened to commit suicide. On 20th May, 1975 he had desired to have sexual intercourse but she had rejected his advances and had begun to shout. She had also inflicted blows on him in the presence of the members of his family. She had allegedly expressed her desire to go to her parents' house. On 23rd June, 1975 the respondent had again picked up quarrel with him, and on 24th June, 1975 she went away to her parents' house with all her ornaments and articles. At the trial the petitioner husband deposed in order to prove his aforesaid allegations against his wife, the respondent herein. He also examined his sister as PW 2, who in her cross-examination denied that she had ever suggested to the respondent to get herself examined by a gynaecologist or that the respondent had shown her a medical certificate that she was physically fit.

6. The learned Additional District Judge found that admittedly the respondent went to Chandarnagar on 24th June, 1975 and since then had been residing there. On 8th April, 1976, the appellant filed the present case. Therefore, undisputedly the petitioner neither averred nor proved that the respondent wife had deserted him for a continuous period of not less than two years immediately preceding the presentation of his petition. In fact, the learned advocate for the appellant did not urge before us the said ground of desertion by the respondent wife. The learned Additional District Judge in his judgment has recorded that the petitioner husband had alleged cruelty on the part of the respondent wife on the following three grounds : (a) abusing and beating the husband, (b) her refusal to have sexual intercourse, and (c) carrying out abortion. In our view, the learned Additional District Judge rightly refused to believe that the plaintiff husband had failed to satisfactorily prove his said allegations of cruelty against his wife. Although he had averred in his petition that the respondent wife had inflicted fist blows on him in the presence of the members of his family and that she did not live with him in the same room in spite of the request of the members of the petitioner's family, the petitioner husband did not examine any member of his family to corroborate the said allegations. The court ought to draw an adverse presumption against the petitioner husband for such non-examination of the members of his family who were described as witnesses to said alleged acts of cruelty and insult by his wife. On the other hand, even after 24th of June, 1975 when the petitioner was no longer residing in the petitioner's house, Kunjaswar Paul Chowdhury, father of the petitioner, had written a post-card dated 1st July, 1975 (Ext. 1A) to Gopinath Seth, the father of the respondent. The father of the petitioner had expressed his sorrow for departure of Bouma (the respondent) and stated that especially his wife (the mother of the petitioner) was very anxious. Kunjaswar Babu had further written that they were praying to God for giving happiness and peace to Bouma (the respondent) and also that good sense may prevail upon Sankar (the petitioner). Kunjaswar Babu in the post-script had acknowledged receipt of a letter from the respondent and had promised to write to her. The very contents of the said post-card written by Kunjaswar Paul Chowdhury (Exts. 1A) would disprove the allegation of the petitioner that after abusing and beating him on 24th June, 1975 she had left saying that she would never return. There is also no evidence that the petitioner in fact had tried to bring her back as claimed by him. On the other hand, copies of the two letters written by her to her father-in-law (i.e. the father of the petitioner) (Exts. A2 and A3) indicated that she was very keen to return to her father-in-law's place. She begged forgiveness and requested that arrangements may be made to take her back. We refuse to believe the evidence of the petitioner that in fact originals of these letters were not sent under registered post. Kunjaswar Babu, the father of the petitioner, has not come forward to deny the receipt of the said two letters or to corroborate other allegations of his son.

7. We also agree with the learned Additional District Judge that the petitioner has failed to prove that after the respondent had conceived she had voluntary abortion. No reason was suggested by the petitioner why the respondent would desire to have abortion. Same was most unnatural and improbable. There was no reliable evidence that the respondent had at all conceived or that she had abortion.

8. Mr. Banerjee, learned advocate for the appellant correctly submitted that 'cruelty' within the meaning of cl. (i) (a) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act was not confined to causing physical acts of cruelty but included mental cruelty. Persistent failure or inability on the part of a spouse to effectuate sexual intercourse without any reasonable cause may amount to cruelty. But the appellant husband has failed to prove by cogent evidence that there was such refusal or inability on the part of the respondent to have intercourse with him. We have already pointed out that the petitioner husband himself alleged that immediately after the marriage, once he had intercourse with his wife. His case was that thereafter she had persistently refused to have further intercourse with him. On 17th Feb., 1973 the marriage of the petitioner and the respondent took place. It is not believable that after 17th of March, 1973 the respondent started sleeping in a separate bed. None amongst the members of the petitioner husband's family came to corroborate the said allegations of the petitioner. Although in June, 1973 the petitioner and the respondent had visited Nainital and used to sleep in the same room, it is utterly improbable that they did not have any intercourse. We have already stated that there is also no corroboration of the petitioner's case regarding the incidents which happened before the respondent went away to her father's house on 24th June, 1975. There is much more probability in the case of the respondent that on 24th June, 1975 she did not go back alone to her father's house at Chandarnagore but she was escorted either by the petitioner or some other member of his family. We have already pointed out that the father of the petitioner in his post-card (Ext. A1) addressed to the respondent wife did not make any accusation against the respondent. On the other hand, he had expressed sorrow for leaving of his Bouma (the respondent). The trial Court has rightly found that the petitioner has failed to prove that the respondent wife had all along refused to have sexual intercourse with him. Accordingly, we hold that the court below rightly answered the issues framed by it in favour of the respondent and had correctly dismissed the appellant's petition under S. 13 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act.

9. In our view, the appellant husband has not made out any case for allowing him to belatedly amend his petition by inserting therein allegations of physical deformity or defect of sexual organs of the respondent wife. All proceedings under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 are regulated as far as may be by the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 (vide S. 21 of the Hindu Marriage Act). It is true that the Court under O. 6, R. 17 of the Code has a wide discretion to grant amendments of pleadings in order to do complete justice between the parties and also to shorten the course of litigation. Such discretion of the court under O. 6, R. 17 is judicially exercised. Amendments of the pleadings at any stage may be allowed which are necessary for determining the questions in controversy between the parties. Further, for the purpose of granting or refusing prayers for amendment of pleadings made by a party, the court is required to consider whether or not, if such amendment is allowed, same would cause any injustice to the other party which cannot be sufficiently compensated by awarding costs. Mr. Banerjee, learned advocate for the appellant, has drawn our attention to pages 367 to 374 of Rayden on Divorce (12th Edition). The learned author has, inter alia, discussed the methods to be adopted for adding charges after a matrimonial petition has been filed. Mr. Banerjee has also placed before us the decision of the Court of Appeal in Nelson v. Nelson & Slinger, (1958) 2 All ER 744: (1958) 1 WLR 894, which has been mentioned at page 369 of Rayden on Divorce (12th Edition). The Court of Appeal had, inter alia, held that in England

there was at present no practice in Divorce Division which would prevent the court from applying ordinary rules as to amendment of pleadings which were made applicable generally speaking to matrimonial cause by Rule 82 of the Matrimonial Causes Rules, 1957. It may be similarly noted that under S. 21 of the Hindu Marriage Act the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as far as may have been made applicable to proceedings under the said Act. The Court of Appeal in Nelson v. Nelson & Slinger (supra), also recognised that in the exercise of its discretion the court has jurisdiction to allow an amendment of a petition grounded on cruelty by adding further charges of cruelty if it was thought right and proper so to do in the interest of justice.

10. But, in our view, in the interest of justice the amendment prayed for by the appellant ought not to be granted. The parties to this case have already adduced evidence in full before the trial court which has pronounced its judgment. By praying for amendment of his petition, the appellant is now attempting to adduce evidence about the alleged physical deformity or defect of the respondent wife. The appellant has not otherwise made out any case for adducing such additional evidence. It is settled law that when the parties had already got full opportunities to adduce evidence, the court of first instance had given ample opportunity to the parties to adduce their evidence, an unsuccessful party cannot be permitted to adduce further evidence to the appellate court to strengthen his case which had not been accepted by the trial court. In the trial court the petitioner founded his case of cruelty against the respondent on the ground that she had refused to have sexual intercourse with him and that on several occasions she had assaulted him. We have already concurred with the trial court's findings that both the said allegations had not been established. So long as the finding of the trial court stands that she did not refuse to have sexual intercourse with her husband, the appellant, it is no longer necessary to consider whether her alleged refusal was due to congenital deformity or defect of her sexual organs or because of other reasons. In other words, by praying for inserting para. 14 (a) in his petition the petitioner husband is really endeavouring to get rid of the said adverse finding that there had been no persistent refusal by her to have sexual intercourse with the appellant. The petitioner had never alleged in the trial court that sexual intercourse with the respondent was either impossible or most painful. Although he claimed that after marriage and before 17th March, 1973 at least on one occasion the parties had intercourse, he did not further allege that the same was extremely painful to either of the parties. Therefore, for the purpose of adjudicating the points in controversy it is not at all necessary to determine whether she had any congenital deformity or defect of her sexual organs.

11. Although the petitioner husband neither averred nor proved any such congenital deformity or defect of the respondent, in her written statement, the respondent had pleaded that after 24th June, 1975 she went to the house of the petitioner's sister at Naihati and she was told that the charge against her was that she was incompetent to cohabit and the petitioner husband had asked the respondent to get herself medically examined. She had further claimed that she got herself medically examined by a gynaecologist, who gave her a certificate. The respondent in her examination-in-chief had also mentioned about the said fact of medical examination and had stated about the certificate granted by a doctor who examined her. The said certificate was marked 'X' for identification. Presumably, because the doctor who gave the certificate was not examined, the certificate was not marked as an exhibit. The petitioner did not cross-examine her with reference to her said claim of medical examination. No suggestion was given to her that she suffered from any physical deformity or defect. When, the petitioner himself in his evidence did not state that the respondent suffered from any such deformity or defect, it was not necessary for the respondent to cross-examine him with reference to the said question of medical examination. The sister of the petitioner P.W. 2, denied in her cross-examination that she had ever suggested that she should be medically examined. She also denied that a medical certificate was shown to her. Thus, in spite of the challenge thrown by the respondent that she was medically fit to have sexual intercourse, the petitioner husband did not attempt to prove the contrary. We find no reason why the petitioner at this belated stage should be allowed to amend his petition in order to make a new case about the alleged physical deformity or defect of the respondent which was not even consistent with his case in the trial court.

12. Mr. Banerjee, learned advocate for the appellant, tried to submit before us that the said fact of her physical deformity or defect came to be known to the petitioner from the medical certificate filed by the respondent in the trial court. At this stage, we are considering whether the amendment of the petition under Section 13 ought to be allowed, we cannot enter into the truth or falsehood of the allegations now sought to be introduced by the appellant. The contents of the certificate marked 'X' for identification were never proved. Therefore, the appellant is not entitled to make any submission about the fact of the said medical certificate. It would be most unjust to allow the petitioner to amend his petition so that the respondent may be required to submit to a medical examination and the appellant can substantiate his new case of respondent's physical deformity or defect. Such amendment, therefore, is not only unnecessary for determining the questions in controversy but also if the amendment is granted the same would cause serious prejudice and injustice to the respondent. For the foregoing reasons, we reject the application for amendment made by the appellant.

13. The appellant has not made out any case for granting him leave to withdraw his petition under S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. He has not alleged that there is any formal defect in his petition or that there was any other sufficient ground for allowing the petitioner to institute a fresh petition for the subject matter of his claim. The trial court has already determined the issues. Therefore, by obtaining withdrawal of his petition the appellant cannot be allowed to get rid of the adverse findings upon the issues made by the court below.

14. For the foregoing reasons, we dismiss this appeal. We also reject the application for amendment of the petition filed by the appellant. There will be no order as to costs.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.
Appeal dismissed.

Corporation of Calcutta, Petitioner v.
East India Commercial Company Pvt.
Ltd., Opposite Party.

C. R. Nos. 2657-63 of 1980, D/- 21-4-1982.

Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), S. 168 — Assessment of annual value of building let out to tenant — Fair rent not fixed by Controller under West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 — Assessment of annual value can be made on basis of contractual rent paid by tenant. (West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 8 (1) (d).)

The West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 not only recognises the contractual rent but makes it obligatory for the tenant to pay such rent until the fair rent is fixed. This positive nature of the statutory provision equates the contractual rent with the fair rent as estimated by the statute. The statute did so because it contemplated that where the landlord and the tenant abide by the contractual rent and do not go for fixation by the Controller they do so because the contractual rent bears a reasonable approximation to the fair rent envisaged by the statute. That being the position there would be no bar on the assessing authority to assess the annual value with reference to such contractual rent as is being paid without any objection by the tenant to the landlord. On the scheme of the present W. B. Premises Tenancy Act in a case where the rent had not been fixed by the Controller the contractual rent as paid by the tenant cannot be said to furnish no foundation for assessment of rent reasonably payable by a hypothetical tenant. Such being the position, it must be held that the court below was not right in its conclusion that the law as it stands is to the effect that even in a case where the landlord is realising contractual rents from the tenants no fair rent being assessed under the statute, for the purpose of assessing the annual value the assessing authority cannot base his assessment on such contractual rent but has to follow the principles laid down in the W. Pradip Kumar Ghosh and Subrata Basu, for Petitioner; Ranjit Kumar Banerjee, A. Mitra and Milava Mitra, for Opposite Party.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— These 7 Rules, obtained by the Corporation of Calcutta on as many as 7 revisional applications, raise a fundamental question as to the mode of assessment of annual value under Section 168 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 (hereafter referred to as the said Act) in respect of buildings which are actually let out to tenants on rent agreed but not fixed by the Controller under the Rent Restriction Act. Such a question arose before the learned Chief Judge, Court of Small Causes, Calcutta, in 7 municipal appeals now pending before him though at an interlocutory stage and the said question having been decided against the Corporation of Calcutta by the learned Chief Judge by an order dt. June 30, 1980, the Corporation of Calcutta has now challenged that order in these revisional applications. Both the parties now before us have waived all objections to our deciding the issue at this stage on a revisional application and have invited as to decide on review of the position in law, the correct method to be adopted for assessment of the annual value of buildings so let out to tenants and thus shorten the litigation. The question raised is as to whether the Corporation can assess the annual value of a building which has been let out to tenants having regard to the contractual rent payable therefor when the standard rent of such a building had not been fixed by the Controller in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956.

2. We may refer to the facts of one of the appeals, namely, Municipal Appeal No. 182 of 1972 out of which these rules arise to appreciate how the dispute now brought over to us did arise. The respondent before us raised a multi-storeyed building at premises No. 20, Abdul Hamid Street previously known as British India Street, Calcutta. The building was so raised after the year 1956. By a notice dt. Oct. 10, 1966, issued under S. 180 of the said Act, the Corporation proposed to assess the annual value of the said building to the extent then constructed at Rs. 63,365 with effect from 3rd quarter of 1966-67 until a fresh valuation was made. The respondent preferred an objection u/s. 181 of the said Act and the Special Officer II in disposing of the said objection reduced the valuation to Rs. 49,368. Being aggrieved by the order of the said officer, the respondent preferred an appeal before the Court of Small Causes, Calcutta, which was registered as Municipal Appeal No. 182 of 1972.

3. On May 31, 1974, the respondent filed a petition in the said appeal praying for permission to examine an expert valuer as a witness to prove the cost of construction of the said premises. Such a prayer was made on the plea that for the purpose of assessing the annual value of the disputed premises under S. 168 of the said Act, fair rent thereof should be determined on the basis of actual cost of construction of the building and the market value of the land as envisaged by S. 8 (i) (d) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, since the building had been constructed after the year 1956.

4. Such a prayer made on behalf of the respondent was strongly opposed by the Corporation on the ground that when undisputedly the premises had been wholly let out, the rent at which the premises might reasonably be expected to let can be determined on the basis of the rent actually realised and as such there is no necessity of adducing any evidence with regard to the cost of construction of the building or the market value of the land for the purpose of determining the annual value under Section 168 of the said Act. The Corporation took the stand that the rent of the premises at the time of assessment being determinable with reference to the actual rent realised and such rent not being tainted by any extraneous consideration, it was not necessary to determine the fair rent in terms of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, for the purpose of assessing the annual valuation, the agreed rent should be accepted to approximate the fair rent as envisaged by the Premises Tenancy Act.

5. The learned Chief Judge by his order dt. June 7, 1974 upheld the objection raised by the Corporation and overruled the prayer on behalf of the respondent in view of a Bench decision of this court in the case of Corporation of Calcutta v. Basanta Investment Corporation, ILR (1975) 2 Cal 309 where A. C. Gupta, J. (as his Lordship then was) observed:—

"As the premises were actually let out, no question arises in this case as to what rent a hypothetical tenant would be willing to pay for the premises. Reference to S. 8 (i) (d) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act made by the learned Judge of the court below in this context seems to be irrelevant. The court below appears to have overlooked the provisions of S. 4 of the said Act that in case where fair rent of the premises has not been fixed, the tenant must pay to the landlord the rent agreed upon."

6. It may be pointed out at this stage that special leave petition bearing No. 1256 of 1974 (Civil) for a further appeal to the Supreme Court against the above Bench decision was dismissed by the Supreme Court on Feb. 7, 1975. That apart, the view expressed in the above Bench decision was the consistent view expressed by this court all along. Reference may be made to the Bench decisions in the cases of Corporation of Calcutta v. Union Jute Mill Company Limited, (1956) 60 Cal WN 153: (AIR 1957 Cal 230) and James Finlay Company Ltd. v. Corporation of Calcutta, (1969) 73 Cal WN 961. In the latter decision P. N. Mukherji, A.C.J., observed:

"With regard to this last contention it may at once be stated that, in the absence of any other material relevant on the point, the actual rent may well be a good index of the hypothetical fair rent. From that point of view making of the instant assessment on the basis or in the light of actual rent cannot be objected to."

7. The respondent challenged the said order passed by the learned Chief Judge on the earlier occasion in a revisional application which was registered as C. R. No. 2360 of 1974 but this court refused to interfere in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction without going into the question of correctness or otherwise of the said decision of the learned Chief Judge.

8. In that background when the said appeal was still pending before the learned Chief Judge and the other 6 appeals were directed to be heard analogously, the respondent renewed his prayer for permission to examine an expert valuer on grounds similar to those made out in his earlier application dt. May 31, 1974, and sought for adjournment of the hearing of the appeal for the said purpose. Obviously the respondent was inspired to do so again in view of a later decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Dewan Daulatrai Kapoor v. New Delhi Municipal Committee, AIR 1980 SC 541. The learned Chief Judge by the order now impugned before us, has this time allowed the prayer made by the respondent. He held: "That the law as stands today is clearly to the effect that even in the present case where the landlord is realising actual rent from the tenants, for the purpose of assessing annual value, the assessing authority must have to follow the principles laid down in the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act for determining the fair rent." In that view, the learned Chief Judge recalled the order dt. June 7, 1974, passed by his predecessor and allowed the respondent's prayer for examining an expert valuer for the purpose of determining the fair rent of the building in accordance with the provisions of S. 8 (i) (d) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Feeling aggrieved, the Corporation has now moved this court strongly disputing the correctness of the view taken by the learned Chief Judge and the order passed thereon. The respondent appearing to contest these revisional applications, on the other hand, has supported the view taken by the learned Chief Judge. According to the respondent when the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act has fixed the fair rent payable by a tenant in respect of any premises covered by the said Act, a hypothetical tenant cannot reasonably be expected to pay anything more than the fair rent so fixed by the statute; hence irrespective of what actual rent is being realised from tenants the annual value should be assessed only on the basis of the fair rent because S. 168 (1) of the said Act enjoins assessment of annual value not with reference to the actual rent but with reference to the rent at which the premises might reasonably be expected to let. As we have indicated hereinbefore, both the parties now before us have agreed that the issue raised is a fundamental one and should in the interest of both be decided by this court at this stage so that either of the parties may not be relegated to the position of raising this issue later while preferring an appeal against the final order.

9. In deciding the issue thus raised before us it would first be necessary to recall certain basic principles which are well settled by now. It was pointed out by the Supreme Court in the case of Patel Gordhandas Hargovindas v. Municipal Corporation, Ahmedabad, AIR 1963 SC 1742 that the term 'rate' had always the meaning of a tax on the annual value or rateable value of lands or buildings and not on their capital value. The methods adopted for the purpose of determining such annual or rateable value are usually threefold, namely, (1) actual rent fetched by land or building where it is actually let, (2) where it is not let, rent based on hypothetical tenancy particularly in the case of buildings and (3) where either of these two methods is not available by valuation basis on capital value from which annual value has to be found by applying a suitable percentage. In India Municipal Acts in authorising municipal authorities to impose a tax by way of rates on lands and buildings really authorise such authorities to levy a tax on the annual or rateable value of such land and building but not on the capital value. Such is the provision in S. 165 of the said Act. Most of these Acts again have adopted the second and third method referred to hereinbefore for the purpose of assessing the annual or the rateable value. The Act now under consideration, that is, the said Act, has adopted such a method and this is quite explicit on the terms of S. 168 (1) (2) and (3) which may conveniently be set out as hereunder:

"168. Amount of consolidated rate, how to be fixed.— (1) For the purpose of assessment to the consolidated rate the annual value of any land or building shall be deemed to be the gross annual rent at which the land or building might at the time of assessment be reasonably expected to let from year to year, less, in the case of a building, an allowance of ten per cent. for the cost of repairs and for all other expenses necessary to maintain the building in a state to command such gross rent:

(Provided that in respect of any land or building the rent of which has been fixed under the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 or the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 (West Bengal Act XVII of 1950, West Bengal Act XII of 1956) the annual value thereof shall not exceed the annual amount of the rent so fixed.)

(2) If the gross annual rent of the land not ordinarily let cannot be easily estimated, the gross annual rent of the land for the purpose of sub-section (1) shall be deemed to be five per cent. of the estimated present value of the land.

(3) If the gross annual rent of a building not ordinarily let cannot be easily estimated, the gross annual rent of the building for the purpose of sub-sec. (1) shall be deemed to be five per cent. of the value of the building obtained by adding the estimated cost of erecting the building at the time of assessment less a reasonable amount to be deducted on account of depreciation, if any, to the estimated present market value of the land valued with the buildings as part of the same premises."

10. It would, however, be useful to remember that in an ordinary situation adoption of the second method does not rule out the application of the first because if the rent actually paid is the result of a fair bargain between the landlord and the tenant and is not affected by any extraneous consideration, that would be the safest index of what a hypothetical tenant would reasonably be expected to pay by way of rent for the land or the building. The position, however, is changed if a statute intervenes and either supersedes the bargain or materially limits the same. Thus if a rent restriction statute operating on the field derecognises the contractual rent and supersedes the same by statutorily fixing the rent payable for such land or building, the contractual rent cannot obviously be the index of rent reasonably expected to be payable by a hypothetical tenant. As pointed out by the Supreme Court where statutory limitation of rent circumscribes the scope of bargain, the hypothetical rent cannot exceed the limit.

11. In the case of Corporation of Calcutta v. Padma Debi, AIR 1962 SC 151, the Supreme Court was considering an assessment under S. 127 (a) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, terms whereof are materially comparable to those in S. 168 (1) of the said Act, without, however, the proviso now added to sub-section (1) of S. 168. In that case the rent of the premises under assessment had been fixed by the Controller under the provisions of the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 and yet the assessing authorities of the Corporation in making the assessment of annual value refused to accept the position that such value must not be fixed at a figure higher than the rent fixed by the Controller. On an appeal the Small Cause Court and this Court too upheld the objection of the assessee and held that in view of the provisions of W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950, the annual value must be assessed with reference to the rent fixed by the Controller. The Supreme Court in upholding the view of this court pointed out that when under the Calcutta Municipal Act, it is the letting value of the land or building to the owner-landlord which has been made the criterion for determining the annual value and when under the Rent Act, the landlord can realise no rent other than the rent fixed by the Controller, such rent must furnish the basis for the valuation. Referring to the terms of S. 127 (a) of Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, the Supreme Court observed that when assessment has to be made with reference to the gross annual rent at which the land or the building might at the time of assessment reasonably be expected to let, it would be incongruous to consider fixation of rent beyond the limits fixed by the penal legislation as reasonable. The Supreme Court approved the following observation of Atkin, L. J., namely, (at p. 154 of AIR) "If no higher rent than the standard rent and statutory increases is enforceable as a matter of common sense that seems to be the limit of the rent a tenant can be reasonably expected to give", quoted and relied on by Lord Carson in his dissenting judgment in the case of Metro-politan Borough of Poplar v. Roberts (1922) 2 AC 93.

12. To appreciate the true effect of this decision of the Supreme Court one must take note of the material provisions of the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950. That Act was a temporary statute, the object whereof was to make better provision for the control of rents of premises in Calcutta and other municipal areas. Section 2 (10) defined standard rent to mean (a) the standard rent determined in accordance with the provision of Sch. A and (b) where the rent has been fixed under S. 9, the rent so fixed; or at which it would have been fixed if the application were made under the said section. Schedule A statutorily fixed the standard rent by allowing specified percentages of increase under different circumstances prescribed thereunder to the basic rent which again was defined to mean the rent fixed under the previous rent restriction laws and where it had not been so fixed the rent as prevailing on the 1st day of Dec. 1941. Section 9 provided for fixation of standard rent by the Controller with reference to Schedule A where applicable together with certain increases sanctioned under circumstances prescribed. This section further provided that where Sch. A is not applicable though the premises were in existence since prior to Dec. 1941, the standard rent should be fixed in accordance with Sch. A taking the rent which would have been reasonably payable for the premises if let on the 1st day of Dec. 1941 as the basic rent for the premises. In case of newly constructed buildings S. 9 further provided that the standard rent payable for one year shall be fixed at a rate equal to 6% of the actual cost of construction as determined by the Controller added to the market price as on 31st Dec. 1946, of the land included in the premises or to the market price of the said land as on the date of completion of the construction whichever is less. Having thus statutorily fixed the standard rent, S. 3 of the Act provided that any amount in excess of the standard rent of any premises shall be irrecoverable notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary. Sec. 17 (1) further provided that such portion of the rent as exceeds the standard rent determined according to the provisions of this Act shall be irrecoverable from the month of the tenancy next after the month in which the Act comes into force whether the said rent was fixed by agreement or by proceeding under the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1948. Section 7 provided that where any sum has been paid or deposited on or after the date of commencement of the Act on account of rent which is by reason of the provisions of this Act irrecoverable shall be ordered to be refunded by the Controller on an application being made to him. Furthermore, Sec. 33 (1) (a) of the Act made it penal for the landlord to receive directly or indirectly any sum on account of rent of any premises in addition to the standard rent. These were the provisions relating to rent realisable from the tenants and were in addition to S. 4 of the Act which prohibited realisation of any selami or premium in consideration of the grant, renewal or continuance of any tenancy.

13. These provisions make it clear that the rent restriction statute then operating on the field did not recognise the contractual rent at all and on the other hand having statutorily fixed the rent payable by a tenant to the landlord made it penal for the landlord to realise anything more than the rent so fixed by the statute. Section 3 and S. 17 (1) in express terms rendered irrecoverable that part of the contractual rent which exceeded the standard rent. As held by Bachawat, J. (as His Lordship then was) in the case of Broja Behari Sen v. Ved Prakash, AIR 1958 Cal 261, in contemplation of law the standard rent and the portion of the contractual rent which was not legally recoverable had notional existence as from 30-3-1950 before the standard rent was actually determined by the Rent Controller. In reality, therefore, the statute superseded the contractual rent and imposed the rent fixed by the statute and it is only in the light of such statutory provisions that the Supreme Court held in Padma Debi's case that the annual value has to be determined with reference to nothing else than the standard rent prescribed by the statute, the landlord and the tenant not having any right to determine the rent by mutual bargain.

14. The principles enunciated in the case of Padma Debi (AIR 1962 SC 151) was reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in the case of Corporation of Calcutta

v. Life Insurance Corporation, AIR 1970 SC 1417 where however, the assessment was being made under S. 168 (1) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, now under consideration. In reaffirming the principle earlier laid down the Supreme Court overruled the contention of Corporation of Calcutta that addition of the proviso to sub-sec. (1) of S. 168 of the said Act changed the legal position and limited application of standard rent only to cases where such a rent had been fixed by the Controller. The Supreme Court held that by addition of the proviso the meaning of the expression gross rent at which the land or the building might reasonably be expected to let is not altered. Hence, the principle earlier laid down in the case of Padma Debi having regard to those terms and having regard to the provisions of the Rent Restriction Act operating on the field was reaffirmed. We must, however, remember that in this case also the rent restriction statute operating on the field was the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950, that is the same Act which was the subject matter of consideration in Padma Debi's case and the material provisions whereof we have referred to hereinbefore.

15. In the case of Moti Chand v. Bombay Municipal Corporation, AIR 1968 SC 441 (para 5), the Supreme Court held that though the owner of a building cannot charge rent in excess of what is fixed by the rent restriction statute, if such a building because of any special advantage attached to it is likely to fetch some amount in addition to rent, the hypothetical tenant is to take into consideration such extra income and would be prepared to pay over and above the actual rent something in respect of such additional advantage and as such that income comes into consideration in assessing the annual value under the parallel provision of S. 154 (1) of the Bombay Municipal Corporation Act, 1888. This decision establishes the position that it is not the inflexible rule that the annual value must invariably be restricted to the rent as determined by the rent restriction statute irrespective of any other consideration.

16. In both the cases of Padma Debi (AIR 1962 SC 151) and the Life Insurance Corporation (AIR 1970 SC 1417) referred to hereinbefore Supreme Court was affirming the decision of this court and upholding the view expressed by this court in the light of the provisions of the W. B. Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950. It is only because that Act statutorily fixed the rent and superseded the contractual rent that this court held that the assessing authorities cannot go beyond the limits of the statute and make the assessment on the rent realised from sub-tenants or on their own assessment of what the rent payable would be. It is quite obvious that it was so held because the Rent Act of 1950 not only superseded the contractual rent but made realisation of anything more than the standard rent incapable of and penal under the statute.

17. Notwithstanding the view so expressed in those two cases this court again in case of assessment made after 1956, when the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, came into effect, consistently held that where fair rent has not been fixed by the Controller under the provisions of the Act of 1956, assessment of annual value can be made having regard to the contractual rent as paid by the tenant. It was so held in the case of James Finlay Company Limited (1969-73 Cal WN 961) and Basanta Investment Corporation (ILR (1975) 2 Cal 309) referred to hereinbefore and the last of the aforesaid decisions was approved by the Supreme Court when the special leave petition for a further appeal to the Supreme Court against that decision was dismissed. In our considered opinion, this court held as such not on oversight of the principles enunciated in the earlier decisions but because of the material change introduced by the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Section 2 cl. (c) of the 1956 Act defines fair rent to mean fair rent referred to in S. 8 or where the fair rent has been increased under S. 9 such increased rent or where the fair rent has been revised under S. 11, such revised rent. Section 8 no doubt statutorily fixes what the fair rent would be and S. 9 permits certain increases to the fair rent on grounds specified. But S. 5 unlike the Act of 1950, prohibits realisation of only any premium or other consideration for the grant, renewal or continuance of a tenancy but not any rent in excess of fair rent as estimated by the statute. But what is more important by way of change is the revised terms of S. 4 thereof, material part whereof may be set out hereunder :

"4. Excess over fair rent to be irrecoverable,

(1) A tenant shall subject to the provisions of this Act pay to the landlord :
(a) in cases where fair rent has been fixed for any premises such rent;

(b) in other cases the rents agreed upon until fair rent is fixed.

(3) any sum in excess of fair rent referred to in sub-sec. (1) shall not be recoverable by the landlord."

Unlike the provisions of S. 3 and 17 (1) of 1950 Act, there is no statutory prohibition against realisation of rent in excess of notional fair rent where such rent had not been fixed by the Controller. Moreover under the new scheme the legislature not only withdrew the statutory prohibition against realisation of any rent other than the fair rent as estimated by the statute but imposed an obligation on the tenant to pay the agreed rent if the fair rent had not been fixed. The reason for introducing such a change was perhaps the fact that rent restriction laws having already been in operation for more than 8 years, the legislature thought that where the landlord and the tenant abide by the rent agreed between them and do not go for fixation by the Controller they do so because the agreed rent bears a reasonable approximation to the fair rent as envisaged by the Act otherwise either of them would have gone on for fixation. Obviously in view of such a change introduced by the statute in a manner recognising the agreed rent to be the fair substitute for the fair rent as estimated by the statute, this court in cases of assessment after the year 1956, upheld the assessment of annual value made on the basis of the agreed rent in cases where the fair rent had not been fixed. Now the only question that arises for our consideration in these Rules is as to whether this view stands overruled by the two subsequent decisions of the Supreme Court in the case of Guntur Municipal Council v. Guntur Town Rate Payers' Association, AIR 1971 SC 353 and Devan Daulat Rai Kapoor v. New Delhi Municipal Committee, AIR 1980 SC 541 as seems to be the view taken by the learned Judge in the court below.

17-A. In the case of Guntur Municipal Council what was being challenged was the general revision made by the Municipality in the year 1960 by increasing the rental value of buildings to more than the rental value which prevailed on the dates provided in the Rent Control Act in force prior to 1960. Obviously the municipality was totally ignoring the provisions of the Rent Control Act, in making the assessment and a question was raised on behalf of the Rate Payers' Association as to whether such a procedure was in accordance with law or not. All the courts below upheld the objection so raised on behalf of the Rate Payers' Association and the said decision was upheld by the Supreme Court. Incidentally, it was sought to be argued before the Supreme Court that S. 82 (2) of the Madras Municipalities Act, which is comparable to S. 168 now under consideration, made a distinction between buildings, the fair rent of which has been actually fixed by the Controller and those in respect of which no rent had been fixed. Such a contention was overruled by the Supreme Court when it was held that under S. 82 (2) Municipality is not free to assess any arbitrary annual value but such valuation must take into account the measure of fair rent as determined by the statute whether such determination is incorporated in a fixation made by the Controller or not. Apart from the material difference between the provisions of Andhra Pradesh Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act, 1960, and those of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, now under consideration to which reference would be made hereinafter, in the Guntur case, the Supreme Court was not called upon to consider the correctness of an assessment based on agreed rent where the parties abide by such rent and have not gone on for fixation by the Controller and when the statute imposed no prohibition to the realisation of such rent.

18. The point in the aforesaid perspective, however, came up for consideration before the Supreme Court in the case of Devan Daulat Rai Kapoor v. New Delhi Municipal Committee (AIR 1980 SC 541) (supra). There individual assessments made on the basis of contractual rent where the standard rent had not been fixed by the Controller were challenged. Such assessment was upheld by the Delhi High Court but was set aside by the Supreme Court. There it was held by the Supreme Court that even in case of a building in respect of which no standard rent had been fixed within the period of limitation prescribed by the statute and the tenant's right to apply for fixation of standard rent is barred with the result that the landlord is lawfully entitled to continue to receive the contractual rent, the annual value must be limited to the measure of standard rent determinable under the statute and not on the basis of the higher rent actually received even under those circumstances by the landlord from the tenant. No landlord can reasonably expect to receive from a hypothetical tenant anything more than what is determined by the Act and this would be so equally whether the building has been let out to a tenant who has lost his right of fixation of the standard rent or the building is self-occupied by the owner. The assessing authority would in either case have to arrive at its own figure of the standard rent by applying the principles laid down in the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, for determination of standard rent and determine the annual value of the building on the basis of such figure of standard rent. The Supreme Court thought that to be the legitimate extension of the principle initially laid down in Padma Debi's case (AIR 1962 SC 151) which was reaffirmed in the case of Life Insurance Corporation.

19. In our view it would be necessary to refer to the material provisions of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, and the Andhra Pradesh Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act, 1960, in the light of the provisions whereof the Supreme Court held that the measure of rent as prescribed by the statutes must prevail over the contractual rent for furnishing the basis for assessment of the annual value. Section 2 (k) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, defines standard rent in relation to any premises to mean the standard rent referred to in S. 6 or where the standard rent has been increased under S. 7, such increased rent. This definition clause is similar to the one in the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Section 6 of the Delhi Act, like S. 8 of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, statutorily fixes the standard rent. Section 7 permits certain increases. But Ss. 4 and 5 of the Delhi Act are materially different from the corresponding provisions of the W. B. Act. Section 4 provides in express terms that subject to one exception (not relevant for our present purposes) no tenant shall notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary be liable to pay to his landlord for the occupation of any premises any amount in excess of the standard rent of the premises unless such amount is a lawful increase of the standard rent in accordance with the provisions of this Act. Sub-sec. (2) of S. 4 goes on to provide that any agreement for payment of rent in excess of standard rent shall be construed as if it were an agreement for the payment of the standard rent only. Sub-sec. (1) of S. 5 prohibits any person from claiming or receiving any rent in excess of standard rent notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary and sub-sec. (2) thereof incorporates such a prohibition against realisation of any premium or other consideration for grant, renewal or continuance of a tenancy. The Delhi Act incorporates a new innovation when in S. 12 it provides for limitation for filing an application to the Controller for fixation of rent under S. 9. This Act unlike the W. B. Act does not recognise the contractual rent and in substance supercedes the same by the standard rent fixed by the statute. That follows from the provisions of Ss. 4 and 5 (1) of the Delhi Rent Control Act. It may be that in an individual case the right to have the standard rent fixed by the Controller may be lost to an existing tenant by the limitation prescribed by the statute as a result whereof it may not be unlawful for the landlord to realise the contractual rent from that tenant but that is not important because the statute does not recognise the contractual rent in any manner and when the assessment of the annual value has to be made not on the basis of rent paid but on what would be reasonably expected to be payable by a hypothetical tenant, it was pointed out by the Supreme Court that the hypothetical tenant cannot reasonably be expected to pay anything more than what is determinable under the statute because the limitation will never operate as against him.

20. The provisions of A. P. Buildings (Lease, Rent and Eviction) Control Act, 1960, are a little different from the Delhi Act. But this Act too bears a material difference from the W. B. Act now under consideration by us. In the A. P. Act, there is no definition clause but S. 4 provides that the Controller shall fix the fair rent having regard to the considerations set out in the section itself together with certain permissible increases. Sec. 5 provides for increases to fair rent once fixed. Sub-sec. (1) of S. 7 imposes a prohibition on the landlord prohibiting him from claiming, receiving or stipulating for payment anything in excess of the fair rent where fair rent has been fixed and sub-sec. (2) of that section imposes such a prohibition on the landlord prohibiting him from claiming, receiving or stipulating for payment of any amount in excess of the agreed rent where the fair rent had not been fixed. This statute unlike the W. B. Act does not recognise the contractual rent though it does not make such rent irrecoverable until the fair rent is fixed.

21. We have referred to the material provisions of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, now under consideration. The change that was introduced in that Act from the previous Rent Restriction Acts has got an important bearing which in our view makes all the difference. Unlike the Delhi Act or the A. P. Act, the Act now under consideration by us not only recognises the contractual rent but makes it obligatory for the tenant to pay such rent until the fair rent is fixed. This positive nature of the statutory provision equates the contractual rent with the fair rent as estimated by the statute. It would bear repetition to say that the statute did so because it contemplated that where the landlord and the tenant abide by the contractual rent and do not go for fixation by the Controller they do so because the contractual rent bears a reasonable approximation to the fair rent envisaged by the statute. Such being the difference in the scheme of the W. B. Act from the scheme of the Acts under consideration by the Supreme Court in the above two cases, we feel inclined to hold that the principles enunciated by the Supreme Court in the later two cases particularly, in the case of Devan Daulat Rai Kapoor (AIR 1980 SC 541) (supra) can have no application to a case like the one now under consideration. For the very same reason the still later decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mrs. Shiela Kaushish v. I. T. Commissioner, Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 1729 is distinguishable from the present case. Here the Rent Act itself having recognised the contractual rent and having made it payable by the tenant on the basis that such rent bears fair approximation to the measure of rent prescribed by the statute there would be no bar on the assessing authority to assess the annual value with reference to such contractual rent as is being paid without any objection by the tenant to the landlord. On the scheme of the present W. B. Act in a case where the rent had not been fixed by the Controller the contractual rent as paid by the tenant cannot be said to furnish no foundation for assessment of rent reasonably payable by a hypothetical tenant. Such being the position, we are unable to hold that the learned Judge in the court below was right in his conclusion that the law as it stands is to the effect that even in a case where the landlord is realising contractual rents from the tenants no fair rent being assessed under the statute, for the purpose of assessing the annual value the assessing authority cannot base his assessment on such contractual rent but has to follow the principles laid down in the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act for determining the fair rent. On the view we take the impugned order made on a misapprehension of the legal position and as such in illegal exercise of jurisdiction should be set aside as otherwise the parties are bound to suffer serious prejudice. In the result, Rules are made absolute and we set aside the impugned order and reject the assessee's application for permission to examine an expert to prove the cost of construction with a view to fix the fair rent with reference to S. 8 (1)(d) of the W. B. Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Parties do bear their respective costs in this Rule.

22. Certificate under Art. 133 (1) of the Constitution is prayed for and the same is refused on the ground that this is not a final order.

23. There will be stay of the operation of the order for a period of one month from date, as prayed for.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— I agree.
Order accordingly.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 9, R. 13 — Suit to set aside an ex parte decree on ground of fraud — Factors to be proved.

In order to set aside an ex parte decree, the alleged fraud must be actual positive fraud, a meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the court in ignorance of the real facts of the case, and obtaining that decree by that contrivance. In the absence of fraud, a suit does not lie to set aside an ex parte decree merely on the ground of non-service of summons. A prior judgment cannot be set aside on a mere general allegation of fraud or collusion. It must be shown how, when, where and in what way the fraud was committed. The falsity of claim, perjured evidence, false representation of facts by themselves are not sufficient to set aside any decree in the absence of fraud preventing the plaintiff from placing his case before the Court. In order to maintain such suit, the plaintiff has to prove two things, viz., fraudulent suppression of summons and also that the claim of that suit was false. The falsity of the claim may be considered along with non-service of the summons as supplying the motive for and leading to the legitimate inference of fraudulent suppression. Case law discussed. Sudhis Das Gupta, Arun Chatterjee and Bijan Mazumdar, for Appellant; M. N. Ghose, A. Sahu, G. Kaur and P. Singh, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— Title Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976 and 258 of 1978 were heard together. The main dispute relates to the case set up by plaintiff in Title Suit No. 258 of 1978. He has alleged that the disputed property at premises No. 65, Mechuabazar Street, which was subsequently numbered as 155, Keshab Chandra Sen Street, belonged to one Sk. Munna as a tenant. He erected structures thereon. By a kobala dated 8-11-1917, he sold that property to Md. Hossain and Ali Hossain, who are sons of one Sk. Abdul. Sk. Amir was Abdul's elder brother and had no issue. He brought up the plaintiff as his foster son. By a registered sale deed executed on the 26th July, 1924, Md. Hossain transferred his 8 annas share in the property to his brother, Ali Hossain. Then by a registered conveyance dated 25th Mar., 1926, Ali Hossain transferred that property to the plaintiff. The latter had great respect for Ali Hossain. That property was occupied by Sk. Amir, Sk. Abdul and the members of their family including the plaintiff. On his request, Ali Hossain used to look after that property. The rent receipts and documents in respect of their property remained in the name of Ali Hossain and the plaintiff kept his original title deed with him. He was engaged as a seaman on board a merchant ship and had to remain away from Calcutta for years together. So he forgot about his title deeds, documents and also with respect to his title to the property in question. The members of his family used to occupy one room in the structure standing on the disputed property. He was on board a ship up to 31-10-1976 and again from the 5th Feb., 1977, to 16th Dec., 1977. On the 22nd Dec., 1977, he returned to Calcutta and came to know that while he was on board a ship on the 25th July, 1977, Md. Yunus, defendant No. 1, (plaintiff of Title Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976) forcibly took possession of that room, which had been in the occupation of the members of his family. He had consultation with his lawyers. He came to know that Md. Yunus claimed to have purchased the property in question described in the schedule 'A' to the plaint from defendants Nos. 3 to 5 by two different kobalas. But in fact no title accrued to Md. Yunus on the basis of those two documents. It further appeared that Md. Yunus instituted Title Suit No. 2323 of 1976 in the City Civil Court for recovery of khas possession of the premises described in Schedule 'B' to the plaint on the ground that the plaintiff was a licensee thereof. A fraudulent ex parte decree was obtained. Then Md. Yunus obtained khas possession of that room. Ali Hossain expired on the 30th Aug., 1970, leaving behind his widow (defendant No. 5) and son (defendant No. 2). The latter gifted his share in the property to his two sons, defendants Nos. 3 and 4. In fact, the plaintiff is the owner of that structure on the footing of the purchase by the aforesaid document dated 25th Mar., 1926, and Ali Hossain had no interest therein. His name is Md. Ali alias Sk. Jiaur Rasul. He is entitled to recover possession of that property. He has asked for a declaration that he is the owner of the structure of the disputed premises described in Schedule 'A' to the plaint, for a further declaration that the documents executed by defendants Nos. 3 to 5 in favour of Md. Yunus is not valid and not binding on him and also for a declaration that such ex parte decree is void and not binding on him. He has further asked for a permanent injunction to restrain Md. Yunus from disturbing his possession in the premises in question. He has prayed for recovery of khas possession with respect to the property described in the Sch. 'B' to the plaint and prayed for recovery of mesne profits.

2. Defendant No. 1, Md. Yunus, filed a written statement denying the plaintiff's allegations. His defence is that the suit is not maintainable; it is barred by estoppel and res judicata. Ali Hossain became the sole owner of the disputed property on the footing of the purchase made by him from his brother, Md. Hossain, by a kobala executed on the 26th July, 1924. Ali Hossain used to collect rent from the tenants of their property, had his name recorded in the landlord's office and in the Corporation of Calcutta as a thika tenant. In March, 1958, Md. Ali filed Partition Suit No. 403 of 1958 in the original side of the Calcutta High Court against Ali Hossain and others praying for a declaration that he had fractional share in the disputed property, for partition and for taking accounts. The suit was contested by Ali Hossain and it was dismissed. An order was passed that the plaintiff would be given liberty to file a fresh suit within a fortnight on the same cause of action on payment of Rs. 100/- as costs. After Ali Hossain's death, his only son, Zahirul Haque, gifted his share to his two sons, Serajul Haque and Manjural Haque (defendants Nos. 3 and 4). By a kobala executed on the 7th July, 1975, defendants Nos. 3 and 4 sold their 14 annas share in the disputed property to Md. Yunus. Ali Hossain's widow, Shakuran Bibi, sold her remaining two annas share in that property to Md. Yunus by a kobala executed on the 14th July, 1975. Thereby, he became the sole owner of that thika tenancy and of the property in question. His name was mutated in the landlord's office and also in the Corporation of Calcutta. He took possession of the property and collected rent from the tenants. Nabi Hossain (defendant in Title Suit No. 577 of 1976) and Aktar Hossain (defendant in Title Suit No. 577 of 1976) were licensees, who were in occupation of portions of the disputed property. Their licenses were duly revoked by him and thus, he instituted Title Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976 against them, prayed for declaration of title, ejectment and injunction. The ex parte decree was rightly passed. Md. Ali had instituted Title Suit No. 130 of 1977 praying for a declaration that the disputed property was their joint property. He contested that suit. Then Md. Ali was permitted to withdraw that suit with liberty to sue afresh and costs were awarded.

3. Subsequently, Md. Yunus amended the plaint of Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976.

4. Nabi Hossain and Aktar Hossain filed written statements and supported the case made out by the plaintiff in Title Suit No. 258 of 1978.

5. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court accepted the plaintiff's version, stated that the question of maintainability was not pleaded, dismissed Title Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976 and decreed Title Suit No. 258 of 1978. He granted the prayers for declaration and injunction. Regarding the property of the Sch. 'B' an order was passed that the provisions of S. 144 of the Civil P. C. would provide for relief. Hence these three appeals by Md. Yunus.

6. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that Md. Ali had no alias and he was not known as Sk. Ziaur Rasul. His real name is Md. Ali. The kobala, Ext. 1, executed by Ali Hossain in favour of Sk. Rasul, son of Sk. Amir, on the 25th March, 1926, is a sham and fictitious document and it was never acted upon. Ali Hossain, who was the real owner of the property, possessed the same all along. The alleged ex parte decree was correctly passed. There was no suppression of summons. The suit is not maintainable and court will grant a decree in favour of the appellant in the aforesaid Title Suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976.

7. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent Md. Ali referred to the well-known case of Mir Serwar Jan in (1912) 39 Ind App 1 (PC) and the Full Bench case of Raghava v. Sri Nivasa in AIR 1917 Mad 630. It has been contended that the document in favour of a minor is not void. In 1926, when a genuine disputed kobala, Ext. 1, was executed by Ali Hossain in favour of the plaintiff, he was only six years old. He was brought up by his uncle, Sk. Amir, who had no issue of his own. He was his foster son. The alleged ex parte decree was not rightly passed. The court omitted to consider the questions whether the claim of that Title Suit No. 2323 of 1976 was false and if any person of the name of Sk. Ziaur Rasul was in existence and because of these two defects, the case may be sent back on remand.

8. The other two appeals were not contested.

9. The first question for consideration is whether Md. Ali was also known as Sk. Ziaur Rasul. It has been contended for Md. Ali that on this, there is evidence of P. W. 1, Sakurennessa, P. W. 2, Sam-sunessa, who is his sister, and P. W. 3, Md. Ali, who is the plaintiff himself. The court cannot reject their testimony, specially when one of the D. Ws., namely, D. W. 9, Nabi Hossain, has stated in his chief that Ziaur Rasul is known as Md. Ali.

10. P. W. 1, Sakurennessa, is the plaintiff's alleged cousin and she cannot see. She pretended to identify Md. Ali in the court only by his voice. But her evidence is a mistaken one because she has stated that the man whom she was identifying in the court on the basis of his voice was Ziaur Hossain. Of course, there is a decision of the Supreme Court in a criminal case that identification by voice, when a person is not familiar with him, is risky, vide the case of Kirpal Singh v. State of U. P. in AIR 1965 SC 712 at page 714. There is a clear lacuna in her evidence because she has nowhere stated that she is or was acquainted with Ziaur Rasul or Ziaur Hossain or Md. Ali. Then comes the evidence of P. W. 2, Samsunnessa. She is none but Md. Ali's own sister. She has stated that she lives at Gaya in Bihar and after receiving the summons, she came down to Calcutta, where she had been staying with the plaintiff. She also is an interested witness. P. W. 3, Md. Ali, being the plaintiff himself is highly interested in supporting his case. The plaintiff's own case is that he was a seaman. P. W. 4, Deb-dutta Paul, is an assistant of Shipping Master's office, Calcutta. He brought a duplicate copy of the certificate of Continuous Certificate of Discharge in favour of Md. Ali and also brought the service record, Ext. 2, of one Md. Ali and not of Sk. Ziaur. It is common case that the service record, Ext. 2, relates to the plaintiff's service on board a merchant ship. But that document nowhere gives any inkling that he was also known as Sk. Ziaur Rasul. The last witness on the plaintiff's side is P. W. 5, Abdul Wahad, who is also the record sorter of that office. He only proved his service record, Ext. 2. He does not utter a word that Md. Ali or anybody else was also known as Sk. Ziaur Rasul. D. W. 9, Nabi, is the defendant in Yunus's title suit No. 577 of 1976 and his interested evidence on this is disbelieved.

11. Plaintiff has stated that his name was never mutated in the Corporation of Calcutta and he never signed his name as Ziaur Rasul because he was widely known as Md. Ali. Harries, C. J., has stated in the case reported in (1950) 54 Cal WN 186 at page 187 that damaging statements cannot be got rid of merely by stating that they were slips of tongue. He has made further damaging statements by saying that he is the owner of a ration card, where his name has been written as Md. Ali, he has been enrolled as a voter in the name of Md. Ali and he also filed a suit in the Hon'ble High Court in 1953 and ultimately, he did not proceed with that suit in 1961. It will appear from the copy of the order of the High Court dated 13-9-1961, Ext. E/1, that Md. Ali's suit was dismissed. There also, the name of Sk. Ziaur Rasul does not appear. There is no provision in Muhamaddan Law for adoption. In such circumstances, we disbelieve the plaintiff's version on this and hold that the real name of the plaintiff is Md. Ali and he was never known as Ziaur Rasul.

12. It will be pertinent to point that in the plaint, it was not stated that when that kobala, Ext. 1, executed in 1926, he was a minor and that kobala was wrongly taken in his name as a major. It will appear from that kobala that Sk. Ziaur Rasul, vendee of that kobala, was described as a shopkeeper. He cannot be permitted to make out a case outside his pleading. One fails to understand how a boy of six years could then be a shopkeeper. P. W. 3, Md. Ali, has stated in his evidence that in 1920, he was born.

13. Now, the important question arises whether the decree passed in Title Suit No. 2323 of 1976 was rightly passed. Let us first discuss the law on this. The leading English case on this is of Patch v. Ward in (1867) 3 Ch 203. Sir John Rolfe has stated in that case that in order to set aside an ex parte decree, the alleged fraud must be actual positive fraud, a meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the court in ignorance of the real facts of the case, and obtaining that decree by that contrivance. This decision was followed by this Court in the case of Durga Gati v. Taherullah in (1940) 44 Cal WN 849: (AIR 1941 Cal 215). It will be sufficient to refer to the cases of Narsingh v. Rafikn in (1910) 14 Cal WN 507 and of Romesh in (1940) 44 Cal WN 999 at page 1001: (AIR 1940 Cal 536) to show that in the absence of fraud, a suit does not lie to set aside an ex parte decree merely on the ground of non-service of summons. In the case of Atul v. East Bengal Commercial Bank Ltd. in AIR 1960 Cal 309, it has been stated that mere non-service of summons is not enough to set aside an ex parte decree because if there was mere non-service of summons, that will be the subject matter to be decided under Order 9, Rule 13 of the Civil P. C. It will appear from the observations of Jenkins, C. J., in the case of Nanda Kumar v. Ram in (1914) 18 Cal WN 681 at p. 688 that a prior judgment cannot be set aside on a mere general allegation of fraud or collusion. It must be shown how, when, where and in what way the fraud was committed. It will appear from the cases of Durga Gati (supra) and of Romesh (Supra) that falsity of claim, perjured evidence, false representation of facts by themselves are not sufficient to set aside any decree in the absence of fraud preventing the plaintiff from placing his case before the Court. In the Bench case of Girish v. Kala Chand in (1957) 61 Cal WN 207: (AIR 1957 Cal 242), it has been stated that in order to maintain such suit, the plaintiff has to prove two things, viz., fraudulent suppression of summons and also that the claim of that suit was false. In the case of Kunja Behari v. Krishnadhan in (1940) 44 Cal WN 912: (AIR 1940 Cal 489), it has been observed that falsity of the claim may be considered along with non-service of the summons as supplying the motive for and leading to the legitimate inference of fraudulent suppression. Let it be seen if these tests have been satisfied in this case.

14. Firstly about the question whether the summons of that suit was served. It will appear from the order-sheet of that suit, Ext. 3, that summons was duly served on Md. Ali on 14-1-1977 and accepted by the court. Then the court passed the ex parte decree in question declaring that the plaintiff of that suit. (Md. Yunus) was the original owner of the disputed premises and he would recover khas possession of the disputed premises and obtain an injunction. The plaint and his service records, Ext. 2, show that Md. Ali was on board a ship up to 31-10-1976, and again from 5-2-1977, i. e., he was not on sea in January, 1977.

15. The Process Server, D. W. 5, Tarak Banerjee, has said that he went to serve the summons. The present plaintiff was identified by D. W. Yunus and on such identification, he served summons on Md. Ali, who refused to accept the same. So, he served it by hanging. There is a presumption that the official work was properly performed. There is nothing on the record to rebut such presumption of fact. We accept this evidence and find that the process of that suit was duly served on Md. Ali and it was not fraudulently suppressed.

16. There is no evidence or finding how, when, where and in what way the alleged fraud was committed.

17. Then about the next item whether the claim of that suit was false. There is no pleading or proof on this important point. Hence the suit filed on the ground of non-service of the process does not lie. The question of maintainability of the suit was pleaded. Still the learned Judge observed that there was no such pleading. The absence of any pleading or proof that the claim of that Title Suit No. 2323 of 1976 was fraudulently obtained by putting forward a false claim, is sufficient for the disposal of the suit No. 258 of 1978. The alleged fraud does not satisfy the test laid down in the aforesaid cases of Patch v. Ward (1867-3 Ch 203) (supra) and Nanda Kumar v. Ram (1914-18 Cal WN 681) (supra). Nevertheless, we shall discuss the other points also for the sake of competence.

18. Then about the next point whether the disputed kobala, Ext. 1 of 1926 was acted upon. There are two classes of benami transactions, one is a real transfer, in which title is intended to be conveyed for consideration and the other class of cases is incorrectly called benami because it is a sham transaction and the transferor retains title. In the first class of cases the question is who paid consideration and in the second one, the question is, if any consideration was paid. This was stated by Venkatrama Ayyar, J., in the case of Shree Meenakshi Mills in 1956 SCA 1139: (AIR 1957 SC 49) and by Venkataramiah, J., in the case of Bhim v. Kan Singh in AIR 1980 SC 727.

19. The case in the plaint was that Ali Hossain used to manage Md. Ali's affairs. But P. W. 3 Md. Ali says that so long as his mother was alive till 1948, she managed the affairs and after her death, he entrusted Ali Hossain with such management. Evidence cannot be allowed to be led on a point not made out in the plaint, vide the cases in AIR 1930 PC 57 (1); (AIR 1958 SC 255) and WBPC Bank v. S. Ghosh in (1980) 84 Cal WN 221.

20. It will appear from the evidence of the plaintiff, P. W. 3, Md. Ali, that Ali Hossain used to realize rent from the tenants of the suit property from 1924 till his death and he used to pay the ground rent to the landlord. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the appellant has drawn our attention to the certified copy of the extract of the cash book of the landlord's sherista, Ext. N, and also to landlord's portion of the rent receipts, Ext. L, to show that rent was realized regarding the disputed premises at 155, Keshab Chandra Sen Street, in the name of Ali Hossain from October, 1974, to June, 1975. The next certified copy of the extract of the cash book of the landlord's sherista is Ext. N/1, and the corresponding receipt of the landlord is Ext. C. They will show that from July, 1975, rent regarding that property was realised from Md. Yunus till December, 1975. That shows that for all practical purposes, Ali Hossain was the owner of that property. He exercised possession as such till his death which occurred in 1970 and even after his death, there was no mutation, as rent was realised in his name up to June, 1975. There is another important aspect of the case because a very strange statement was made by the plaintiff, P. W. 3, Md. Ali that for the first time, a copy of that title deed of 1926 was obtained by his sister in 1977 and thus, he came to know of the real facts. This also is a pointer that the claim is not a bona fide one, he has no title to the disputed property and the aforesaid kotala, Ext. 1, is a sham and fictitious transaction, which was never acted upon. We hold accordingly.

21. According to the provisions of Section 13 (a) of the Evidence Act, if interest in a property is recognised by a transaction by a civil court, the same has evidentiary value. In the aforesaid ex parte decree of Title Suit No. 2323 of 1976, Ext. 3, Md. Yunus's title to the disputed property was declared by a court of competent jurisdiction. An order of eviction of the present plaintiff and an injunction as well was passed. The same is relevant under Section 13 (a) against defendants in title suits Nos. 577 and 578 of 1976. We have already held that such decree was properly passed. That decree is thus conclusive and binding on Md. Ali. It is, therefore, held that the present plaintiff has no title to the disputed property and that Md. Yunus has alone title thereto.

22. Now, the short question remains to be decided whether Nabi Hossain and Aktar Hossain are Yunus's licensees. It has been pointed out on behalf of the appellant that even D. W. 9., Nabi, has admitted in his evidence that they were allowed to live in the disputed property. It has also been pointed out that notices of revocation were issued by the plaintiff's lawyer revoking that license, vide Exts. J. and J/1. That is sufficient for the purpose of revoking such licence. D. W. 2, Yunus, has stated that Nabi Hossain and Aktar Hossain were his licensees and their licenses were revoked. His evidence is believed. We, therefore, find that Nabi Hossain and Sk. Amir and Sk. Yunus were licensees and both the suits will be decreed. No remand is called for to give a chance to plaintiff to patch up his weak points.

23. Appeals Nos. 414, 415 and 416 of 1979 be allowed. The judgments and decrees appealed against are hereby set aside. Title Suit No. 258 of 1978 is dismissed. Title Suit No. 577 of 1976 be decreed. It is hereby declared that plaintiff has title to the disputed property. He do evict the defendant from the premises in question and do get a decree for permanent injunction against defendant not to alienate the disputed property. Title Suit No. 578 of 1976 is also decreed. Plaintiff's title to the disputed property is hereby declared. He do evict the defendant. The latter is permanently restrained from transferring the disputed property.

24. There will be no order as to costs.

25. All interim orders are vacated. The deposits made in this Court by the appellant in respect of the rent realized may be withdrawn by him.

BANERJEE, J:— I agree.

Orders Accordingly.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 493

Mrs. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

Ranjit Kumar Jain, Plaintiff v. Kamal Kumar Chowdhury and another, Defendants.

Suit No. 89 of 1975, D/-22-2-1982.

(A) Hindu Law — Adoption — Ceremonies — Jains — Ceremony of giving and taking is essential even amongst Jains — Proof — Onus.

Although according to Jains the adoption is merely a temporal arrangement having no spiritual object but even then the only essential ceremony for the validity of the adoption is of giving and taking the adopted son. A mere recital in the deed itself that such a ceremony had taken place in the absence of either oral or documentary evidence to that effect is not sufficient. Case law discussed.

(Paras 9, 10)

There is no doubt that the burden of proving satisfactorily that he was given by his natural father and received by his adoptive father is on the adoptive son. In the absence of direct evidence much value had to be attached to the fact that the alleged adopted son without controversy succeeded to his adoptive father's estate and enjoyed till his death and that the documents during his life and after his death were framed upon the basis of adoption. The instant case is not a case of ancient transaction inasmuch as the adoption had taken place according to the plaintiff in the year 1956 and his mother who was still alive at the time of hearing of the suit had been a witness to the document by putting her signature thereon. Moreover according to the plaintiff others who were also present at such ceremony, out of them at least one would be called by the plaintiff to corroborate his oral testimony, but ultimately the plaintiff did not examine his mother nor the gentleman named by him to support and/or corroborate his oral testimony. Thus the plaintiff failed to give any evidence whatsoever and state as to that ceremony having taken place in his examination-in-chief. On cross-examination also he failed to substantiate that such ceremony had taken place. He did not call any independent witness to prove that such ceremony had taken place. Under those circumstances on the mere recital in the deed itself, no presumption could be drawn in view of serious challenge being thrown by the defendants. Therefore it was held that the plaintiff had failed to prove adoption as pleaded in the plaint. (Case law discussed).

EZ/FZ/C241/82/LGC

(Para 10)

(B) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 65 (a) and (c) — Secondary evidence — Certified copy of registered document — Plaintiff relying on registered deed of settlement and contending that the document had been destroyed by defendants — No specific denial of such an allegation — In the circumstances of case certified copy of deed was relied upon.

The plaintiff in the instant case had relied on the deed of settlement. If the plaintiff had the original with him he would have been the first person to produce the original before the Court. It had been contended by the plaintiff in the plaint that the said document had been destroyed by the defendants. There was no specific denial of such an allegation. Inasmuch as the defendants were relying on a will executed by the settlor it was to their interest that the original deed of settlement would not see the light of the day. Under these circumstances relying on the certified copy of the deed of settlement and other oral evidence it was held that a valid deed of settlement was executed as pleaded in the plaint.

(C) Succession Act (39 of 1925), Sections 227, 218 — Grant of probate — Probate granted in respect of a will — Deed of settlement was also executed by the executant of will — Effect of probate.

Till the probate is revoked and/or set aside and till the question of authority of the executant of the will to execute a will in respect of a property which was the subject-matter of the said settlement in question is validly and properly decided in a properly constituted suit the said probate is binding.

P. K. Roy, for Plaintiff; Amiya Nath Bose, for Defendants.

ORDER:— The present suit had been filed by Ranjit Kumar Jain against Kamal Kumar Chowdhury and Ratan Kumar Chowdhury for a declaration that the Registered Indenture of Settlement dated February 14, 1971 executed by Radha Debi (also known as Radha Rani Debi) since deceased, was valid and subsisting, for a declaration that the plaintiff being the sole Trustee of the said Trust was exclusively entitled to administer the premises No. 14/4, Sudhir Chatterjee Street, Calcutta as a Trust property, possession of the said premises and also for a declaration that the Will's dated 9th July, 1974 and 15th July, 1974, claimed to have been executed by the said Radha Rani Debi, since deceased, have no effect or bearing on the said premises. Under those circumstances, the defendants were not entitled to administer the said premises as executors under those Wills and for other consequential reliefs.

2. The plaintiff's case was that the plaintiff was the natural born son of one Budhmull Jain (also known as Budhmull Nahata), since deceased. On or about January 30, 1956, the plaintiff was adopted by his maternal grandfather, Shew Karan Jain (Kathotia) (also known as Shew Raj Singh). The said adoption of the plaintiff was duly recorded in a Registered Deed of Adoption executed by the said adoptive father of the plaintiff. According to the plaintiff, Shew Karan had left behind no other sons—either natural born or adopted except the plaintiff.

3. One Radha Rani Debi (also known as Musst. Radha Debi) since deceased was in the exclusive keeping of the said adoptive father of the plaintiff and was seized and possessed of the premises No. 14/4, Sudhir Chatterjee Street, Calcutta. Under a duly registered Indenture of Settlement executed by the said Radha Rani Debi on the 14th February, 1971, the said Radha Rani Debi since deceased settled the premises No. 14/4, Sudhir Chatterjee Street, Calcutta upon Trust upon various terms and conditions more fully contained in the Indenture of Settlement full particulars whereof will appear from the original Deed of Settlement dated 14th February, 1971. The salient terms and conditions of the said Settlement were that the settlor herself would become the first Trustee of the said Trust and she duly granted transfer of the assets and conveyed the said premises to the Trustee. On the date of the retirement of the said trustee and in such capacity the adoptive father of the plaintiff was to become the Trustee and failing him, his eldest son would be the Trustee of the said Trust property and thereupon the said premises shall vest in him. Shew Karan Jain, the adoptive father of the plaintiff, died on 18th December, 1972 and Radha Debi died on 17th July, 1974. According to the plaintiff, the said Trust was acted upon by the Settlor Trustee herself inasmuch as she realised rents, issues and profits of the said premises till her death. Shortly prior to the death of the Settlor Trustee, the defendants entered into the said premises. It was the case of the plaintiff, as pleaded in the Plaint, that the defendant No. 1 was contending to be sole executor of a Will dated 15th July, 1974, claimed to have been executed by Radha Rani Debi, whereas his son, the defendant No. 2 contended that he was the sole executor of another Will executed by Radha Rani Debi on 9th July, 1974. According to the plaintiff, the defendants had been wrongfully contending that the premises had been disposed of by Radha Rani Debi during her lifetime under those two Wills. However, it was the case of the plaintiff that the Settlor, Radha Rani Debi had no power or authority to revoke the said Trust and dispose of the property under the Will inasmuch as the said Deed of Trust and/or Settlement was executed by her, duly registered and acted upon by and between the parties. Inasmuch as it was an irrevocable Deed of Settlement, it was not within the power of Radha Rani Debi after the execution of the document to dispose of the property, which formed a part of the said settlement by her Will.

4. It was further contended in paragraph 5 of the Plaint by the plaintiff that the defendants had removed and/or destroyed the original Indenture of Settlement, which was in the possession and custody of the Settlor Trustee during her lifetime. Inasmuch as the defendants were interested in denying the said Indenture of Trust created by the settlor, the plaintiff being apprehensive of the invasion of the defendants to the rights of the plaintiff for the enjoyment of the said premises as a sole Trustee and the beneficiary of the said Deed of Settlement, had been compelled to file this suit for necessary reliefs. In some of the suits filed by the Settlor during her lifetime and still pending before other Courts, the defendant No. 1, according to the plaintiff, had wrongfully and surreptitiously got himself submitted in the place of the deceased, on the strength of the Will dated 15th July, 1974. Since the filing of this suit, the said Will, however, had been proved and probate had been granted in favour of the defendant No. 1.

5. The defendant No. 2 Ratan Kumar Chowdhury did not appear and contest this suit. However, written statement had been filed on behalf of both the defendants wherein it had been stated that the plaintiff was not the natural born son of Budhmull Jain or Budhmull Nahata and in fact, the defendants denied and disputed the factum and validity of the adoption that had been mentioned in the plaint. They also denied the factum and validity of the Deed of Adoption. They denied that apart from the plaintiff, Shew Karan did not have any other son, inasmuch as, according to the defendants, Shew Karan Jain had more than one son. In paragraph 3 of the Written Statement it had been stated that Radha Rani Debi was the sole and absolute owner of the premises No. 14/4, Sudhir Chatterjee Street, Calcutta. Inasmuch as she was the mistress of Shew Karan Jain for a number of years during his lifetime, the purported indenture of Settlement was caused to be executed inasmuch as Radha Rani Debi did not execute any Indenture of Settlement out of her free will and volition, inasmuch as she did not have the knowledge or understanding or appraisal of the contents of the Deed of Settlement. It had further been contended that the said Deed of Settlement was never intended to be acted upon, nor in fact, it was acted upon by the parties. The defendants denied that the plaintiff was the eldest son of Shew Karan Jain or that he acquired any right, title or interest in respect of the premises No. 14/4, Sudhir Chatterjee Street, Calcutta either on the strength of the Deed of Trust or otherwise. Radha Rani Debi was the sole and absolute owner of the said premises till 17th July, 1974, when she died, during her lifetime she exercised due control over the said premises and also exercised her right of ownership in respect of the said property.

6. It was the positive case of the defendants, as made out in the Written Statement, that she during her lifetime never acted as a Trustee but she treated the property as her own. It had been further contended in the Written Statement that the defendants came to know from Radha Rani Debi during her lifetime that apart from executing a power of attorney in favour of Shew Karan Jain, in order to enable him to manage her properties and affairs and also to look after and conduct litigations on her behalf, she had never executed any other document in favour of Shew Karan Jain or in respect of the said property. It was contended by the defendants that the signature on the said Deed of Trust was fraudulently procured by Shew Karan Jain, after making her believe that she was executing a power of attorney in favour of Shew Karan Jain who made her to put her signature on the said Deed of Trust, which never came into effect. Under those circumstances, according to the defendants, the said Deed of Trust was vitiated by fraud. It was not binding on Radharani Debi. Radha Rani Debi by her last Will and Statement executed by her on the 15th July, 1974 bequeathed her property in favour of the defendant No. 1 and also appointed him as the executor, under the said Will. The defendant No. 1 had duly applied for probate of the said Will and in fact, the probate had been granted to him on 14th August, 1981. Prior to execution of the said Will on 15th July, 1974, Radha Rani Debi on 9th July, 1974, executed the Will which was a registered one but she revoked the said prior Will by execution of the Will and Testament dated 15th July, 1974. It was the case of the defendants in the Written Statement that Radha Rani Debi was an illiterate lady. She could barely sign her name only with great difficulty. Under those circumstances, the defendants in their Written Statement had stated that the plaintiff had no cause of action. The suit was misconceived and was not maintainable by the plaintiff. Under those circumstances, they prayed for dismissal of the suit.

7. The following issues were raised and settled at the trial:

Issues

1. (a) Was the plaintiff, in fact, adopted by Shew Karan Jain as his son as alleged in para 1 of the Plaint?

(b) Was the said alleged adoption valid in law?

2. Is there any valid Deed of Settlement by Radha Rani Debi dated the 14th Feb., 1971, as alleged in paras. 2 and 3 of the Plaint?

3. (a) Was the Will dated 15th July, 1974 probated, as alleged in para 6 of the amended Written Statement?

(b) If so, what was the effect thereof?

4. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

8. So far as issue No. 1 is concerned, it had been contended by the learned lawyer Mr. Amiya Nath Bose, appearing on behalf of the defendant No. 1, first of all that the deed of adoption had not been properly proved by Ranjit K. Jain, Secondly he submitted that the fact of adoption had not been proved by the plaintiff and thirdly it was the case of the defendant No. 1 that the adoption of Ranjit K. Jain, the daughter's son by Shew Karan Kathodia was invalid in the eye of law inasmuch as such adoption was not permitted in the regenerate class of Hindus. Shew Karan Kathodia was a Hindu and was vaishya by caste, under these circumstances he contended that the adoption was not valid in the eye of law. So far the oral evidence of Ranjit K. Jain on the deed of adoption was that his grandfather Shew Karan Jain in the year 1966 adopted him and a registered deed of adoption was made on 30th Jan., 1956. He admitted that he was not acquainted with all the signatures on the document but he could only prove the signatures of his mother, Lakshmi Bai and that of Shew Karan Kathodia. The other signatures of the witnesses as also of the others being in Vernacular Language it was difficult for him to identify them. The said deed of adoption was registered at the office of the Sub-Register Ladmu, Rajasthan on 30th Jan., 1956. He was specifically asked in question 17th in examination-in-Chief to the effect "what was the custom that was being referred to in the said deed of adoption." However, his answer was that for the purpose of taking adoption there was a system of taking adoption in their community which had been referred to. When he was specifically asked about the custom his answer was that the custom was "Godpatra". His evidence was that Shew Karan Kathodia was a Jain. Ranjit K. Jain gave his name as Ranjit K. Jain alias Ranjit K. Kathodia. In question 248 the learned cross-examining counsel suggested to Ranjit K. Jain that "there was no ceremony of adoption". In answer to that Ranjit K. Jain stated that there was a ceremony of adoption and about 30 to 40 relatives were there. "A function was arranged and all the people who attended there were given food and all those things, as was customary in our society". When he was specifically asked whether he was prepared to call the persons whom he stated to be present during such adoption his answer was 'yes' and when he was asked to give out the names of such persons he gave the name of one as "Golpat Ram Bothra". According to his evidence excepting his mother all other gentlemen present there were dead as far as he was aware. Under the circumstances it appeared that save and except proving the two signatures on the said deed of adoption Ranjit K. Jain the plaintiff herein could neither prove the document nor the other signatures on the said document. Inasmuch as Ranjit K. Jain had nothing to do with the preparation or creation of the said document nor could he enlighten as to the ceremony that had taken place under those circumstances strictly speaking apart from the signatures of his mother and that of his grandfather nothing else on the document could be proved by him. So far the factual part of adoption was concerned his evidence was scanty inasmuch as, although he had spoken of a custom prevalent amongst his community and according to him such custom and/or ceremony was performed inasmuch as the "Godpatra" was created and 30 to 40 people were entertained at such ceremony but in spite of giving opportunities during cross-examination he failed to enlighten this Court as to whether in fact the giving and taking ceremony which was essential to such act of adoption had been complied with and/or performed or not. He did not come out in his Examination-in-Chief with such fact nor even when given an opportunity in cross-examination did he assert that such ceremony had taken place. Although he agreed to call other witnesses to the ceremony, he failed to do so. It was his positive evidence that his mother, was alive and who was a signatory to the said document and had all the knowledge of such adoption, in spite of that, the plaintiff chose not to call her as a witness and in spite of a challenge being thrown to such fact of adoption. It had also been brought out in cross-examination that some of vital signatures of Shew Karan Kathodia had been penned through in ink in the said Deed of adoption. Under those circumstances the defendant No. 1 contended that the plaintiff was relying on a cancelled document for the purpose of establishing the fact of adoption. At the beginning the plaintiff contended that originally the signatures were intact but subsequently they had been penned through while the document was in the custody of the Court. However when an opportunity was given to the plaintiff to lodge necessary complaint before the appropriate authority if that was his case, he declined to do so instead he called an interpreter and/or a translator of this Court to give evidence that in some parts of Rajasthan it was a prevalent practice of putting a vertical as also a horizontal line on a document where the signature of the executant would be taken but from the document itself it would appear that not all such signatories of Shew Karan

Kathodia had been put on such horizontal and/or vertical lines. No other document had been produced to indicate that in fact that was the custom which was being followed in some part of Rajasthan.

9. The Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 came into effect on 21st of December 1956. Under those circumstances this particular adoption having taken place in the month of January 1956 was not governed by the provisions of the said Act. Under the circumstances the provisions under the Hindu Law were applicable in the instant case. From the deed of adoption it would appear that Shewkaran Kathodia had described himself as "Son of Multamal, Caste Oswal Kathotia". He further recited in the said document that as he had no son of his own and according to his religion, one who did not have a son could not have salvation. Under those circumstances he took the eldest son of his daughter Lakshmi Devi, in adoption. He had further recited that the custom of taking in adoption and handing in adoption and other customs in the brotherhood had been fulfilled. From the said recital it would appear that Shewkaran did not describe himself as a Jain in as much as he had given his caste as Oswal Kathotia. Under those circumstances the plaintiff's evidence that the Jains were casteless and Shewkaran Kathotia was a Jain is contradictory to what has been recited in the deed itself. Gopal Chandra Sarkar Sastri's Hindu Law, 8th Edn. Page 194 observes:

"The ceremonies of giving and taking are absolutely necessary in all cases. These ceremonies must be accompanied by the actual delivery of the child; symbolical or constructive delivery by the mere parole expression or intention on the part of the giver and the taker without the presence of the boy is not sufficient nor are deeds of gifts and acceptance executed and registered in anticipation of intended adoption, nor acknowledgment sufficient by themselves to constitute legal adoption, in the absence of actual gift and acceptance accompanied by actual delivery; a formal ceremony being essential for that purpose. In a Sudra's adoption no other ceremony is necessary, giving and taking being sufficient. Among the Jains the giving and taking are essential but the religious ceremonies are not necessary; but there is no bar in their adopting in the Dattak Form."

With reference to the three regenerate casts among the Hindus, the ceremony of Dattahoma or burnt offering is said to be necessary in addition to giving and taking. Under those circumstances even amongst the Jains the ceremony of giving and taking is essential in as much as the law of the Hindus applied to the Jains.

N. R. Raghavachariar's Hindu Law, 7th Edn. Vol. 1 page 141 under Art. 134 observed:

"As regards the eligibility of the boy within the casts of the adopter, there is a rule of Sutherland that the boy to be adopted should not be the son of a woman whom the adopter could not have married in her maiden state. This rule, though formulated by Mr. Sutherland as the rule of Nandapandita, is really different from Nandapandita's rule which is that the boy to be adopted must be the son of a woman on whom the adopter could have begotten him in the Kshetraja form. Nandapandita's rule is based really on Saunake's metaphor that the adopted son is the reflexion of a son and hence disqualifies the daughter's son, the sister's son, the brother, the paternal and maternal uncles, etc., from being adopted". Under Art. 178 the same author observed:

"According to the customary law prevailing among the Jains no authority express or implied is necessary for a widow of a sonless man making an adoption to him, and the son adopted may even be a grown-up and married man. The only essential ceremony for the validity of the adoption is the giving and taking of the adopted son. The Jains differ particularly from the Brahminical Hindus in their conduct towards the dead, omitting all the obsequies after the corpse is burnt or buried. The birth of a son has no effect according to them on the future state of his progenitor and consequently, adoption is merely a temporal arrangement, having no spiritual object."

Under the circumstances although according to Jains the adoption is merely a temporal arrangement having no spiritual object but even then the only essential ceremony for the validity of the adoption is of giving and taking the adopted son.

From the recital made in the deed by the adoptive father it is indicated that he believed that as he had no son either natural or adopted, he desired to adopt a son inasmuch as according to his own religion, he could not have salvation without a son. If in fact Shewkaran was a Jain, he could not have such belief.

10. In the case reported in AIR 1970 SC 1286, Débi Prasad v. Tribeni Devi it had been held that (para 8):

"That is also the view expressed in Mayne's Hindu Law wherein it is observed that the giving and receiving are absolutely necessary to the validity of an adoption; they are the operative part of the ceremony, being that part of it which transfers the boy from one family to another; but the Hindu Law does not require that there shall be any particular form so far as giving and acceptance are concerned; for a valid adoption all that the law requires is that the natural father shall be asked by the adoptive parent to give his son in adoption, and that the boy shall be handed over and taken for this purpose".

It had been observed that there was no doubt that the burden of proving satisfactorily that he was given by his natural father and received by his adoptive father was on the adoptive son. It had further been observed in that case that in the absence of direct evidence much value had to be attached to the fact that the alleged adopted son without controversy succeeded to his adoptive father's estate and enjoyed till his death and that the documents during his life and after his death were framed upon the basis of adoption. The instant case is not a case of ancient transaction inasmuch as the adoption had taken place according to the plaintiff in the year 1956 and his mother who was still alive at the time of hearing of the suit had been a witness to the document by putting her signature thereon. Moreover according to the plaintiff others who were also present at such ceremony, out of them at least one would be called by the plaintiff to corroborate his oral testimony, but ultimately the plaintiff did not examine his mother nor the gentleman named by him to support and/or corroborate his oral testimony.

In the case reported in AIR 1961 SC 1378, Lakshman Singh Kothari v. Smt. Rup Kanwar it had been held that (para 10):

"Under the Hindu Law, whether among the regenerate caste or among Sudras, there cannot be a valid adoption unless the adoptive boy is transferred from one family to another and that can be done only by the ceremony of giving and taking. The object of the corporal giving and receiving in adoption is to secure due publicity. To achieve this object it is essential to have a formal ceremony. No particular form is prescribed for the ceremony, but the law requires that the natural parent shall hand over the adoptive boy and the adoptive parent shall receive him. The nature of the ceremony may vary depending upon the circumstances of each case. But a ceremony there shall be, and giving and taking shall be part of it. The exigencies of the situation arising out of diverse circumstances necessitated the introduction of the doctrine of delegation; and therefore, the parents, after exercising their volition to give and take the boy in adoption, may both or either of them delegate the physical act of handing over the boy or receiving him, as the case may be, to a third party".

In that particular case it was held that the ceremony of giving and taking which was very essential for the validity of an adoption had not taken place. In para 8 of the said judgment it was held:

"To appreciate this argument it is necessary to notice briefly the law of adoption vis-a-vis, the ceremony of "giving and taking", Gopal Chandra Sarkar Sastri in his book on Hindu Law, 8th Edn. succinctly describes the ceremony of "giving and taking" thus at p. 194:

"The ceremonies of giving and taking are absolutely necessary in all cases. These ceremonies must be accompanied by the actual delivery of the child; symbolical or constructive delivery by the mere parole expression of intention on the part of the giver and the taker without the presence of the boy is not sufficient. Nor are deeds of gift and acceptance executed and registered in anticipation of the intended adoption, nor acknowledgment, sufficient by themselves to constitute legal adoption, in the absence of actual gift and acceptance accompanied by actual delivery; a formal ceremony being essential for that purpose".

Much to the same effect it is stated in Mayne's Hindu Law, 11th Edn. at p. 237:

"The giving and receiving are absolutely necessary to the validity of an adoption. They are operative part of the ceremony, being that part of it which transfers the boy from one family into another. But the Hindu Law does not require that there shall be any particular form so far as giving and acceptance are concerned. For a valid adoption, all that the law requires is that the natural father shall be asked by the adoptive parent to give his son in adoption, and that the boy shall be handed over and taken for this purpose".

The leading decision on this subject is that of the Judicial Committee in Shoshinath Ghose v. Krishnasunderi Dasi (1880) ILR 6 Cal 382. That was, like the present, a case of adoption among Sudras. There, it was contended, inter alia, that there was a formal adoption by giving and taking, and in the alternative it was contended that even if there had been no formal adoption as alleged, the deeds of giving and taking, executed in 1864, were sufficient to bring about the adoption and that was all that was essential in the case of Sudras. Sir J. W. Colville, speaking for the Board rejected both the contentions. He accepted the finding of the lower courts that there was no formal giving and taking and rejected the argument that the documents themselves operated as a complete giving and taking of the adoptive boy. The learned Judge observed at p. 388 thus:

"There is no decided case which shows that there can be an adoption by deed in the manner contended for; all that has been decided is that, amongst Sudras, no ceremonies are necessary in addition to the giving and taking of the child in adoption.....It would seem, therefore, that, according to Hindu usage which the Courts should accept as governing the law, the giving and taking in adoption ought to take place by the father handing over the child to the adoptive mother, and the adoptive mother declaring that she accepts the child in adoption."

That a formal ceremony of giving and taking is essential to validate the adoption has been emphasized by the Judicial Committee again in Krishna Rao v. Sundara Siva Rao, 58 Ind App 148: (AIR 1931 PC 109).

Under those circumstances a mere recital in the deed itself that such a ceremony had taken place in the absence of either oral or documentary evidence to that effect is not sufficient, and it was difficult to accept the case of the plaintiff. Mr. Amiya Nath Bose's submission that in any event Shewkaran Kathodia belonging to Vaishya caste of Hindus could not adopt the son of his daughter in as much as he belonged to the regenerate class of the Hindus who could not according to Hindu Law adopt a son whose mother he could not have married. Mr. P. K. Roy the learned lawyer appearing on behalf of the plaintiff cited many cases indicating that such adoption was possible amongst the Jains who did not have any caste amongst themselves. In view of my finding that the plaintiff had failed to give sufficient evidence of the ceremony of giving and taking at the time of the adoption and in view of my finding that the plaintiff had also failed to prove the deed of adoption properly in as much as he could only prove the signature of the executant as also his mother, Under those circumstances it appeared that the plaintiff had failed to prove the actual ceremony of adoption which is also required in the case of Jains. Under those circumstances the question whether Shewkaran Kathodia belonged to the regenerate class or could adopt his daughter's son need not be considered. Mulla on Hindu Law 14th Edn. under Art. 613 observed:

"It is too late in the day to contend that Jains are not included in the term 'Hindus'. The Jains are governed by all the incidents relating to the Hindu joint family, as was very recently held by the Supreme Court. The ordinary Hindu Law is to be applied to Jains, in the absence of proof of special customs and usages varying that law. Those customs and usages must be proved by evidence, as other special customs and usages varying the general law should be proved, and in the absence of proof the ordinary law must prevail. There is, however, nothing to limit the scope of the inquiry to the particular locality in which the persons setting up the custom reside. Judicial decisions recognising the existence of a disputed custom among the Jains of one place are relevant as evidence of the existence of the same custom amongst the Jains of another place, unless it is shown that the customs are different; and oral evidence of the same kind is equally admissible. (a) Where, however a custom is negatived by a Judicial decision in one place, e. g. Madras, the fact that among Jains in the other States such a custom has been upheld by Courts does not warrant a general presumption of the prevalence of the custom in the Madras State".

Under Article 622 it had been observed that a daughter's son may be adopted among the Agarwala Bania of the Sarogi Sect. In the instant case there had been no evidence tendered on behalf of the plaintiff proving such custom prevalent amongst the community, to which he belonged.

In the case reported in AIR 1954 Raj 17 it had been held that in Marwar, where the deed itself mentioned that the boy had been given and received in adoption and nothing was shown whereby it could be inferred that the physical act could not take place as mentioned in the deed, a presumption did arise that the recital in the deed had been complied with good sense but on the basis of when a person does take the transfer of sending for a scribe and executing the document and getting it registered there in nothing to prevent him from performing the actual physical act of giving and taking. (sic) But if any party to the litigation proves circumstances which would show that the physical act of giving and taking could not have been performed as recited in the deed of adoption then it would be for the party setting up the adoption to prove by positive evidence that the physical act of giving and taking had taken place. In the instant case the plaintiff failed to give any evidence whatsoever and state as to that ceremony having taken place in his examination-in-chief. On cross-examination also he failed to substantiate that such ceremony had taken place. He did not call any independent witness to prove that such ceremony had taken place. Under those circumstances on the mere recital in the deed itself, no presumption could be drawn in view of serious challenge being thrown by the defendants. Considering the peculiar facts of the case it could not be expected that the defendants belonging completely to different community and family could by positive evidence show that such ceremony had not taken place, save and except challenging the said adoption thereby requiring the party setting up the adoption to prove by positive evidence that the physical act of giving and taking had taken place. Under those circumstances so far issue No. 1 is concerned I hold that the plaintiff had failed to prove the adoption as pleaded in the plaint.

11-12. So far issue No. 2 is concerned the plaintiff relied on a certified copy of a deed of settlement executed by Radha Rani Debi on 14th of February, 1971. The learned lawyer of the plaintiff relied first of all on Section 74 (2) of the Evidence Act and in the alternative on Sec. 65 (a) or (c) of the said act. So far the evidence of Ranjit K. Jain is concerned that was not absolutely clear inasmuch as he could not positively state that the said document was in the custody of the defendant nor he could give substantial evidence as to the loss or destruction of the document. He could only state with regard thereto by stating that on 7th July, the defendants came to occupy the suit premises. They took charge of whatever belonged to Radha Rani Debi. There was no positive allegation that such document came into the possession of the defendants or that they had destroyed the same. However, it had been stated in the plaint itself in paragraph 5 that the defendants had removed and/or destroyed the original deed of settlement which was in the possession and custody of the Settlor and/or trustee, during her lifetime. Save and except a bare denial in the written statement, there was no specific denial that the said deed of settlement never came into possession of the defendants or they had no occasion of destroying and/or losing the said document. Under those circumstances Mr. Roy appearing on behalf of the plaintiff contended that the certified copy of the said deed should be treated as an exhibit and admitted in evidence. He relied on various cases.

13. In the case reported in AIR 1974 Orissa, 199 Chandra Sekhar Pati v. Ahalya Devi it had been held that (Para 7):

"Ext. 1 is a draft of the Anumati Patra alleged to have been executed by P. Somalingam, the admitted owner of the house, in favour of defendants 1 and 2 on 25-12-43. The original of Ext. 1 was not before the Court. The learned Subordinate Judge held that in the absence of the original being called for from defendants 1 and 2 Ext. 1 is inadmissible in evidence. Here, he committed a serious error of law. In the plaint, Ext. 1 was referred to. Defendants 1 and 2 denied existence of such a document. Under Section 66 of the Evidence Act, secondary evidence of the contents of the documents referred to in Section 65 clause (a) shall not be admissible unless certain steps are taken under this section, as prescribed. The proviso to the section engrafts certain exceptions. Clause (2) of the proviso lays down that no notice shall be required in order to render secondary evidence admissible in a case when from the very nature of the case, the adverse party must know that he will be required to produce it. In this case, plaintiffs clearly made a reference to Ext. 1 in the plaint. Defendants 1 and 2 denied existence of such a document. The question of calling for the document from them did not arise. Ext. 1 cannot, therefore, be said to be inadmissible in evidence due to the absence of primary evidence."

In the case reported in AIR 1956 Bom 555 Vishwanath Vithoba v. Genu Kisan it had been held that (Para 3):

"The first point, which has been urged by Mr. Sukhthankar in this appeal is that the plaintiff has not proved that the three suit houses were purchased by Gyanuji. In order to prove his assertion on this point, the plaintiff has produced the certified copies of three sale deeds, Exhibits 75, 76 and 77.

Mr. Sukhthankar has urged that these copies of the sale deeds are not admissible in evidence. The plaintiff has stated in his evidence that the original sale deeds are not in his possession but they are in the possession of defendant 1. The plaintiff did not, however, give any notice to defendant 1 asking him to produce the original sale deeds.

Mr. Sukhthankar has, therefore, urged that the certified copies are not admissible in evidence as no notice was given to defendant 1 as required by clause (a) of Section 65, Evidence Act. The proviso to Section 66, however, enables the court to dispense with such notice in any case, in which the Court so thinks fit. In Surendra Krishna v. Mirza Mahammad Syed Ali, AIR 1936 PC 15, their Lordships observed:

"The only purpose of a notice under Sections 65 and 66, Evidence Act, is to give the party an opportunity by producing the original document to secure, if he pleases; the best evidence of its contents. The difference between a certified copy and the original for the purposes of the present case is not very obvious but secondary evidence is admissible when the party offering.....

In the present case after the death of Gyanuji, the next senior member of the family is Vithoba. The three sale deeds therefore in all probability went into the possession of Vithoba and after his death into the possession of the defendants. The plaintiff has stated that the original sale deeds are not with him. He has also stated that they are in the possession of defendant 1. There was no cross-examination of the plaintiff in regard to his statement on this point.

Defendant 1 in his evidence did not deny that the original sale-deeds were in his possession. It would have been desirable if a question had been put to him on this point in the cross-examination by the plaintiff. But as the record stands, the plaintiff's statement that the original sale-deeds are with defendant 1 remains unchallenged. This is also in accordance with the probabilities of the case.

The certified copies of three sale-deeds Exhs. 75, 76 and 77 were also produced by the plaintiff along with the plaint. He has specifically stated in the plaint that these sale-deeds related to the three suit houses. There was no denial of this statement in the defendants' written statement.

If, therefore, the original sale deeds are in the possession of the defendant 1 as deposed to by the plaintiff and as the plaintiff's statement that the certified copies of the three sale-deeds produced by him related to the suit houses has not been denied by the defendants, we think this would be a proper case in which notice as required under clause (a) of Sec. 65, Evidence Act, should be dispensed with. In that case, the three certified copies, Exhibits 75, 76 and 77 would be admissible under clause (a) of Section 65, Evidence Act.

On the other hand if the sale deeds are not in the possession of the defendants and as they are also not in the possession of the plaintiff, they must be deemed to have been lost. In that case, the certified copies would be admissible under clause (a) of Section 65. The learned Judge was therefore right in admitting these three documents in evidence".

In the case reported in AIR 1954 Mad 486, Karuppanna Gounder v. Kolandaswami Gounder it has been held that (Para 4):

"When once the case for the introduction of secondary evidence is made out, certified copy got from the Registrar's office can be admitted under Section 57, sub-section (5) of the Registration Act, without other proof than the Registrar's certificate of the correctness of the copy and shall be taken as a true copy. As the certified copy obtained from a Registrar's office is admissible under Section 57 (5), Registration Act, for the purpose of proving the contents of the original documents, the mere production of such copy, without any further oral evidence to support it, would be enough to show what the original document contained".

In the case reported in AIR 1963 Punj 208, Arya Pratinidhi Sabha, Punjab Jul-lunder v. Dev Raj Vir Bhan it had been held that:

"Where the will would come into possession and did come into possession of the persons interested to deny it, no presumption that it was revoked by the testator can be raised specially when no bona fide search for it was proved to have been made at the testator's death, nor was there any occasion for such a search. This is a case where the original will is not lost but is being withheld by the interested parties.

The will was executed in 1914 by a Hindu, in the Punjab when no formalities were required to effectuate the same. The will was duly registered. The original was in possession of the persons who were interested to deny the same. A registered copy of the will was provided. The attesting witnesses were not in a position to say whether the contents of the will were the same as those in the copy.

Held that so far as the execution of the original will was concerned, it was proved by the endorsement of the Registrar. That endorsement left no manner of doubt that the will was executed by the testator to whom it was read over and who admitted its contents to be correct. Therefore, a certified copy of that will would be admissible in evidence in view of the fact that the original was not forthcoming and was being withheld by persons who were interested to deny it. Under Section 65 (f), Evidence Act read with Section 57 of Registration Act, the certified copy of the will was sufficient proof of the will.

The learned Counsel sought to contend that the certified copy of the registered will is not admissible in evidence. The short answer to this argument is that in view of the fact that the original will is not available, its secondary evidence can be led as required by Section 63 read with Section 65 of the Evidence Act. The Courts below have unanimously come to the conclusion that secondary evidence is admissible in this case, for the reason that the will is being withheld by the respondents. According to clause (f) of Section 65 of the Indian Evidence Act, secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition and contents of a document when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act or by any other law in force in India to be given in evidence, and in such a case according to Sec. 65, it is only the certified copy of the document which is admissible. According to Sec. 57 of the Indian Registration Act, certified copies of documents registered have to be supplied by the Registrar to all persons, applying for the same and according to sub-section (5) of Section 57 such copies given under this section be admissible for the purpose to prove the contents of the original documents".

In the case reported in AIR 1975 Cal 381, Rabindra N. Das v. Santosh Kumar Mitra, it had been further observed (at p. 385):

"Now in order to admit secondary evidence in proof of a document of this nature it is important to bear in mind the nature of the document, the evidence about the search, the evidence about the enquiries made and the evidence about the loss of the original. In this case it is undisputed that the deed of trust which was executed was also registered. That point is not controverted. It is further apparent from the evidence of Jagdish Chandra Sil that he had the document registered. Ex. H is a certified copy issued by the Registrar of Assurance of the said deed. The fact that on that date 2nd July, 1946, a deed was executed cannot also now be disputed and it is apparent from the conduct of Sm. Provabati Biswas herself in instituting a suit challenging the execution of the said document. It is nobody's case that any other deed or document had been executed on that date. In the background of the aforesaid facts I am of the opinion that on the presumption of regularity under Section 114 (c) of the Evidence Act the certified copy issued by the Registrar of Assurance should be accepted as the correct copy of the deed executed on the 2nd July, 1946. If that is so, then the evidence about the loss of the original will have to be adjudged in the light of the factors noted hereinbefore and on a consideration of all the facts and circumstances, I am of the opinion, that this certified copy should be admitted in the evidence as a copy of the deed of 2nd July, 1946".

Under those circumstances although the plaintiff's evidence was not positive to that effect but from all the facts taken together the certified copy of the deed of settlement should be tendered in evidence. So far as the contention of the defendant that the said deed of settlement was not a valid document or that it was executed under undue influence, inasmuch as Radha Rani Debi was an illiterate woman, under those circumstances the principles applicable to a case of pardanasin lady would also be applicable in the instant case, was unacceptable to this Court in as much as the defendant Kamal K. Chowdhury failed to substantiate such case by cogent evidence. His oral testimony was far from satisfactory, full of contradictions and he travelled far beyond the case as purported to have been made out in the written statement. Radha Rani Debi admitted the execution of the said document in subsequent pleadings.

In the case reported in AIR 1960 Cal 494, Biswanath Agarwalla v. Smt. Dhapu Debi Jejodia it had been held that (Para 26):

"In order to enable the plaintiff to tender the certified copy as a secondary evidence it is enough for the plaintiff to prove that the original is not in his possession and so far he is concerned it is lost".

The plaintiff in the instant case had relied on the deed of settlement. Under those circumstances if the plaintiff had the original with him he would have been the first person to produce the original before this Court. It had been contended by the plaintiff in the plaint that the said document had been destroyed by the defendants. There was no specific denial of such an allegation. Inasmuch as the defendants were relying on a will executed by Radha Rani Debi on the 15th July, 1974 it was to their interest that the original deed of settlement would not see the light of the day. Under the circumstances on the death of Radha Rani Debi the defendant No. 1 not only applied for the probate of the will dated 15th July, 1974 but as an executor had taken charge of all the properties belonging to Radha Rani Debi during her lifetime. In fact probate had been granted in respect of the said will. Although the original deed of settlement had been challenged by the defendant on the ground that the same was obtained by perpetrating fraud and/or under undue influence exercised by Shewkaran Kathodia who prevailed upon Radha Rani to execute such deed of settlement, such case was unacceptable to this Court as Kamal K. Chowdhury failed to substantiate such case in his oral evidence which was contradictory and unreliable. He could not corroborate his statement by any other reliable evidence either oral and/or documentary. Under those circumstances that part of the defendant's case was unacceptable to this Court. In the alternative it was contended on behalf of the defendant No. 1 that even if there was a valid deed of settlement created by Radha Rani Debi such deed was not acted upon by her inasmuch as in the Corporation rate bills, rent receipts and other documents Radha Rani did not describe herself as a trustee under the said deed of settlement, moreover she had disposed of the said property by her will dated 15th July, 1974. Mr. Amiya Nath Bose very strenuously contended that Radha Rani Debi put her signature in Hindi on a document which was prepared in English script. Under those circumstances this Court should infer that the document was not understood by her properly and she did execute at the instance of Shewkaran Kathodia. The plaintiff examined Dhanesh Ch. Mitra an advocate who gave evidence stating that Sanat K. Mitra, the advocate who acted for Radha Rani not only in this particular document but also in all other suits where Radha Rani either filed the suit as a plaintiff or defended the suits as a defendant, in all those litigations Sanat K. Mitra had acted as her lawyer. According to the evidence of Dhanesh Ch. Mitra this deed of settlement was prepared at the instance of Radha Rani and as per her instructions and after the preparation of the original document the same was duly read over and explained by Dhanesh Ch. Mitra and after understanding the purports and contents thereof she duly executed the said deed. Although he could not produce his day book or other papers to indicate that he had such consultation with Radha Rani Debi but from the certified copy of the said deed it would appear that Dhanesh Ch. Mitra acted and signed as a witness to the said document and also he explained and read over the document to Radha Rani Debi before it was executed by her. Under those circumstances relying on the certified copy as also the evidence of Dhanesh Ch. Mitra it appeared that such a deed of settlement was executed by Radha Rani Debi during her lifetime which fact had also been acknowledged by her in her written statement filed in the suits referred to above. Under the deed of settlement she appointed herself the first trustee and she managed the said property till she died. Under those circumstances relying on the evidence as tendered in this suit I answer issue No. 2 in the positive. So far issue No. 3 (a) is concerned it is an admitted fact that the said Will dated 15th July, 1974 had been probated by a competent court. Under those circumstances I answer issue No. 3 (a) in the positive. So far issue No. 3 (b) is concerned till the said probate is revoked and/or set aside and till the question of authority of Radha Rani Debi to execute a will in respect of a property which was the subject-matter of the deed of settlement, is validly and properly decided in a properly constituted suit the said probate is binding. So far issue No. 4 is concerned in view of my finding that the plaintiff could not prove the deed of adoption properly as such this suit is not maintainable by the plaintiff. Under those circumstances I dismiss the suit with costs. There will however, be a stay for three weeks.

PRADYOT KUMAR BANERJEE, J.

In the matter of Purshattamdas Bhiwaniwala and others, Petitioners.

Revision under S. 155, C.P.C. D/- 2-8-1982.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), Section 22 (2) — Expression "tenant wilfully or negligently makes any false statement" — Tenant depositing in name of "M/s. B. and others, a Firm" — Firm not existing — Deposit held invalid — Counsel's mistake held not good defence.

In the instant case, B and his four brothers purchased the suit premises. The letter of attornment was duly sent to the tenant thereof stating the names of the purchasers. An ejectment notice was served on the tenant. It was followed by a suit by the five brothers against the tenant. The tenant deposited rent in the name of "M/s. B. and other, a firm". The deposit was not withdrawn by the landlords. The plaintiffs contended that the deposits under Section 22 (2) were made by the tenant wilfully and negligently making a false statement inasmuch as the plaintiffs were not "a firm" and that the deposits were therefore, invalid.

Held that the tenant knew fully well who the landlords were in view of the fact that the letter of attornment was sent by the erstwhile landlord giving full name of the present landlords who had purchased the premises and asking them to attorn to the present landlords. That letter was replied to by the tenant's Lawyer asking for the production of documents regarding the purchase. Assuming for a moment that he did not know who is his landlord, then he ought to have deposited the rent under Section 21 (1) on the ground that there was bona fide doubt as to the person to whom the rent was payable but in the affidavit the tenant stated that he deposited the rent because the landlords did not accept the rent sent to them by money order or by cheque. The affidavit filed by the tenant before the Rent Controller categorically stated that M/s. B. and others was a Firm who was the landlord. This was wilfully and negligently made by the tenant making the false statement about the description of the landlords. Hence the deposit is an invalid deposit being deposited wilfully and negligently in the name of a Firm who is not the landlord. (1960) 64 Cal WN 342, (1898) 2 Ch D 551 and (1963) 2 All ER 647, Ref. (Para 7)

The contention that the deposits were made under the advice of a lawyer for whose laches the tenant should not be made to suffer cannot be accepted to be correct when it is found that one of the tenants himself, had sworn the aforesaid affidavit before the Rent Controller and thereafter wilfully and negligently deposited rent in the wrong name. Saktinath Mukherjee, G. N. Pugalia and Bhaskar Ghosh, for Petitioners; A. C. Bhabra and Tarun Chatterjee, for Respondent.

ORDER :— This application is directed against an order passed by the learned Judge, City Civil Court, on an application under Secs. 17 (2) and 17 (2A) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act read with Section 5 of the Limitation Act. The petitioners Nos. 1 to 5 purchased the suit premises on 27th March, 1974. On 27th March, 1974 the letter of attornment was sent to the defendant opposite party informing the names of the persons who purchased the premises in suit. On 10th April, 1974, it is alleged that the defendant opposite party acknowledged the receipt of the said letter and sought to know who are the actual purchasers from the erstwhile landlord. I do not like to consider any other facts for the purpose of this rule. The notice of ejection was served on behalf of the 5 persons on 22nd March, 1976. Mr. S. P. Roy, Advocate, on behalf of the defendant acknowledged the receipt of the notice of ejection on 30th April, 1976 and the suit was instituted on 27th May, 1976. On 12th March, 1976 the defendant appeared and deposited the amount calculated at the rate of rent last paid. It appears that on 15th March, 1976, the defendant deposited rent with the Rent Controller in favour of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala & others, a Firm, for the month of February, 1976. It also appears that since February, 1976, till December, 1977 the defendant deposited rent in favour of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm. Under Section 17 (3) of the Act the application was filed by the petitioners and that the defence against the delivery of possession was struck out whereupon the defendant moved this Court against the order of striking out of defence against delivery of possession under Section 17 (3) of the Act and this Hon'ble Court by order dated 9th March, 1978 made the rule absolute and directed the rehearing of the application under Section 17 (3) of the Act on certain points. Under Section 17 (3) of the Act the application is still pending. In the meantime the defendant opposite party filed an application under Sections 17 (2), (2A) and (2B) read with Section 5 of the Limitation Act. The learned Judge, City Civil Court, held, inter alia, that the deposits were made with the Rent Controller for the period from February 1976 to December 1977 in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala & others, a Firm, within one month from the date of service of summons were valid deposits. The defendant validly deposited the rent in the Court for the month of October, 1975 to January 1976 with interest under Section 17 (1) of the Act. The question for the decision was whether the deposits made in favour of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, were valid deposits or not. The learned Judge held that the deposits are valid. It is further held that the rent for the month of December 1975 was remitted by postal money order dated 10-1-1976. He sent the cheque for the rent for the month of February 1976 but the landlord refused the cheque. As the landlord refused to accept, the rent was deposited with the Rent Controller from February 1976 to December 1977. The dispute, therefore, was raised under Section 17 (2) of the Act as to the validity of the deposit with the Rent Controller in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm. The learned Judge also held that they are all valid deposits. Being aggrieved by the said judgment and order under Section 17 (2) of the Act read with Section 17 (2A), the landlord moved the present application.

2. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee on behalf of the petitioners contended that the deposit made under Section 22 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act is invalid as according to Mr. Mukherjee the deposit was made by the tenant wilfully and negligently making the false statement for depositing the rent and the landlord has not withdrawn the amount deposited. Mr. Mukherjee contended that the rent deposited in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, is wilfully and negligently made by the tenant and as such the deposits are invalid.

3. Mr. Bhabra contended that the deposit was made after the proper tender to the landlord and after the landlord refused to receive the payment, the rent was deposited with the Rent Controller.

4. Mr. Bhabra contended that the petitioner gave receipt as M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others and therefore the deposit in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, is valid deposit. Mr. Bhabra contended that the word "Firm" is erroneous description of the landlord as the word "Firm" was redundant. The word "Firm" is used loosely on the advice of the Advocate of the tenant. It is argued by Mr. Bhabra that the Court may ignore the word "Firm" and in support of his contention relied upon the case reported in (1963) 2 All ER 647, (1898) 2 Ch D 551. Mr. Bhabra further contended that the deposit was made by the wrong advice of the lawyer and the client cannot suffer. Mr. Bhabra relied upon the case reported in AIR 1980 SC 1664, in support of his contention.

5. It appears to me, however, that Mr. Bhabra's contention cannot be accepted in view of the clear provision in law as stated in Section 22 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. S. 22 (2) of the W. B. P. T. Act comes under Chapter IV regarding the deposit of rent. Section 21 provides for the tenant for depositing rent when the rent is not accepted by the landlord. Section 22 also provides for procedure for making the deposit and consequences of incorrect particulars in the application for deposit. In the present case, admittedly, the deposit has been made in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, after an affidavit has been sworn by Mr. Keshardeo Singhanian. Mr. Bhabra relied upon the case (reported in (1898) 2 Ch D 551 at p 554 Cowen v. Truefitt, Limited) in support of his contention.

6. In the said case there was a dispute between the plaintiff and the defendant for use of a staircase leading to four rooms on the second floor of the premises, 14 Old Bond Street, where the plaintiff carried on business of ladies' tea-room and ladies' club. There was no staircase in room No. 13 directly and there was only a staircase in No. 14, old Bond Street. It was admitted that the reference in the underlease to the staircase by which access was granted was not in accordance with the facts and had been inserted in this form by mistake. In the said case it was held in the facts and circumstances of the case that in construing a deed purporting to assure a property, if there be a description of the property sufficient to render certain what is intended, the addition of a wrong name or of an erroneous statement as to quantity, occupancy, locality, or an erroneous enumeration of particulars, will have no effect. In a case reported in (1963) 2 All ER 647 (Finbow v. Air Ministry) it was found that the order was made or approval granted in exercise of the statutory power or the order is otherwise a valid order though the reference of a particular section in the statute was patently wrong. This case, however, does not, in my opinion, at all answer the question raised in this case. In the present case the question is whether the opposite party tenant while depositing rent with the Rent Controller has acted wilfully and negligently in making the deposit in the name of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala & others, a Firm. The admitted case is now that Mr. P. Bhiwaniwala and 4 brothers, the petitioners herein, purchased the property from the erstwhile owner who gave a letter of attornment to the petitioner but still thereafter the petitioners (defendant?) deposited rent with the Rent Controller in the name of the Firm. It must be remembered that while the petitioner (defendant?) made the deposit before the Rent Controller (he) had sworn an affidavit. In the said affidavit Mr. Keshardeo Singhanian stated specifically that M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, is a landlord of the tenant applicant. In the body of the affidavit it has been stated that they tendered the money to the landlord opposite party, that is, M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, who not having been accepted the same tender, the deposits are being made with the Rent Controller. In a case reported in (1960) 64 Cal WN 342, (Bengal Tent Factories Ltd. v. Amiya Prova Das Gupta) it was held by the Division Bench of this Court that the deposit of rent in favour of M/s. Amiya Prova Das Gupta instead of Mrs. Amiya Prova Das Gupta was a clear case of gross negligence and the deposit is held not to be valid deposit.

7. Mr. Bhabra, however, contended that the said case was decided on the basis of 1950 Act and the wordings of 1950 Act and the present Act are different. It was stated that the deposit was made in the wrong name wilfully and negligently calculated to prevent the landlord from withdrawing the money. This argument, in my opinion, is of no avail to the opposite party tenant, inasmuch as, in the present case the opposite party tenant knew fully well in view of the fact that the letter of attornment was given by the erstwhile landlord giving full name of the present landlords who purchased from the erstwhile landlord and asking them to attorn to the present landlords. That letter was replied to by the tenant's Lawyer asking for the production of documents regarding the purchase. Assuming for a moment that he did not know who is his landlord, then he ought to have deposited the rent under S. 21 (1) of the Act on the ground that there is bona fide doubt as to the person to whom the rent is payable but in the present case in the affidavit the tenant has already stated that he deposited the rent because the landlords have not accepted the rent sent to them by money order or by cheque. In the present case, there is no doubt, in my opinion, that the petitioners are the landlords. In fact, after the suit was filed the petitioner went on depositing in favour of all the landlords. The affidavit filed before the Rent Controller before the deposit for the month of February, 1976 onwards, categorically stated that M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others is a Firm who was the landlord of the opposite party. This according to me was wilfully and negligently made by the tenant making the false statement about the description of the landlords. In my opinion, therefore, the opposite party tenant deposited the rent before the Rent Controller and the deposit is an invalid deposit being deposited wilfully and negligently in the name of a Firm who is not the landlord of the opposite party tenant.

8. Mr. Bhabra argued before me that the mistake in the affidavit filed before the Rent Controller was a mistake of the Lawyer through whom the affidavit has been filed and he wanted to rely upon the case reported in AIR 1980 SC 1664, (Santosh v. Om Prakash) in which the Supreme Court held that the parties should not suffer for the laches of the Advocate or "the wilful failure of the Advocate to deposit the rent. In this case Mr. Bhabra wanted to file before me a copy of the affidavit filed by the learned Advocate but that was never filed in this case. In the circumstances, in my opinion, the plea that this is an Advocate's mistake or laches cannot be accepted to be correct, moreover, when it is found that one of the tenants himself, had sworn the affidavit before the Rent Controller and thereafter wilfully and negligently deposited in the wrong name cannot be attributed to the tenant the mistake of the learned Advocate. The case reported in (1960) 64 Cal WN 342 (Bengal Tent Factories Ltd. v. Amiya Prova Das Gupta) was also a case where the tenant wanted to give evidence saying that it was a mistake of the learned Advocate or their Advocate's clerk but that was not accepted by the Division Bench. In the present case, however, there is no affidavit filed by the learned Advocate. On the other hand, there are number of letters written by the learned Advocate which were taken into consideration by the Court below and in coming to a finding it was held that the word "Firm" does not make the deposit invalid. In my opinion, the learned Judge failed to consider in its proper perspective. Following the Division Bench decision reported in (1960) 64 Cal WN 342, it appears to me that there cannot be any doubt that the deposit made in favour of M/s. P. Bhiwaniwala and others, a Firm, is patently invalid deposit.

9. I, therefore, set aside the order passed by the learned Judge, City Civil Court, holding that the deposits made with the Rent Controller between February 1976 till December 1977 are not valid deposits and under Sections 17 (2) and (2A) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act the application filed by the petitioner ought to have been rejected after holding that the deposits are invalid deposits. The learned Judge was wholly wrong in rejecting the application under Section 17 (2) of the Act after deciding that the deposits are valid deposits. In this matter no Rule was issued as notices were served on both the parties and both the parties argued at length and as such after hearing both the parties, I dispose of the matter setting aside the order passed under Section 17 (2) and (2A) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act holding that the deposits made in the name of Bhiwaniwala and others a Firm, are invalid deposits under Section 22 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act.

10. The application is thus disposed of.

11. There will be no order as to costs.

— Revision allowed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 509

M. M. DUTT AND MONOJ
KUMAR MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Dr. Nilkamal Bez Boruah and another, Appellants v. The State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

F. M. A. T. No. 270 of 1982, D/- 13-7-1982.*

(A) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Sec. 3 (3) — Service of order of requisition — Validity — Two owners — Tender of order to durwan in requisitioned premises authorised to accept communication on behalf of both owners — Refusal to accept — Affixation on outer door of requisitioned premises — It amounts to effective service on both owners. (W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules (1948), R. 3 (a)).

Where the order of requisition was tendered to the durwan in the requisitioned premises authorised to accept all communications addressed to both owners or either of them, who was as such was the agent of both owners for the purpose of R. 3 (a) and on his refusing to accept, the same was affixed on the entrance door of the requisitioned premises, there was service of the order on both the owners and not only on one of them to whose residence it was forwarded earlier and thereafter was affixed on the entrance door of his residence on his being found to be absent at the residence. AIR 1982 Cal 180. Affirmed. (Para 10)

(B) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Pre; S. 3 — Requisition under the Act — Urgency or immediacy of requisition is not condition precedent.

It is not correct to say that unless there is urgency or immediacy for land, the provisions of the Act cannot be resorted to, for the preamble does not say that the Act is for speedy requisition as it provides that it is for speedy acquisition of land. (Para 12)

(C) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Pre; S. 3 (1) — Acquisition under the Act — Not mala fide or does not amount to malice in law on ground that provisions of Land Acquisition Act are not resorted to. (Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 4).

Where neither the Requisition Act nor the order under S. 3 (1) of the Act has been challenged as ultra vires Art. 14 of the Constitution the order of requisition is neither mala fide, nor the making of it is malice in law the acquisition under Section 3 (1) of the Acquisition Act could not be challenged as mala fide or amounting to malice in law on the ground that even though there was no urgency provisions of Land Acquisition Act were not resorted to for the purpose of acquisition. The State Govt. and authorities under the Act are at liberty to proceed under the provisions of the Act for the requisition of the premises. The order of requisition is neither mala fide, nor the making of it would amount to malice in law. Section 3 (1) of the Act does not lay down any such condition precedent to the exercise of the power of requisition. Even if it be assumed that requisition implies immediacy or urgency, in the absence of any specific provision in Sec. 3 (1) restricting the power of requisition only in case of urgency or immediacy, the question relating to the same is not at all justiciable. (Paras 13, 14)

(D) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Sec. 3 (iA) — Acquisition of premises by Land Acquisition Collector on receipt of proposal from State Government — Officer inspecting premises and satisfying himself as to suitability of premises for purpose in question — Requisite formation of opinion on part of officer is to be presumed.

Where the premises was acquired after receiving a proposal from the State Govt. by the Land Acquisition Collector in that behalf after inspecting the premises and after being satisfied that it was most suitable and convenient for the purpose of acquisition, i. e., for the establishment of a distribution centre of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation for maintaining supplies and services of electricity to the locality concerned, the acquisition would not be open to challenge on the ground that it was made on the direction of the State Government and there was not independent formation of opinion on the part of the Officer in question. In such a case even assuming the request to be a direction, the Land Acquisition Collector would be deemed to have independently formed his opinion as required under S. 3 (1). (Para 17)

(E) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), S. 3 (1) — Acquisition under, for company — Validity.

As soon as it is found that any land is requisitioned for any of the purposes stated in Section 3 (1) in accordance with the provisions of the Act, the order of requisition will be quite legal and valid, even though requisition has been made at the instance of a company or a corporation. In a welfare State, it is the duty of the Government to see that the purposes stated in Section 3 (1) are served and carried out in the interests of the community. It is not possible for the Government to carry out all these purposes itself, and it has to take the help of some organisation like companies, corporations etc. If it is said that the State Government cannot acquire land for effecting any of these purposes though a company and, if it is not possible for the State Government to do it itself, the interest of the community will be seriously prejudiced. One cannot be so technical in interpreting the Act in a manner that would jeopardize the welfare of the people. (Para 18)

Where the premises were acquired for ensuring effective distribution of supply of electricity in a locality, the acquisition would not be open to challenge on the ground that it was made at the instance of Electric Supply Company and not by the State Govt. (Para 18)

(F) W. B. Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act (2 of 1948), Section 3 —

Acquisition under — Not invalid on ground of not giving a hearing to owner.

So far as the Act is concerned it does not, either expressly or by necessary implications, require a hearing to be given to the owner or occupier before the making of an order of acquisition. The owner or occupier is, however, entitled to make a representation to the State Government or Land Acquisition Collector and, if any such representation is made, the said authorities will no doubt consider the same. AIR 1972 SC 2656	19

Somen Bose; Paritosh Kr. Mukherjee and Ashis Roy, for Appellants; Sadhan Gupta, Addl. Advocate General and Amaresh Chakraborty, for Respondents. Dipankar Gupta, Mrs. Ruma Pal and Suchit Kumar Banerjee, for Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation Ltd.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— In this appeal the appellants, Nilkamal Bez Boruah and his wife Smt. Sushila Bez Boruah, alleged to have been divorced, have preferred this appeal against the judgment of B. C. Ray, J., (AIR 1982 Cal 180) whereby the learned Judge discharged the Rule Nisi issued on the application of the appellants under Article 226 of the Constitution, challenging an order of requisition under S. 3 (1) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act II of 1948, hereinafter referred to as the Act.

2. The appellants claimed to have purchased the premises No. 2, Park Lane Calcutta on or about August 9, 1952, with their joint funds. The appellant No. 2, the first wife of the appellant No. 1 is alleged to have been divorced in 1954 by a decree of divorce of the High Court at Madras. It is alleged that on January 7, 1980 by a consent decree passed in Title Suit No. 1940 of 1979, the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta was partitioned by metes and bounds between the appellants. Thereafter, by an order dated September 13, 1980 of the Corporation of Calcutta the name of the appellant No. 2 in respect of her half share in the said premises was mutated. The case of the appellants is that there are three rooms in the said premises measuring 30' x 30' and there is an office accommodation of the appellant No. 1. A wholetime durwan of the appellant No. 1 has been residing in one of the said rooms.

3. On May 19, 1978, a negotiation started between the appellant No. 1 and the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation Limited for the sale of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. After the price was settled, a draft agreement for sale was prepared and sent by the appellant No. 1 to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, but the sale was not effected. It is alleged that on account of the adamant attitude of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, the sale did not materialise.

4. It appears that a notification dated June 20, 1979 was issued under Sec. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 for the acquisition of the land and building of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta for the construction of a house for an institution known as "Urdu Academy". The appellants filed an objection in writing under Section 5A of the Land Acquisition Act, and they were also heard. It has been specifically averred in the writ petition that the appellants were not aware of the final fate of the land acquisition proceedings, namely, whether the same were abandoned or cancelled. It is alleged that no information either from the office of the Land Acquisition Collector or from the Deputy Secretary, Land and Land Revenue Department has ever been communicated to the appellant No. 1.

5. It is the case of the appellants that during the pendency of the said Land acquisition proceedings the impugned order of requisition dated October 16, 1981 was passed by the First Land Acquisition Collector, under S. 3 (1) of the Act requisitioning the land with building measuring 0.2627 acre comprised in the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta "for a public purpose for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community by the establishment of a power Distribution System". It is alleged that the said order under Section 3 (1) of the Act was not served on the appellants.

The case of the appellants is that the appellant No. 1 was in Madras from October 7, 1981 to October 22, 1981, for medical check-up. He received an information from his durwan through a telegram dated October 19, 1981. Upon receipt of the information, the appellant No. 1 returned from Madras on October 22, 1981 and came to know for the first time from his durwan, Sitaram Singh that "an order had been handed over on the Ration Shop on or about October 16, 1981 at 8 P. M.", and that on October 17, 1981 some persons, claiming themselves to be the employees of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation had broken open the lock of the main gate of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta at about 11 A. M. and had driven out the durwan by physical force. The office premises was also broken open, but the durwan was permitted to reside in the office premises. After service of a lawyer's letter dated October 26, 1981, demanding justice from the First Land Acquisition Collector who issued the said order under Section 3 (1) of the Act, the appellants filed a writ petition in this Court on October 30, 1981 and, as stated already a Rule Nisi out of which this appeal arises, was issued.

6. At the hearing of the Rule Nisi before the learned Judge, the legality of the impugned order under Sec. 3 (1) of the Act was challenged on the grounds of — (1) non-service of the order under Section 3 (1) of the Act, (2) pendency of the said land acquisition proceedings, (3) non-compliance with the principles of natural justice by not giving a hearing to the appellants before the impugned order was passed and (4) absence of formation of opinion by the Collector as required under Section 3 (1) of the Act.

7. The learned Judge, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the submissions made on behalf of either party, overruled all the aforesaid grounds challenging the legality of the impugned order and discharged the Rule Nisi. Hence this appeal.

8. It appears from the writ petition and also from the judgment of the learned Judge that the appellants complained that during the pendency of the said land acquisition proceedings initiated for the acquisition of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta for the purpose of constructing a house for the Urdu Academy, the impugned order of requisition was passed. It has been averred in some of the paragraphs of the writ petition that the appellants were not aware of as to what had happened to the said land acquisition proceedings whether the same were abandoned or not. That these statements in the writ petition are untrue is apparent on the face of the letter dated October 26, 1981 of Mr. Asish Roy, Advocate demanding justice from the First Land Acquisition Collector. In Paragraph 4 of the said letter, it has been categorically stated that "by order No. 7922-LA (II) IS. 179 dated July 10, 1981, the said land acquisition proceedings were cancelled and abandoned by the Deputy Secretary, Government of West Bengal, Land and Land Reforms Department, Writers' Buildings, Calcutta-1". Thus it appears that the averments made in the writ petition that the appellants were not aware of as to whether the land acquisition proceedings were abandoned or not is untrue. The appellants also relied on the alleged pendency of the land acquisition proceedings as one of the principal grounds for challenging the validity of the impugned order under Sec. 3 (1) of the Act. The learned Judge had to deal with the said ground at length but, ultimately, overruled the same. In our opinion, on this ground alone the writ petition, is liable to be dismissed. Be that as it may, as much arguments have been made on behalf of the appellants on the merits of the case, we propose to consider the same.

9. The first point that has been urged by Mr. S. C. Bose, learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the appellants is that the impugned order under Section 3 (1) of the Act not having been served on the appellant No. 2, the alleged divorced wife of the appellant No. 1, it is illegal. In the writ petition, however, the appellants' case was that the impugned order was not served on both the appellants, but at the hearing before us the learned Counsel for the appellants had urged that the impugned order was not served on the appellant No. 2 only. It has been submitted by him that he will not be in a position to say that the impugned order was not served on the appellant No. 1. Sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Act provides that an order under sub-section (1) shall be served in the prescribed manner on the owner of the land and where the order relates to land in occupation of an occupier, not being the owner of the land, also on such occupier. Thereafter, sub-sec. (3) provides as follows :

"(3) If any person fails to comply with an order made under sub-sec. (1), the Collector or any person authorised by him in writing in this behalf shall execute the order in such manner as he considers expedient and may,—

(a) if he is a Magistrate, enforce the delivery of possession of the land in respect of which the order has been made to himself, or

(b) if he is not a Magistrate, apply to a Magistrate or; in Calcutta, as defined in clause (11) of Section 5 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951, to the Commissioner of Police and such Magistrate or Commissioner, as the case may be, shall enforce the delivery of possession of such land to him".

The manner of service has been prescribed by Rule 3 of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules, 1948, as follows :

"(3). The manner of service of Order — An order under sub-section (1) of Section 3 shall be served on the owner of the land and where the order relates to land in occupation of an occupier not being the owner of the land, also on such occupier—

(a) by delivering or tendering a copy thereof, endorsed either by the person authorised by the Act to make the order or by the Collector to the person on whom the order is to be served or his agent, or

(b) by fixing a copy thereof on the outer door of some conspicuous part of the house in which the person on whom the order is to be served ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, or

(c) by sending the same to the person on whom the order is to be served by registered post with acknowledgment due, or

(d) by fixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous part of the land to which the order relates and also in some conspicuous place of the office of Collector". The case of the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 including the State of West Bengal and the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta as pleaded in their application for vacating the interim order before the learned Judge is that the process server of the office of the First Land Acquisition Collector went to the residence of the appellant No. 1 at 60, Lake Place, Calcutta for the purpose of serving the impugned order on him on October 16, 1981, but the appellant No. 1 was found not available and, as such, the impugned order was served by affixing the same on the main door of the said premises No. 60, Lake Place, Calcutta. The process server also went to the requisitioned premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta on the same day. The durwan of the appellant No. 1 was found available. He, however, refused to accept the impugned order after reading the contents of the same, and accordingly, the process server served the impugned order by affixing the same on the entrance door of the requisitioned premises in the presence of one Shyamal Agarwal, the owner of a Ration Shop, situate opposite to the requisitioned premises. A copy of the report of service submitted by the process server has been annexed to the said application.

10. As has been stated already, the learned counsel for the appellants does not dispute the service of the order on the appellant No. 1. He, however, submits that as the order was forwarded to the appellant No. 1, or in other words, as the order was meant for the appellant No. 1, the service of the order on the appellant No. 2 was no service on the appellant No. 2. It appears from a copy of the order that has been annexed to the writ petition that the Land Acquisition Collector forwarded the same to the appellant No. 1. The question that emerges is whether the service on the appellant No. 1 should be regarded as service on the appellant No. 2 as well. According to the respondents Nos. 1 to 3, the order was served by affixation on the outer door of the residence of the appellant No. 1 and, thereafter, on the entrance door of the requisitioned premises after the durwan had refused to accept the same. The durwan has not filed any affidavit denying the allegations of the respondents that the order was handed over to him or that he had refused to accept service of the same. In the circumstances, we may proceed on the basis that the order was served on the durwan. Now under Rule 3 (1) (a) of the Rules, the order may be served by delivering or tendering a copy thereof to the person on whom the order is to be served or to his agent. Therefore, if a copy of the order is delivered or tendered to the agent of the owner or occupier, it will tantamount to good service on the owner or occupier, as the case may be. In the writ petition, it has been alleged that Sitaram Singh is the durwan of the appellant No. 1. In paragraph 8 of the letter of the lawyer dated October 26, 1981, it has been stated as follows: "I further say that the said order was never served nor attempted to be served upon the recorded joint owners viz., on my clients nor upon the authorised durwans of my clients, who reside inside the premises, but my clients had got a copy of the said order from a nearby ration shop." This statement shows that there were more than one durwan in the said premises. In paragraph 6 of the writ petition, it has been alleged that the durwan of the appellant No. 1 resides in one of the three rooms of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. There is no whisper in the writ petition that besides the said Sitaram Singh any other person resides in the said premises. No submission has been made on behalf of the appellants that the appellant No. 2 has any durwan or that the durwan resides in the said premises. It is, therefore, manifestly clear that although in paragraph 8 of the letter of the lawyer the expression "authorised durwans" has been used, the same is not correct and refers to only one durwan, namely, the said Sitaram Singh. Sitaram Singh was, therefore, authorised to accept all communications addressed to the appellants or either of them. In other words, he was the agent of the appellants for the purpose of Rule 3 (a). When the order was tendered to Sitaram Singh that would also amount to service of the order not only on the appellant No. 1, but also on the appellant No. 2. It is true that the order was forwarded to the appellant No. 1, but that is immaterial. Accordingly, we overrule the contention of the appellants that the impugned order was not served on the appellant No. 2.

11. It is the case of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, the respondent No. 6 as also of the respondents Nos. 1 to 3 that there has been a marked growth in the demand for electricity in the area on both sides of Park Street. It is an imperative necessity to establish a primary distribution station immediately in the said area. It is not possible to expand and/or to put any further load on the existing distribution systems supplying electricity to the aforesaid area as there is already optimum utilisation of the existing primary distribution systems. In view of the extreme urgency for such a distribution centre, the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation negotiated with the appellants for the purchase of the requisitioned premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. It has been already noticed that the draft agreement for sale was sent by the appellants to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. According to the appellants, the negotiation failed on account of the adamant attitude of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. This allegation appears to be untrue. The appellants have annexed to the writ petition some correspondence that passed between the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and the appellants. It appears from the said correspondence that the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation approved of the draft agreement and remitted the same back to the appellant No. 1 requesting him to complete the sale, but in spite of repeated requests the appellant No. 1 remained silent and did not even care to acknowledge the letters written to him by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation in that regard. Thus it appears that the appellants themselves backed out and failed and neglected to complete the sale. In that predicament, the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation had to approach the Government for the requisition of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. It may be stated here that long before the impugned order was made by the Collector, the land acquisition proceedings that were going on for the acquisition of the said premises for the purpose of the Urdu Academy were withdrawn.

12. It is urged on behalf of the appellants that land can be requisitioned under the provisions of the Act, only if there be an urgency for the same. Our attention has been drawn by the learned counsel for the appellants to the preamble of the Act which reads: "An Act to provide for the requisition and speedy acquisition of land for certain purposes." The preamble, in our opinion, does not at all help the contention of the learned counsel that unless there is urgency or immediacy for land, the provisions of the Act cannot be resorted to, for the preamble does not say that the Act is for speedy requisition as it provides that it is for speedy acquisition of land.

13. The learned counsel, however submits that the issuance of the impugned order under Section 3 (1) of the Act was mala fide or, in any event, it should be construed as malice in law vitiating the impugned order. It is contended by the learned counsel that as much time had elapsed between the attempt of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation to acquire the said premises by purchase and the actual requisition of the same, there was no immediate necessity for the said premises and it could be acquired under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act when, the appellants could get an opportunity of being heard under S. 5A of the said Act and, in case of acquisition, could get the amount of compensation being the market value of the said premises, before delivery of possession of the same. In our opinion, in the facts and circumstances of the case, the question of acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act does not at all arise. The Land Acquisition Act provides for acquisition of land whereas the Act with which we are concerned provides for requisition and thereafter for acquisition of land. Acquisition and requisition are completely different. In case of acquisition, the owner loses both title and possession of the land acquired but in case of requisition, the owner retains title, but temporarily loses actual physical possession of the requisitioned land. So we do not find any substance in the said contention of the learned counsel. It is significant to notice that neither the Act nor the impugned order under Section 3 (1) of the Act has been challenged as ultra vires Article 14 of the Constitution. In the circumstances, in our opinion, the respondents were at liberty to proceed under the provisions of the Act for the requisition of the said premises No. 2 Park Lane, Calcutta. The impugned order of requisition is neither mala fide nor the making of it is malice in law as contended on behalf of the appellants.

14. The main endeavour of the appellants is to show that there was no urgency for getting possession of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta-1 justifying the requisition of the same under the provisions of the Act. It is contended by the learned Counsel for the appellants that as there was no urgency, it would have been proper for the respondents Nos. 1 to 3 to acquire the said premises under the Land Acquisition Act. It is submitted that the question whether there was urgency or not is justiciable and, if there is no urgency, the impugned order of requisition should be quashed. In support of the contention that the question of urgency is justiciable and subject to judicial scrutiny, reliance has been placed by the learned counsel upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Swadeshi Cotton Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1981 SC 818. In that case the proposition, whether the opinion or satisfaction of the Government in regard to the necessity of taking immediate action as provided in S. 18-AA (1) of the Industries Development and Regulation Act, 1951 is subject of judicial review or not has been considered by the Supreme Court on the analogy of Section 17 of the Land Acquisition Act. It has been observed by the Supreme Court that even under Section 17 of the Land Acquisition Act, the satisfaction or opinion of Government/Authority in regard to the urgency of taking action thereunder, is not altogether immune from judicial scrutiny. We do not think that the decision in Swadeshi Cotton Mills' case is of any help to the appellants. The power under Section 17 of the Land Acquisition Act can be exercised by the Government only on the ground of urgency or, in other words, urgency for the land sought to be acquired is the condition precedent to the exercise of power under Section 17. So in a case under S. 17, the question of urgency is justiciable. On the other hand, Section 3 (1) of the Act does not lay down any such condition precedent to the exercise of the power of requisition. Even if it be assumed that requisition implies immediacy or urgency, in the absence of any specific provision in Section 3 (1) restricting the power of requisition only in case of urgency or immediacy, the question relating to the same is not at all justiciable. The contention of the appellants is, therefore, unsound and is rejected.

15. On the materials on record we, however, find that there was urgency. The urgency became greater after the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation had to waste a considerable time for the purchase of the said premises and for which the appellants were responsible. At the time the said premises was requisitioned, there was a great urgency and it was not possible for the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation to wait any longer. In the circumstances, we do not see any substance in the said contention of the appellants. Thus, even if the question of urgency is justiciable, we find that there was urgency for the land of the said premises justifying the requisition of the same.

16. The next contention of the appellants is that as there was no formation of opinion by the Collector, the impugned order is illegal and void. Section 3 (1) inter alia provides for the formation of opinion by the State Government as to the necessity for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community etc., before passing an order of requisition. Under sub-section (1A) of Section 3 of the Act, a Collector of a district, an Additional Magistrate or the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, when authorised by the State Government in this behalf, may exercise within his jurisdiction the powers conferred by sub-section (1). It is not disputed that the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, has been so authorised. In view of such authorisation by the State Government, the First Land Acquisition Collector was to form the opinion under Section 3 (1) before he passed the impugned order. It is submitted on behalf of the appellants that the Collector did not form any opinion, but he passed the impugned order as directed by the State Government. In support of this contention, the learned counsel for the appellants had placed reliance upon the letter dated July 16, 1981 by the Deputy Secretary to the Land and Land Reforms Department, Government of West Bengal addressed to the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta. In the said letter, the urgency of the implementation of the project of the Power Department was pointed out and it was requested that immediate steps might be taken under the provisions of the Act for the requisition of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. Counsel submits that the said letter contains a direction of the Government to the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta to requisition the said premises and, in view of such direction, he passed the impugned order of requisition. So, it is submitted on behalf of the appellants that the Collector did not form any opinion and he passed the impugned order as directed by the Government.

17. It has been stated already that Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation failed in its attempt to acquire by purchase the said premises from the appellants. Thereafter, it approached the Government for the requisition of the said premises, and the Government after being satisfied about the need and urgency for the said premises, requested the First Land Acquisition Collector to take immediate steps under the provisions of the Act. We do not think that the request of the Government made to the First Land Acquisition Collector to take steps under the Act for the requisition of the said premises, was a direction. In the application for vacating the interim order filed in the trial Court by the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and affirmed by the respondent No. 3, the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, it has been categorically stated that on receipt of the proposal, the respondent No. 3 inspected the said premises and was satisfied that it was most suitable and convenient for the establishment of a distribution centre of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of community. Thus it appears that the respondent No. 3 himself formed the opinion before he issued the impugned order of requisition. It has been already found that no direction was given by the State Government to the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, but even assuming it to be so, the question is whether the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta had independently formed his opinion as required under Section 3 (1) of the Act which, in our opinion, he did. So, we are unable to accept the contention of the appellants.

18. Another ground of attack of the appellants to the validity of the impugned order is that the provisions of the Act do not permit the State Government to requisition any land for a company which, in the instant case, is the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation Ltd. Under Section 3 (1), subject to the proviso thereto, any land can be requisitioned by the State Government inter alia for maintaining supplies and services essential to the community, for increasing employment, for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, irrigation or drainage or for the creation of better living conditions in rural and urban areas. The question is not as to whose instance the requisition is made, but whether the requisition is made for any of the purposes mentioned in Section 3 (1) of the Act. In our opinion, as soon as it is found that any land is requisitioned for any of the aforesaid purposes, in accordance with the provisions of the Act, the order of requisition will be quite legal and valid, even though requisition has been made at the instance of a company or a corporation. In a welfare State, it is the duty of the Government to see that the aforesaid purposes are served and carried out in the interests of the community. It is not possible for the Government to carry out all these purposes itself, and it has to take the help of some organisation like companies, corporations etc. If it is held that the State Government cannot acquire land for effecting any of these purposes through a company and, if it is not possible for the State Government to do it itself, the interest of the community will be seriously prejudiced. We do not think that we should be so technical in interpreting the Act in a manner that would jeopardize the welfare of the people. In case the impugned order of requisition is set aside, the result will be disastrous; a section of the community around the locality of the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta will be deprived of the supply of electricity, and it would affect to a great extent the normal activities of daily life. We are, therefore, unable to accept the above contention of the appellants. The contention is overruled.

19. In the last resort, the appellants assail the validity of the impugned order on the ground that the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 have violated the principles of natural justice. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that they should have been given an opportunity of being heard before the impugned order was passed. The learned counsel for the appellants submits that by necessary implications Section 3 (1) of the Act gives an indication that the owner or occupier, as the case may be, should be heard before an order of requisition is made. Our attention has been drawn by the learned counsel to the proviso to Section 3 (1) of the Act which reads as follows :

"Provided that no land for the purpose of religious worship or used by an educational or charitable institution shall be requisitioned under this section."

It is submitted that before passing an order of requisition, the State Government has to enquire from the owner or the occupier whether the land is for the purpose of religious worship or used by an educational or charitable institution. Thus, it is submitted, the proviso strongly suggests a hearing before an order under Section 3 (1) is made. It is contended that the Act not having expressly excluded compliance with the principles of natural justice, it was incumbent upon the authorities concerned to give a hearing to the appellants. In support of these contentions reliance has been placed by the learned counsel for the appellants upon some decisions of the Supreme Court — Madan Gopal v. District Magistrate, Allahabad, AIR 1972 SC 2656; Daud

Ahmad v. The District Magistrate, Allahabad, AIR 1972 SC 896; Smt. Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 697; Mohinder Singh Gill v. Chief Election Commr., New Delhi, AIR 1978 SC 851. While I was sitting with A.N. Sen, C. J. (as his Lordship then was) similar contentions along with all the above decisions in regard to the Act with which we are concerned have been elaborately considered by me in the decision in Smt. Sushila Devi Fomra v. State of West Bengal, (1980) 2 Cal LJ 19. In that case, in considering the contention of the appellant I relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in S. M. Nandy v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 SC 961, where the constitutional validity of the Act was challenged on three grounds : (1) absence of any provision for a notice to the owner or the occupier of the property before an order of requisition is passed, (2) absence of any provision for an appeal against an order of requisition and (3) bar of a civil suit under Section 11 of the Act. On the first ground, namely, absence of any provision for a notice to the owner or occupier of the property before the making of an order of requisition, the Supreme Court observed as follows (at p. 963):—

"It is true that there is no express provision to make a representation against an order of requisition, but there is no bar to a representation being made after an order is served under Section 3 (2) of the Act. We have no doubt that if the representation raises a point which overrides the public purpose it would be favourably considered by the State Government or other Government authorities, as the case may be."

It has been held in Fomra's case (supra) that the decision of the Supreme Court in S. M. Nandy's case is an authority for the view that the Act does not contemplate giving of a notice and hearing to the person affected before the making of an order of requisition. As S. M. Nandy's case is a case in point on the Act with which we are concerned we feel bound by the same, although we have not failed to notice that the field of operation of the principles of natural justice has been extended to a large extent. But so far as the Act is concerned we hold that it does not, either expressly or by necessary implications, require a hearing to be given to the owner or occupier before the making of an order. The appellants are, however, entitled to make a representation to the respondents Nos. 1 to 3 and, if any such representation is made, the said respondents will no doubt consider the same. Be that as it may, for the same reasons as given in Fomra's case (supra) which, we do not propose to repeat and, in view of the said observation of the Supreme Court in S. M. Nandy's case (supra), it is difficult for us to accept the contention of the appellants that as no prior hearing was given to them the impugned order is invalid and void.

20. Before we conclude, it may be observed that in view of the conduct of the appellants, this Court should not exercise its discretion in their favour under Article 226 of the Constitution. It has been already found that after the price was settled and the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation approved of the draft agreement sent by the appellant No. 1 the latter deliberately avoided the completion of the sale of the requisitioned premises. In our opinion, the appellants have not come to this Court with clean hands and, accordingly, on this ground the writ petition is also liable to be dismissed.

21. In the result, for the reasons aforesaid, the appeal is dismissed. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

22. On behalf of the appellants, a prayer has been made for the stay of operation of this judgment. It is, however, submitted on behalf of the respondent No. 6, the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation Limited that they would not demolish any structure, if there be any existing now, in the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta for a period of three weeks from date.

23. In view of the said submission, we do not think that there is any necessity for staying the operation of the judgment for the said period.

MONOJ KUMAR MUKHERJEE, J.:—
I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 518

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.

Jyotsna Ranjan Chakrabarti, Petitioner v. N. K. Mitra, Opposite Party.

C. O. No. 1578 of 1982, D/- 8-7-1982.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 29-B (inserted by Act No. 52 of 1976 and as amended by Act No. 36 of 1978) — Summary trial for eviction — Expression "a landlord who is a retired member etc." — Does not cover a retired member of armed forces who was not a landlord at the time of his retirement but became so many years thereafter by subsequent acquisition of interest.

The expression "landlord who is a retired member" clearly postulates a situation where the retired member is a landlord and is in need of occupation of the premises let out to the tenant at or about the time of retirement. A retired member of the armed forces who was not a landlord at the time of his retirement but became so, many years thereafter by subsequent acquisition of interest is not covered by the expression "a landlord who is a retired member etc." (Para 8)

Where a retired member of armed forces who was not a landlord of the tenant at the time of his retirement but became so 9 years after his retirement by virtue of a deed of gift from his mother filed an application under Section 29-B for eviction of the tenant who was inducted by his mother nearly two years after his retirement, the application was clearly misconceived. The applicant, in the instant case, could not claim eviction on the ground of his own requirement for two reasons. Firstly, because the applicant was neither the landlord nor the owner of the premises at the time of his retirement, and secondly, because the tenancy was created long after his retirement. Therefore, the applicant had no cause of action at that time so as to entitle him to a decree for eviction even under the ordinary procedure. The Rent Controller had no jurisdiction in such circumstances to pass an order for eviction under S. 29-B of the Act. (Para 8)

ORDER :— This revisional application at the instance of the tenant is directed against an order of eviction passed by the Additional Rent Controller, Barrackpur in case No. R. C. 45 of 1981 under Section 29B of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act.

2. The petitioner's case in brief is as follows :

The petitioner was inducted as a tenant in the western half portion of the ground floor of premises No. 292B, Bangur Avenue, Dum Dum by the then owner Smt. Probhabati Mitra at a monthly rental of Rs. 150/- payable according to English Calendar.

3. In November, 1979, the petitioner was informed by Smt. Probhabati Mitra that she had gifted the entire ground floor of the said premises to her son Sri N. K. Mitra (Opposite Party No. 1). Since then the opposite party No. 1 started collecting rent from the petitioner. In or about the month of February, 1980 the petitioner received a notice to quit dated February 15, 1980 under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act read with Section 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. It was stated in the notice that the opposite party No. 1 was a retired military officer, that he required the premises for his own use and occupation and the petitioner was asked to vacate the suit premises with the expiry of the month of April 1980. Thereafter the opposite party No. 1 filed an application under Section 29B of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act for eviction of the petitioner which was registered as R. C. Case No. 45 of 1981. In the said application the opposite party No. 1 made out a case of reasonable requirement for own use and occupation. The application was accompanied by a certificate issued by the Lt. Col. Randhir Singh as required under S. 29B (2) of the Act. The petitioner filed an opposition to the application and eventually the learned Additional Rent Controller by his judgment dated 24-2-1982 passed an order for eviction of the petitioner from the suit premises.

4. Being aggrieved by the order the petitioner has moved the present revisional application. The application has been heard on notice to and upon contest by the opposite party No. 1.

5. The following facts which appear from the evidence adduced before the Rent Controller are not disputed. The petitioner was inducted as a tenant in 1972 by Smt. Probhabati Mitra. Smt. Probhabati Mitra gifted the ground floor of the said premises to the opposite party No. 1 by a deed of gift dated 26-9-1979. The opposite party No. 1, who was a member of the armed forces in the medical corps retired from service in 1970. Thereafter he lived at Meerut for 8 or 9 years and then came to Calcutta to stay as a tenant in his present accommodation.

6. Section 29B was first introduced by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1976. It provided for summary trial of applications for eviction under certain circumstances. This provision was further amended in 1978 by the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1978. Section 29B as it now stands provides for a special procedure for disposal of applications for eviction on the ground of bona fide requirement by retired or retiring members of the armed forces. The Section in its material part reads as follows :—

"(1) No Civil Court shall entertain any application by a landlord being a government employee, and who being in occupation of any residential premises allotted to him by his employer is required by, or in pursuance of, an order made by such employer to vacate such residential accommodation, or in default, to incur certain obligations on the ground that he owns as a residential accommodation either in his own name or in the name of his wife or dependent child at or near the place where he is posted for the time being, or by a landlord who is a retired member of the naval, military or air force of the Union of India or will retire within a period of less than one year as such member, for the recovery of possession of any premises on the ground specified in Clause (ff) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 but such application shall be dealt with by the Controller in accordance with the procedure specified in this section."

7. The opposite party No. 1 apparently claiming to be a retired member of the armed forces of the Union of India filed the application by invoking the special procedure prescribed in the said Section. It is contended by Mr. Mukherjee appearing on behalf of the petitioner that in the facts and circumstances of the case the opposite party No. 1 is not entitled to the benefit of the said section. Mr. Chakrabarti in opposing the application contended on the other hand that the opposite party No. 1 being a retired member of the armed forces and having satisfied the learned Rent Controller about his requirements is well covered by the provisions of the section.

8. From the Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed to the bill enacting the West Bengal Premises Tenancy (Amendment) Act 1976 it appears that the object behind the provision was to assist employees of the Central or the State Government or any local authority who are required to vacate occupation of residential accommodation allotted to them by their employers it was considered necessary to provide for a special and speedy procedure to enable such employees to recover possession of their own premises. The object behind the further amendment in 1978 was to extend the benefit of the section to retired or retiring members of the armed forces who cannot get back possession of their residence let out to tenants, at the end of their service life. Keeping these objects in view and the language of the section it seems that the opposite party No. 1 in the particular circumstances of the case was not really intended to be covered by the special provisions. The section refers to a "landlord who is a retired member of the naval, military or air force of the Union of India or will retire within a period of less than one year as such member." In the present case the petitioner was inducted as a tenant in 1972. The premises at that time belonged to the mother of the opposite party No. 1. Opposite Party No. 1 had already retired from service in 1970. It is plain therefore that the opposite party No. 1 was not a landlord at the time when he retired. He was not even the owner of the premises. He became the owner in 1979 by virtue of the deed of gift. The expression "landlord who is a retired member" clearly postulates a situation where the retired member is a landlord and is in need of occupation of the premises let out to the tenant at or about the time of retirement. A retired member of the armed forces who was not a landlord at the time of retirement but became so many years thereafter by subsequent acquisition of interest is not covered by the expression "a landlord who is a retired member etc." In the instant case the admitted position is that the opposite party No. 1 was not the landlord of the petitioner at the time of his retirement in 1970. As a matter of fact the tenancy was not in existence at that time. At the time of his retirement in 1970, the opposite party could not claim eviction on the ground of his own requirement for two reasons — firstly he was neither the landlord nor the owner of the premises at that time and secondly because the tenancy was created long thereafter. Therefore he had no cause of action at that time so as to entitle him to a decree for eviction even under the ordinary procedure. To extend the benefit of the summary procedure to such a person was never within the intention of the legislature. Therefore it seems to me that the application under S. 29B by the opposite party No. 1 filed 9 years after his retirement and the tenancy having been created nearly two years after such retirement, was misconceived. The learned Rent Controller had no jurisdiction in such circumstances to pass an order for eviction under Section 29B of the Act. The impugned order therefore, cannot be sustained. The order was without jurisdiction. The application accordingly succeeds and is allowed and the order impugned in this application is set aside.

9. There will be no order for costs.

10. Let the order be communicated to the Court below forthwith.

Application allowed.

Avery India Ltd. Appellant v. Controller, Weights and Measures, Govt. of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

A. F. O. O. No. 70 of 1978, D/- 7-6-1982.

GZ/HZ/D43/82/VAN/SNV

West Bengal Standards of Weights and Measures (Enforcement) Rules (1959), R. 24 — Memo No. 2035 (60) dated Oct. 28, 1960 — Manufacture of complete set of component parts of weighing machine — Disclosure thereof in fortnightly return essential.

On a proper construction of R. 24 read with Memo No. 2035 (60) dated Oct. 28, 1960 whereby a form of return has been prescribed a complete set of component parts of a weighing machine will be considered as the weighing machine and it is required to be disclosed in the fortnightly return by the manufacturer.

(Para 9)

S. Roychoudhury with Dr. T. Banerjee and S. P. Mazumdar, for Appellant; Amaresh Chakraborty and P. Bose, for Respondents.

M. M. DUTTA, J. :— In this appeal the appellant, Avery India Limited, has challenged the propriety of the judgment of a learned single Judge of this Court whereby the learned Judges discharged the rule nisi obtained by the appellant on its application under Article 226 of the Constitution.

2. The principal question that is involved in this appeal is whether the appellant is liable to disclose in the fortnightly returns that are submitted by him under the West Bengal Standards of Weights and Measures (Enforcement) Act, 1958, the sets of component parts which, if assembled, would make complete weighing machines. In this connection, we may refer to the provision of sub-section (2) of S. 9 of the Act which provides that no weighing instrument or measuring instrument shall be sold or delivered or used in any transaction unless it has been verified or re-verified in accordance with the rules made under the Act and stamped with a stamp of verification in such manner as may be prescribed. Rule 24 of the Rules framed under the Act provides that every manufacturer or repairer of, or dealer in weights, measures, weighing instruments or measuring instruments shall maintain such records in such form and submit such returns as the Controller may direct.

3. In the fortnightly returns submitted by the appellant during the period from 1st April 1964 to 28th Feb. 1965, it was stated by the appellant that it had produced only 466 weighing instruments. But in the application dated 19th Mar. 1965 for the renewal of the manufacturing licence, the appellant stated that during the said period the appellant had produced 7,344 sets of components of weighing instruments.

4. A show cause notice dated Aug. 13, 1965 was served by the Controller of Weights and Measures, West Bengal upon the appellant calling upon it to show cause why the renewal of the manufacturing licence of the appellant for the year 1965-66 should not be refused under Rule 23 (3) of the West Bengal Standards of Weights and Measures (Enforcement) Rules, 1959 for the appellant's failure to comply with the provisions of Rule 24 of the Rules.

5. The appellant had shown cause to the said notice. The case of the appellant was that it had not, as a matter of fact, manufactured 7,344 weighing instruments, but the figure 7,344 represented the component parts of weighing instruments before they were assembled. Indeed, in the application for renewal it has been stated by the appellant that it had manufactured 7,344 sets of components of weighing machines. The Controller of Weights and Measures by his Memo No. 7237 dated Oct. 22, 1965 refused to renew the manufacturing licence of the appellant for the year 1965-66 under Rule 23 (3) of the Rules, and by Memo No. 7246 of the same date directed the seizure of all stocks of weights, measures, weighing instruments and measuring instruments in the factory of the appellant. Thereafter, the appellant moved this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution and, as stated already, a Rule Nisi was issued on the said application.

6. The learned Judge, however, could not accept the contention of the appellant that the component parts before they were assembled could not constitute weighing machines and, as such, the appellant had violated the provision of Rule 24 of the Rules. In that view of the matter, the learned Judge discharged the Rule Nisi. Hence, this appeal.

7. It is true that Rule 24 does not refer to component parts but to weighing instrument or measuring instrument. A complete instrument comes into existence after the component parts are assembled. But that is of little significance. In our opinion, for the purpose of Rule 24 when the component parts of a complete instrument are manufactured, the appellant will have to disclose the same in the fortnightly returns as complete instruments. Unless that is done, a manufacturer may never assemble the component parts and would be in a position to circumvent the provision of Rule 24.

8. It is, however, contended by Mr. Subrata Roy Chowdhury, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant that if component parts before they are assembled are considered as complete instruments and disclosed as such in the fortnightly returns, in that case, the authority would insist on their being stamped under S. 9 (2) of the Act, and the appellant will have to pay charges therefor even if they are not sold or delivered in West Bengal. We do not think that there can be any justification for this apprehension of the appellant. Under S. 9 (2) of the Act, so long as the weighing machines or instruments are not sold or delivered or used in any transaction they are not required to be stamped. It is the case of the appellant that the component parts are sent to its depots in Bihar and after the same are assembled they are sold and delivered in Bihar in accordance with the corresponding Bihar Act. There can be no doubt that before selling any instrument in Bihar the appellant has to get the instrument stamped under the Bihar Act and pay the necessary charges therefor. In our opinion, S. 9 (2) contemplates sale and delivery of any instrument in the State of West Bengal and not to any other place outside the State, for the Act only extends to the whole of West Bengal. If the appellant wants to sell a weighing machine outside West Bengal, we do not think that it can be insisted that the machine should be stamped here in West Bengal.

9. In our opinion, on a proper construction of Rule 24 read with Memo No. 2035 (60) dated Oct. 28, 1960 whereby a form of return has been prescribed, a complete set of component parts of a weighing machine will be considered as the weighing machine and is required to be disclosed in the fortnightly return. It seems that on a misconception of the provision of Rule 24 read with Memo No. 2035 (60) dated Oct. 28, 1960, the appellant did not disclose the said 7,344 sets of component parts in its fortnightly returns. The Controller of Weights and Measures should not have taken such a drastic measure against the appellant by not renewing its licence. The appellant should have been given a chance to rectify the returns.

10. In the circumstances, we set aside the impugned orders of the Controller as contained in the said Memos Nos. 7237 and 7246; both dated Oct. 22, 1965 and make the Rule Nisi absolute. The Controller of Weights and Measures, West Bengal is directed to renew the manufacturing licence of the appellant with effect from 1st April, 1965 within a month from date subject to the compliance by the appellant of all formalities in that regard. Let appropriate writs in the above terms issue. It is made clear that the appellant shall henceforth disclose in the fortnightly returns the number of sets of component parts which, if assembled, will constitute weighing machines or instruments.

11. The order of the learned Judge is set aside and the appeal is allowed.

12. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

13. It appears that pursuant to the order of this Court dated April 20, 1978 a sum of Rs. 1,68,000 has been deposited by the appellant with the United Bank of India in the name of Sandersons & Morgans, the Advocates on record for the appellant. The said sum with interest thereon may be withdrawn from the said Bank after four weeks from date and, upon such withdrawal, the same may be made over to the appellant. Till the licence is renewed, the appellant will be entitled to continue its manufacturing operations of the weighing machines in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Rules.

Appeal allowed.

1947), S. 3 (1) read with 1st proviso — Section does not by necessary implication provide for notice and hearing before an order of requisition is passed. AIR 1972 SC 2656, Discussed; AIR 1972 SC 896, Ref.

(B) West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act (5 of 1947), S. 4 (1) — Notice under — There is service of notice under S. 4 (1) if an order of requisition also directs person in occupation to vacate premises within time prescribed by Section 4 (1) — Notice to vacate is to be served only on person in occupation — Notice not giving minimum period of time to vacate requisitioned premises must be held to be insufficient.

In a given case it will be sufficient compliance of Section 4 (1) of the Act, if the Collector in forwarding an order of requisition also directs the person in occupation to vacate the premises within the time prescribed by S. 4 (1). The notice under S. 4 (1) to vacate is to be served on the person in occupation. In other words, only the person who is in actual physical possession of the requisitioned premises will be directed to vacate the same. (Paras 18, 19)

Held, as the order of requisition directed the appellant to vacate the requisitioned premises it could not but be held that the appellant was served with a notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act. Though a notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act was served on the appellant, yet it did not give the minimum period of time to vacate the requisitioned premises such period being ten days from the date of the order of requisition. The notice was insufficient. However, as the appellant was not in actual physical possession of the requisitioned premises, it could not be said to be prejudiced by the insufficiency or shortness of the notice under Section 4 (1) since the question of serving a notice on the appellant did not arise. When he was not in actual physical possession of the requisitioned premises. (Paras 18, 19)

M. M. DUTT, J.:— The appellant, Anderson Wright and Co., a partnership firm has preferred this appeal against the judgment of Amiya Kumar Mookerji, J. whereby the learned Judge has discharged the Rule Nisi issued on the application of the appellant under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

2. In the writ petition, the appellant challenged an order of requisition dated Sept. 28, 1977 of the State Government issued under Section 3 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947 (Act V of 1947), hereinafter referred to as the Act. By the said order, the entire northern block of the third floor, servants' quarters on the top floor and the garage in the ground floor of premises No. 7, Red Cross Place (formerly 7, Welleslay Place), Calcutta including all furniture, fans, lights and other fittings and other fixtures lying in the northern block with right of passage through the stairs and use of the northern side lift, gate and right of user of the T. C. by the south-eastern side of the northern block were requisitioned. The possession of the requisitioned premises was alleged to have been taken on Oct. 4, 1977 at 9.30 A. M. and handed over to the Khardah Company Ltd., the respondent No. 4, a sick industry.

3. The case of the appellant is that it is a tenant in respect of the third floor of the said premises No. 7, Red Cross Place with one garage in the ground floor and the servants' quarter on the terrace under one Durga Prosad Roy, the added respondent, Sarat Chandra Roy and others. By different agreements the appellant allowed East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd., Ramnugger Cane and Sugar Co. Ltd., and the respondent No. 4, Khardah Company Ltd. to occupy different portions of the northern block of the third floor of the said premises under leave and licence agreements. The management of the Khardah Company Ltd. was taken over by the Central Government by a notification dated May 16, 1977 issued under the Industries Development and Regulation Act, 1951. The Industrial Reconstruction Corporation of India was appointed the 'authorised person' to take over the management of Khardah Company and Sri J. C. Talukdar was appointed the Chairman of the managing committee of the Company.

4. The appellant received from the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta an order No. 19/77, dated May 27, 1977 made by the Governor of West Bengal under Clause (b) of sub-sec. (3) of S. 3 of the Act. The order is set out below :

ORDER

No. 19/77

Calcutta, the 27th May 1977.

WHEREAS it is proposed to requisition the premises described in the schedule below for a public purpose under sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the West Bengal Premises Requisition and Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947 (West Bengal Act V of 1947).

Now, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by Cl. (b) of sub-section (3) of the said Act the Governor is pleased to direct that until the expiry of three months from the date of the order Shri Sarat Chandra Roy and Sri Durga Prasad Roy of 101, Sovabazar St., Calcutta-6, the owners and M/s. Anderson Wright and Co., of 7, Wellesley Place, Calcutta 1, the tenant shall not, without the permission of the State Government, let out the said premises.

The 27th May, 1977."

The appellant by its letter dated June -6, 1977 addressed to the Dy. Secretary, Govt. of West Bengal and the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta made the following representation :

To

(1) The Deputy Secretary to the Government of West Bengal, Govt. of West Bengal, Land Utilisation and Reforms and Land and Land Revenue Department, Requisition Branch, Writers' Buildings, Calcutta-1.

(2) The First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, Calcutta-1.

Dear Sirs,

Sub : Order No. 19/77 dt. 27th May, 1977.

Copy of the aforesaid order was forwarded to us by the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta vide his memo No. 331 dated 27th May, 1977. We are very much surprised to note the contents thereof.

Without prejudice to our rights and contentions in the matter, we wish to bring the following facts to your kind consideration :

1. It is incorrect that Khardah Co. Ltd. are occupying 5550 sq. ft. of space on the northern portion of the 3rd floor of premises No. 7, Wellesley Place, Calcutta.

2. Actually by and under an agreement of leave and licence dated the 18th Feb., 1976 the said Khardah Co. Ltd. is occupying only 1000 sq. ft. of space on the northern side out of the office space belonging to us on the 3rd floor of premises No. 7, Wellesley Place, Calcutta-1. The said Khardah Co. Ltd., is occupying the said 1000 sq. ft. of the office space as licensee under us on and from the 1st of Jan., 1976 at a licence fee payable to us at the rate of Rs. 2/- per sq. ft. per month according to English Calendar month. We further place on record that since Jan., 1976 no licence fee has been paid to us by the said Khardah Company Ltd.

3. The rest of the portion is being used and/or enjoyed by M/s. Ramnugger Cane and Sugar Co. Ltd. and/or East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd. by and under separate deeds of leave and licence from time to time entered into with them by us and or by ourselves. We would request you to make note of the aforesaid position. However, as directed by your aforesaid order, we shall not disturb the status quo in any manner. In the meantime, we are trying to contact the Chairman of the committee of Management and IRCI appointed for the purpose of management of Khardah Co. Ltd. in order to (effect?) an amicable settlement with regard to the use and enjoyment of the office space required by them.

Yours faithfully,

For Anderson Wright & Co.,

3. The Ramnugger Cane and Sugar Co. Ltd.,

4. East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd., Calcutta-1.

5. It appears from the said representation that according to the appellant, Khardah Company had been in occupation of only 1000 sq. ft. out of 5500 sq. ft. of floor space in the northern block and the remaining portion was under the occupation of the other licensees of the appellant, namely, Ramnugger Cane and Sugar Co. Ltd. and East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd. The appellant by its letter dated June 22, 1977 stated the same thing to Sri J. C. Talukdar, the Chairman of the managing committee of Khardah Company, that is to say, the appellant claimed that besides 1000 sq. ft. of the northern block of the third floor of the said premises which was in occupation of Khardah Company at a licence fee of Rs. 2/- per sq. ft., the other licensees of the appellant had been in occupation of the remaining floor space of the said northern block. The appellant also signified its willingness to give to Khardah Company a floor space of 4000 sq. ft. of the said northern block on leave and licence at a licence fee of Rs. 2/- per sq. ft. Thereafter, a correspondence ensued between the appellant and the said Sri J. C. Talukdar as to the terms and conditions of such leave and the licence. Indeed, by its letter dated September 8, 1977, the appellant sent to the said Sri J. C. Talukdar a draft of the proposed leave and licence agreement. The proposed leave and licence agreement did not ultimately materialize.

6. It was alleged by the appellant that on Oct. 3, 1977, the appellant received from the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, a copy of the impugned order of requisition dated September 28, 1977 made by the State Government under Section 3(1) of the Act stating inter alia that the northern block of the third floor etc., of the said premises as described in the schedule to the said order was needed for a public purpose. In forwarding the copy of the impugned order by his memo No. 479 Req. dated September 30, 1977, the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta directed the appellant to place the requisitioned property at his disposal and control on and from Oct. 4, 1977 at 9-30 A. M. or on any subsequent day when an officer deputed from his office would take charge and possession of the property and prepare a schedule of existing fixtures.

7. On Oct. 4, 1977, the appellant moved a writ petition against the order of requisition before B. C. Ray, J. and obtained the Rule Nisi out of which this appeal arises. The appellant also obtained an interim order whereby the parties were directed to maintain status quo. It has been alleged by the appellant in its affidavit-in-reply that the said interim order was communicated to the respondents by the appellant's learned Advocate Miss. Aparna Datta by her letter dated Oct. 4, 1977, and a photostat copy of the said letter was affixed on the outer gate of the northern block in the third floor of the said premises. It is alleged by the appellant that the officers of the respondents had forcibly taken possession of the northern block by breaking open the lock at 4 P. M. on that day, that is, Oct. 4, 1977. In this connection, it may be recalled that according to the respondents, possession was taken at 9-30 A. M. and they have denied that possession was taken at 4 P. M.

8. At the hearing of the Rule Nisi from Amiya Kumar Mookerji J., the impugned order was challenged on behalf of the appellant on the grounds that there was no formation of opinion before the impugned order was issued; that the order was not served on the appellant as required under Section 3 (1) of the Act; that no notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act was served on the appellant; that the impugned order was mala fide and there was no public purpose inasmuch as the Khardah Company had been already in possession of a portion of the requisitioned premises; and that no opportunity of being heard was given to the appellant before the impugned order was passed.

9. The learned Judge overruled all the above contentions of the appellant. The learned Judge observed that he was satisfied from the records produced before him that a copy of the impugned order was duly served on the appellant. It was held by the learned Judge that service of a notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act was not necessary. As to the appellant's contention that it should have been given an opportunity of making a representation before the impugned order was made the learned Judge, on a consideration of some decisions of the Supreme Court as also of this Court, took the view that it was not necessary that before any order of requisition was passed by the State Government, the owner or the occupier of the property should be given a hearing or should be allowed to put objections to the proposed order of requisition. It was, however, observed by the learned Judge that representations might be made by the aggrieved party after the order of requisition was served on him. The contention of the appellant, that the impugned order was mala fide, and that there was no public purpose, was rejected. Upon the said findings, the learned Judge discharged the Rule Nisi. Hence this appeal.

10. The appellant did not make the owners of the said premises No. 7, Red Cross Place, Calcutta, parties in the writ petition. One Durga Prosad Roy, claiming to be the present owner of the said premises filed an application in the appeal praying for his addition as a party respondent. The application was allowed and he was added as a party respondent in the appeal. He had contested the appeal and supported the respondents.

11. We fail to understand why the appellant assailed the validity of the order of requisition before the learned Judge on the ground of non-service of the same on the appellant when, it is apparent from the writ petition, a copy of the order of requisition was forwarded to the appellant on Oct. 3, 1977 by the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta by his memo No. 479 Req. dated Sept. 30, 1977. In view of the said contention, the learned Judge had to look into the Government records and, as stated already, came to the finding that the impugned order of requisition was duly served on the appellant. No such contention has, however, been advanced before us on behalf of the appellant.

12. Dr. Debi Pal, assisted by Mr. Bhaskar Gupta, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the appellant has urged before us two points. The first point is that the provisions of the Act not having excluded, either expressly or by necessary implications, the rules of natural justice, on the contrary, there being sufficient indication for compliance of such rules in S. 3 (1) of the Act, it was incumbent upon the respondents to give the appellant an opportunity of being heard before the impugned order of requisition was made by the State Government. It is submitted that as the respondents had acted in defiance of the rules of natural justice, the impugned order of requisition is invalid and should be quashed. The second point relates to non-service on the appellant of any notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act. The contention of the appellant in this regard is that as the notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act was not served, nor was the appellant given a reasonable time to vacate the requisitioned premises, the taking of possession of the same was illegal and the appellant should be restored back to possession and the impugned order should be struck down on that ground.

13. So far as the first point relating to the compliance of the rules of natural justice is concerned, it has been vehemently urged on behalf of the appellant that the proviso to Section 3 (1) gives a strong indication that before an order of requisition is issued, the owner and the occupier of the premises in question should be given a hearing. The proviso to Section 3 (1) enjoins that no premises exclusively used for the purpose of religious worship shall be requisitioned. In support of this contention much reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellant on a decision of the Supreme Court in Madan Gopal v. District Magistrate, Allahabad, AIR 1972 SC 2656. In that case, requisition was made under Section 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Accommodation Requisition Act, 1947. Section 3 of the U. P. Act provides for requisition. The first proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act is somewhat similar to the proviso to Section 3 (1) of the Act with which we are concerned. Besides the first proviso, Section 3 of the U. P. Act contains another proviso providing inter alia that no accommodation which is in the actual occupation of any person shall be requisitioned unless the District Magistrate is further of the opinion that suitable accommodation exists for his needs or has been provided to him. It has been observed by the Supreme Court that although the U. P. Act does not contain an express provision for notice and hearing before the making of a requisitioning order, such a provision should be read there by necessary implication. It has been pointed out that there are objective factors which should be enquired into before any order is made. Further, the Supreme Court observed that the first proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act strongly suggests the implication of notice and hearing in the main part of Section 3. It is also pointed out that the second proviso requires that the owner of the property should be heard before it is requisitioned.

14. Relying on the observation of the Supreme Court on the first proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act, it has been submitied on behalf of the appellant that as the proviso to Section 3 (1) of the Act is similar to the first proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act, it should be held that the said proviso also suggests notice and hearing before the making of an order under Section 3 (1) of the Act. We have noticed the second proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act which is absent from Section 3 (1) of the Act. It is true that the Supreme Court in Madan Gopal's case has observed that the first proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act strongly suggests the implication of notice and hearing, but the Court has also taken into consideration the second proviso. In this connection, we may refer to another decision of the Supreme Court in Daud Ahmad v. District Magistrate, Allahabad, AIR 1972 SC 896 where the Supreme Court, on a consideration of only the second proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act, observed that the person affected should be given a notice and hearing before any order of requisition was made. It has been observed "It is the nature of the power and the circumstances and conditions under which it is exercised that will occasion the invocation of the principle of natural justice. Deprivation of property affects rights of a person. If under the Requisition Act the petitioner was to be deprived of the occupation of the premises the District Magistrate had to hold an enquiry in order to arrive at an opinion that there existed alternative accommodation for the petitioner or the District Magistrate was to provide alternative accommodation". Thus it follows that the second proviso to S. 3 of the U. P. Act was of much significance on the question of notice and hearing by implication before the making of an order of requisition. There is, however no provision like the second proviso to Section 3 of the U. P. Act in Section 3 (1) of the Act with which we are concerned and, that makes all the difference between these two provisions. We are, therefore, unable to accept the contention of the appellant that by necessary implication Section 3 (1) of the Act provides for notice and hearing before an order of requisition is made.

15. It is, however, urged that Sec. 3 (1) of the Act not having excluded, either expressly or by necessary implication, the observance of the principles of natural justice, such notice and hearing to the person affected like the appellant should have been given before the respondents made the order of requisition. In support of this contention, the appellant has placed reliance on a few decisions of the Supreme Court which are:

Swadeshi Cotton Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1981 SC 818; S. L. Kapoor v. Jagmohan, AIR 1981 SC 136; Madhusudan Chhotalal Patel v. Special Land Acquisition Officer, AIR 1980 SC 318; Smt. Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597.

16. We do not think that in the facts and circumstances of the case, we are to consider the question as an abstract proposition of law. We may assume in favour of the appellant that the respondents are obliged to comply with the principles of natural justice by giving the person affected an opportunity of being heard or of making a representation before issuing an order of requisition. On such assumption, let us now consider whether the appellant was given such an opportunity. It has been stated already that by order No. 19/77 dated May 27, 1977 which has been set out above, the appellant was communicated the information, inter alia, that the northern block of the third floor of premises No. 7, Red Cross Place, Calcutta was proposed to be requisitioned under Section 3 (1) of the Act, and the appellant and the owners were directed not to let out the premises until the expiry of three months from the date of the said order without the permission of the State Government. After the receipt of the said order the appellant, by its letter dated June 6, 1977 which has also been set out above, made a representation to the Dy. Secretary to the Govt. of West Bengal and the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta. In the said representation, the appellant stated that the Khardah Company was in occupation of only 1000 sq. ft. of the floor area of the said northern block out of 5500 sq. ft., and the remaining floor area was in the occupation of Ramnugger Cane and Sugar Co. Ltd. and East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd. under separate leave and licence agreements with the appellant. The appellant also stated in the said representation that it would not disturb the status quo in any manner as directed. It is apparent from the said representation that the appellant was not, in the least, aggrieved by the proposal for requisition of the northern block, and it was only interested in establishing that it was in occupation of 4500 sq. ft. of floor space of the said northern block, presumably for the purpose of monthly compensation. Indeed, in its correspondence with Khardah Company, the appellant claimed its occupation of 4500 sq. ft. of floor space and tried to persuade Sri J. C. Talukdar, the Chairman of the committee of management of the said company to enter into a leave and licence agreement with the appellant in respect of 4000 sq. ft. of floor space at the rate of Rs. 2/- per sq. ft. per month. Be that as it may, it is manifestly clear from the facts stated above that before the impugned order was passed, the appellant was served with a notice of the proposed order of requisition and, indeed, the appellant had made a representation in writing. In the circumstances, in our opinion, it does not lie in the mouth of the appellant that it was not given any opportunity of being heard or of making a representation before the impugned order of requisition was made. The contention of the appellant is without any substance and is rejected.

17. We may now consider the second point of the appellant as to the non-service of any notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act. Clause (a) of Section 4 (1) provides "where any premises are requisitioned under this Act the Collector may by notice in writing order the person in occupation of the premises, if any, to vacate the premises within a period of ten days from the service of the notice". Under the proviso to Section 4 (1), the Collector may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, extend the said period up to two months. There is serious dispute between the parties as to the time when possession was taken by the Collector. According to the respondents, possession of the northern block was taken on Oct. 4, 1977 at 9-30 A. M. At that time, one Sri S. C. Talwar was present. On the other hand, it is alleged by the appellant that possession of the requisitioned premises was forcibly taken at 4 P. M. on that date. We are, however, not really concerned as to when possession was taken by the respondents on Oct. 4, 1977.

18. The question before us is whether the appellant was served with a notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act. Section 4 (1) provides for service of a notice requiring the person in occupation to vacate within a period of ten days which may be extended by the Collector up to two months. In a Bench decision of this Court under the Act in Smt. Sudhira Bala Roy v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1981 Cal 130 it has been observed that so long as the person in actual physical possession of the premises is not called upon to vacate the premises, he will not be obliged to do so, even though he is served with the order of requisition. Further, it has been observed that in order to give effect to the order of requisition, a notice in writing has to be served on the person in actual possession of the premises to vacate the same. The complaint of the appellant is that no notice under Sec. 4 (1) of the Act has been served on it. This allegation of the appellant however, does not appear to be true. It has been noticed earlier that in forwarding a copy of the order of requisition to the appellant by his memo No. 479 Req. dated Sept. 30, 1977, the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, directed the appellant to place the requisitioned property at his disposal and control on and from Oct. 4, 1977 at 9-30 A. M. or on any subsequent day when an officer deputed from his office would take charge and possession of the property. This direction was given by the Collector obviously under Section 4 (1) of the Act. In our opinion, in a given case it will be sufficient compliance of S. 4 (1) of the Act, if the Collector in forwarding an order of requisition also directs the person in occupation to vacate the premises within the time prescribed by Section 4 (1). In view of the facts stated above, it cannot but be held that the appellant was served with a notice under Section 4 (1) of the Act. It seems to us that as the said memo of the Collector directed the appellant to vacate the requisitioned premises, the learned Judge held that no notice u/s. 4 (1) of the Act was necessary. There is, therefore, no foundation for the complaint of the appellant that no notice u/s. 4 (1) of the Act was served on it.

19. Though a notice u/s. 4 (1) of the Act was served on the appellant, yet it did not give the minimum period of time to vacate the requisitioned premises; such period being ten days from the date of the order of requisition. The notice must, therefore, be held to be insufficient. But the question is, was the appellant prejudiced by the insufficiency or shortness of the notice or can the appellant make a complaint about the same? The answer to the question should be in the negative. The notice u/s. 4 (1) to vacate is to be served on the person in occupation. In other words, only the person who is in actual physical possession of the requisitioned premises will be directed to vacate the same as held by this Court in Sudhira Bala's case (supra). It is the case of the appellant that Ramnugger Cane & Sugar Co. Ltd. and/or the East Coast Commercial Co. Ltd. were in occupation of the remaining portion of the northern block on the third floor of the said premises. Therefore, on its own admission, the appellant was not in actual physical possession of any portion of the requisitioned premises and, therefore, the question of serving a notice on the appellant does not arise as rightly contended by Mr. P. K. Sen Gupta, learned counsel for the added respondent, the owner. We do not think that, as the appellant was not in actual physical possession of the requisitioned premises, it was prejudiced by the insufficiency or shortness of the notice u/s. 4 (1) of the Act. The contention of the appellant relating to the alleged non-service of the notice under S. 4 (1) of the Act is without any substance and is overruled. No other point has been urged on behalf of the appellant.

20. For the reasons aforesaid, the judgment of the learned Judge is affirmed and this appeal is dismissed. In view, however, of the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no order for costs.

21. The appellant prays for a certificate for appeal to the Supreme Court under Article 134A of the Constitution. We do not think that any substantial question of law of general importance is involved in this case. The oral prayer for a certificate is, accordingly, disallowed.

22. No order need be made on the application for compensation filed on behalf of the added respondents. The application shall be deemed to have been disposed of along with this appeal. This order is without prejudice to the rights and contentions of the parties for compensation before the appropriate forum.

Dr. Ashis Ranjan Das, Appellant v. Rajendra Nath Mullick, Respondent.

Suit No. 558 of 1981, D/- 20-4-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 39, R. 1 — Agreement to execute lease of plot of land — Suit for specific performance of — Right of defendant to ask for interlocutory relief restraining plaintiff to make any construction — Plaintiff in possession of plot — Defendant, held, was entitled to interlocutory injunction against plaintiff.

In a suit filed by the plaintiff the defendant can apply for an interlocutory injunction against the plaintiff only if the relief claimed by the defendant arises out of the plaintiff's cause of action or is incidental to it. AIR 1975 Kant 137, Rel. on. (Para 23)

BZ/HZ/C234/82/GDR

1982 Cal./34 XI G—19

In the instant case the plot of land, subject matter of suit for specific performance of contract, was admittedly in possession of the plaintiff.

Held, that the relief sought by the defendant for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from making any or further construction in the said plot till the disposal of the suit arose out of the plaintiff's cause of action and in any event was incidental thereto. The defendant, therefore, was entitled to ask for such interlocutory relief in the suit of the plaintiff. (Para 26)

AIR 1975 Kant 137 23
Carter v. Fey 23

ORDER:— Dr. Ashis Ranjan Das, the plaintiff, instituted this suit on the 24th July, 1981 against Rajendra Nath Mullick the sole defendant, claiming, inter alia, (a) a decree for specific performance of an agreement between the parties for a lease of a portion of premises No. 2 Auckland Place, Calcutta, to be executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff, (b) mandatory injunction directing the defendant to execute and register in favour of the plaintiff a lease in the form set out in Annexure B to the plaint or in such other form as may be prescribed, (c) in default, the Registrar, Original Side of this Court be directed to execute and register such lease in favour of the plaintiff, (d) in the alternative, a decree for Rupees 29,000/- and a further decree for Rupees 1,00,000/- or (e) alternatively, an enquiry into the compensation and a decree for the sum as may be ascertained on such enquiry and other reliefs.

2. The plaintiff's cause of action is materially as follows:—

The defendant is the owner of the said premises No. 2 Auckland Place, Calcutta, which includes a plot of land measuring about 4 cottahs 5 chatacks and 7 sq. ft.

3. The plaintiff and the defendant arrived at an agreement on or about the 30th Aug., 1978 for grant of a building lease of the said plot of land by the defendant to the plaintiff for a period of 50 years from execution with option to the plaintiff of renewal thereof for further 20 years at a rent of Rs. 900/- per month payable according to the English calendar for the first two years and thereafter at the rate of Rs. 1,500/- per month for the next ten years with provision for further increase thereafter as also a premium of Rs. 50,000/- to be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant at or before the execution of the lease.

4. It was also agreed that the plaintiff would construct a four storeyed building on the said plot and would make over possession of a flat in the second floor thereof for the use and occupation of the defendant. It is alleged that the said agreement was entered into between the parties orally and is implied from their course of dealings thereafter.

5. On the same day, that is the 30th Aug., 1978, subsequent to the said agreement the plaintiff it is alleged paid Rs. 29,000/- in part payment of the said premium to the defendant who accepted the same.

6. At the material time there was a motor garage in the said plot owned by one Gonzales. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant persuaded Gonzales to vacate the said plot whereafter the possession thereof was delivered to the plaintiff on or about the 8th Sept., 1978.

7. On or about the 29th May 1981, a draft lease was sent to the Advocate of the defendant for approval and return, but the defendant thereafter avoided the execution of the lease on diverse pretexts.

8. The case of the defendant is, that there has been no concluded contract between the parties and that the plaintiff is not entitled to specific performance.

9. The defendant alleges that in or about 1978 the parties had negotiations for grant of a building lease by the defendant to the plaintiff of the said plot on inter alia the following terms and conditions:—

(a) The plaintiff could construct a 4 storeyed building on the said plot within 4 years from the date of the contract and the entire second floor containing 2 self-contained flats would be given to the defendant;

(b) The lease would be for 50 years certain with an option for renewal for a further period of 20 years;

(c) The monthly rent to be agreed upon would be subject to an increase at the rate of 15% every 10th year for certain term and 20% after every 10 years for an option period;

(d) A premium would be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant.

10. A draft of the proposed terms and conditions of the lease was made over by the defendant to the plaintiff in June or July 1978.

11. It was tentatively agreed that the premium payable by the plaintiff to the defendant would be between Rs. 1.5 Lakhs and Rs. 2,00,000/- and that the rent would be approximately Rs. 1,000/- per month subject to periodic increases.

12. The defendant alleges that before finalisation of the terms and conditions on or about the 30th Aug., 1978 the defendant obtained a loan of Rs. 29,000/- from the plaintiff and it was agreed that the said loan would be adjusted against the premium on finalisation of the agreement of lease.

13. The defendant alleges that since July, 1981 the defendant was obstructed by the plaintiff from having access to the said plot and that the plaintiff, its servants and agents trespassed into the said plot wrongfully. The defendant lodged complaints to the police and instituted criminal proceedings before the Executive Magistrate, Calcutta.

14. It is alleged that the said Gonzales surrendered the possession of the said plot of land to the defendant and not to the plaintiff.

15. It is alleged that the plaintiff has since taken forceful possession of the said plot wrongfully since the middle of Jan., 1982 and has put up bamboo structures and tin shades thereon and is utilising the same by letting it out for parking of cars. It is contended that the plaintiff has no right, title and interest in the said plot and should not be permitted to continue in wrongful possession thereof.

16. In this application of the defendant on a notice dated the 23rd Feb., 1982, inter alia, the following orders have been prayed for:—

(a) A Receiver over the said plot.

(b) An injunction restraining the plaintiff from making any or further construction in the said plot till the disposal of the suit.

(c) An injunction restraining the plaintiff from parking or allowing the parking of vehicles in the said plot till the disposal of the suit.

(d) An injunction restraining the plaintiff from realising any fee for parking of vehicles in the said plot.

(e) The Receiver be directed to realise all fees for parking of vehicles in the said plot and to invest the same.

17. The plaintiff has affirmed an affidavit on the 12th March, 1982 which has been filed in opposition to the petition. It is, inter alia, alleged in this affidavit that after the defendant persuaded the said Gonzales to vacate the said plot of land possession thereof was duly delivered to the plaintiff in part performance of the said lease. The plaintiff alleges further that he has constructed the fencing demarcating the said plot from the rest of the premises and has constructed a gate for the purpose of egress and ingress to the same. The plaintiff denies having put up any bamboo structures or tin sheds in the said plot and alleges that temporary constructions were already there before he came into the possession of the plot.

18. The plaintiff alleges that it is the defendant who intended to occupy the said plot forcibly after the possession thereof was made over to the plaintiff and that the plaintiff had to lodge complaints to the police and initiate proceedings under S. 144 of the Cr. P. C. The plaintiff alleges further that the defendant knew long ago that the said plot was being utilised for parking of cars upon payment of fees.

19. The plaintiff alleges that he has been in continuous possession of the said plot since Sept., 1978 without any objection from the defendant and that the defendant did not institute any legal proceedings for recovery of possession of the said plot. It is contended that the defendant is not entitled to make the application in the suit instituted by the plaintiff.

20. The defendant has affirmed an affidavit on the 1st April, 1982, which has been filed in reply to the said affidavit of the plaintiff. It is, inter alia, stated in this affidavit that the constructions were made by the plaintiff in the said plot only since the middle of Jan., 1982.

21. At the hearing learned counsel reiterated the respective contentions in the pleadings. Documents were brought to the notice of the Court on behalf of the defendant to show that there was no concluded contract between the parties and that the case of the plaintiff as recorded in the correspondence from time to time indicated that the terms of the contract were never finalised.

22. Learned counsel for the plaintiff contended that irrespective of merits, the defendant was not entitled to ask for interlocutory reliefs in the suit of the plaintiff.

23. In support of such contention learned counsel for the plaintiff cited:

(a) Suganda Bai v. Sulu Bai, reported in AIR 1975 Kant 137. In this case the plaintiff instituted a suit in the Munsiff's Court for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with the possession of the premises in disputes, but did not apply for any interlocutory relief. Later, the defendant No. 1 made an application in the suit for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from interfering with her possession of the property in dispute.

On a revision from an order allowing the application it was held by the Karnataka High Court that the cause of action of the defendant No. 1 was different from that of the plaintiff and had arisen later. Following two English decisions it was also held that only where the relief claimed by the defendant arose out of the plaintiff's cause of action or was incidental to it that the defendant could apply for an interlocutory injunction against the plaintiff.

(b) Carter v. Fey, reported in 1894 (2) Ch. 541. In this case the plaintiff's action was for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from carrying on a particular business within a certain limit in Winchester. On the same day the plaintiff moved for an interlocutory injunction. The defendant entered appearance and thereafter, gave a notice for an interlocutory injunction restraining the plaintiff from using the name of the defendant in carrying on the business of the plaintiff. Both the motions were dismissed in the first Court. On an appeal by the defendant Lindley L. J. held that the defendant was not entitled to any interlocutory injunction and observed as follows:—

"The question is whether a defendant who is in a hurry is entitled to apply by way of motion in the plaintiff's action for an injunction without waiting to deliver a counter-claim or issuing a writ in a cross-action, where the relief which he seeks is not in any way comprised in or incidental to the plaintiff's cause of action. In the present case the plaintiff only claims an injunction to restrain the defendant from carrying on a business within a certain limit."

* * * * *

The defendant's claim is not for any relief arising out of or incidental to the relief sought to be obtained by the plaintiff in his action.

* * * * *

If the defendant's application for an injunction were in any way connected with or incidental to the object and purpose of the plaintiff's action, he would have good ground for his contention; but it has really nothing to do with the relief sought by the plaintiff."

"The question is this — whether the defendant can move for an injunction against the plaintiff without filing a counter-claim or issuing a writ in a cross-action. In my opinion, he can in some cases, but only in cases where the defendant's claim to relief arises out of the plaintiff's cause of action, or is incidental to it."

24. Relying on the above decisions learned counsel for the plaintiff contended that the defendant's cause of action, if any, was in tort, viz., trespass by the plaintiff in the defendant's land whereas the cause of action of the plaintiff was an agreement of which specific performance was being claimed.

25. In the facts it appears that the subject matter of the suit i.e., the said plot, is admittedly in the possession of the plaintiff. It is also admitted that no lease has yet been executed in favour of the plaintiff and that the plaintiff has not paid the premium nor is paying the rent which is payable according to him. The plaintiff being in possession is enjoying the fruits of the property by collecting parking fees. The defendant has been totally deprived of the use of the said land.

26. Hence, if the defendant had been in possession of the land in dispute the plaintiff would have been entitled to apply for orders restraining the defendant from altering the character of the property. Such a relief would arise out of the plaintiff's cause of action. The plaintiff being in possession of the property, in the instant case there is no reason why the defendant should be held disentitled from claiming the said relief and a claim to such relief in my view must be held to arise out of the plaintiff's cause of action and in any event incidental thereto. If the suit fails the defendant will have a right to obtain possession of the property in the condition as it was originally. It is also open to the defendant to make a counter-claim by amending his written statement or by way of an additional written statement.

27. The plaintiff has come to this Court seeking the equitable relief of specific performance. He must do equity himself and not alter the character of the property till he succeeds in the suit.

28. For the reasons above, the application is allowed. There will be an injunction restraining the plaintiff from making any further construction in the said plot till the disposal of the suit. In the event the defendant makes a counter-claim in the suit the defendant will be at liberty to apply for further interim orders.

29. Costs: costs in the cause.

30. There will be a stay of operation of the order for one week from date. The ad-interim order will continue. In the event the plaintiff makes any alteration or repair to the existing structures, in the said plot in the meantime the same should be done on a reasonable notice to the defendant.

31. Liberty to apply.

Application allowed.

ANIL K. SEN AND B. C.

CHAKRABARTI, JJ.

Prosad Kumar Dhara, Petitioner v. Kamala Kanta Dikshit and others, Respondents.

C. C. Nos. 547-548 of 1982, D/- 7-4-1982.

(A) W. B. Restoration of Alienated Land Act (23 of 1973), Ss. 2 (2) and 4 — 'Land' means primarily agricultural land.

The above Act does not profess to reopen all transfers of all properties but is intended only to give relief to agriculturists in respect of distress sales or the like and the clause defining land limits the expression to agricultural land. The term 'homestead' occurring in the definition means the homestead of agriculturist and not any structure on non-agricultural land. In this case the land and the building thereon sold was within the municipal area primarily let out to tenants and therefore did not answer the definition of land for the purpose of relief under Section 4 of the Act. (Paras 3 to 5)

(B) W. B. Restoration of Alienated Land Act (23 of 1973), S. 4 — Requisites for claiming relief under S. 4.

Section 4 provides that where before the commencement of the Act a person holding not more than 2 hectares of land in the aggregate on the date of transfer transferred the whole or any part of his land by sale to any person, then, on fulfilment of certain conditions, the transferor can apply to the Special Officer for restoration of such land to him. One out of the two alternative conditions to be fulfilled is that the transfer must have been made after the expiry of the year 1967 and must be in distress or in need of money for maintenance of the transferor or his family or in meeting the costs of his cultivation. 'Land' referred to in S. 4 is defined by the Act to mean agricultural land and includes homestead, tank, well and water channel. In this case the transferor inter alia was shown to be a contractor and the sale deed recited that he needed moneys for purposes of his business. It was held that in the circumstances land sold was not liable to be restored to the transferor.

(Paras 5 to 7)

Tapan Kumar Dutta, for Petitioner;
Amitava Nayak, for Respondents.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— These are two applications under Art. 227 of the Constitution arising out of two proceedings under the West Bengal Restoration of Alienated Land Act, 1973 being Cases Nos. 89 and 90/75-76. The respective opposite parties Kamala Kanta Dikshit and Lakshmi Kanta Dikshit initiated those proceedings for restoration of lands and buildings transferred by them in favour of the present petitioner in the year 1968.

2. It is not in dispute that the two brothers were the owners of a premises consisting of four rooms, verandah, kitchen and privy situate at holding No. 107, Ward No. 3 within the Tamluk Municipality. In the year 1968 the two brothers by two sale deeds transferred their respective shares in the said property to the present petitioners and the deeds recite that such sale was being made to meet the need of money for the business of the two brothers. As and when the West Bengal Restoration of Alienated Land Act, 1973, came into force, these two brothers, the transferors, initiated the aforesaid two proceedings under S. 4 of the said Act for restoration of the land so transferred.

3. Section 4 provides that where before the commencement of the Act a person being the transferor holding not more than 2 hectares of land in the aggregate on the date of transfer transferred the whole or any part of his land by sale to any person being the transferee, then, on fulfilment of certain conditions, the transferor may make an application to the Special Officer for restoration of such land to him. One out of the two alternative conditions to be fulfilled is that the transfer must have been made after the expiry of the year 1967 and must be in distress or in need of money for maintenance of the transferor or his family or for meeting the costs of his cultivation. 'Land' referred to in S. 4 has been defined by the Act to mean agricultural land and includes homestead, tank, well and water-channel.

4. Such being the provision, the Special Officer dismissed both the applications upon a clear finding that the requirements of Section 4 had not been fulfilled. According to him the property transferred is a property situate within the municipal area primarily let-out to tenants and as such, does not answer the description of the term 'land' as defined in the Act. He further held that, since the transfer again was effected to meet the need of money for the respective business of the transferors, the basic requirement of Sec. 4 cannot be said to have been fulfilled. The applications were thus dismissed by the Special Officer. The transferors preferred appeals under the statute to the appellate authority, namely, the Collector. The appellate authority held that neither of the reasons assigned by the Special Officer can be said to be good reason for rejecting the prayer for restoration under the Act. He thought that the transferred land in respect of which restoration has been prayed for 'need not essentially be agricultural for being within the purview of the Act' and the petitioner need not have his residence therein. So far as the reason for the transfer is concerned the appellate authority found fault with the Special Officer in accepting the reason as recited in the deed in preference to the one disclosed in his evidence before the Tribunal. Collector thought that the Special Officer had not given any reason for such a finding. The appellate authority further found that there was procedural infirmity when a certificate issued by the S. D. O. was taken into evidence without examining him as to its contents.

5. On a careful consideration of the orders passed by the two Tribunals below, we are of the opinion that the order of the appellate authority is unsustainable as it is based upon a clear misconception of the law on the point. The appellate authority failed to appreciate that the Act under consideration does not profess to reopen all transfers of all properties. It was intended to give relief to agriculturists in respect of distress sales or the like and on the definition clause land has been defined to be limited to agricultural land. Obviously the term 'homestead' when included within the meaning of the term land means the homestead or an agriculturist and not any and every structure on non-agricultural land. This seems to be clear on the context and the appellate authority was in error in thinking that the land or the structure thereon need not necessarily be agricultural. So far as the procedural irregularity referred to by the appellate authority is concerned, he failed to take note of the fact that the certificate of the S. D. O. was not of primary importance because the document of transfer itself recites that the transfer was being made to meet the need of money for the respective businesses of the transferors. If the transfer was for such a purpose, it would certainly not come within the purview of S. 4. When the purpose of the transfer was so recited there was no reason for incorporating a false recital and such a clear admission of the transferors as to the purpose for which the transfer was being effected, has not been explained in any other manner. It was, therefore, open to the Special Officer to accept the same in preference to the subsequent interested statement made at the hearing of these applications which had not been otherwise established or corroborated. Therefore, even if the Special Officer relied upon a certificate of the S. D. O. to show that the transferor was a contractor and even if such certificate had not been formally proved, it matters little so far as the final conclusion of the Special Officer is concerned which is clearly supported by the transferors' own admission made in the deeds.

6. Such being the position, we are unable to support the order made by the appellate authority which has been made on a clear misconception of law.

7. These applications, therefore, succeed. The impugned orders passed by the appellate authority being set aside, those of the Special Officer are restored.

8. No order is made as to costs in either of these revisional applications.

Bhuth Nath Mondal and others, Appellants v. Kalipada Mondal and others, Respondents.

S. A. No. 1505 of 1965, D/- 8-7-1982.

Hindu Law — Shebaitship — Right of succession — Nature of. (Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 16, 25).

Where the founder's disposition in the deeds of endowment was that after the death of the son of his brother to whom the shebaitship was bequeathed, his male descendants would become shebait one after another excluding the female heirs or their descendants and only after failure of determination of these previous series of estates the nearest descendants of the founder's brothers or the seniormost among them if there be more than one of the same class, would become shebait, the incapacity of the legatee's line to succeed because of the illegality of such disposition contrary to the Hindu Law of inheritance would not entitle any of the three nephews of the founder who were alive at the time of the deeds of endowment to any benefit under those deeds. Such position also followed from the principle inherent in Ss. 16 and 25 of the T. P. Act. The principle is that if the subsequent interest is to take effect upon the failure of the prior interest and the prior interest is against the law and so invalid, the subsequent interest would also fail. Therefore the person who was one of the nephews of the founder would not succeed to any interest in the shebaitship under the deeds of endowment. (1872) 9 Beng LR 377 (PC), Rel. on. (Para 9)

JUDGMENT:— This is an appeal by the defendants from the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Midnapur remanding the suit for retrial on a particular issue after giving the plaintiff opportunity to amend the plaint.

2. The material facts of the case are not in dispute. Nemai Mondal of Bar Chimulia P. S. Tamluk was separate from his five brothers and had considerable properties. He married thrice to have a son and his third surviving wife was Jhanadamoyee. He brought up Rakhal, son of his brother Titu. Nemai Mondal made absolute dedication of his properties to two deities viz. Shree Shree Iswar Radeshyam Jew Thakur and Shree Shree Iswar Parameswar Jew Thakur installed by him under two deeds of endowment dated 2-8-1926 and 6-8-1926, appointing himself as the sole shebait. He prescribed the mode of devolution of shebaitship in the following manner: After his death his son and thereafter his wife and if no son is born to him his wife Jnanadamoyee will be the next shebait. After the death of Jnanadamoyee the shabaiti right will devolve on Rakhal. After Rakhal's death his male descendants only (excluding all female heirs and their descendants) will become shebait one after another. In case Rakhal or any of his sons or grandsons dies without any male issue, then the nearest descendant of the founder's brothers and if there be more than one such descendant then one who is the seniormost in age and religious in mind among the members of the same class will become the shebait of the deities. Nemai Mondal died in 1342 B. S. leaving his widow, two daughters Basan Bala (the defendant No. 17) and Mokshada (the defendant No. 18) and no son. Jnanadamoyee died in 1350 B. S. Thereafter Rakhal became shebait and he died without any son in Baisakh 1354 B. S. At the time of execution of the deeds of endowment and the death of the founder his three other nephews (brother's sons) who were living were Mohendra (father of the contesting defendants Nos. 1 to 6), Kalipada (the plaintiff) and his brother Haripada (the defendant No. 16). After Rakhal's death Mahendra exercised the shebaiti right till his death which took place in Jaistha 1365 B. S. The two daughters of the founder and their sons purported to execute a deed of relinquishment called 'Tyagpatra' dated 29th Kartick 1361 B. S. (15th Nov., 1954) in respect of the shebaiti right in favour of Mahendra, father of the defendants Nos. 1 to 6.

3. The plaintiff brought the suit for a declaration of his shebaiti right and other incidental relief alleging that the aforesaid deed of relinquishment is fraudulent, collusive and void and claiming that he is the sole shebait of the deities according to the terms of the deeds of endowment.

4. The contesting defendants resisted the suit on the ground that after Rakhal's death the daughters of the founder became entitled to the shebaiti right and they relinquished their limited interest in favour of Mahendra Mondal who thus became the absolute shebait and whose interest devolved after his death on the defendants Nos. 1 to 6.

5. The learned Munsif has found that the disposition of the shebaiti right to Rakhal for life under the deeds of endowment is valid that the order of succession laid down after the death of Rakhal limited to his male heirs and their descendants and excluding his female heirs and their descendants being inconsistent with the Hindu law of inheritance is void that the shebaiti right therefore, devolved on the defendants Nos. 17 and 18 the two daughters and heirs of the founder after Rakhal's death in Baisakh 1354 B. S. and that the plaintiff having no right as shebait is not entitled to any relief in the suit. On these findings the trial Court has dismissed the suit.

6. Before the first appellate Court both parties accepted the position that the line of succession prescribed in the deeds of endowment is valid up to the disposition of the shebaiti right to Rakhal for life and that after Rakhal's death the shebaitship reverted to the defendants Nos. 17 and 18 who were the heirs of the founder as his daughters. Before the Court of appeal a contention was raised on behalf of the plaintiff/appellant that as the defendants Nos. 17 and 18 relinquished their limited interest in the shebaiti right by the registered deed of relinquishment in Kartick 1361 B. S., the shebaitship devolved on the next heirs of the founder who were Mahendra Mondal, Kalipada Mondal (the plaintiff) and his brother Haripada Mondal each having 1/3rd share. The appellate Court being conscious that the plaintiff was raising a new case inconsistent with the plaint in which the said deed of relinquishment has been seriously challenged as void, came to the conclusion that the plaintiff should be given an opportunity to make out his new case and in that view remanded the suit to the trial Court directing retrial on framing the issue viz., "Whether the plaintiff has got 1/3rd right to the office of Shebaitship in the facts and circumstances of the case" after giving the plaintiff opportunity to amend the plaint.

7. The learned advocate for the defendants/appellants has submitted before this Court that the Court of appeal below has erred in law in permitting the plaintiff to amend the plaint for raising a new case totally inconsistent with paragraph 8 of the plaint in which the deed of relinquishment has been seriously challenged as fraudulent, collusive and void. It is further submitted that the founder's daughters along with their sons could not validly relinquish or surrender their limited interest in favour of Mahendra one of the brothers' son of the founder who was not the nearest reversioner as surrender of a Hindu woman's estate to be valid must be made in respect of the whole estate in favour of the entire body of the nearest reversioners.

8. On the other hand it is submitted on behalf of the plaintiff/respondents that as Mahendra, Kalipada and Haripada, three nephews of the founder Nemai Mondal were alive at the time of execution of the deeds of endowment and also at the death of the founder they became entitled to the shebaiti right in equal shares after the death of Rakhal without any male issue and so the first appellate Court was right in remanding suit in exercise of its power under O. 41, R. 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

9. In my view, the aforesaid submission on behalf of the plaintiff/respondents is not well founded and cannot prevail as it militates against the decision in the case of Tagore v. Tagore (1872-9 Beng LR 377) (PC). In that case property was bequeathed to (1) A for life and his heirs in tail male, (2) after failure or determination of the above estate, to B and his heirs in tail male and (3) after failure or determination of the last mentioned estate to the heirs of C in tail male. At the time of the testator's death A and B were alive but C was dead; A had no son; B had a son; D born in the lifetime of the testator. C's grandson F was alive at the time of the testator's death. The testator died leaving an only son S. It was held by the Privy Council that A took life interest and all other bequests were void. The estates tail male were void as they were inconsistent with the Hindu law of inheritance. Although B and D were alive at the time of the testator's death they took nothing under the will for they were only to make after failure or determination of the previous series of estate that is to say after the actual exhaustion of the line of A in conformity with the will which could not arise. The incapacity of A's line to succeed by reason of illegality of the will did not entitle B or D to any benefit under the will. For the same reason F who was in existence at the testator's death took nothing under the will (vide Mulla's Hindu Law 13th Edition pages 418-419). Similarly in the present case the founder's disposition in the deeds of endowment was that after the death of Rakhal his male descendants will become shebait one after another excluding the female heirs or their descendants and only after failure or determination of these previous series of estates the nearest descendant of the founder's brothers or the seniormost among them if their be more than one of the same class, will become shebait. The incapacity of Rakhal's line to succeed because of the illegality of such disposition contrary to the Hindu law of inheritance did not entitle any of the three nephews of the founder who were alive at the time of the deeds of endowment to any benefit under those deeds. This position also follows from the principle inherent in Ss. 16 and 25 of the Transfer of Property Act. The principle is that if the subsequent interest is to take effect upon the failure of the prior interest and the prior interest is against the law and so invalid, the subsequent interest would also fail. So there can be no question of the plaintiff's succeeding to any interest in the shebaitship under the deeds of endowment.

10. It is settled law that whom the founder makes a limited grant of shebaitship the residue still remains in him or his heirs as an estate of inheritance. When the limited shebaitship end the next shebait would be the person in whom the residuary shebait right had come to vest at that time by devolution or successive devolutions as the case may be under the Hindu law of inheritance. (See Bhabatarini Debi v. Ashalata Debi, (1943) 70 Ind App 57 : (AIR 1943 PC 89)).

11. The registered deed of relinquishment of Kartick 1361 B.S. marked Exhibit 'C' shows that the two daughters of the founder relinquished their shebaiti right in favour of Mahendra, father of the defendants Nos. 1 to 6 and the sons of the limited owners who were the nearest reversioners also joined in executing the deed. But it is doubtful whether such a transaction can be supported on the theory that it amounts in effect to surrender in favour of the nearest reversioners and relinquishment or gift by them of the estate to the stranger. In Mummareddi v. Pitti Durairaja, 1951 SCR 655 at pp. 664-666 : (AIR 1952 SC 109 at pp. 112-113) B. K. Mukherjea J. (as he then was) delivering the judgment of the Supreme Court felt the necessity to reconsider the view expressed in Nobokishore's case (1884) ILR 10 Cal 1102 (FB) based on such theory of extension of the doctrine of surrender involving the double fiction of a surrender by the widow in favour of the consenting reversioner and a transfer by the latter to the alienee although both the fictions are contrary to actual facts. The plaintiff has impugned in the plaint the deed of relinquishment but has not adduced any oral evidence to support his challenge. In any event, the alienation is prima facie binding on the daughters of the founder who are alive. Even if the plaintiff is permitted to plead an inconsistent case that the deed of relinquishment is valid and operative, he will not gain anything as in that case the shebaitship would go to Mahendra and after his death to the legal heirs of Mahendra. There is no legal basis of any possible claim of the plaintiff to 1/3rd share in the shebaiti right regarding which the first appellate Court had proposed the framing of an issue for decision on retrial of the suit. It is futile to raise such issue in this suit.

12. For the aforesaid reasons, I find that the Court of appeal below has failed to exercise its discretion properly and did not pay sufficient attention to the legal position in making the impugned order of remand which cannot, therefore, be sustained.

13. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The decision of the first appellate Court is set aside and the judgment and decree of the trial Court are restored. The parties do bear their own costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

(B) Letters Patent (Cal.), Clause 12 — Leave to file suit under — Revocation of — Factors to be considered. Decision of single Judge in Suit No. 906 of 1978, D/- 27-8-1979 (Cal), Reversed.

The transaction of supplying pump sets out of which the claim for recovery of damages arose took place at Patna. The place of business of the defendants who supplied pump sets to the plaintiffs was at Patna and the relevant document relating to the contract and the transaction were also at Patna. Both the defendants were at Patna. All the relevant documents of the defendants were at Patna and places in Bihar. To prove the defects in the pump sets supplied by the defendants and the loss and damages suffered by the plaintiff for breach of contract various witnesses would have to be called and various documents would have to be produced by the plaintiff and all the documents and witnesses of the plaintiff were either at Patna or in places in Bihar. Except that the Receiver was appointed by Calcutta High Court and admission, if any, was made in the Receiver's meeting no part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction of Calcutta High Court.

Held, considering the respective advantages and disadvantages of the parties in the facts and circumstances of the case the balance of convenience was in favour of the suit being tried by a Court at Patna. Leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent was liable to be revoked. Decision of single Judge in Suit No. 906 of 1978, D/- 27-8-1979 (Cal), Reversed. (Para 18)

R. N. PYNE, J.:— This appeal is directed against an order dated 27th Aug., 1979 of Mrs. Khastgir, J. dismissing the appellant's application for revocation of leave granted under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent to institute the Suit No. 906 of 1978 (Ram Chand Khosla v. State of Bihar). The facts out of which the said application in the Court of the first instance arose are briefly as follows:

Ram Chand Khosla, the plaintiff in Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978?) was appointed as Receiver by and under a consent decree dated 5th April, 1977 passed in Suit No. 587 of 1973 (Universal Engineers and Traders v. Premier Traders) by this Court for the purpose of collecting and realising the dues payable to Premier Traders and was empowered to bring suit for that purpose.

2. Pursuant to the power conferred under the said decree Ramchand Khosla as plaintiff filed the said suit being Suit No. 906 of 1978 against State of Bihar and the appellant, inter alia, for recovery of Rupees 4,46,576.40 p. and other reliefs. The plaintiff's case in the plaint is as follows:

Pursuant to an order dated 21st April, 1973 placed by the defendant No. 1, State of Bihar with the said Messrs. Premier Traders, Exhibition Road, Patna 300 pumping sets were sold by the said Premier Traders (hereinafter referred to as 'the said firm') to the defendant No. 1 and out of the same, 200 pumping sets were supplied to District Agricultural Officer at Muzaffarpur and 100 Pumping sets were supplied to the Sub-Divisional Officer at Sitamari as instructed by the State of Bihar. In the said order it is mentioned that the appellant is the consignee and payment is to be made by it. The appellant at the instance of the State of Bihar (respondent No. 2 herein) from time to time made part payments to the said firm of Messrs. Premier Traders aggregating to Rs. 5,93,249.75 p. leaving a balance of Rupees 2,54,250.25 p. on account of price of the said goods. In terms of the said order the said firm deposited with the respondent No. 2 a sum of Rs. 16,950/- as and by way of security. According to the plaintiff in Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978 ?) as Receiver he was authorised to collect the dues of the said firm of Premier Traders and as a result thereof there was due and owing by the defendants in the said suit a sum of Rs. 4,46,576.50 p. including the sum of Rs. 16,950/- the amount of security deposit and the sum of Rupees 1,75,376.15 p. being the amount of interest at the rate of 12% from 10th July, 1973 to 30th Nov., 1978. Here it may be mentioned that in the letter dated 24th May, 1973 addressed by the said firm to the Deputy Secretary, Department of Agricultural and Animal Husbandry (Agriculture) Govt. of Bihar, Patna, relating to the transaction it is stated 'Subject to Patna Jurisdiction'.

3. It was alleged that the defendants in the said suit though expressly admitted and acknowledged the amount due and payable to the said firm of Premier Traders yet withheld the payment of the sum of Rupees 4,46,576.50 p. to the plaintiff in the said suit. Further, at a meeting of the Receiver appointed by an order dated January 3, 1974 passed in the said Suit No. 587 of 1973 held at Bar Library Club, Calcutta on Jan. 24, 1974 one Mr. D. P. Srivastava the authorised agent and representative of the defendant No. 2 (i.e., appellant herein) acknowledged for and on behalf of the defendant No. 2 the liability of the defendant No. 2 and the dues of the said Premier Traders and promised to pay the said amount to the said Receiver appointed in the said suit after observing all rules and regulations of the orders placed on the said firm. It was further alleged that by letters the defendants in the said Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978 ?) admitted and acknowledged their liability in respect of the plaintiff's dues.

4. The appellant's case as stated in its petition filed in the Court of the first instance was that State of Bihar defendant No. 1 in the said Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978 ?) placed an order dated 21st April, 1973 upon Messrs. Premier Traders at Patna for 300 pumping sets as fully mentioned in the said petition on various terms and conditions contained in the said order. It appears that appellant was the consignee of said pumps and would make payment for the same as mentioned in the said order. It is further stated that 200 pump sets were delivered to the District Agricultural Officer at Muzaffarpur and 100 pump sets were delivered to the Sub-Divisional Officer at Sitamari. It is stated that 50 pump sets out of the 200 sets supplied to Muzaffarpur and 52 sets out of 100 sets supplied at Sitamari were found fitted with duplicate pumps in place of Kirloskar pumps and in spite of the request of the appellant Premier Traders did not replace the said duplicate pumps. It is further stated that several pumps supplied by Premier Traders were found to be defective. The said firm was directed to remove the same but it failed and neglected to remove the same and thereby committed breach of the contract. Further, in breach of the terms of the said order the said firm did not open service station. Due to the said fact the appellant suffered loss and damages. The said fact was duly brought to the notice of the said firm by several letters addressed by the appellant to the said firm. It is also stated that the said firm was paid an aggregate sum of Rs. 5,93,249.75 on account of the price of the pump sets supplied by it. It is further stated that as the said firm failed and neglected to replace their 102 defective pumps, 41 pumps were disposed of by the defendant on account of the said firm and appellant directed the said firm to take back the remaining 61 pumps rejected by the appellant. The said firm, however, failed and neglected to replace the said defective pumps. In the petition at pages 16 and 17 of the paper book it appears that the appellant has stated the amount of loss and/or damages suffered by it and according to the appellant, a sum of Rs. 38,896.75 became due and payable to the said firm. The appellant received a notice dated 3rd July, 1976 under Section 21 of the Bihar Sales Tax Act from the Sales Tax Authorities claiming a sum of Rs. 34,438.85 p. which became due on account of sales tax payable by the said firm for the period 1968-1969 and 1973-1974. The appellant stated that after deducting the said sum of Rs. 34,438.85 p. only a sum of Rupees 4,457.90 p. was due and payable by the appellant to the said firm. According to the appellant, a notice dated 8th Feb., 1977 was received by the appellant from Messrs. T. Banerji and Company, Solicitors of the respondent No. 1 demanding payment on behalf of the said firm. The appellant through its advocate's letter dated 21st April, 1973 informed the Solicitor of the respondent

No. 1 about the amount recoverable by the appellant from the said firm.

5. From the judgment appealed against it appears that before the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance three grounds were urged by the appellant for revocation of leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent viz., (i) no part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction of this Court; (ii) balance of convenience was in favour of the trial of the suit at a convenient forum in Bihar and (iii) parties had particularly chosen a forum, i.e. High Court at Patna before which all disputes arising in respect of the agreement entered into by and between the parties should be referred to.

6. On the first point the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance held that the plaintiff (respondent No. 1 herein) was appointed as Receiver by this Court; goods were supplied from Calcutta within the jurisdiction of this Court and that at the meeting held by the Receiver in Suit No. 587 of 1973 one Mr. Srivastava appearing on behalf of the appellant acknowledged the liability of the appellant and a letter dated 3rd Nov., 1978 written by the appellant's Accounts Officer acknowledging liability was received by the Receiver in the said Suit No. 587 of 1973 within the jurisdiction of this Court. On the second point the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance was of the opinion that in view of the admission and acknowledgement made on behalf of the appellant it was not necessary for the defendants in Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978?) to bring any witness to Calcutta at the time of hearing of the suit. Regarding the third contention it was held that the agreement regarding choice of forum was between Premier Traders and the State of Bihar but so far as the appellant is concerned there was no such agreement. Therefore, instead of bringing the suit piecemeal it should be decided by one Court.

7. On the question of whether any part of the cause of action has arisen within the jurisdiction of the Court. Counsel for the appellant has submitted that appointment of the plaintiff as Receiver by this Court is no part of the cause of action. In this connection counsel relied on the case of Muthuchellappa Chettiar v. Paliniappa, AIR 1955 Mad 526. It has been further submitted that the place wherefrom goods are sent is no part of the cause of action and in this connection reliance has been placed on the case of Yeluchuri Venkatachannaya v. Emperor, (1920) 56 Ind Cas 50 : (AIR 1920 Cal 337)

(FB). It was further submitted that there was in fact no admission of liability in the Receiver's meeting held at Calcutta because admission, if any, was qualified and conditional and Srivastava who attended the Receiver's meeting for the appellant had no authority to make any admission and therefore there was no valid admission. Regarding the question of acknowledgement by letter dated 3-11-1978 it was submitted that such letter was sent to Patna Office of the Premier Traders. Therefore, according to counsel, no part of the cause of action in Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978?) had arisen within the original side of this Court.

8. Counsel for the respondent No. 1 in his argument supported the decision appealed against on the grounds mentioned by the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance.

9. The question whether the appointment of a Receiver by an order made by this Court with power to realise debts and claims is a part of the cause of action in a suit filed by such Receiver or not has been decided by an unreported judgment of a Division Bench of this Court in Appeal No. 143 of 1954 (Satya Narain Mundra v. Rai Bahadur Kishore Chand) dated 12th March, 1956. It was held that where a Receiver appointed by this Court in a suit files suit against a third party for realisation of claims or dues the fact of appointment of the Receiver by the Court is a part of the cause of action. Therefore, the fact of appointment of the plaintiff as Receiver in Suit No. 587 of 1979 (1978?) by this Court in our view is a part of the cause of action in Suit No. 906 of 1979 (1978?).

10. The next point is in favour of which Court lies the balance of convenience. In the petition and in paragraph 15 of the affidavit-in-reply the appellant has stated in details the facts as to why the balance of convenience lies in favour of trial by a Court at Patna. It is stated that the balance of convenience is overwhelmingly in favour of the suit being heard by the Court at Patna than this Hon'ble Court. It will be tremendously costly to call all the witnesses (a list containing the names of 30 witnesses is annexed to affidavit-in-reply) to Calcutta from Patna, Muzaffarpur and Sitamari and to produce the voluminous records relating to the said contract, delivery of the pumping sets, the inspection reports of the competent Engineers of the Government of Bihar, the then Sub-Divisional Officers of Muzaffarpur and Sitamari and the inspector who visited the installations of the said pumps which were sent to the diverse places in the said Districts for operation and those pumps which were rejected as defective and not in accordance with the specification under the terms of the contract. According to the appellant almost whole of the cause of action has arisen in Patna and great hardships amounting to injustice will be caused to the appellant if the suit is allowed to be tried by this Hon'ble Court inasmuch as the competent Engineers and Officers of the defendants in the suit who would be more than thirty in number would be required to appear and give evidence as witnesses and all of them are at Patna, Muzaffarpur and Sitamari. The competent Officer of the Commercial Taxes Government of Bihar will be also required to appear and give evidence and also to produce records relating to the Sales Tax in respect of the said sale and the statutory demand notices that have been forwarded to the defendant No. 2 for non-payment of sales tax by the said M/s. Premier Traders to the Sales Tax Authorities. The entire records relating to the dealings and transactions with M/s. Premier Traders are at Patna and their representatives are also at Patna who are also necessary witnesses with regard to the disputes and differences as to the alleged claim of the plaintiff in the said suit. On the contrary the plaintiff is not required to produce any other records except the certified copy of the decree by which he has been appointed as Receiver and has been authorised to collect debts of the said M/s. Premier Traders as also the records of the meeting of the Receiver in which admission was made by the appellants representative. Further, according to the appellant, there is no scope for any oral evidence by the plaintiff or by Mrs. Indrani Chatterjee (previous receiver) in this suit and the records relating to the contract between the defendants and the said Premier Traders are all with the defendants and the said Premier Traders at Patna.

11. Counsel for the appellant in his argument reiterated the facts stated hereinbefore in support of his contention that balance of convenience lies in favour of the suit being tried at Patna. He has further submitted that the admission or acknowledgement of liability upon which the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance has relied upon are qualified and conditional. In support of his contention reliance has been placed on AIR 1972 Cal 82; ILR (1956) 2 Cal 255 and AIR 1970 Cal 394.

12. Counsel for the respondent No. 1 has submitted that in view of the admission made before the Receiver as stated herein after and the letters dated 3rd Oct., 1970 and 3rd Nov. 1978 containing acknowledgement of liability it is not necessary to call witnesses as stated by the appellant. Further, in view of the admission and acknowledgement of liability it is not necessary to prove the plaintiff's claim. It is the submission of the counsel that admission unless explained is decisive. Further, in view of the admission and acknowledgement the suit cannot be converted into a witness action. Counsel has relied on AIR 1960 SC 100 and AIR 1953 (sic) SC 758 at p. 765.

13. On the question of balance of convenience learned Judge has relied on the admission made before the previous Receiver and the letters dated 30th Oct., 1977 and 3rd Nov., 1978. In view of such admission and acknowledgement according to the learned Judge defendants need not come to Calcutta with their witnesses.

14. Admission of the liability according to the plaintiff was made by the appellant's representative in the Receivers meeting held on 24th Jan., 1974 at Calcutta. Relevant portion of the minutes of the Receiver's meeting is set out hereunder.

"Regarding Agenda No. (2): Statement of Mr. D. P. Srivastava authorised representative of the Corporation. Mr. D. P. Srivastava has received the letter dated 12th January, 1974 on behalf of the Corporation and states that the security deposit and other amount lying with the Bihar State Agro-Industries Development Corporation Ltd. on account of Messrs. Premier Traders will be paid to the Id. Receiver after observing all rules and regulations of the orders placed on Messrs. Premier Traders, Patna, by the Govt. of Bihar. The payment is subject to detailed checking of their pumping sets by the concerned authorities and clearance from Govt. of Bihar Agriculture and Animal Husbandry Deptt. as well as legal section of the Corporation (Books of account were produced by the authorised representative of the Corporation)."

Letters dated 30th October, 1977 and 3rd November, 1978 are set out hereunder.

15. In the facts and circumstances of this case we are unable to uphold the finding of the learned Judge of the Court of the first instance that in view of the admission and acknowledgement of liability made by or on behalf of the appellant it will not be necessary for the plaintiff (i.e. respondent No. 1) to prove his claim or no witness need be called at the hearing of the suit.

16. The statements made by Srivastava at the Receiver's meeting as stated hereinbefore upon which the respondent No. 1 relies as admission of liability is a qualified statement.
It is made clear that payment would be made after observing all rules and regulations of the orders placed upon the said firm and subject to detailed checking of the pump sets by concerned authorities and clearance from the Government of Bihar, Agriculture and Animal Husbandry Department as well as legal section of the appellant. Thus the admission of liability, if any, by Srivastava is qualified and/or conditional. Further, the authority of Srivastava to make such statement is also challenged by the appellant.
Similarly, paragraphs 2 and 4 of the letter dated 30th Oct., 1977 makes it clear that at the time of making payment dues of Sales Tax Authorities is to be considered and further how much is due to the firm is to be considered by the appellant. In the premises it cannot be said that there is unconditional acknowledgement of liability by this letter.

17. On the letter dated 3rd Nov., 1978 strong reliance was placed by the respondent
No. 1. It is to be noted that it is stated in this letter credit balance standing in the name of the firm was up to 31st March, 1976 and confirmation thereof was asked for from the said firm. This letter only shows the amount lying to the credit of the firm on the basis of the pump sets delivered by the firm to the appellant. But as stated hereinbefore the appellant has various claims against the said firm as was fully stated in its Advocate's letter dated 21st Sept., 1977 (p. 44 of the Paper Book). Those claims might have arisen after 31st March, 1976. If this letter is read along with other letters mentioned above it cannot, in our view, be said that there is unconditional acknowledgment of the respondent No. 1's claim in the suit for which it will not be necessary to call any witness at the trial. In our view, the appellant is entitled to claim loss and damages in respect of the defective pump sets as well as for breach of the contract. Of course such claim will have to be proved by the appellant. Accordingly it cannot be said that in view of the above letter no evidence is necessary in this suit. Considering the facts and circumstances of this case, in our view, balance of convenience lies in favour of this suit being tried by the Court at Patna. The transaction out of which the claim arises took place at Patna. The place of business of the said firm who supplied the pump sets is at Patna and the relevant document relating to the contract and the transaction are at Patna. Both the defendants are at Patna. All the relevant documents of the defendants are at Patna, Muzaffarpur and Sitamari. To prove the defects in the pump sets supplied by the said firm and the loss and damages suffered by the appellant for breach of contract various witnesses will have to be called and various documents will have to be produced by the appellant. Further, the appellant will have to prove the circumstances in which the said letter dated 3rd Nov., 1978 was written. This letter was sent to the Patna Office of the said firm. All the documents and witnesses of the appellant are either at Patna or Muzaffarpur or Sitamari. Excepting that the respondent No. 1 was appointed by this Court and admission, if any, was made in the Receiver's meeting no part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction of this Court. If the suit is tried in this Court, all the said documents and witnesses will have to be produced before this Court. Apart from the great inconvenience that will be caused to the appellant it will have to incur enormous expenses. Whereas the plaintiff will have to produce the certified copy of the decree and the minutes of the Receiver's meeting entitling him to realise the claim of the said firm. The office of the said firm being at Patna all the documents relating to the transaction will be at Patna. If any witness is to be called by the plaintiff regarding the transaction they are at Patna. In the above circumstances if the appellant is compelled to contest this suit in this Court it will have to bring all the documents and witnesses at Calcutta and apart from great inconvenience and hardship that would cause serious prejudice amounting to injustice to the appellant. If the suit is tried in the Court at Patna the respondent No. 1 will not be required to take many documents or witnesses to Patna. Considering the respective advantages and disadvantages of the parties it appears to us that in the facts and circumstances of this case the balance of convenience is in favour of this suit being tried by a Court at Patna. In this connection the fact that in the letter dated 24th May, 1973 the firm stated 'subject to Patna jurisdiction' should also be taken into consideration.

18. For reasons stated above, in our view, the appeal should succeed and the same is allowed. Leave under clause 12 of the Letters Patent is revoked and all further proceedings in the Suit No. 906 of 1978 (Ram Chand Khosla v. State of Bihar) are stayed. In the facts and circumstances of this case there will be no order as to costs.

S. C. GHOSE, C. J.:— I agree.

C. R. No. 3679 (W) of 1979, D/- 18-6-1982.

(A) Defence of India Rules (1962), R. 133 V (1) — Govt. Notification No. 12/2/65 E. Pty. dated 10-9-1965 — Constitution of India, Article 226 — Questions of fact — Cannot be gone into by Court exercising powers under Writ Jurisdiction.

Certain property found belonging to a Pakistani National was transferred after its vesting in the Custodian of enemy property for India. The Custodian issued a notice to the legal heirs of the Vendee since dead stating that the said transfer was illegal and asking him to show cause as to why all rents and profits of the property so far collected should not be deposited by him with the Custodian. In a writ petition against the notice, the legal heirs sought to dispute the fact that the vendor had migrated to Pakistan on the stated date and that her property could vest in the Custodian under the Notification dated 10-9-1965.

Held that, the question whether the vendor was an Indian citizen or a Pakistani National on the date of the alleged transfer of property in question and whether she in fact migrated to Pakistan on the stated date or had all along remained in India are disputed questions of fact which can only be decided on the basis of evidence and cannot be gone into by the Court exercising powers under the constitutional writ jurisdiction.

Certain immovable property belonging to the wife of a Pakistani National, who herself later migrated to Pakistan, was transferred to an Indian National by a deed of conveyance registered on 1-9-1969. The vendee later died. In 1979 the Custodian for enemy property for India issued a notice to the legal heir of the deceased vendee declaring the said transfer as illegal and asking the legal heir to show cause as to why rent and profits of the property so far collected should not be deposited by him with the Custodian. In a writ petition against the notice;

Held, that by virtue of the Notification dated 10-9-1965 the property belonging to the Pakistani National on that date automatically vested in the Custodian of Enemy Property for India. As such, the transfer of the property on 1-9-1969 by the original owner was illegal. The notice issued by the Custodian was therefore in accordance with law. Sankar Das Banerji, J. Islam and Satya Narayan Das, for Petitioners; D. N. Das, B. S. Bagchi, for Union of India; Jamini Kumar Banerjee and Biswanath Chakraborty (for Nos. 5 to 7) and Dipankar Ghosh, Ajit Kumar Panja, Sibaji Sen and Debaprasad Bhattacharyya (for Nos. 8, 9 and 10), for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioners, who are eleven in number, claim to be the legal heirs and representatives of one Sheikh Gholam Rasul Qais who died intestate on the 17th Jan., 1977. The said Sheikh Gholam Rasul Qais purportedly purchased premises No. 6, Harinbari First Lane, Calcutta-73 from one Mst. Khadiza Bi by means of a registered deed of conveyance dated Sept. 1, 1969. The particulars of the registration have been set out in para 4 of the petition.

2. It is stated in para 3 of the petition that the said premises had been purchased by Mst. Khadiza Bi from the original owners by a registered kobala dated Feb. 15, 1945. After the death of Sheikh Gholam Rasul Qais the said property is said to have devolved upon the petitioners in accordance with the principles of succession under the Mohammedan Law.

3. In this writ petition the petitioners have challenged the Notice dated April 21, 1979 issued by Sri A. S. Dasgupta, Assistant Custodian of enemy property, to the first petitioner Janab Tanwir Eqbal, wherein it has been stated that it has been ascertained that the immoveable property at 6, Harinbari First Lane, Calcutta-73 was owned by Mst. Khadiza Khatun, wife of Abdul Rasis, a Pakistani National, and is therefore "Enemy Property" and had vested in the Custodian of Enemy Property for the Government of India by virtue of a Notification issued by the Government of India, Ministry of Commerce, on Sept. 10, 1965 and as the property in question was purported to have been transferred to the late Ghulam Rasul Qais under a registered deed of conveyance dated Sept. 1, 1969, such transfer of the property after vesting was illegal and the first petitioner was asked to show cause within ten days of the receipt of the notice as to why the rent and profits of the said enemy property should not be collected by the Custodian and why he should not deposit the rents and profits so far collected since Sept. 10, 1965 with the said Custodian. A copy of this notice, which is Annex. 'C' to the petition, is the subject matter of challenge in this Rule.

4. Mr. Sankar Das Banerji appearing on behalf of the petitioners, has submitted that Mst. Khadiza Bi alias Khadiza Khatun had never migrated to Pakistan and she was an Indian citizen and continued to be such on the date of the sale of the property in question to the late Gholam Rasul Qais. Mr. Banerji has further submitted that in coming to the conclusion that Mst. Khadiza Bi was a Pakistani National, the respondents have relied on a report dated Sept. 14, 1979 from the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Special Branch, Calcutta, addressed to the Assistant Custodian of Enemy Property, according to which Mst. Khatiza Khatun not Khadija, the owner of 6, Harinbari First Lane, Calcutta-73, migrated to West Pakistan in the year 1949. Copy of this letter is Annex. "A" to the supplementary affidavit affirmed on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 by Sri Manindra Kumar Dutta, the General Assistant in the office of the Custodian of Enemy Property for India at Calcutta on Jan. 22, 1981. Mr. Banerji has further submitted that this report should not be relied upon in view of the statement made in paragraph 9 (2) of the affidavit-in-opposition affirmed by the same deponent on Jan. 9, 1981 from which it appears that the respondents' source of information is a purported letter dated Dec. 16, 1978 from one Md. Soleman to the effect that Khadiza Bibi, the owner of 6, Harinbari First Lane, Calcutta-73, and her husband Abdul Rashid migrated to Pakistan in 1947 and permanently settled in Karachi and became Pakistani Nationals. Mr. Banerji's further contention is that in view of the conflicting submissions made in the two affidavits this Court should come to the conclusion that Mst. Khadiza Khatun was never a Pakistani National.

5. The next submission of Mr. Banerji is that the Notification dated Sept. 10, 1965 issued by the Ministry of Commerce, in exercise of the power conferred by sub-rule (1) of R. 133 V of the Defence of India Rules, 1962 ceased to have any force after the Defence of India Act and the Rules were repealed on July 10, 1968 and the impugned order having been issued on Sept. 14, 1979 cannot be given effect to. In this connection, Mr. Banerji has relied on two single Bench decisions of this Court, the first being the case of Asaduliah Chowdhury v. State of West Bengal, reported in (1975) 79 Cal WN 153 and the second is the case of Md. Nazrul Islam v. Union of India, reported in (1977) 2 Cal LJ 96.

6. Mr. Dipankar Ghosh appearing for the added respondents Nos. 8, 9 and 10, has submitted that by virtue of the Notification dated Sept. 10, 1965 all immovable property in India belonging to or held by or managed on behalf of all Pakistani Nationals vested in the Custodian of Enemy Property for India with immediate effect. Mr. Ghosh's contention is that Mst. Khadiza Khatun does not come within the definition of 'Enemy' within the meaning of the Defence of India Rules, 1962. He has drawn my attention to sub-clause (4) to R. 133-I of the Rules which defines 'enemy property' to mean any property for the time being belonging to or held or managed on behalf of any enemy as defined in R. 133-A, an enemy subject or any enemy firm. Mr. Ghosh then referred me to R. 133-A and submitted that Mst. Khadiza Khatun cannot be brought within the definition of enemy as defined in sub-clauses (a) to (g) of the said Rule. As such the Notification dated Sept. 10, 1965 can have no manner of application to any immovable property owned by her.

7. Mr. D. N. Das, appearing on behalf of the Custodian of the Enemy Property, has opposed this Rule. He has submitted that on the date of purported sale of the aforesaid property by Mst. Khadiza Bibi, the question whether she was a Pakistani National or an India citizen is a pure question of fact which should not be gone into by this Court. Mr. Das has also drawn my attention to the definition of 'enemy' under Section 2 (c) (ii) of the Defence of India Act, 1962 where 'enemy' has been defined to mean "any person belonging to a country committing such external aggression and he has also referred to R. 133 A (b) of the Rules which defines 'enemy' to mean "any individual resident in enemy territory". Mr. Das's submission is that in view of these definitions there should not be any manner of doubt that Mst. Khadiza Khatun was in fact an enemy within the meaning of the Act and the Rules. As regards the two decisions cited by Mr. Banerji, Mr. Das has submitted that the two learned Judges completely overlooked the fact that on and from Sept. 10, 1965 all enemy property automatically vested in the Government of India and even if the impugned order was passed after the expiry of the Defence of India Act or the Rules in the year 1968, the vesting would not be affected. Mr. Das has in this connection drawn my attention to a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Fruit & Vegetable Merchants' Union v. Delhi Improvement Trust, reported in AIR 1957 SC 344 where the Supreme Court was construing the meaning of the word "vest" under Ss. 16 and 17 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. The Supreme Court, held, inter alia, that in the cases contemplated by Ss. 16 and 17, the property acquired becomes the property of the Government without any conditions or limitations either as to the title or possession and the legislature has made it clear that the vesting of the property is not for any limited purpose or limited duration. Mr. Das has submitted that inasmuch as the two learned Judges in the decisions cited by Mr. Banerji did not take into consideration the effect of automatic vesting of the property from the date of the Notification or the aforesaid decision of the Supreme Court, I am not bound by those decisions nor should I refer this matter to a larger Bench as suggested by Mr. Banerji.

8. The question whether Mst. Khadiza Bibi was an Indian citizen or a Pakistani national on the date of the alleged transfer of the property in question to Sheikh Gholam Rasul Qais and whether she had in fact migrated to West Pakistan or had all along remained in India are disputed questions of fact which can only be decided on the basis of evidence and cannot be gone into by this Court exercising powers under the constitutional writ jurisdiction. Moreover, most of the grounds urged by the writ petitioners in support of the Rule also raise pure questions of fact. Besides the facts disclosed in the supplementary affidavit and the affidavit-in-opposition affirmed on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and which have been referred to above prima facie bring in Mst. Khatija Khatun within the meaning of 'enemy' as defined under S. 2 (c) (ii) of the Defence of India Act, 1962 and clause (f) of R. 133 A of the Defence of India Rules, 1962.

9. The notification issued by the Government of India, Ministry of Commerce, being Notification No. 12/2/65 E. Pty., dated the 10th Sept., 1965 reads thus:—

"In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-rule (1) of Rule 133-V of the Defence of India Rules 1962, the Central Government hereby orders that all immovable property in India, belonging to or held by or managed on behalf of all Pakistani nationals, shall vest in the Custodian of Enemy Property for India with immediate effect.

Nothing in this notification shall apply to any such property, belonging to or held by or managed on behalf of such of the Pakistani nationals as are employed in the different Missions of the Government of Pakistan in India."

By virtue of this notification enemy property automatically vested in the Government of India from the date of the notification. As such, premises No. 6 Harinbari First Lane, Calcutta-73, having on that day belonged to a Pakistani national automatically vested in the Government of India.

10. In the case of Asadulla Chowdhury v. State of West Bengal (1975-79 Cal WN 153) (supra) D. Pal, J. (as he then was) held an order issued by the J. L. R. O. Mathura-pur Circle in the district of Malda to be bad as the order of vesting was issued after the expiry of the period of emergency on July 10, 1968. A similar view was expressed by Amiya Kumar Mookerjee, J. in the case of Md. Nazrul Islam v. Union of India (1977-2 Cal LJ 96) (supra).

11. Both the learned Judges in holding the impugned orders to be bad did not take into consideration the question that on and from the date of the notification dated September 10, 1965 all immovable property held or managed on behalf of all Pakistani nationals would automatically vest in the Custodian of Enemy Property for India. The learned Judge also did not take into consideration the decision of the Supreme Court as to effect of vesting in the case of the Fruit and Vegetable Merchants Union v. Delhi Improvement Trust (AIR 1957 SC 344) (supra). In the premises both the decisions, in my view, can be dissented from as the main question, namely, that of automatic vesting from the date of the notification was either overlooked or not brought to the notice of the learned Judges.

12. For the reasons stated above, I do not find any merit in this application. The Rule is accordingly discharged. All interim orders are vacated. The Receiver is also discharged she will hand over the possession of the property and submit all the accounts together with the amounts of the rents collected upto date to the Custodian of the Enemy Property. I also make it clear that the discharge of this Rule will not prevent the petitioners from agitating the questions of fact which they have raised in this petition in an appropriate Civil Court.

13. There will be no order as to costs.

14. Mr. Das has disputed that some persons who are at present claiming to occupy premises No. 6, Haribari First Lane, Calcutta-73, are not at all tenants. The Custodian of Enemy Property will be at liberty to realise the compensation and/or rent for the said rooms in alleged occupation of such persons without prejudice to the rights and contentions of the parties.

15. Mr. Sankar Das Banerjee orally prays for a stay of the operation of this order. His prayer is refused.

16. As prayed for, let plain copies of the ordering portion of this judgment duly countersigned be handed over to the learned Advocate for the respective parties.

Petition dismissed.

J. Islam, for Petitioner; M. K. Ghosh, for Respondents.

ORDER:— The petitioner, Modammad Zazmul Ahasen, is a modified Ration Dealer under the Scheme framed by the West Bengal Government for distribution of food-stuffs to consumers and runs a modified Ration Shop in Dhalhara, P. S. Tandua, Midnapore. The petitioner is working as a modified Ration Dealer since 17th May, 1967.

2. The petitioner's licence was renewed from time to time. The last such renewal was on 5th Sept., 1975, and the licence was valid up to 4th Sept., 1980.

3. On or about 18th July, 1980, the Circle Inspector, Food and Supplies, Tamuluk and the Inspector of Food and Supplies, Tamuluk, the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 herein visited the shop of the petitioner for inspection. It is alleged that during inspection the petitioner could not produce books of accounts relating to rationed commodities. Stock Books, Daily Sales Register, Non-drawal Register and Cash Memos could not be produced for the period of six months up to 19th July, 1980. On enquiry from the Ration-card-holders present in the shop it was discovered that the petitioner did not issue any Cash Memos to consumers and books of accounts were not maintained. The petitioner was given time for production of books of accounts in the Office of the Sub-Divisional Controller (Food and Supplies), Tamuluk, the respondent No. 5 herein. The petitioner appeared in person but did not produce the books of accounts. On 22nd July, 1980, the petitioner produced books of accounts relating to the period 17th July, 1980, to 20th July, 1980, but the books of accounts prior to that period were not produced. There was a further allegation that the petitioner had inflated falsely the quantity of rationed commodities distributed by the petitioner in his weekly returns and that the petitioner had shown bogus distribution and had made unauthorised disposal of stocks of modified rationed commodities. A notice to show cause why the dealership of the petitioner should not be terminated was issued by the respondent No. 5 on 28th July, 1980. On 29th August, 1980, the petitioner submitted a detailed reply in which he dealt with the allegation made against him in the show cause notice point by point.

4. The petitioner also made a writ petition challenging the proceedings commenced by the Sub-Divisional Controller (Food and Supplies), Tamuluk, the respondent No. 5 herein. The said writ petition was disposed of by D. K. Sen J. on 9th Sept., 1980. By his order D. K. Sen J. gave liberty to the respondents to continue with the proceedings initiated by the show cause notice but the order of suspension was stayed till disposal of the said proceedings. Thereafter on 25th Sept., 1981, the Sub-Divisional Controller (Food and Supplies), Tamuluk, by an order dated 25th Sept., 1981, with the approval of the District Magistrate, Midnapore, cancelled the modified ration agreement/dealership under para 17 of the agreement. The order was made effective from 28th Sept., 1981.

5. The petitioner in the writ petition made herein has challenged the legality and validity of the order dated 28th Sept., 1981, passed by the respondent No. 5. The petitioner has urged that the respondents have acted mala fide against the petitioner and the respondents have stopped supply of modified ration articles to the petitioner on and from 22nd July, 1980, even before the show cause notice was issued. It was further alleged that no fresh notice of hearing was given and the impugned order was passed without giving an opportunity of being heard to the petitioner.

6. Supply of foodstuff was resumed to the petitioner on 25th Aug., 1980. The petitioner applied on 12th Aug., 1980, for two months' time to reply to the show cause notice. On 29th Aug., 1980, the petitioner submitted his answers to the show cause notice and thereafter the case was heard.

7. In view of the aforesaid facts it cannot be said that the respondents have acted mala fide or that the petitioner was not given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause in this case.

8. The petitioner has also urged that the impugned order is not a speaking order. Although the charges have been dealt with in detail by the petitioner, the respondents had merely held "But after careful consideration of your written explanation it appears that your reply to the aforesaid charges are fully unsatisfactory. Also at the time of personal hearing you failed to refute any of the charges framed against you." Although the charges have been set out in detail, the petitioner's reply to the said charges have not been set out nor dealt with anywhere in the order.

9. In my opinion, the petitioner should succeed on this point. The respondent No. 5 did not give any reason why he held the charges proved and the explanations given by the petitioner unacceptable. The Supreme Court in the case of Mahabir Prasad v. State of U. P., AIR 1970 SC 1302 observed at pages 1303-1304 "The case discloses a disturbing state of affairs. The Authorities have disclosed by their conduct a reckless disregard of the rights of the appellants. The order passed by the District Magistrate cancelling the licences was quasi-judicial; it could be made only on a consideration of the charges and the explanation given by the appellants. That necessarily implied that the District Magistrate had to give some reasons why he held the charges proved, and the explanation unacceptable."

10. S. A. de Smith in his Judicial Review of Administrative Action, Third Edition, has stated at p. 197 "Unless the licensee has already been given to understand when he was granted the licence that renewal is not to be expected, non-renewal may seriously upset his plans, cause him economic loss and perhaps cast a slur on his reputation."

11. In this case serious allegations have been made against the petitioner in the show cause notice. The petitioner has answered the allegations point by point. The respondent No. 5 should have given some reasons in his order for coming to the conclusion that the petitioner's explanation was not acceptable.

12. In the facts and circumstances of this case the impugned order dated 28th Sept., 1981, is quashed. The rule is made absolute. The respondents will, however, be at liberty to pass a fresh order in accordance with law in this case.

13. The respondents are directed to resume supply of ration articles to the petitioner immediately. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

Bhaskar Ghosh, for Appellant; Sailendra Bhusan Bakshi and Sailendra Nath Dutta, for Respondent.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J.:— The appellant wife has preferred this appeal against the judgment and decree passed by the learned Additional District Judge, 12th Court, Alipore dissolving her marriage with the respondent husband under S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. The learned Additional District Judge, however, dismissed the prayer of the respondent husband for annulling the marriage of the parties on the ground specified in S. 12 (1) (b) of the said Act. The respondent husband has also filed a cross-objection against the said dismissal of his prayer for annulment of their marriage.

2. On 3rd March, 1976 the marriage between the appellant and the respondent according to Hindu rites took place at 50/1, Shib Thakurbari Lane, P. S. Behala, District 24 Parganas. On 21st Sept., 1976 Dilip Kumar Bag, the respondent herein, had presented in the Court of the District Judge, 24 Parganas his petition for annulment of his marriage with the appellant under S. 12 and in the alternative for dissolution of the said marriage under Section 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. Although the said petition for divorce was presented by the respondent husband before even one year had elapsed since the date of his marriage with the respondent, he did not make any application under the proviso to Sec. 14 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act for allowing him to present the said petition for dissolution of marriage. He did not plead any case of exceptional hardship to him or of exceptional depravity on the part of his wife. Therefore, it is patent that on the date of the presentation of the said petition, the Court below was not competent to entertain the respondent husband's petition for dissolution of his marriage with the appellant by a decree of divorce. But the said bar under S. 14 of the Hindu Marriage Act did not apply to the respondent's petition for annulling the marriage under Section 12 (1) of the said Act. It is somewhat strange that none of the parties had drawn the attention of the Court below to the provisions of S. 14 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act and overlooking the said provisions, the Court below has dissolved by a decree of divorce the marriage between the appellant and the respondent.

3. We find from the records that on 1st April, 1977 the present appellant had filed her written statement in the present case and on 15th April, 1977 the trial Court had framed the issues. On 14th May, 1977 the respondent husband, who was the petitioner in the Court below, purported to file an application under O. 6, R. 17 of the Code read with S. 39 (2) of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976. He prayed that he might be allowed to amend his main application 'with a view to give further details and to avail of the reliefs provided in the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976'. It was further averred "that the main application was drafted in 'hot haste', due to oversight and inadvertence, proper details of happenings" were not given in the main application. It may be pointed out that the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 (Act 68 of 1976) was published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary Issue dated May 27, 1976 and on 21st Sept., 1976 the respondent husband had presented his petition for annulment and in the alternative for dissolution of the marriage with the appellant wife. Therefore, the provisions of sub-section (2) of S. 39 of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976 were not attracted to the facts of the present case. But, undoubtedly the Court below had jurisdiction to allow amendments prayed for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. The Court below had allowed the amendments prayed for. Therefore, the present appellant had filed an additional written statement.

4. Mr. Bakshi, learned advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent husband, has not disputed that on the original date of his client's petition under S. 13 (1) (iii), the trial Court was not competent to entertain it, but he has submitted that after expiry of more than one year from the date of marriage, the respondent husband had applied, inter alia, for amendment of his petition under Section 13 (1) (ii) of the Hindu Marriage Act and we ought to treat the date on which the said amendment application was filed as the date of presentation of the instant petition for divorce. According to Mr. Bakshi, learned advocate for the respondent husband, therefore, the Court below was competent to pass the impugned decree for dissolution of the marriage between the parties.

5. A Hindu marriage no longer creates 'indissoluble ties' between the husband and the wife; and S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 sets out grounds of divorce. But the legislature by enacting Section 14 has imposed a ban upon presenting a petition for divorce unless one year has elapsed from the date of marriage. In case of exceptional hardship to the petitioner or exceptional depravity of the respondent, the Court under proviso to Section 14 (1) of the Act may, however, allow a petition under S. 13 to be filed within one year from the date of marriage. The sub-sec. (1) of Section 14 begins with the expression 'notwithstanding anything contained in this Act ...'. Therefore, in spite of other provisions including those of S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act, the Court cannot entertain any petition for divorce within one year of marriage. The suit is to be regarded as not entertained if it is thrown out at its inception without decision on its merits. The inability to entertain means not inability to grant relief to the plaintiff but inability to give him a trial at all (vide observations of B. K. Mukherjea and Elias, JJ. in Nakul Chandra v. Shyamapada Ghose, AIR 1945 Cal 381 regarding the scope of S. 37-A (3) of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act).

6. The object of S. 14 (i) is clearly to prevent the parties from presenting a divorce petition without giving a trial to their marriage for at least one year. Thus, Section 14 has been enacted "with the object of preventing hasty suits for dissolution of marriage" (see observations of Lord Denning in Bowman v. Bowman, (1949) 2 All ER 127 : 1949 P. 353-356, with reference to the provisions of Section 1 (1) of Matrimonial Causes Act, 1937, which was replaced by Matrimonial Cases Act, 1950, Section 2; thereafter, by Matrimonial Cases Act, 1965, Section 2 and thereafter, by Matrimonial Cases Act, 1973, Section 3. See also Rayden on Divorce (13th Edition), Vol. 1, Chapter XI, Sections I and II, pages 316-320). Rayden on Divorce (13th Edition) in a note under Chapter XI, Section I page 349, has referred to Bamford v. Bamford, 1956 CLY 2831, where the marriage took place on 27th June, 1956 and it was held that the earliest date on which the petition could have been filed was 28th June, 1956 and accordingly the petition was dismissed). We agree with the observations made in Meganatha Nayar v. Shrimathi Susheela, AIR 1957 Mad 423, that S. 14 of the Hindu Marriage Act is grounded on public policy and that it provides restrictions upon hasty recourse to legal proceeding without making any real effort to save the marriage.

6-A. We have already noted that the present respondent husband did not make any application before the trial Court for permission to present his petition for divorce within one year of his marriage with the present appellant. He did not plead or prove his exceptional hardship or exceptional depravity on the part of the wife. Therefore, the proviso to Section 14 (1) was not attracted to the present case. Further, even in a case where such permission under S. 14 (1) proviso is obtained by misrepresentation or concealment of the nature of the case, the Court has been given a discretion either to direct that the decree for dissolution shall not have effect till the expiry of one year from the date of marriage or to dismiss the petition without prejudice to file a fresh petition after expiry of one year from the marriage.

7. The decision of the Division Bench of Jammu and Kashmir High Court in Sawita Devi v. Pran Nath, AIR 1967 J & K 89 is distinguishable on facts. Without obtaining leave under the proviso to S. 14, a petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act was presented within three years of marriage. The learned District Judge while allowing the amendment of the said petition granted leave under proviso to S. 14 (j) of the Act (as the said provision stood before the amendment of the Marriage Laws Regulation Act, 1976). The learned Judges of the Jammu and Kashmir High Court did not agree with the trial Court that the case was a fit one for granting such leave but accepted the submission of the learned lawyer for the husband that the application in question was a composite one under Sections 10 and 13 of the Act. The learned Judges further applied the principles that in order to shorten the course of litigation and to do complete justice between the parties, the Court ought to take notice of subsequent events. According to the Division Bench, in the interest of the parties and also for doing substantial justice, the petitioner husband ought to be allowed to amend his petition subject to payment of costs.

8. The respondent husband's petition under Section 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 was not only prematurely filed, but also the evidence about appellant wife's mental condition covered such a short period that it is not possible to satisfactorily decide whether or not she was really of unsound mind or suffered from any mental disorder of a kind and of such an extent that the petitioner husband was not reasonably expected to live with her.

9. Even after the amendment of the Marriage Laws (Amendment) Act, 1976, only in cases of certain kinds of mental disorder of the respondent, the Court under S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act may dissolve marriage by decree of divorce. The petitioner by merely proving that the respondent is of unsound mind or suffers from mental disorder cannot obtain divorce. The petitioner would be required to prove that the respondent had been incurably of unsound mind. Alternatively, he ought to prove that the respondent to the petition under Section 13 (1) of the Hindu Marriage Act had been suffering continuously or intermittently from mental disorder which according to Explanation (a) of Clause (iii) of Section 13 (1) means "mental illness, arrested or incomplete development of mind, psychopathic disorder or any other disorder or disability of mind and includes schizophrenia". The Explanation (b) to Clause (iii) of Section 13 (1) gives the meaning of the expression "psychopathic disorder". No doubt, it is no longer relevant whether such psychopathic disorder requires or is susceptible to medical treatment. But marriage could be dissolved only by proving that the respondent was suffering from some form of mental disorder which was of such a kind and of such an extent that the petitioner could not reasonably be expected to live with the respondent. In other words, the petitioner must prove that because of such mental disorder, it was not reasonably possible to enjoy conjugal life with the respondent. The Court ought to be satisfied that the respondent's mental disorder is of such a nature and of such intensity that it would not be reasonable to compel the petitioner to endure or suffer the same. In a given case, if it is proved that because of the abnormally aggressive or seriously irresponsible conduct resulting from psychopathic disorder, it was not reasonably possible for the petitioner to live with the respondent, the Court may dissolve the marriage under Section 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act.

10. We have already pointed out that the respondent husband had presented his petition under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act within a period of little more than six months from the date of marriage. On 3rd March, 1976 their marriage took place and the following day the petitioner and the respondent wife had come to the former's residence at 47, Rajani Mukherjee Lane, Behala. The petitioner had pleaded that on 5th March, 1976 when the Boudhat ceremony was performed it appeared that Smritikana had mental infirmity. According to the petitioner, she was found completely of unsound mind and became extremely aggressive and violent in nature. As already stated, that the alleged particulars of such mental disorder of the respondent were sought to be given by amending the petition under Section 13 of the Act. The petitioner husband claimed that on 11th March, 1976, Dr. A. Chakraborty, a psychiatrist, had examined her and had prescribed medicines. But she had continued to suffer from mental disorder. On 14th April, 1977 the husband got his wife Smritikana examined by Dr. D. N. Nandi, who was described as an eminent psychologist. According to the petitioner, as his relations were left with no peace by his wife, he had hired a flat at Tollygunge Circular Road and took her there on 19th of April, 1976. On 27th May, 1976, the petitioner's father-in-law had visited him and she had abused him and he had fainted and had to be removed to a hospital. Being unable to bear, the husband claimed to have sent his wife to his father-in-law's house, on 11th July, 1976 on return from his office, the petitioner found the respondent in the house. She continued to abuse and misbehave. With the help of Sri Madan Mondal, the petitioner got her admitted in the Hospital for Mental Diseases at Gobra on 14th of July, 1976. While she was still an indoor patient in the said hospital, on 21st Sept., 1976 the present husband had filed the petition under Section 12 and in the alternative under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. As already stated, he did not either plead or prove his exceptional hardship or depravity on the part of his wife. His original petition did not give particulars of the alleged mental illness of his wife, Smritikana. No doubt, he had filed his petition for amendment after expiry of more than one year from the date of the marriage. But he did not thereby plead or thereafter prove by evidence that even after expiry of the period of one year, the respondent wife had continued to be either incurably of unsound mind or that she was still suffering from mental disorder of such a kind and such an extent that the petitioner could not be reasonably expected to live with the respondent. The petitioner had amended his petition by only giving particulars of her alleged mental disorder between 4th of March, 1976 and 14th of July, 1976. He did not even wait for completion of his wife's treatment in the Hospital for Mental Diseases, Gobra.

11. The respondent husband in para 9 of his petition under Ss. 12 and 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act as originally filed in the Court below, inter alia, merely averred that after marriage his wife "was found completely of unsound mind and became extremely aggressive and violent in nature and actions..." He further alleged that she had been admitted in the Hospital for Mental Diseases, Gobra on 14th of July, 1976 and there was absolutely no chance of recovery. The respondent husband in para 12 (b) of the amended plaint made a slightly different case by averring that at the time of the marriage his wife had been subject to recurrent attacks of insanity. The respondent in para 12 (c) of the plaint purported to give alleged particulars of her conduct which he described as "unbecoming and aggressively violent". The respondent had been incurably of unsound mind and has been suffering continuously or intermittently from a mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that he could not reasonably be expected to live with her. The respondent in paras 12(e) and 12(f), inter alia, submitted that his wife, the present appellant, ought to be examined by a competent psychiatrist for the purpose of ascertaining her insanity and mental disorder and for this purpose her detention in the hospital for a period of 10 days was necessary.

12. We have already observed that the evidence adduced by the parties was not sufficient for adjudging that the appellant wife was either of incurably unsound mind or was suffering from any mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that the appellant husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her. Dilip Kumar Bag, the petitioner respondent, was examined as P. W. 4. There was practically no corroboration of his evidence that they had begun to suspect about the unsoundness of her mind on 4-3-1976 as she did not take bath, nor she had slept and had unnatural appearance. According to Dilip. P. W. 4, on 5th of March, 1976, i.e., the date of Boubhat ceremony, her appearance appeared to be unnatural. Dilip himself admitted that he and his wife did not spend together the nights of 4th and 5th of March, 1976 according to their custom. It is common knowledge that in case of a negotiated marriage, among Bengali Hindus till the ceremony of Phoolsajjya, the bride and bridegroom live separate from each other and the bridegroom has hardly any chance to become familiar with his bride during this period. The respondent petitioner did not examine his mother, sister and other members of his family except his father as witnesses, in the case. Therefore, it would not be safe to rely upon the interested testimony of Dilip, P. W. 4, that on the 4th and 5th of March, 1976 his wife had behaved abnormally by refusing to dress up or had received gifts with her left hand and had even thrown away all of them. Haricharan Bag, the father of Dilip, P. W. 5, himself admitted that on the wedding day he was present only for a short time and rest of the time he was looking after the visitors. He did not notice the bride quite well at the time of wedding. Although, P. W. 5 during his cross-examination claimed that on 4th of March, 1976 he himself, his wife and all the inmates had realised that Smritikana was of unsound mind and had discussed among themselves about her unsoundness of mind, it is improbable that P. W. 5 did not immediately tell anything to her father but he was told about it in the night of Boubhat ceremony. If really on the 4th and 5th of March, 1976 Smritikana had behaved unnaturally and had acted in irresponsible manner in the presence of the relations and the guests, there was no reason why the mother-in-law of the bride or his uncle and also other relations were not produced as witnesses to testify. During cross-examination P. W. 5 claimed that all his relations were told and they had said that the bride was of unsound mind. Smritikana in her evidence totally denied the allegation that she had behaved in unnatural or irresponsible manner as alleged by the petitioner husband. It was not probable that if on the 4th and 5th of March, 1976 she had behaved in the manner alleged by her husband, Smritikana had willingly gone through the Boubhat and Phoolsajjya ceremonies. On her behalf several photographs taken during the marriage ceremony were exhibited (vide Ext. C series). Although Dilip had admitted that during ceremonies in his house, photographs were taken, he did not produce the said photographs. None of the photographs (Ext. C series) indicated anything unusual or unnatural in the appearance of Smritikana. Therefore, the evidence given by the petitioner husband about his wife's conduct and behaviour on the 4th and 5th of March, 1976 do not appear to be credible.

13. Both Dilip, P. W. 4 and his father, Haricharan, P. W. 5, claimed that they got Smritikana treated by Dr. Amiya Chakraborty and he prescribed certain medicines. But Dr. Amiya Chakraborty was not examined as a witness and, therefore, the contents of his prescription (Ext. 5) were not admissible. For the same reason, no reliance can be placed upon the prescription granted by Dr. D. N. Nandi (Ext. 5-A), who also did not depose in the case. Thus, there was no corroboration of the evidence of P. Ws. 4 and 5 that the present appellant was under medical treatment of the aforesaid two doctors during the months of March and April, 1976.

14. Dilip, P. W. 4, had claimed that from 18th April, 1976 he had begun to live separately with his wife in a different house with a view to cure her. It was somewhat unusual that although Smritikana was of unsound mind, she did not sleep, she could not take food and used to become angry, her husband with Smritikana had shifted to Tollygunge Circular Road flat. Even if they employed a servant, it was not reasonable and probable that Smritikana who was described as a mental patient used to be left alone in the said flat when Dilip went to his office. Again there was no corroboration of the evidence of Dilip that also during her stay at Tollygunge Circular Road flat Smritikana used to become extremely violent and abusive. She would call the passers-by and go to the roof and dance. Neither the neighbours nor the landlord of the Tollygunge Circular Road flat were examined as witnesses to corroborate the evidence of Dilip about his wife's alleged behaviour during their stay up to 14th of July, 1976. The same observations applied with regard to the alleged incident on 11th of July, 1976 when on return from office Dilip allegedly saw his wife sitting on the road near his house and the landlord on enquiry had allegedly told Dilip that she would not go inside in spite of requests.

15. The medical evidence given on the side of the petitioner husband also did not establish that Smritikana was either incurably of unsound mind or suffered from mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that the petitioner husband could (not?) reasonably be expected to live with her. At this stage, it may be pointed out that Dilip in his petition under Sections 12 and 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act had described Smritikana, the present appellant, as a person of unsound mind represented by her father. But she herself appeared in the Court below which rejected the petitioner husband's prayer for appointing a guardian ad litem for her. The learned Additional District Judge in his Order No. 26 dated 30th Nov., 1977 recorded that on examination in Court there was nothing prima facie to suggest that she was of unsound mind. The trial Court allowed her as sui juris to contest the case. She herself deposed as a witness and was subjected to lengthy cross-examination. The Court below did not record anything unusual about her demeanour. On perusal of her evidence, we find also that Smritikana gave intelligent and sane replies. We shall hereinafter refer to the evidence given by Dr. K. P. Chatterjee of Sarkarpole Institute of Mental Health where she was admitted as an indoor patient under orders of the trial Court. According to the said hospital report, and the oral evidence of Dr. K. P. Chatterjee, no mental abnormality in her was detected.

16. The petitioner got his wife, the present appellant, admitted into the Hospital for Mental Diseases Gobra on 14th of July, 1976. Dr. Ajit Sankar Mukherjee (P. W. 1)

Superintendent of the said Mental Hospital in course of his cross-examination had admitted that he did not personally examine Smt. Smritikana Bag and he had been summoned by the Court to produce the hospital report. When admittedly Dr. Ajit Sankar Mukherjee had no personal knowledge, the petitioner husband cannot rely upon his testimony for proving that his wife was incurably of unsound mind or suffered from a mental disorder of such a kind and of such an extent that it was reasonably impossible for him to live with her. Dr. Ranjan Sen, Deputy Superintendent of Hospital for Mental Diseases, Gobra, (P. W. 2) who was examined by the petitioner husband, had stated that Smt. Smritikana Bag was an indoor patient and was under his treatment. The petitioner did not examine as witness Dr. Arun Prakash Bhattacharjee, a clinical psychologist of the said Hospital, who had examined her and who had also written a part of the treatment sheet (Ext. 2). He was not subjected to cross-examination with reference to his said writing. Therefore, the endorsement by Dr. A. P. Bhattacharjee upon the said treatment sheet (Ext. 2) were clearly inadmissible. Dr. Ranjan Sen (P. W. 2) in his oral evidence stated that the present appellant was suffering from schizophrenia of the paranoid type. But on the basis of the said opinion of Dr. Ranjan Sen, P. W. 2, we are unable to hold that the appellant wife was either incurably of unsound mind or was suffering from mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that the petitioner could not reasonably be expected to live with her. In fact, Dr. Sen did not depose that her illness was incurable or state about the extent of her mental disorder. In course of his cross-examination, Dr. Sen admitted that the symptoms noted by him on the treatment-sheet might be developed by temporary mental shock. He further stated, "it may be that husband of Smt. Smritikana Bag has got her forcibly admitted or her father later complained to me and got her discharged". We are not prepared to accept the submission of Mr. Bakshi that the above expression "forcibly admitted" did not mean that although she was a normal person she was compelled by her husband to take admission in the hospital. Both Dr. Mukherjee and Dr. Sen had been examined on this point; while Dr. Mukherjee had denied that a patient could be forcibly admitted, Dr. Sen did not deny the said suggestion. Further, Dr. Sen stated that Smt. Bag was a patient not of psychoneurosis but of psychosis which meant complete madness. But his said opinion was not consistent with his further statement that he would not be surprised if Smt. Bag was reported to be a normal woman by Sarkarpole Mental Hospital. According to the last endorsement made in the treatment sheet (Ext. 2), at the time of her discharge she had improved and was manageable at home.

17. Dr. A. P. Banerjee (P. W. 3), who was Medical Officer of Hospital for Mental Diseases, proved the writing (Ext. 4) which consisted of an endorsement on the back of Ext. 1 to the effect that on 5th Nov., 1976 one Gopal Chandra Das had taken the patient Smt. Smritikana Bag on her discharge from the hospital. This witness did not testify about the mental condition of Smt. Bag.

18. We already referred to the fact that the appellant had appeared before the trial Court, the trial Court did not appoint any guardian ad litem and had recorded that there was nothing prima facie to suggest that she was insane. She herself testified as a witness and her statements did not indicate that she was suffering from any mental infirmity. We have also referred to the evidence of Dr. K. P. Chatterjee, Visiting Psychiatrist, Sarkarpole Institute of Mental Health, who had examined her under the orders of the trial Court. She was an indoor patient for seven days in the said institute and Dr. Chatterjee who had opportunity to examine her, arrived at the conclusion that she was hale and hearty and was absolutely normal. We are not prepared to reject the opinion of Dr. Chatterjee on the ground that neither Dr. Pal was examined as a witness nor his report referred to in the hospital record was produced. The appellant wife did not also rely upon the said report of Dr. Pal. The learned Additional District Judge presumably on the basis of the evidence given by Dr. Sen came to the conclusion that the appellant wife was suffering intermittently from schizophrenia ever since her admission in Gobra Mental Hospital on 14th July, 1976. The Court overlooked that Dr. Bhatiacharjee, who also examined the appellant wife did not depose. Therefore, only on the basis of the alleged symptoms noted in the treatment sheet the Court below was not entitled to find that her symptoms included 'irrelevant talk, delusion of poison, the suspicion against all members of the family, a belief that they were jealous of her, hallucination, passivity phenomenon and harbouring strong paranoid ideas against her in-law'. We have already stated that the petitioner husband did not examine as witness his mother and sister or the landlord of Tollygunge Circular Road house. The father of the petitioner husband did not have any personal knowledge about her alleged symptoms. Even if it is assumed that the appellant wife had exhibited certain symptoms of mental disorder, there was no cogent evidence that her said alleged illness was of a kind and of such an extent that it was reasonably not possible for the petitioner husband to live with her. We have already pointed out that at the date of its filing, his petition for divorce under S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act was not entertainable. The parties had also only lived together for little over four months. Even before the hospital authorities had completed her treatment and had made any final pronouncement about her mental health, the petitioner husband rushed to Court. On this state of evidence we are unable to hold that he has satisfactorily proved the kind and the extent of the alleged mental disorder of the appellant-wife or that it was not reasonably possible to live with her. Not only Section 14 of the Hindu Marriage Act was a bar to his petition under S. 13 (1) (iii) but also the evidence produced by the petitioner-husband indicated that he had filed the said petition without ascertaining whether it was reasonably possible to live with his wife. The trial Court had overlooked the provisions of Section 14 of the Hindu Marriage Act and also did not consider the evidence in the light of the relevant provisions of law. Therefore, we set aside the findings of the trial Court regarding the ground of dissolution of marriage under S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Act. We hold that the petitioner-husband was not entitled to a decree for dissolution on the said ground.

19. The learned Additional District Judge refused the prayer of the petitioner-husband for annulling the marriage of the parties on the ground that the same contravened clause (ii) of S. 5 of the Hindu Marriage Act. We agree with the said findings of the trial Court. We have already held that the petitioner-husband has not satisfactorily proved that at the date of the presentation of his petition his wife was incurably of unsound mind or was suffering continuously or intermittently from mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that the petitioner could not reasonably be expected to live with her. The petitioner or his father themselves had no personal knowledge about the state of mental health of the appellant-wife before marriage. He did not at all prove his allegations made in para (8) of his petition under S. 12, in the alternative under Section 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. The statement made by the petitioner-husband regarding what they had allegedly heard about her treatment for mental disease before her marriage were entirely hearsay. There was no evidence that she had ever become insane or mentally unbalanced before her marriage or that she had assaulted her neighbours as alleged in paras 12 (g) and 12 (h) of the amended petition. We have already observed that there was no cogent evidence that at the time of marriage or during the other ceremonies which followed the appellant-wife had behaved like a person of unsound mind or showed that she was suffering from mental disorder of such a kind or to such an extent as to make her unfit for marriage and procreation of children. There was also no evidence that before her marriage she had suffered from recurrent attacks of insanity. We have already observed that the ladies of the petitioner's household or the friends and relations, who had attended the marriage and ceremonies, which took place in the petitioner-husband's house were not examined to corroborate that the appellant-wife's behaviour was unnatural or that even then she appeared to be suffering from mental disorder. It was improbable that the marriage of the parties was finalised without the ladies of the petitioner's house at all seeing her and finally approving her selection as a bride. On this point the case of the appellant appears to be much more trustworthy. Usually, in case of negotiated marriages among middle-class Bengali families, the ladies of the bridegroom's family visit, not only once but on several occasions, the prospective bride's house before finally selecting her. There was no special circumstance in this case which would warrant an assumption that there was any departure from such usual practice. The petitioner-husband did not examine Sri Madan Mondal, who had negotiated the marriage. It is difficult to accept the explanation for not examining Sri Madan Mohan Mondal, who was a colleague of the petitioner-husband's father.

20. In our view, the Court below rightly held that the petitioner-husband has failed to adduce any evidence that at the time of the marriage the appellant-wife was of unsound mind or was suffering from any mental disorder. Therefore, the husband-petitioner's prayer for annulling the marriage under Section 12 of the Hindu Marriage Act must fail.

21. Mr. Bakshi, learned advocate for the respondent, has submitted that in case we hold that the respondent-husband's petition under S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act was hit by S. 14 of the said Act and, therefore, not maintainable, the Court may be pleased to pass a decree for judicial separation on the ground of mental disorder of the appellant-wife. Even to obtain a decree for judicial separation the respondent-husband must establish any of the grounds specified in sub-section (1) of S. 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. In other words, in case he fails to prove that she had been incurably of unsound mind or has been suffering continuously or intermittently from any mental disorder of such a kind and to such an extent that the petitioner cannot reasonably be expected to live with the respondent and the Court refuses to dissolve the marriage by decree of divorce, the Court cannot grant the petitioner-husband alternative relief by way of decree of judicial separation founded on the same grounds. Question of passing a decree for judicial separation instead of a decree of divorce might arise only when the ground on which the petition for dissolution of marriage is founded is proved but having regard to the circumstances of the case the Court considers it just to pass a decree for judicial separation. But when the petitioner-husband could not substantiate a ground on which he founded his petition for dissolution of marriage, we cannot grant him decree for judicial separation by way of alternative relief.

22. Before we close this judgment, we make it clear that the petitioner-husband (the respondent herein) had adduced evidence about the mental condition of his wife (the appellant) from date of marriage up to the date of the filing of his petition under Sections 12 and 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. Therefore, our findings and observations in this judgment are mainly confined to the petitioner's case covering the said period of time. We have not recorded any finding about the present mental condition of the appellant and we express no opinion as to whether or not either of the parties would be now entitled to any relief under the provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act or under any other law.

23. For the foregoing reasons, we allow this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the learned Additional District Judge and dismiss the respondent-husband's petition under Ss. 12 and 13 of the Hindu Marriage Act. We also dismiss the cross-objection preferred by the respondent. In the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

S. N. Mukharji with S. Sarkar, for Appellant; S. Sinha, for Respondents.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:— This appeal is arising out of an order passed and judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Salil K. Roy Chowdhury on the 27th April, 1980 dismissing an application for amendment of written statement filed by defendant No. 2. It appears that a suit was filed in this case by the United Commercial Bank, the plaintiff on the 22nd June, 1970 against the principal debtor, which was a company being wound up by the Company Court by an order dated the 23rd July, 1979. Subsequently the plaintiff had obtained leave under Section 446 of the Companies Act, 1956 to continue the suit against the Official Liquidator, so far as defendant No. 1 was concerned which was the company in liquidation and by an order dated 3rd Dec., 1979 such leave was granted and the plaintiff took out an application under Chap. 13A of the Original Side Rules of the Calcutta High Court for summary judgment. The defendant No. 2, the present appellant also took out an application for particulars of the plaint as well as leave to file the written statement. Both these applications had appeared before the learned trial Judge and by an order dated the 15th Feb., 1980 the hearing of the suit was expedited and the defendant No. 2 was directed to file its written statement within one week from date, cross order was given for discovery. Direction was given for inspection forthwith thereafter and the suit was directed to appear in the list for hearing irrespective of part heard on the 5th March, 1980 at the top of the list. The suit duly appeared in the list but the defendant No. 2 had asked for time on that occasion as he could not discover the documents and the time was granted. On the 31st March, 1980, an application, resulting in the order of the learned trial Judge, was made by defendant No. 2 asking for leave to amend the written statement. In this connection, it would be appropriate to state, as we have mentioned, that the suit was against two defendants, viz., defendant No. 1 which was a company in liquidation and the defendant No. 2 who was the guarantor. The suit was for money claim against the company in liquidation and it was alleged that the defendant No. 2, the present appellant had guaranteed the repayment, in writing furnished to the plaintiff, of the outstanding dues of the plaintiff from the defendant No. 1 in the account. We may incidentally point out that it appears that initially perhaps the plaintiff had contemplated to institute the suit against four defendants because in para 2 of the plaint it was stated: "The defendants Nos. 3 and 4 were at all material times and are the Directors of the defendant-company." It was thereafter stated that the defendant No. 2 too was a Director of the defendant-company. But the suit as filed does not contain any allegations, as appearing from the Paper Book, against defendants Nos. 3 and 4, who were described to be the other Directors of the company. Be that as it may, the suit was filed for certain money in cash credit account against the defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 2 as guarantor. In the written statement filed by the defendant No. 2 it was stated in para 8 as follows:

"8. With reference to para 12 of the plaint, the defendant denies that this defendant has guaranteed the repayment of the outstanding dues of the plaintiff in the said accounts either duly or at all or that there is any question of this defendant failing or neglecting to pay to the plaintiff as alleged or at all. This defendant disputes that any demand was made on this defendant, as alleged or at all. Save as aforesaid, this defendant denies each and every allegation contained in para 12 of the plaint."

In para 10, it was pleaded that further and/or in the alternative and/or in any event, the defendant No. 2 took certain defences which were stated in various clauses in sub-para (i) to (ix). In sub-clause (vi) of paragraph 10 the defence was as follows:

"(vi) The alleged provision in the contract of guarantee which purports to affect the rights conferred on this defendant as guarantor under Ss. 133, 134 and 135 of the Contract Act is illegal, contrary to law, null and void and no effect can be given thereto."

2. In the amendment which the defendant No. 2 was seeking in the application before the learned trial Judge, the defendant No. 2 wanted to plead as follows:

"At the time when the alleged guarantee was offered by this defendant one Mr. Satya Bhusan Chakraborty, an Industrialist and the owner of Dragon Engineering Works, who carries on business at 457, Grand Trunk Road, Howrah-2, had guaranteed for the repayment of the dues of the bank to the extent of three lakhs in the presence of the then Bank Manager. It was agreed that the alleged guarantee offered by the defendant No. 2 will not come into effect unless all remedies were exhausted against the said Satya Bhusan Chakraborty. The plaintiff-bank agreed to such proposal and on such representation and the agreement made by the Bank through the then Manager this defendant offered his alleged guarantee to the extent of Rs. 2,00,000/- knowing full well that he will never be called upon to pay that money. It appears now that the plaintiff-Bank has compromised and/or exonerated Satya Bhusan Chakraborty from any liability. This defendant submits that in the circumstances the alleged guarantee offered by this defendant has come to an end and he is not liable to pay any amount having regard to the fact that the guarantee by Satya Bhusan Chakraborty has been released behind the back of this defendant and/or without his consent."

This application, as we have mentioned before, came up before the learned trial Judge and he had dismissed this application.

3. From the judgment, it appears, the learned trial Judge was of the view that this application was made belatedly to defeat the claim of the plaintiff. Secondly, the learned trial Judge was of the view that this defence was inconsistent with the defence already taken by the defendant No. 3. It further appears that the learned trial Judge was of the view that version sought to be pleaded in the written statement was in the words of the trial Judge "tissue of lies thought out by the defendant No. 2 and his lawyers only to delay the matter as long as possible". The learned trial Judge was of the view that this was a frivolous application and if such an application was allowed no suit could be heard. The learned trial Judge further emphasised that as the company was in liquidation, the matter should be heard expeditiously. We may incidentally point out that it is true that the hearing in Company matters particularly the companies which are in liquidation should be done expeditiously but it is not a suit by a company, in liquidation, seeking to recover money from its debtor for liquidation of its debts. It is a suit against the company in liquidation and in respect of which the directors of the company, which is in liquidation, were being sought to be made liable as guarantors. The propriety of the said decision of the learned trial Judge refusing to allow the amendment is the subject matter of appeal before us.

4. It was firstly contended that the order appealed from was not appealable. It is quite evident and there is no dispute that under O. 43 of the Civil P. C. this is not an appealable order. The only question that arises is whether this is a judgment in terms of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent. Whether a particular decision is a judgment in terms of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent has been the subject matter of clarification and adjudication by several authorities both of the Supreme Court as well as the High Courts. It is not desirable, as the Supreme Court has emphasised, or possible to give exhaustive definition of what amounts to a judgment. It must depend primarily upon the facts and circumstances and the nature of the right adjudicated. In this connection we may refer to the observations of the Full Bench decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Nurul Hoda v. Amir Hasan, AIR 1972 Cal 449, where the Full Bench observed that:

"the following tests should be applied in considering whether a particular order amounted to a 'judgment' or not, namely (i) whether the order in question put an end to the proceedings so far as the Court dealing with the proceeding was concerned, in which the order was sought and made, (ii) the order should involve determination of some right or liability affecting the merits of the matter, (iii) an adjudication or a decision, which was not anything more than a step towards obtaining the final adjudication on the merits of the dispute in the proceeding was not a judgment within the meaning of the Letters Patent, (iv) where the question involved an adjudication on the question of limitation or jurisdiction of the Court, in certain cases, such decision would amount to a 'judgment'."

In this case it was emphasised on behalf of the appellant that this involved determination of the right of the defendant to plead the immunity on the ground sought to be pleaded in the amended written statement and inasmuch as that right has been denied by the refusal of the amendment there has been an adjudication of that right, that is to say, the defence of being discharged from liability because of the alleged conduct of the plaintiff. In the Supreme Court case of Shah Babulal Khimji v. Jayaben D. Kania, AIR 1981 SC 1786 at pages 1828-29 of the report Mr. Justice A. N. Sen in a concurring judgment observed, inter alia, as follows:

"..... What kind of an order will constitute a judgment within the meaning of Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and will become appealable as such necessarily depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case and on the nature and character of the order passed. The question whether a particular order constitutes a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent to be appealable under the provisions thereof has come up for consideration before the various Courts in a number of decisions. Very many decisions have been cited in the present case and they have been considered by my learned Brother, Fazal Ali, J. in his judgment. The question indeed is not free from difficulties and divergent views have been expressed by different Courts and by various learned Judges"

Mr. Justice A. N. Sen further observed that in several cases the Courts have viewed this question from different angles. But the test is, as emphasised by the Supreme Court, first in order to be a judgment it must involve a final pronouncement which would put an end to the proceeding so far as the Court dealing with that question was concerned. Secondly, the decision must involve the determination of some right or liability though it might not be necessary that there must be a decision on merits and whether, as the Supreme Court emphasised, there has been a determination of liability has to be found out from the nature and from the facts and circumstances of the case. In this case the defence of the defendant No. 2 that they stood discharged from being liable under the guarantee because of the alleged conduct sought to be pleaded in the proposed amendment has been denied by the impugned order passed by the learned trial Judge.

5. Reliance was placed on certain observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Shanti Kumar R. Canji v. Home Insurance Co., New York. AIR 1974 SC 1719. Our attention was drawn to para 8 where the Court at page 1722 of report observed as follows:

"The view of the High Courts at Calcutta and Madras with regard to the meaning of 'judgment' are with respect preferred to meaning of 'judgment' given by the Rangoon and Nagpur High Courts. We are in agreement with the view expressed by the High Court at Calcutta in the M. B. Sirkar case, AIR 1956 Cal 630 (supra) as to when an order on an application for amendment can become a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. If an amendment merely allows the plaintiff to state a new cause of action or to ask for a new relief or to include a new ground of relief all that happens is that it is possible for the plaintiff to raise further contentions in the suit but does not decide whether the contentions are right. Such an amendment does nothing more than regulate the procedure applicable to the suit. It does not decide any question which touches the merits of the controversy between the parties. Where, on the other hand, an amendment takes away from the defendant the defence of immunity from any liability by reason of limitation, it is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. The reason why it becomes a judgment is that it is a decision affecting the merits of the question between the parties by determining the right or liability based on limitation. It is the final decision as far as the trial Court is concerned."

6. This passage was relied on behalf of the appellant in support that this could be construed as a judgment. On the other hand, the above passage was relied on to emphasise that these were only the illustrations which could be considered whether the order was appealable and it was sought to be argued that anything beyond this meant not to be appealable under clause 15 of the Letters Patent. Even if we apply the above test that is to say that the amendment took away from the defendant the defence of immunity from any liability by reason of limitation, it would be a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent. In that case the Court was concerned with the amendment of the plaint. But in our opinion the same principles would apply where by an impugned order the defence of immunity is being deprived by refusal of the amendment sought for.

7. Reliance was placed on behalf of the respondent on certain observations of the Division Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Mahalingam v. C. Natesa Aiyar, AIR 1917 Mad 350. There, though the Court held that an order refusing amendment would not be appealable the reason upon which the Court proceeded seems to be clear. Mr. Justice Seshagiri Aiyer observed that as the order was infructuous and could not affect the rights of the plaintiff in that case to litigate his claim, the plaintiff had no right of appeal against it. Quite apart from that, it appears to us that the meaning of the expression 'judgment' has been clarified in several decisions which we have referred to hereinbefore. It must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Therefore, it appears to us that in view of the nature of the defence which was sought to be raised and which defence has been refused by the impugned order passed by the learned trial Judge by refusing to allow the amendment, in our opinion, in the facts and circumstances of the case this order amounts to a judgment in terms of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and as such is appealable.

8. The next aspect which calls for consideration is whether the learned Judge was right in refusing to allow the amendment. The learned Judge is right in so far as the learned Judge observed that if the application was mala fide in such a case the Court was not bound to allow such an application for amendment. The question, however, is whether the application in the instant case was mala fide or not. In the instant case, as we have mentioned before, the suit had appeared in the list from the 5th of March, 1980 though it was filed in June 1979 and the previous application under Chap. 13A of the Rules of the Original Side of this Court was refused and leave to file the written statement was given within certain time. It is true that the suit has appeared in the list from the 5th March, 1980 and the application for amendment was made on the 31st March. The explanation given in the application for amendment was that there was a consultation on the 26th March with the learned lawyers appearing in the proceedings and as a result of the consultation it was felt that without the amendment the appellant would be estopped from pleading his case. In those circumstances the application was made. In the background of the facts and circumstances of the case and in the background of the loan given by the bank particularly in a case in which a director of the company was made a guarantor, in our opinion, it cannot be said that the application was so belated or frivolous as to merit dismissal on the ground of the abuse of the process of the Court. The learned Judge further relied on certain other grounds which we have mentioned before namely, that the ground was without merit and secondly this was inconsistent pleading. An inconsistent claim can be made in the written statement by amendment. Reliance in this connection may be placed on the observations of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Nrisingh Paul v. Steel Products Ltd., AIR 1953 Cal 15. The learned advocate for the respondent however pleaded that a vested right of the plaintiff was sought to be dislodged by the proposed amendment and if such was the case, according to him, the amendment should not be entertained. He drew our attention to the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Modi Spinning & Weaving Mills Co. Ltd. v. Ladha Ram & Co., AIR 1977 SC 680. There the facts were entirely different. Firstly by the proposed amendment an attempt was sought to be made to retract from the original written statement and that too after 3 years from the filing of the written statement. That attempt might or might not constitute an amendment in the real sense. Here it is not such a case. In para 8 of the original written statement there is a complete denial of the claim by the bank against the appellant. In the amendment one of the additional grounds sought to be included was that a compromise was effected with the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 1 had been released by the bank behind the back of the appellant (sic). Therefore, we are of the opinion that on the merit also this amendment should have been allowed by the learned trial Judge. It was sought to be urged on behalf of the appellant that in making the observations the learned trial Judge expressed his views about the falsity or otherwise of the version of the appellant and as such it raised a question of jurisdiction. We do not propose to pursue the matter on this aspect in the view we have taken on the other aspect of the matter. But in view of the fact that the appellant had made the application and the suit was appearing in the list we allow this appeal and set aside the order of the learned trial Judge but we direct that the appellant should pay the costs thrown away at the trial assessed at 30 GMS. within four weeks from date and the amendment is to be effected within six weeks thereafter on a signed copy of the minutes and the suit would appear in the appropriate list as expeditiously as possible thereafter.

9. Costs of this appeal will abide by the result of the suit. Leave is given to reverify the written statement.

10. Department and all parties to act on a signed copy of the minutes.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 559

S. C. GHOSE, C. J. AND R. N. PYNE, J.

Smt. Laxmi Moni Basak and others, Appellants v. Kedar Nath Basak and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 62 of 1980, D/- 16-7-1982.

W. B. Court-fees Act (10 of 1970), S. 7 (iv), Sch. II, Art. 15 (VI) — Court-fees — Valuation of suit for jurisdiction — Failure of plaintiffs to value reliefs — Value as determinable for the computation of court-fee and value for purposes of jurisdiction would be same. (Suits Valuation Act (1887), S. 8).

In the plaint it was alleged that for the purpose of jurisdiction the value of the suit exceeded Rs. 50,000. However, the plaintiffs paid the fixed court-fee as provided in Schedule II Art. 15 (IV) inasmuch as the reliefs could not be valued. The plaintiffs had asked for injunction and also claimed for accounts and a decree for amount to be found due upon such accounts. The plaintiffs had also claimed for administration of the trust estate which comes within the relief of accounts. In the plaint the plaintiffs had not stated the value of such reliefs.

Held that the reliefs fell within the Items (c) and (e) of Section 7 (iv). In respect of such reliefs courts-fees were to be paid ad valorem under Court-fees Act and the value as determinable for the computation of court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction would be the same, if the value for the purpose of computation of court-fee was a particular amount that particular amount would also be the value for the purpose of jurisdiction. Thus the court-fees would be payable on the amount of Rupees 50,000/- which was fixed for the purpose of jurisdiction. Case law discussed.

AIR 1958 SC 245 14, 18

R. N. PYNE, J.:— A question concerning determination of the court-fees arises for consideration in this appeal which is directed against the judgment and order of Mrs. Khastgir, J. dated Feb. 11, 1980.

2. The plaintiffs-appellants filed Suit No. 402 of 1979 (Smt. Laxmi Moni Basak v. Kedar Nath Basak) concerning the trust property under a Deed of Settlement dated 9th Oct., 1934 executed by one Madhab Ballav Basak. The said Deed of Settlement was in respect of three properties namely, 350-A, 350-B and 350/1, Upper Chitpur Road (now known respectively Nos. 327/1, 327/2 and 325, Rabindra Sarani) Calcutta. It appears that by the deed of transfer dated 24th June, 1950 premises Nos. 350-A and 350-B, Upper Chitpur Road were transferred to and vested absolutely in the beneficiaries mentioned in the said deed. The trust is, however, still operating in respect of premises No. 350/1, Upper Chitpur Road (No. 325 Rabindra Sarani), Calcutta. It is stated in the plaint that the defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 are the present trustees. It is not necessary to refer in detail to the plaint. In the plaint the plaintiffs have made various allegations and charges against the trustee defendants regarding mismanagement and misappropriation of the trust property and/or funds as also for accounts. The prayers made in the plaint are as follows:

"(a) Leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent.

(b) The defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 be removed from acting as trustees of the Trust constituted by the Deed of Settlement dated October 9, 1934.

(c) Perpetual injunction restraining the defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 from further acting as trustees of the aforesaid trust.

(d) Decree directing the defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 to make full and faithful disclosure of their dealings with the aforesaid trust property.

(e) Decree directing the defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 to render true, faithful and complete accounts of their dealings with the aforesaid trust property its income realisations and disbursements.

(f) Decree directing the defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 to pay the amounts found due on such enquiry to the persons entitled thereto in accordance with their respective shares or to the Trustees or Trustees to be appointed herein.

(g) Appointment of the trustees or trustees of the aforesaid trust and, if necessary, a direction vesting the trust property in them.

(h) Direction upon the new trustee or trustees, if appointed to apply the income of the said trust property for the benefit of all beneficiaries in accordance with directions contained in the said deed of settlement dated October 9, 1934.

(i) A Decree and/or order for sale of the aforesaid trust property and payment of the proceeds thereof to the persons entitled thereto in accordance with their respective shares after setting apart sufficient amounts for payment of annuity to the defendants Nos. 9 and 10 as mentioned in the plaint.

(j) Framing of a Scheme for proper administration of the trust and suitable directions therefor.

(k) Injunction.

(l) Receiver;

(m) Costs.

(n) Further or other reliefs."

3. In paragraph 31 of the plaint it is alleged that for the purpose of jurisdiction the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 50,000/-. In paragraph 32 of the plaint it is stated that inasmuch as the reliefs cannot be valued the plaintiffs pay the fixed court-fee of Rs. 15/- as provided in Art. 15 (VI) Sch. II of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 and the plaintiffs have further undertaken to pay additional court-fees, if required. Hence the fixed amount of court-fees of Rs. 15/- has been paid by the plaintiffs on the ground stated above.

4. The defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 have entered appearance in this suit. The time for filing of the written statement has, expired on 3rd August, 1979.

5. On 31st July, 1979 Kedar Nath Basak, Dilip Kumar Basak, Smt. Chhabi Basak, defendants Nos. 1, 3 and 4 as petitioners made an application for an order directing the plaintiffs to pay additional court-fees of

Rs. 2,347.50 within a fortnight from the date of the order to be made on the petition and in default of the plaintiffs' paying the additional court-fees as aforesaid within the time as may be directed, the plaint be taken off the file and the suit be dismissed with costs. The allegation in the petition is that although the plaintiffs have stated that for the purpose of jurisdiction the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 50,000/- yet they have paid court-fees of Rs. 15/- only. According to the petitioners, the proper court-fees payable is Rs. 2,362.50 p. on the valuation of the suit made by the plaintiff and therefore after deducting the amount already paid by the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs are liable to pay a further court-fees of Rs. 2,347.50.

6. In the affidavit-in-opposition filed on behalf of the plaintiffs-appellants it is stated that proper amount of court-fee of Rs. 15/- in accordance with the provisions of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 has been paid. Further, the plaint was presented to the Stamp Reporter and he was satisfied that the due and proper court-fees payable on the plaint was Rs. 15/-. Hence, according to the appellants, proper court-fees have been paid on the plaint.

7. In the Court of the first instance it was contended on behalf of the petitioners (the respondents herein) that court-fees must be paid on the basis of the valuation fixed by the plaintiff for the purpose of jurisdiction. As the suit was valued at Rs. 50,000/- proper court-fee payable was Rs. 2,362.50 p. It was further contended that if valuation for the purpose of court-fees was Rs. 15/- the valuation for the purpose of jurisdiction could not exceed Rs. 15/- and hence, the plaintiffs should have filed the suit in other Court. The contention of the respondents (the appellants herein) in the Court of the first instance was that inasmuch as it was not possible to estimate money value of the subject matter of dispute and as the same was not otherwise provided by the West Bengal Court-fees Act the fixed sum of Rs. 15/- was payable in respect of the suit under Sch. II Item 15 (vi) of the said Act. Further, the valuation of the suit for the purpose of jurisdiction should not be the value for the purpose of determination of court-fees.

8. The learned Judge of the Court of the first instance accepting the contentions of the petitioners and holding that the plaintiffs have valued the suit over Rs. 50,000/- made an order directing the plaintiffs to pay additional court-fees on the valuation made for the purpose of jurisdiction within a month from the date; in default there would be an order in terms of prayer (b), that is, the plaint would be taken off the file and the suit should be dismissed with costs. It was further held that the plaintiffs paid only Rs. 15/- for the purpose of court-fees then naturally considering the relief asked for in the plaint for the purpose of jurisdiction would be dependent on the valuation of the court-fees as the plaintiff's case did not strictly come under Section 7 (iv) sub-section (b) of the Court-fees Act. By the order the learned Judge also extended the time for filing of the written statement.

9. Before proceeding further it would be convenient to set out the relevant provisions of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 and the Suits Valuation Act, 1887.

10. Section 7 of the Court-fees Act relevant for this case provides as follows:

"7. Computation of fees payable in certain suits. The amount of fee payable under this Act in the suits next hereinafter mentioned shall be computed as follows:

(iv) In suits—

(a) for movable property of no market value — for movable property where the subject-matter has no market value, as, for instance, in the case of documents relating to title.

(b) for declaratory decree and consequential relief — to obtain a declaratory decree or order, where consequential relief is prayed.

(c) for injunction — to obtain an injunction,

(d) for easement — for a right to some benefit (not herein otherwise provided for) to arise out of land, and

(e) for accounts — for accounts — according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal subject to the provisions of S. 11.

In all such suits the plaintiff shall state the amount at which he values the relief sought."

11. Section 11 of the West Bengal Court-fees Act provides as follows:

11. Inquiry as to valuation of suits— If the Court is of opinion that the subject matter of any suit has been wrongly valued, it may revise the valuation and determine the correct valuation and may hold such inquiry as it thinks fit for such purpose. Item 15 (VI) of Schedule II of the said Act provides as follows:

Number

Proper Fee

15. Plaint or memorandum of appeal in each of the following suits:—

(vi) every other suit where it is not possible to estimate at a money-value the subject-matter in dispute and which is not otherwise provided by this Act." Fifteen rupees.

12. Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, 1887 is as follows:

8. Court-fee value and jurisdictional value to be the same in certain suits.— Where in suits other than those referred to in the Court-fees Act, 1870 Section 7, paras (v), (vi) and (ix) and para (x), Clause (d), court-fees are payable ad valorem under the Court-fees Act, 1870, the value as determinable for the computation of court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same.

13. The main question that arises for consideration in this appeal is whether correct amount of court-fee has been paid on the plaint in this suit.

14. It was contended on behalf of the appellants that Section 7 of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 provides for computation of court-fees payable in suits mentioned therein. Section 7 (iv) of that Act, inter alia, provides that in suits to obtain declaratory decree, injunction and for accounts court-fees shall be computed according to the amount at which relief sought is valued in the plaint and further that in all such suits the plaintiff shall state the amounts at which he values the relief sought for. It was further submitted that Sch. II Item 15 (vi) of the said Act specifically lays down that where it is not possible to estimate the money value of the subject-matter in dispute a fixed court-fee of Rs. 15/- shall be payable. It was also the submission on behalf of the appellants that the meaning of Section 7 (iv) read with Schedule II Art. 15 (vi) of the said Act is that the plaintiff is required to state the amount at which he values the suit provided of course it is possible for the plaintiff to estimate the money value of the subject matter in dispute. Any other meaning would render the specific provisions of Item 15 (vi) of Sch. II of the said Act superfluous. In the instant case, it is not the case of the defendants that it was possible for the plaintiffs to estimate the money value of the subject matter of dispute in the suit but the case in the petition is that as the plaintiffs have alleged that for the purpose of jurisdiction the value of the suit exceeds Rs. 50,000/- court-fee was payable on Rs. 50,000/- being Rs. 2,362.50 p. It is further submitted that the plaintiffs have undertaken to pay additional court-fees if required. Counsel for the appellants also submitted that the judgment and order of the learned trial Judge is erroneous. The learned Judge proceeded on the basis that the plaintiffs have valued the suit over Rs. 50,000/- and payment of ad valorem court-fees of Rs. 15/- is therefore not in accordance with the said Act. Accordingly the learned Judge concluded that court-fee is payable on the plaintiffs valuation of the suit as Rs. 50,000/-. According to counsel the judgment and order of the learned trial Judge that the plaintiffs are obliged to pay court-fees on "the valuation given for the purpose of jurisdiction" is clearly contrary to the Supreme Court decision reported in AIR 1958 SC 245 (Sethappa Chettiar v. Ramanathan). Further, the finding of the learned trial Judge that the plaintiffs had incorrectly valued the suit for the purpose of Court-fees at Rs. 15/- is erroneous. It was further submitted that the plaintiffs did not value the suit for the purpose of payment of court-fees, the plaintiffs' case being that the plaintiffs are unable to value the subject matter of dispute in the suit and therefore, a fixed court-fee of Rs. 15/- has been paid in accordance with Item 15 (vi) of Sch. II of the said Act.

15. Referring to the case of Meenakshisundaram Chettiar v. Venkatachalam Chettiar, AIR 1979 SC 989 relied upon by the respondents' counsel it was submitted that the Supreme Court did not lay down that the plaintiff must in all cases value the subject matter of the dispute in the suit. Further, in that case the Supreme Court was not considering the case where the plaintiff was unable to put even a tentative value. According to counsel, there may be a case where the subject matter of the dispute is a declaration regarding right of way to a valuable property. Clearly this cannot be estimated in money value. Further Section 7 (iv) (e) which deals with accounts cannot be singled out from Section 7 (iv) (a), (b), (c) and (d). Different principle cannot apply with regard to the suit for accounts and suits for declaration and injunction. It is possible that the plaintiff is unable to value the subject matter of dispute in a suit even tentatively where declaration or injunction is prayed for.

16. On behalf of the respondents it was contended that in the instant case in view of the prayers of the plaint it cannot be said that the reliefs or the subject matter of the suit cannot be valued or that there is no provision in the Act for valuation of the subject matter of this suit for the purpose of court-fees. It is submitted that the plaintiffs in the suit have claimed, inter alia, for injunction, accounts and administration of the trust estate.

17. It has been contended that those reliefs are to be valued according to S. 7 (iv) (c) and (e) of the Act. According to the said section, the plaintiff shall state the amount at which he values those reliefs. It is also stated that according to Section 8 of the Court-fees Act the value for determination of the computation of the Court-fees and the value for the purpose of jurisdiction shall be the same. It has been further submitted that if it is not possible for the plaintiffs to state the correct value about those reliefs they must state at least the tentative value of such reliefs. It has also been the submission of the counsel as only Rs. 15/- has been paid for court-fees this suit should have been filed in other Court and not in the High Court. It has been further contended that in the instant case since the reliefs claimed relate to the trust property, being the subject matter of this suit and the value whereof according to the plaintiffs is over Rs. 50,000/- the learned trial Judge has correctly determined the value of the suit for the purpose of court-fees as well as the amount of court-fees payable in respect of the suit. In support of his above contention reliance was placed on the case of Meenakshisundaram Chettiar v. Venkatachalam Chettiar, AIR 1979 SC 989.

18. In the case of Sethappa Chettiar v. Ramanathan Chettiar, AIR 1958 SC 245 Supreme Court construing Section 7 of the Court-fees Act and Section 8 of Suits Valuation Act observed as follows (at p. 251):

"If the scheme laid down for the computation of fees payable in suits covered by the several sub-sections of Section 7 is considered, it would be clear that, in respect of suits falling under sub-section (iv), a departure has been made and liberty has been given to the plaintiff to value his claim for the purposes of court-fees. The theoretical basis of this provision appears to be that in cases in which the plaintiff is given the option to value his claim, it is really difficult to value the claim with any precision or definiteness. Take for instance the claim for partition where the plaintiff seeks to enforce his right to share in any property on the ground that it is joint family property. The basis of the claim is that the property in respect of which a share is claimed is joint family property.

In other words, it is property in which the plaintiff has an undivided share. What the plaintiff purports to do by making a claim for partition is to ask the Court to give him certain specified properties separately and absolutely on his own account for his share in lieu of his undivided share in the whole property. Now it would be clear that the conversion of the plaintiff's alleged undivided share in the joint family property into his separate share cannot be easily valued in terms of rupees with any precision or definiteness. That is why legislature has left it to the option of the plaintiff to value his claim for the payment of court-fees. It really means that in suits falling under S. 7 (iv) (b) the amount stated by the plaintiff as the value of his claim for partition has ordinarily to be accepted by the Court in computing the court-fees payable in respect of the said relief. In the circumstances of this case it is unnecessary to consider whether, under the provisions of this section the plaintiff has been given an absolute right or option to place any valuation whatever on his relief."

* * * * *

"In other words, so far as suits falling under Section 7 sub-section (iv) of the Act are concerned, Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act provides that the value as determinable for the computation of court-fees and the value for the purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. There can be little doubt that the effect of the provisions of Section 7 is to make the value for the purpose of jurisdiction dependent upon the value as determinable for computation of court-fees and that is natural enough. The computation of court-fees in suits falling under Section 7 (iv) of the Act depends upon the valuation that the plaintiff makes in respect of his claim. Once the plaintiff exercises his option and values his claim for the purpose of court-fees, that determines the value for jurisdiction. The value for court-fees and the value for jurisdiction must no doubt be the same in such cases; but it is the value for court-fees stated by the plaintiff that is of primary importance. It is from this value that the value for jurisdiction must be determined. The result is that it is the amount at which the plaintiff has valued the relief sought for the purposes of court-fees that determines the value for jurisdiction in the suit and not vice versa."

19. In the case of Meenakshisundaram Chettiar v. Venkatachalam Chettiar, AIR 1979 SC 989 the Supreme Court has observed as follows (at p. 993):

"It is therefore necessary that the plaintiff should take care that the valuation is adequate and reasonable taking into account the circumstances of the cases. In coming to the conclusion that the suit is undervalued the Court will have to take into account that in a suit for accounts the plaintiff is not obliged to state the exact amount which would result after the taking of the accounts. If he cannot estimate the exact amount he can put a tentative valuation upon the suit for accounts which is adequate and reasonable".

20. On the basis of the said two Acts and the decision of the Supreme Court it has to be decided whether the payment of fixed amount of court-fees at Rs. 15/- under Item 15 (vi) of Sch. II is proper and correct. According to the plaintiffs as in the instant case it is not possible to value the reliefs claimed and it is also not possible to estimate at a money value of the subject matter in dispute and which is not otherwise provided for by the Act a fixed amount of court-fees is only payable in this case.

21. For determination of the question whether correct amount of court-fees has been paid or not, an analysis of the reliefs claimed by the plaintiff and the nature of the subject matter in dispute stated in the plaint is to be considered. In prayer (c) of the plaint, the plaintiffs have asked for injunction. In prayers (d), (e) and (f) of the plaint, the plaintiffs have claimed for accounts and a decree for amount to be found due upon such account. In prayer (j), the plaintiffs have claimed for administration of the trust estate and this comes within the relief of account. These reliefs, it appears, come within the Items (c) and (e) of sub-section (iv) of Section 7 of the Act. This being the position, according to Section 7 the plaintiffs shall state the amount at which they value the reliefs sought. In the plaint the plaintiffs have not stated the value of the said reliefs which according to Section 7 is mandatory for the plaintiffs to do. If it is not possible to give correct or accurate valuation in respect of the said reliefs at this stage then the plaintiffs will have to give at least tentative values of the same. According to Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act the value given by the plaintiff for those reliefs would also be the value for the purpose of jurisdiction.

22. In the instant case, it appears that as the plaintiffs have not stated the value of the above reliefs or in other words have wrongly valued the reliefs and/or the subject matter of the suit the trial Court in exercise of the power conferred by Section 11 of the Court-fees Act has corrected the value of the reliefs and/or the subject matter of the suit. The learned trial Judge has fixed the value for the purposes of court-fees at Rs. 50,000/-. The question is whether fixation of the amount of court-fees has been correctly made or not. In respect of the reliefs mentioned above court-fees are to be paid ad valorem under Court-fees Act and the value as determinable for the computation of court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. This being the position, the value for the purpose of jurisdiction will be the same as the value for the purposes of court-fees. Hence, if the value for the purpose of computation of court-fee is a particular amount that particular amount will also be the value for the purpose of jurisdiction. In other words both the amounts should be the same. In the instant case as the value for jurisdiction is fixed at Rs. 50,000/- and if this is dependent upon and be same as the value for the court-fees then naturally court-fees become payable on that amount. Apart from reliefs mentioned above the plaintiffs have also made other prayers as will appear from the plaint. In the above view of the matter, in our view, the learned trial Judge has correctly determined the amount payable as court-fees for this suit.

23. For the reasons aforesaid the appeal is dismissed. Time for payment of further court-fees as directed by the Court of first instance is extended by four weeks from date. In default of such payment the plaint shall be taken off the file and the suit will stand dismissed with cost. If further court-fee is paid then the time to file written statement will stand extended by two weeks from the time fixed for payment of court-fees and in that event the cost of this appeal will abide by the result of the suit.

S. C. GHOSE, C. J.:— I agree.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 564

ANIL K. SEN AND

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, JJ.

Nakul Chandra Dutta, Petitioner v. Ajit Kumar Chakrabarty and others, Opposite Parties.

C. R. No. 2130 of 1980, D/- 26-3-1982.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 21, R. 90 —
Setting aside of sale — Limitation for — Misstatement as to valuation of property by decree-holder — Sale of property at too low a price — Decree-holder purchasing the property — Purchaser cannot raise bar of limitation — Limitation Act (1963), Sec. 17. (Limitation Act (1963), S. 17).

FZ/GZ/C407/82/BNP/DVT—H

In the case of an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud, under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. C. limitation runs not from the date when the applicant has some hearsay knowledge of the factum of sale, but when he has a clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud. (Para 8)

The facts proved in the case indicated that the process had not been duly served on all the judgment-debtors. The applicant judgment-debtor was not served. It was also proved that the sale proclamation contained a deliberate misstatement as to the value of the encumbrance. It was further proved that the valuation put by the decree holder in the sale proclamation was shockingly low. The evidence of the applicant that he had no knowledge of the execution sale prior to the date claimed by him was acceptable. The decree-holder or for the matter of that the person who has subsequently purchased the property from the decree-holder for a paltry sum of Rs. 25,000/- only could not show that the applicant had knowledge at an earlier date. From the conduct of the decree-holder and the purchaser it could be easily inferred that they were acting in concert to defraud the other co-sharers. When the circumstances are such that fraud may be presumed as in this case, the burden is on the defendant who sets up limitation to show that the applicant had clear knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote to allow him to bring the action.

(Para 19)

Where there is a non-compliance with R. 67 of O. 21, such irregularity taken in conjunction with the other irregularities such as failure to furnish the particulars required under R. 66 and the deliberate act of undervaluation so far as the property is concerned, and misstatement so far as the value of encumbrance is concerned, gives a totally different complexion to the case. They together show and establish fraud on the Court and also the attempt to fraudulently conceal the relevant facts from the judgment-debtor applicant. Such being the position and there being nothing to indicate that the applicant had clear knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote, the applicant is entitled to invoke Section 17 of the Limitation Act for the purpose of extending the period of limitation.

B. C. Dutt, Maloy Kumar Bose and Nanda Dulal Nayek, for Petitioner; Sakti Nath Mukherjee, Pradipto Roy (for No. 1) and Bimal Jyotsna Chatterjee (for No. 3), for Opposite Parties.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— This Rule was issued at the instance of the petitioner/decree-holder and is directed against an appellate order passed in Misc. Appeal No. 62 of 1979 reversing the order of the trial Court in Misc. Case No. 48 of 1976 arising out of an application under Order 21, Rule 90 of the Civil P. C. The application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code was filed by the opposite party No. 1 on 22-9-1976 for setting aside a sale held on 1-7-1968.

2. The facts leading to the filing of the application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Civil P. C. may be briefly stated thus.

3. One Gopal Chandra Chakraborty was the owner of 3½ cottahs of land with a three storeyed building standing thereon, being premises No. 372/5, Russa Road South, subsequently renumbered as 3, Deshapran Sashmal Road. Gopal Chandra obtained a loan of Rs. 30,000/- from Metropolitan Insurance Company Limited. The decree-holder Nakul Chandra Dutta instituted Suit No. 459 of 1952 against opposite party No. 3 Panchanan Chakraborty for recovery of a loan of Rs. 6,000/- with interest in the original side of this Court and obtained a decree for Rs. 9,000/- inclusive of interest. Gopal Chandra, father of Panchanan was impleaded as a co-defendant in this suit and as such was a co-judgment-debtor. Metropolitan Insurance Company Limited instituted Title

Suit No. 79 of 1953 in the 3rd Court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore for recovery of the principal sum of Rs. 30,000/- together with interest and obtained a decree on 7-5-1953 for Rs. 39,165.34. Gopal Chandra Chakraborty died in 1955 leaving behind his widow and 3 sons, opposite parties 1, 2 and 3. In 1960 Nakul Chandra got the decree passed by the High Court in his favour transferred to the 3rd Court of the learned Subordinate Judge, Alipore for execution and Money Execution Case No. 38 of 1960 was started. Life Insurance Corporation which had taken over the business of Metropolitan Insurance Company after nationalisation, started Title Execution Case No. 23 of 1960 in the same 3rd Court of the learned Subordinate Judge. In this Execution Case No. 23 of 1960, the widow and sons of Gopal Chakraborty deposited Rs. 30,000/-. In the execution case at the instance of Nakul Chandra Dutta, the property namely, No. 3, Deshapran Sashmal Road was attached and put to sale by auction. In the sale that followed Nakul Chandra Dutta, the decree-holder purchased the property for Rs. 9,000/- and odd on 1-7-1968. The widow of Gopal Chandra acting through Panchanan filed an application for setting aside the same on 29-7-1968 claiming that the property was worth Rs. 1,50,000/-. The application, however, was dismissed for default on 19-8-1972. The sale in favour of Nakul was confirmed on 4-12-1972. It is significant, however, that such confirmation was obtained only when the opposite party No. 1 Ajit Kumar Chakraborty (who had filed the application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code) one of the sons of Gopal Chandra had started Title Suit No. 71 of 1972 for partition of the self-same property, namely, No. 3, Deshapran Sashmal Road. This suit was contested by his mother and his brother Panchanan who in their defence denied plaintiff's title but did not disclose the auction sale already held. The suit was eventually decreed in a preliminary form on 20-2-1974. The appeal filed by the mother and Panchanan against the preliminary decree for partition being Title Appeal No. 503 of 1974 was dismissed on 13-2-1975. Though the sale was confirmed in 1972, the auction-purchaser took no steps for taking delivery of possession until 1974. He took out the sale certificate in March, 1974 and applied for delivery of possession under O. 21, R. 95 on 20-6-1974. Faked possession was taken when opposite parties 2 and 3 along with their mother continued to remain in possession and shortly thereafter when Panchanan's appeal against the partition decree failed in July 1976 he purchased the disputed property from the decree-holder Nakul for a sum of Rs. 25,000/-. The opposite party No. 1 Ajit Kumar Chakraborty thereupon filed an application under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code for setting aside the auction sale held on 1-7-1968 which was registered as Misc. Case No. 48 of 1976. In this application Ajit claimed that he had not been duly served with the processes in the execution case, that he had no knowledge of the execution case or of the sale that took place and that he came to know of the sale long thereafter in August 1976, when he was informed by a tenant of the disputed premises that Nakul had sold it to Panchanan and that the tenant had been asked to attorn and that the property was sold at a shockingly low value. The application under Order 21, Rule 90 of the Code was contested by Nakul and Panchanan.

4. The learned subordinate Judge did not accept the contention that the processes had not been properly served or that there was any irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale. He did not agree that the price fetched at the sale was shockingly low. He also found that the petitioner before him, namely, Ajit had failed to make out any case of fraud or fraudulent concealment so as to ask for extension of limitation. In that view of the matter, the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the misc. case on contest. Being aggrieved, the opposite party No. 1 Ajit Kumar Chakraborty preferred an appeal. The learned appellate Judge substantially affirmed the findings arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge but found upon a consideration of the materials on record that the failure of the Court in not mentioning in the sale proclamation the value put by the judgment-debtor was a material irregularity and that the petitioner had by reason of such irregularity sustained substantial injury. In that view of the matter, the appeal was allowed with the result that the execution sale was set aside.

5. The decree-holder Nakul Chandra Dutta has thereupon preferred the present revisional application on 25-6-1980. In September 1980, Ajit Kumar Chakraborty obtained a Rule against Nakul Chandra Dutta and others restraining them from demolishing any portion of the disputed premises or causing any damage thereto and changing the nature and character of any portion of the property and also from letting out the same to others till the disposal of C. R. No. 2130 of 1980, namely, the present revisional application.

6. Mr. Dutt appearing in support of the revisional application contended that there was no irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale, that the application for setting aside the sale filed nearly 8 years after the sale cannot be entertained, that the petitioner Ajit has failed to make out any case of fraud in the matter of publishing and conducting the sale so as to invoke extension of limitation with the aid of S. 17 of the Limitation Act. He also argued that the price fetched at the sale could not be said to be shockingly low and that has not been the finding of either of the Courts below.

7. Mr. Mukherjee appearing to oppose the revisional application on the other hand argued that the processes in the execution case had been deliberately suppressed and/or not properly served so that the petitioner Ajit had no knowledge of the execution case or of the sale that followed. He also complained that the decree-holder Nakul Chandra Dutta had joined hands with Ajit's brother Panchanan and they together actively contrived to keep the petitioner Ajit in the dark in regard to the sale. It is also his contention that Panchanan caused the property to be sold for a song in execution of a decree against himself and then entered into an unfair deal with the decree-holder and purchased the property for Rs. 25,000/- only so as to deprive the petitioner Ajit and his other brother with a view to grab the property entirely to his own benefit. According to Mr. Mukherji the fact that Panchanan allowed the earlier application for setting aside the sale to go by default and the auction-purchaser obtained a faked delivery of possession allowing Panchanan to remain in possession clearly indicate that as between the auction purchaser and Panchanan there was a clear understanding to effect a fraudulent sale solely with the object of depriving the other co-sharers of their share in the property. It was also contended by Mr. Mukherji that the value of the property was not less than Rs. 1,50,000/- on the date of sale and that the sale of the property for a sum of Rs. 9,000/- and odd only was certainly a sale at a shockingly low valuation. This, it was argued amounted to fraud on the Court and, as such, admitted of no bar of limitation.

8. It is clear from the recital of facts that the application for setting aside the sale was filed more than 8 years after the sale actually took place. The material question for our consideration, therefore, is whether the petitioner Ajit had knowledge of the execution proceedings and whether he was kept out from such knowledge by reason of fraud practised by the decree-holder. If fraud is proved the applicant is entitled to the benefit of Section 17, that is to say, the period of limitation in that case would run from the date when the fraud first became known to the applicant. The initial onus is on the applicant to show that he had no knowledge of the same until within 30 days of the application. This onus, the applicant, namely, Ajit tried to discharge by referring to certain facts, namely, that he was not served with the processes in the execution case, that there was positive and deliberate misstatement in the execution case as also in the sale proclamation regarding the value of the property, that the value was many times more than what was actually shown in the sale proclamation, that the value suggested by one of the judgment-debtors in an application filed in the Court was not put in the sale proclamation in compliance with the provisions of Order 21, Rule 66 of the Code, that the sale had been adjourned from time to time without service of fresh sale proclamation and without any indication that fresh sale proclamation had been waived by the judgment-debtors and that throughout there was positive endeavour between the auction-purchaser and Panchanan to suppress the factum of sale from the opposite parties 1 and 2. On the first point, it appears upon a reference to Ext. 1 that the notice under O. 21, R. 22 of the Code was served upon Panchanan alone. The process-server's report indicates that except Panchanan none of the judgment-debtors were found and that Panchanan received notice after putting his signature on the return. Ext. 1 no doubt shows that Panchanan had been duly served but it does not appear that he had so received the notice on behalf of all the judgment-debtors. That the acceptance of the notice by Panchanan alone cannot be treated as sufficient, would be evident from the subsequent conduct of Panchanan which we shall have occasion to refer to later on. It also appears that in the execution case Panchanan alone entered appearance by filing a Vakalatnama. We see no reason why the other judgment-debtors whose property was intended to be sold in execution of the decree would not appear if they were properly served. The fact that Panchanan was acting in collusion and in collaboration with the decree-holder would be evident from his conduct in the partition suit filed by the applicant, Ajit. That suit was contested by Panchanan. Panchanan has been examined as witness No. 2 for the opposite party in the misc. case. He has stated in his cross-examination that at the time when he filed the written statement in the partition suit he knew that Nakul Dutta had purchased the property in auction-sale and that he or for the matter of that his brothers had no subsisting interest therein. Yet this fact was not disclosed in the written statement and Panchanan has frankly confessed that he could not say why the fact was not so disclosed. We can, therefore, take it that even at that time Ajit had no knowledge of the execution sale. Mr. Dutt, however, drew out attention to two letters Exhibits A and A/1, both dated 30-3-1976 and contended that they indicate that at least at that time Ajit had knowledge of the execution sale. These letters were written by the applicant Ajit and there is a reference therein to some hearsay that Panchanan with the aid of his brother-in-law had purchased the house or is trying to do so. It is also stated that Panchanan and his brother-in-law had previously tried to misappropriate a considerable sum of money by forging the signatures of the applicant and his elder brother. It is also complained in the letters that those two persons of late are moving too frequently to Court. Mr. Dutt contends that the knowledge of the applicant about the sale of the property is attributable to the applicant at least with reference to these two letters. We are, however, unable to accept the contention. The letters at most indicate some hearsay knowledge about an intended purchase by Panchanan. There is nothing in these letters to suggest that the applicant had any knowledge of any Court sale. In the case of an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud, under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code limitation runs not from the date when the applicant has some hearsay knowledge of the factum of sale, but when he has a clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud (See Bhusan Mani v. Prafulla (1921) ILR 48 Cal 119 : (AIR 1921 Cal 251)).

9. The evidence of the applicant is that after the appeal in the partition suit filed by him had been dismissed while he was contemplating filing an application for appointment of a Commissioner he came to learn from one of the tenants in the suit house, Sri R. K. Mehera, that the latter had received a notice from an advocate engaged by Nakul Chandra Dutta intimating that the house was sold to Panchanan and that arrears of rent, if any, should be paid to Panchanan. It is also his evidence that this put him into enquiry whereupon he learnt about the execution sale to Nakul Chandra Duita and the subsequent sale by Nakul to Panchanan. The letters received by the tenant R. K. Mehera and those written by him have been exhibited. They substantially support the case of the applicant.

10. Mr. Mukherji also drew our attention to the fact that in the execution petition as also in the sale proclamation Ext. 7, the value of the property is shown as Rupees 36,000/- with a remark that it is subject to the balance of mortgage dues of Rs. 26,000/- approximately in Title Execution Case No. 23 of 1960. It is complained by Mr. Mukherji that not only the valuation was under-stated, the encumbrance, namely, the balance of mortgage dues to the tune of Rs. 26,000/- was a deliberate mis-statement. We have already indicated that the total dues of the Life Insurance Corporation for which the execution case was filed was Rs. 39,000/- and odd out of which Rs. 30,000/- had been paid. This sum was admittedly paid from out of the compensation received by the applicant and his co-sharers on account of certain land acquisition proceedings. Therefore, there could not have been such outstanding balance as stated in the execution petition. This was obviously done with a motive, namely, to scare away possible buyers.

11. Then again the valuation of Rupees 36,000/- as shown in the sale proclamation was definitely an under-valuation even according to Panchanan and his mother Prafulla Bala, since deceased. Prafulla Bala had earlier filed an application for setting aside the sale in which she claimed the valuation of the property to be about Rs. 1,50,000/-. Panchanan also filed an application (Ext. 4) in May 1961, claiming that the value of the property was Rs. 1,50,000/- or so.

12. We get some indication as to the nature of the property from the evidence on record. The land comprised is $3\frac{1}{2}$ cottahs. The building standing thereon is a three storeyed building. Panchanan in his cross-examination concedes that the house is close to the lakes intervened by one or two houses and the railway line. He could not deny the suggestion that the value of the house at the time of the auction sale was about Rs. 2,50,000/- or so. He has admitted that the house stands on the main road and the area is connected with about 10 bus routes besides the tram line. It is, therefore, clear that it is situated in a rather important residential area. It is common knowledge that with the partition of the country and the influx of refugees from erstwhile East Pakistan the value of lands and buildings in and around Calcutta has been steadily rising. The fact is so patent and notorious that we can legitimately take judicial notice of it. We are unable to accept that Rs. 36,000/- was a proper value of the building in dispute. We further find that even according to Panchanan as far back as in 1961, value was about Rs. 1,50,000/-. It must have gone further up in 1968, when the sale took place. It is also significant to note that in the sale proclamation this value was not put. In the result valuable property was sold for a song and the co-sharers other than Panchanan suffered substantial injury.

13. Mr. Dutt appearing in support of the revisional application argued upon a reference to the case of Dhirendra Nath v. Sudhir, AIR 1964 SC 1300 that where a judgment debtor refrains from attending at the drawing up of the proclamation and does not object to the non-compliance with S. 35 of the Bengal Money Lender's Act, and where no substantial injury is caused to the judgment-debtor, the sale is not liable to be set aside under Order 21, Rule 90. In this case, however, it appears that the judgment-debtor had entered appearance and filed an objection but did not attend at the drawing up of the sale proclamation. In the case before us, we have found that the judgment-debtors were not all duly served and that one of them, namely, Panchanan had at one stage pleaded that the property was under-valued.

14. Mr. Dutt next referred to the case of Radheshyam v. Shyam Behari, AIR 1971 SC 2337 and argued that in order to set aside a sale mere proof of a material irregularity such as the one under R. 69 and inadequacy of price is not enough. What has to be established is that there was not only inadequacy of price but that inadequacy was caused by reason of the material irregularity or fraud. A connection between the inadequacy and the material irregularity has to be established. In this case, the lower Court's view that the applicant had been prejudiced as the sale realised was only Rs. 8,000/- although the value of the appellant's share was Rs. 20,000/-. This estimate was made by an Amin appointed by the Court without giving any opportunity to the respondent to be heard and the report of the Amin was filed in the Court below without notice to the respondent. In these circumstances, it was held that the report could not be relied upon and that inadequacy of price and material irregularity had not been established.

15. Mr. Dutt then referred to the case of Narayan Sahoo v. Mohant Damodar Das, (1912) 16 Cal WN 894 and argued that mis-statement of value, even if it can be described as fraud does not constitute fraudulent concealment and would not by itself bring the case under Section 18 of the Limitation Act (now Section 17) unless it is shown that the judgment-debtor by means of fraud has been kept from the knowledge of his right.

16. Reference was also made to the case of Mujibar Rahman v. Raha Bux, AIR 1954 Cal 604 and Mihirlal v. Panchkari, AIR 1950 Cal 520. In these cases, it has been held that mere under-statement in the valuation of sale proclamation does not amount to such fraudulent concealment as would bring the case within the scope of Section 18 of the Limitation Act. It was further observed that before any extension of time can be granted in an application for setting aside a sale it must be proved that the auction-purchaser — a person not claiming through the decree-holder — was either guilty of fraud or accessory to the fraud that prevented the judgment-debtor from knowing of the sale. It is significant that in the case before us the auction-purchaser is none other than the decree-holder. And he was the lone bidder at the sale. Mr. Dutt also referred to the case of New Birlhum Coal Company Limited v. Surendra Nath, (1933) 37 Cal WN 1054 : (AIR 1934 Cal 205). This decision lays down that although the value set forth in the sale proclamation may have been grossly low and the sale, as a result thereof may have been for a price which caused substantial injury to the judgment-debtor, still if the latter having had knowledge of the under-valuation did not appear at the settlement of price, he cannot afterwards have the sale set aside on the ground of such under-valuation. What happened in this case was that the judgment-debtors were proved to have known of the under-valuation years before the actual sale while they stood by and took various other objections. It was only after the sale was effected that they made a grievance of the under-valuation and it was held that in such circumstances the judgment-debtors could not be permitted to take a stand that they had suffered by reason of under-valuation.

17. Finally Mr. Dutt referred to the case of Kayjay Industries v. Asnew Drums, AIR 1974 SC 1331 to show that mere inadequacy of price cannot demolish every Court sale. The facts of this case, however, were different. There the properties to be sold comprised lands, buildings, factory, plant and machinery of the judgment-debtor. The auction was adjourned on many occasions to secure a better and fairer price. At one stage the bid went up to Rs. 11,10,000. The decree-holder got the properties valued by a private valuer whose estimate of the value was above Rs. 17,00,000/-. The auction sale held thereafter fetched the highest offer of a little less than Rs. 11,00,000. The Court persuaded the buyer to raise the offer to a gross sum of Rs. 11,50,000/- and the Court approved the sale at that price. It was proved that there was no material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. Every effort was made to have the property sold to the highest offerer. Well-known industrialists in the public and private sectors knew about the sale and turned up. Yet offers reached a stationary level. In such circumstances, it was held that it could not be said that the executing Court committed any material irregularity in the conduct of the sale in accepting the highest offer.

18. Relying on these authorities Mr. Dutt contended that at the most it could be said that the property was sold at some under-value and that no case of fraud or irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale could be established. It was also contended that unless fraud is established the application for setting aside the sale filed so many years after the actual sale could not be allowed in view of the bar of limitation provided by the Limitation Act and that outside the limited discretion conferred by the Act in certain cases the Court has no general discretion to relieve a suitor from the operations of its provisions — the statute of limitations being statute of repose. (See AIR 1951 SC 16, (1935) 62 Ind App 80 : (AIR 1935 PC 85)).

19. In the instant case the facts proved indicate that the process had not been duly served on all the judgment-debtors. The applicant judgment-debtor was not served. It is also proved that the sale proclamation contained a deliberate mis-statement as to the value of the encumbrance. It is further proved that the valuation put by the decree-holder in the sale proclamation was shockingly low. The value could not be Rupees 36,000/- considering the extent of the property and its locational advantages. Even according to the estimate of one of the judgment-debtors the value was in the vicinity of Rs. 1,50,000/- in 1961. We have accepted the evidence of the applicant that he had no knowledge of the execution sale prior to the date claimed by him. The decree-holder or for the matter or that Pan-chanan who has subsequently purchased the property from the decree-holder for a paltry sum of Rs. 25,000/- only could not show that the applicant had knowledge at an earlier date. From the conduct of the decree-holder Nakul Chandra Dutta and Panchanan Chakraborty it can be easily inferred that they were acting in concert to defraud the other co-sharers. When the circumstances are such that fraud may be presumed as in this case, the burden is on the defendant who sets up limitation to show that the applicant had clear knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote to allow him to bring the action.

20. In the case of Marudanayagam v. Manicka Vasakam, AIR 1945 PC 67 it has been held that where the low valuation of the property to be sold in the sale proclamation was based on a misstatement by the decree-holder as to the amount due under a prior encumbrance and the sale took place at a serious under-value due to the failure on the part of the decree-holder and the Court to carry out their obligations under Rule 68, the judgment-debtor must be taken to have sustained substantial injury. It was further held that if the decree-holder knew the true value of the property but deliberately under-valued it and himself purchased the property at what he knew was too low a figure based on an upset price accepted by the Court owing to his own initial misrepresentation, his conduct would amount to fraud on the Court and he would not be allowed to take advantage of his own fraud whatever the conduct of the judgment-debtor might have been. This decision of the Judicial Committee has ever since been considered as a ruling authority on the subject. It has been followed in many cases where the Court found the decree-holder to be guilty of non-compliance with the provisions of Rule 66 of Order 21 of the Code and of deliberately putting a low value which is shocking to the conscience. (see P. C. Mukherji v. P. Mukherjee, (1967) 71 Cal WN 649, Sisir Kumar Mukherji v. Kanhaiyalal, (1970) 74 Cal WN 469 : (AIR 1971 Cal 87), Pankaj Kumar Pakhira v. Nanibala, ILR (1968) 1 Cal 43; Manmatha Nath v. Sachindra Kumar, AIR 1956 Cal 59).

21. Apart from the shockingly low value put in the sale proclamation it is apparent that the provisions of R. 66 of O. 21 have not been duly observed. Rule 66 requires the proclamation of sale to contain and specify as fairly and accurately as possible, the property to be sold, any encumbrance to which the property is liable, the amount for the recovery of which the sale is ordered and every other thing which the Court considers material for a purchaser to know in order to judge the nature and value of the property. Sub-rule (4) says that for the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the proclamation, the Court may summon any person whom it thinks necessary to summon and may examine him in respect to any such matters. In this case before us the Court acted mechanically in publishing the sale proclamation with the particulars as furnished by the decree-holder. It did not satisfy itself as to whether the particulars were fair and accurate. It is true that in most cases the Court has no means of checking the information supplied but nevertheless the Court ought, as far as possible to bring its mind to bear upon the contents of the application. The power conferred upon the Court by sub-rule (4) for the purpose of ascertaining the matters to be specified in the sale proclamation shows that the Court is not intended to act blindly on information supplied by the parties (See AIR 1945 PC 67 (supra); Gajadhar Prasad v. Babu Bhakta Ratan, AIR 1973 SC 2593). In this case the Court could gather some information upon a reference to the records of Title Execution Case No. 23 of 1960 of his own Court. A look into the same would have at once revealed that the judgment-debtor of that case valued the property at more than Rs. 2,00,000/-.

22. We are satisfied that the Court had failed to look into these matters.

23. Mr. Mukherji also complained that there was violation of the provisions of R. 69 of O. 21. That Rule enables the Court in its discretion to adjourn any sale to a specified day and hour and that when a sale is adjourned for a longer period than 7 days, a fresh proclamation under R. 67 shall be made unless the judgment-debtor consents to waive it. In the instant case there were several adjournments for a period longer than 7 days and there was no fresh sale proclamation. It appears, however, that Panchanan had on all such occasions waived service of fresh sale proclamation. We have already indicated that the records show that Panchanan alone was served and that he alone entered appearance in the execution case. Therefore, the waiver by Panchanan could bind Panchanan but not the other judgment-debtors who had not waived fresh sale proclamation. Mr. Dutt, however, in this context referred to the case of Radheshyam v. Shyambehari (AIR 1971 SC 2337) (supra) to contend that mere proof of an irregularity such as non-compliance of R. 69 is not enough to entitle a judgment-debtor to have the sale set aside. It has already been indicated that the facts of that case were different. This part had the applicant's case rested on this irregularity alone it might possibly be contended that this was not a material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale but this irregularity taken in conjunction with the other irregularities such as failure to furnish the particulars required under R. 66 and the deliberate act of under-valuation so far as the property is concerned, and mis-statement so far as the value of encumbrance is concerned, gives a totally different complexion to the case. They together show and establish fraud on the Court and also the attempt to fraudulently conceal the relevant facts from the judgment-debtor applicant. Such being the position and since we have found that there is nothing to indicate that the applicant had clear knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote, the applicant is entitled to invoke S. 17 of the Limitation Act for the purpose of extending the period of limitation (See Venkanna v. Venkanna, AIR 1950 Mad 509). Though the findings of the learned Judges of the Courts below in regard to service and knowledge of sale were against the applicant we must accept the contention of Mr. Mukherji that such findings were not arrived at on actual consideration of the material documents and evidence on record. Hence Mr. Mukherji is entitled to support the order made by the appeal Court in favour of the applicant by successfully assailing such findings. Alternatively, we must uphold the view of the Court of appeal below that in this case the sale having been effected on a fraudulent under-valuation, there was fraud on the Court resulting in substantial injury to some of the co-sharers-judgment-debtors and the decree-holder himself having purchased in such a sale, he cannot take advantage of his own wrong. Such a sale is liable to be set aside by the Court irrespective of the question of limitation as held by the Privy Council in the case of Marudanayagam v. Manicka (AIR 1945 PC 67) (supra) and the line of decisions of this Court based on the above decision of the Privy Council referred to hereinbefore.

24. Hence upon a consideration of all the materials we are satisfied that the applicant Ajit Chakraborty has succeeded in making out a good case for setting aside the sale. The decree-holder or for the matter of that the subsequent purchaser Panchanan has failed to establish any circumstance to entitle them to invoke the bar of limitation particularly when the facts proved establish a clear case of fraud on the Court. In that view of the matter, the order impugned in this revisional application, namely, the appellate order passed in Misc. Appeal No. 62 of 1979 is not required to be interfered with.

25. The revisional application accordingly fails and is hereby dismissed. The Rule is discharged.

26. The connected application giving rise to C. R. No. 3315 of 1980 arising out of an application by Ajit Chakraborty, the applicant under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code for injunction is allowed and the Rule is made absolute. There will be no order for costs. Let the records be sent down forthwith.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— I agree.

Revision dismissed.

The burden of showing that a particular transaction is benami and the owner is not real owner always rests on person asserting it to be so. The decision of Court should not rest on suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. Although motive may not be decisive for determining whether a transaction is benami but when direct evidence is wanting, the reasonable probabilities and legal inferences arising from admitted and true facts, surrounding circumstances, position of parties, their relation, motive, subsequent conduct, dealing and enjoyment of property are certainly to be taken into consideration. S. C. Mitter and Moti Lal Agarwal, for Appellant; Bijitendra Mohan Mitra, for Respondents.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J.:— This appeal is at the instance of the plaintiff whose suit, inter alia, for declaration that he was a real monthly tenant under the respondent No. 1 according to the Hindi calendar in respect of room in the first floor of 6, Banstala Gali and for permanent injunction has been dismissed by the learned Judge, 10th Bench, City Civil Court at Calcutta.

2. Admittedly, one Nemkumar Raniwalla, was a tenant under the defendant No. 1 in respect of the said room in the first floor of the premises No. 6, Banstala Gali. It can no longer be disputed that before the commencement of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956 the said Nemkumar Raniwalla had created a sub-tenancy in respect of the suit room in the name of Hariram Agarwalla, who was a son of the original plaintiff, Radheshyam Agarwalla. Hariram had made an application under S. 16 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and on 25th May, 1957 the Rent Controller, Calcutta had declared Hariram as a direct tenant under the defendant No. 1 at a rent of Rs. 30/- per month according to Hindi calendar. The defendant No. 1 had granted receipts in the name of Hariram Agarwalla up to Phalgun 2022 S. Y. According to the plaintiff, the defendant No. 1 did not grant any receipt from Chaitra 2022 S. Y. to Jaistha 2023 S. Y. on various pretexts. After the defendant No. 1 had refused to accept the rent remitted by the plaintiff by money-order, Radheshyam Agarwalla claiming to hold the tenancy in the name of Hariram began to deposit rents to the credit of the defendant No. 1 in the office of the Rent Controller. The defendant No. 1 did not withdraw the said rents and he filed in the City Civil Court at Calcutta Ejectment Suit No. 825 of 1967 against Hariram Agarwalla for evicting him from the suit premises.

3. On 18th July, 1967 the plaintiff Radheshyam had filed an application for permission to contest the said Ejectment Suit No. 825 of 1967 inter alia, on the ground that he was the real tenant of the suit premises. He had also made an application under Section 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act alleging that the rent was Rs. 30/- and not Rs. 33/- per month. On 21st Sept., 1967 the learned Judge of the City Civil Court rejected the plaintiff, Radheshyam's prayer for impleading him in the said ejectment suit, inter alia, holding that in a suit for recovery of possession against a tenant, the questions of title and benami could not be decided. He further held that Radheshyam had miserably failed to show any prima facie document regarding his alleged tenancy and it was open to him to institute a proper suit for declaration of his tenancy right and other consequential reliefs. The learned Judge, 4th Bench, City Civil Court by his subsequent order dated 28th Sept., 1967 had also rejected Radheshyam's petition under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. Thereafter, Hariram, who was the defendant in the said ejectment suit, appeared and on 16th Nov., 1967 obtained leave from the Court to contest the said ejectment suit. He had also filed a petition under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and also under Ordinance V of 1967. Hariram had filed his written statement but on 4th June, 1968 his petition under S. 17 (2) was dismissed in default. On 25th July, 1968 he had obtained adjournment of the peremptory hearing of the suit. In the meantime, on 24th Aug., 1968 the plaintiff, Radheshyam, instituted the instant suit, inter alia, for declaring that his son, Hariram, the defendant No. 2, was his benamidar and that the plaintiff was the real monthly tenant in respect of the suit premises and for further declaration that the decree passed in the aforesaid Ejectment Suit No. 825 of 1967 was not binding or executable against the plaintiff. He also prayed for permanent injunction to restrain the defendants 1 and 2 from proceeding with the said ejectment suit and also for restraining them from interfering with the plaintiff's possession of the suit premises.

4. After the ad interim order obtained by the plaintiff, Radheshyam, was modified, we understand that the Ejectment Suit No. 825 of 1967 brought by Maharaj Bahadur Singh was ex parte decreed against Hariram Agarwalla but Maharaj Bahadur Singh was restrained from executing the said ejectment decree till the disposal of the present case.

5. The defendant No. 1 alone contested the suit brought by Radheshyam, inter alia, denying that the latter was the real tenant and that Hariram was his benamdar. He also denied the allegations of collusion and conspiracy himself and Hariram Agarwalla, who had been joined as defendant No. 2 in the said suit. Hariram did not appear or contest. The learned Judge, 10th Bench, City Civil Court, as already stated, dismissed the suit brought by Radheshyam Agarwalla. Radheshyam having died, his heirs and legal representatives were substituted in his place.

6. Two questions arise for decision in the present appeal. In the first place whether or not Hariram Agarwalla was a benamdar of his father, Radheshyam Agarwalla, and whether the latter was the real tenant of the disputed room. Even if Radheshyam succeeds in establishing that he was holding the said tenancy in the benami of his son, Hariram, he must further prove that his son, Hariram Agarwalla acted against the interest of his father, Radheshyam and had colluded with his landlord and, therefore, the ejectment decree obtained by the defendant No. 1 against the defendant No. 2, was not binding upon the plaintiff, Radheshyam Agarwalla.

7. Undisputedly, the burden of showing that the defendant No. 2, Hariram Agarwalla, was a benamdar of his father, the plaintiff, Radheshyam Agarwalla, and Radheshyam was the real tenant of the disputed room rested upon the plaintiff. Mr. Mitter, learned advocate for the appellant, has submitted that benami transactions being very common in India, even slight quantity of evidence may be sufficient to show that a transaction was a sham one. But, Mookerjee and Chofzner, JJ., in Bhubanmohini Dasi v. Kumudbala Dasi, (1924) 28 Cal WN 131 : (AIR 1924 Cal 467), upon which Mr. Mitter relied, pointed out that the decision of the Court in these class of cases should not rest on suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. Our attention has been also drawn to the recent decision of the Supreme Court in Krishnanand Agnihotri v. State of M. P., AIR 1977 SC 796. Bhagwati, J., who delivered the judgment of the Court referred to the earlier decision of the Court in Jaydayal Poddar v. Mst. Bibi Hazra, AIR 1974 SC 171, and laid down :

"The burden of showing that a particular transaction is benami and the owner is not the real owner always rests on the person asserting it to be so, and this burden has to be strictly discharged by adducing legal evidence of a definite character which would either directly prove the fact of benami to establish circumstances unerringly and reasonably raising an inference of that fact. The essence of benami is the intention of the parties and not unoften, such intention is shrouded in a thick veil which cannot be easily pierced through. But such difficulties do not relieve the person asserting the transaction to be benami of the serious onus that rests on him, nor justify the acceptance of mere conjecture or surmise as a substitute for proof. It is not enough merely to show circumstances which might create suspicion, because the Court cannot decide on the basis of suspicion. It has to act on legal grounds established by evidence."

Upon considering the pleadings and the evidence on record, we agree with the learned Judge of the Court below that the plaintiff has failed to prove his case that his son, Hariram, the defendant No. 2, was his benamdar and the plaintiff himself was the real tenant of the disputed shop room. The plaintiff did not examine Nemkumar Ranwalla, who was previously the tenant of the first degree and had created a sub-tenancy in the name of Hariram Agarwalla. No other person came forward to corroborate the interested testimony of the plaintiff that in the name of his son Hariram who was then alleged to be a minor, he had taken the said sub-tenancy under Nemkumar Ranwalla. Radheshyam, the plaintiff, in his evidence claimed that he with his family used to reside at 31-B, Basantala Street. As there was scarcity of accommodation, he had taken the room in suit on rent. Although motive may not be decisive for determining whether a transaction is benami but when direct evidence is wanting, the reasonable probabilities and legal inferences arising from admitted and true facts, surrounding circumstances, position of parties, their relation, motive, subsequent conduct, dealing and enjoyment of the property are certainly, to be taken into consideration (see Bhubanmohini Dasi's case (supra) and in Union of India v. Mokash Builders and Financiers Ltd., AIR 1977 SC 409). In the instant case, no motive has been suggested for Radheshyam taking a tenancy in the benami of his son, Hariram. It was also somewhat improbable that Nemkumar had agreed to create a tenancy in the name of Hariram, who was allegedly minor and not in the name of Radheshyam, who was to pay the rent.

8. The Court below has also held that the plaintiff, Radheshyam, failed to satisfactorily prove that on the date of the creation of the sub-tenancy under Nemkumar Raniwalla, Hariram was still a minor. The admission form and the admission register of Sharashwat Kshitriya Vidyalaya were produced by the plaintiff to prove that Hariram Agarwalla was aged 10 years 4 months on 5th March, 1949. The Court below has pointed out that only the signature of the plaintiff in the admission form (Ext. a (a)) was marked as an exhibit. Therefore, the said school records cannot be used as corroborative evidence of the plaintiff's interested testimony about the age of Hariram. The plaintiff's own evidence regarding the date of birth of Hariram was full of inconsistencies. According to Radheshyam, P. W. 1, Hariram was his son by his first wife, who died in the year 1939 and according to Radheshyam by his first wife he had two other sons, both younger to Hariram. Therefore, even according to Radheshyam, his elder son by his first wife could not have been born later than the year 1937.

9. Although, according to the plaintiff, his son, Hariram, had attained majority in the year 1959, in the year 1957 Hariram as sui juris had made an application under Section 16 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act for declaring him as a direct tenant under the defendant No. 1. The plaintiff did not adduce any evidence to corroborate his claim that he had caused the said application to be filed in the name of Hariram. Presumably, through a lawyer the said application under S. 16 (3) of the Act for declaring Hariram as a direct tenant was filed. We do not get any evidence as to the circumstances under which the plaintiff who was allegedly the real tenant had obtained declaration under S. 16 (3) not in his own name but in the name of his son, Hariram. Even after the creation of the said direct tenancy throughout rent receipts were granted in the name of Hariram, who was then living jointly with his father Radheshyam, the plaintiff. Therefore, so long both Radheshyam and Hariram occupied the suit room the possession must be deemed of the person who had legal title to the tenancy i.e. Hariram. In this case, the plaintiff, Radheshyam having failed to prove that he was the real tenant, he cannot be considered to be in possession of the room.

10. We have already remarked that the plaintiff, Radheshyam Agarwalla, neither pleaded nor proved his intention, if any, for taking a benami tenancy in the name of his son. Merely because the rent receipts granted by the defendant No. 1 and the subsequent rent control challans came from the custody of the plaintiff, we are unable to hold that the plaintiff himself used to pay rent to the defendant No. 1. After the defendant No. 1 had refused the money-order remittance, the plaintiff began to deposit rent in the office of the Rent Controller claiming that he was holding the tenancy in the name of his son, Hariram. After the defendant No. 1 had refused to recognise him as the real tenant, such assertion by the plaintiff was not relevant. Although the plaintiff claimed to be a businessman he admitted that he did not keep accounts of rents allegedly paid by him previously to Nemkumar Raniwalla and, thereafter, to the defendant No. 1. In the absence of any corroboration, we are not prepared to believe that the P. W. 1 himself used to pay the rent. The plaintiff claimed that his son, Hariram, at the relevant time had no income and, therefore, was not in a position to pay the rent. But the plaintiff has failed to prove that he used to pay the rent. We have already observed that mere fact that the rent receipts came from his custody does not establish that the plaintiff had been paying the rent.

11. According to the plaintiff himself, Hariram used to live with him up to early of the year 2023 S. Y. and had thereafter shifted to 43, Upper Chitpur Road. We cannot rule out the possibility that after Hariram, who was the tenant of the suit room, had left, the plaintiff tried to grab the tenancy by setting up a plea of benami. At this stage, we may point out that the plaintiff has not given any cogent reason why his son, Hariram had become inimical towards him and had colluded with the defendant No. 1. On the other hand, having regard to the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2, possibility of collusion between them was much more probable.

12. We have already mentioned that after the defendant No. 1 filed Ejectment Suit No. 825 of 1967 against Hariram Agarwalla, as the sole defendant, the present plaintiff had unsuccessfully tried to contest the said suit. The Court had refused to allow him to contest the ejectment suit, inter alia, on the grounds that the complicated questions of title and benami could not be decided in the said suit and prima facie Radheshyam had failed to show his alleged tenancy. Although, as early as 21st Sept., 1967 his application for impleading him in the ejectment suit had been rejected, Radheshyam had instituted the instant suit for declaration and injunction only on 24th Aug., 1968. In the meantime, Hariram, who was the defendant in the ejectment suit, had made belated appearance therein and had purported to file applications under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and also under the West Bengal Ordinance V of 1967. We are not prepared to accept the suggestion of the learned advocate for the appellant that thereby it was proved that there was collusion between the defendant No. 1, who was the plaintiff in the ejectment suit and Hariram. On the other hand, presumably Hariram had obtained leave to contest the ejectment suit in order to prolong the proceedings which could be only for the benefit of his father, Radheshyam, who was occupying the disputed room. We have also mentioned that Hariram had filed a written statement in the ejectment suit and had continued to take steps. Hariram had ceased to contest near till about the time the plaintiff, Radheshyam, filed the instant suit and obtained an order of temporary injunction restraining the landlord from proceeding with the ejectment suit. Therefore, we concluded that there was nothing to show that Hariram did not bona fide contest the ejectment suit against him.

13. For the foregoing reasons, we hold that Radheshyam, the plaintiff, failed to prove that he was the real tenant of the suit room and that his son, Hariram, was his benamdar in respect of the said tenancy. There was no reliable direct evidence and no legal inference or benami could be also made from the proved facts, surrounding circumstances, position of parties, their motive and subsequent conduct.

14. The plaintiff's case of benami having failed, it is no longer very much necessary to consider the other question whether or not in the previous ejectment suit the defendant No. 2, Hariram, had acted against the interest of his father, Radheshyam. Mr. Mitter, learned advocate for the appellant, had fairly placed before us the decision of the Judicial Committee in Ch. Gur Narayan v. Sheolal Singh, AIR 1918 PC 140: 46 Ind App 1 which, inter alia, laid down that the bulk of judicial opinion in India was in favour of the proposition that in a proceeding by or against the benamdar, the person beneficially entitled, is fully affected by the rules of res judicata. It is open to the latter to apply to be joined in the action; but whether he is a party or not, a proceeding by or against his representative in its ultimate result is fully binding upon him. The Supreme Court in Ragho Prasad Gupta v. Krishna

Poddar, AIR 1969 SC 316, after quoting a passage from the decision in Ch. Gur Narayan's case (supra), had laid down that the decision in a proceeding brought by or against the benamdar would bind the real owner unless it is shown that the benamdar could not and did not in fact represent the interest of the real owner in that proceeding. The Supreme Court in Ragho Prasad Gupta's case (supra), after examining the facts of the case held that the appellant who claimed to be the real owner was bound by the decree passed in the earlier suit and the decree could be executed against him. Upon consideration of the evidence adduced in the present case, we have already rejected the plaintiff, Radheshyam Agarwalla's case of benami and we may also add that the plaintiff did not show that Hariram could not or did not represent the interest of the alleged real owner in the previous ejectment suit.

15. For the foregoing reasons, we dismiss this appeal without any order as to costs.

R. K. SHARMA, J.:— I agree.

Patel Roadways Pvt. Ltd., Petitioner
v. Bata India Ltd., Opposite Party.

Civil Order No. 549 of 1982, D/- 16-6-1982.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 20 — Entrustment of goods at P for carriage to 'O' — Breach of contract — Institution of suit at 'A' having jurisdiction over 'D' — Maintainability — Term in contract providing jurisdiction to 'B' court in respect of all claims — Suit would not be maintainable at 'A' court. (Contract Act (9 of 1872), S. 28.)

Where the plaintiff had delivered certain goods to the company at their 'P' head office for carriage to 'D' against certain consignment notes which provided that 'B' court alone would have jurisdiction in respect of all claims arising under the consignment or with regard to the goods entrusted for transport, the plaintiff on breach of contract for carriage could not institute his money suit at 'A' on the ground that 'A' court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit since the goods being deliverable at 'D' within the jurisdiction of the said court as he could not resile from the terms of contract which he accepted as binding between the parties. Though the parties by mutual agreement cannot confer jurisdiction upon a court which it does not possess nor can oust the jurisdiction of a court otherwise possessed by it, they can however, choose between them one out of several courts having concurrent jurisdiction. Such an agreement does not violate S. 28 of the Contract Act, nor is it opposed to public policy. Therefore when both the courts at 'B' where lay the head office of the company and the court at 'A' did have concurrent jurisdiction to entertain a suit of such nature, the parties to the contract having chosen by mutual agreement the 'B' forum, the suit should be filed there and not at 'A'. (Paras 5, 9)

(B) Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930), S. 2 (4) — Bills of Lading Act (1856), S. 1 — Consignment — It is not bill of lading — S. 1 would not be applicable in case of endorsement.

Though the term "bill of lading" has not been defined by the Bills of Lading Act, 1856, yet each and every document of title in respect of goods is not a bill of lading nor can the same be equated with a bill of lading for all purposes. Such documents of title in respect of goods are assimilated to bills of lading for certain limited purposes provided for by the Sale of Goods Act and the Contract Act, and not for other purposes. Therefore, it could not be said that a consignment note stands on the same position as a bill of lading so that S. 1 of the Bills of Lading Act would be made applicable in case of endorsement of any and every document of title in respect of goods as enumerated in S. 2 (4) of Sale of Goods Act as it is applicable to a bill of lading. Satyendra Prosad Sen, for Petitioner;
 Hirak Mitra with Sumit Kumar Chakraborty, for Opposite Party.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— In this revisional application, which is being heard as a contested one, a short point arises for our consideration as to whether a stipulation in a contract for carriage of goods to the effect that Bombay court alone would have jurisdiction in respect of claims with regard to goods entrusted for carriage would oust the jurisdiction of the Alipore Court to entertain a suit for damages for non-delivery of such goods at the instance of an assignee of a consignment note, though such court has otherwise jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

2. According to the plaintiff/opposite party certain textile goods valued at Rs. 29,842.91 were delivered to the defendant company, a common carrier, at their Pondicherry Office for carriage to Batanagar against 3 consignment notes. The defendant having failed to deliver the goods so entrusted to them, the plaintiff as the assignee of the consignment notes instituted Money Suit No. 20 of 1976. In the plaint, the claim was laid on 3 alternative grounds, namely. (1) damages on the ground of non-delivery of the goods so entrusted, (2) damages for breach of the contract for carriage and (3) damages for wrongful detention and/or conversion of such goods to their own use or purpose. The suit was instituted in the 1st Court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore, 24 Parganas. It was claimed that Alipore court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit since the goods being deliverable at Batanagar within the jurisdiction of the said court, a part of the cause of action arose within the said jurisdiction.

3. The defendant in contesting the suit by filing a written statement raised an objection that the court of the learned Subordinate Judge cannot entertain the suit in view of Cl. 17 of the contract for carriage printed on the reverse of the consignment note which provided that Bombay court alone will have jurisdiction in respect of all claims arising under the consignment or with regard to the goods entrusted for transport.

4. A preliminary issue on the point of jurisdiction of the Court at Alipore was raised and the learned Subordinate Judge by an order dated January 5, 1982, decided the issue in favour of the plaintiff and against the defendant. According to the learned Subordinate Judge when a part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of his court, a term in a contract as incorporated in Cl. 17 referred to hereinbefore would not oust the jurisdiction of his court to entertain or try such a suit. Feeling aggrieved, the defendant has now preferred the present revisional application challenging the said order.

5. The view taken by the learned Subordinate Judge particularly having regard to the reasons given therefor is apparently erroneous as the learned Judge had failed to consider the true effect of such a stipulation in a contract. The learned Judge has failed to take note of the legal position that though the parties by mutual agreement cannot confer jurisdiction upon a court which it does not possess nor can oust the jurisdiction of a court otherwise possessed by it, they can however, choose between them one out of several courts having concurrent jurisdiction. Such an agreement does not violate S. 28 of the Contract Act, nor is it opposed to public policy; it is, therefore, enforceable as between the parties to the agreement. There is uniformity of judicial opinion on the point and the principle is now so well settled that it needs no support with reference to any precedent. Therefore, if—as in the present case—both the courts at Bombay where lay the head office of the defendant company and the court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore do have concurrent jurisdiction to entertain a suit of the present nature, the parties to the contract having chosen by mutual agreement the Bombay forum, the suit should be filed there and not at Alipore.

6. Mr. Mitter appearing on behalf of the plaintiff/opposite party without disputing the legal position referred to hereinbefore has raised an interesting point for our consideration. According to Mr. Mitter, the contract for carriage was not with the plaintiff nor by virtue of endorsement of the consignment note in their favour did the plaintiff become an assignee of the contract. By virtue of the endorsement of the consignment note the plaintiff became the assignee and, as such, the owner of the goods entrusted with the defendant and the claim of the plaintiff is based not on the privity of contract but on damages for non-delivery of the goods or the conversion thereof. Since the contract or the rights thereunder had not been assigned to the plaintiff, he is not bound by the agreement incorporated in clause 17 between the defendant and the original consignor referred to hereinbefore. Reliance has been placed by Mr. Mitter on a Bench decision of this court in the case of Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta v. G. T. Corporation 68 CWN 410 and a decision of the Bombay High Court in the case of Union of India v. Ali Esaji Bohari, ILR 56 Bombay 600.

1982 Cal./37 XII G—17

7. Mr. Sen appearing on behalf of the defendant/petitioner relied upon Section 1 of the Indian Bills of Lading Act, 1856, for repelling this contention of Mr. Mitter. Section 1 of that Act provides as follows:

"Rights under bills of lading to vest in consignee or endorsee. Every consignee of goods named in a Bill of lading and every endorsee of a bill of lading to whom the property in the goods therein mentioned shall pass upon or by reason of such consignment or endorsement shall have transferred to and vested in him all rights of suit, and be subject to the same liabilities in respect of such goods as if the contract contained in the bill of lading had been made with himself."

Relying in particular on the last part of this provision, namely "be subject to the same liabilities in respect of such goods as if the contract contained in the bill of lading had been made with himself", it is contended by Mr. Sen that the plaintiff even as an endorsee of the consignment note is bound by all the covenants incorporated in the said contract of carriage as if the contract had been made with the endorsee.

8. We have carefully considered the rival contentions put forward before us. In our considered opinion, the contention of Mr. Sen is based upon a misapprehension. His contention proceeds on the basis that a consignment note stands on the same position as a bill of lading so that S. 1 of the Indian Bills of Lading Act, 1856, would be made applicable in case of endorsement of any and every document of title in respect of goods as enumerated in S. 2 (4) of the Sale of Goods Act, as it is applicable to a bill of lading. Though the term 'bill of lading' has not been defined by the Indian Bills of Lading Act, 1856, yet each and every document of title in respect of goods is not a bill of lading nor can the same be equated with a bill of lading for all purposes. Such documents of title in respect of goods are assimilated to bills of lading for certain limited purposes provided for by the Sale of Goods Act and the Indian Contract Act, and not for other purposes. As pointed out by this court in the case of Commrs. for the Port of Calcutta v. G. T. Corporation, this position has been made clear by the Privy Council by the two decisions in the cases of Ramdas Vithaldas Darbar v. S.

Amirchand & Co., 43 Ind App 164: (AIR 1916 PC 7) and Official Assignee of Madras v. Mercantile Bank of India Ltd., 61 Ind App 416: (AIR 1934 PC 246). Such being the position in law, we would have found ample merit in the contention of Mr. Mitter only if we could agree with him that on the plaint the suit had been filed not on the contract but as the owner of goods by virtue of endorsement of the consignment note.

9. Reading the plaint as a whole, we are unable to accept the contention of Mr. Mitter that the suit is not based on the contract but is based solely on the ownership of goods by virtue of endorsement of the consignment note. Whatever the position of plaintiff in law, as we have indicated hereinbefore the plaintiff instituted the suit laying his claim on 3 alternative grounds. One of such grounds was damages for breach of the contract of carriage. Such a claim is laid necessarily as an assignee of the contract itself. Though Mr. Mitter has drawn our attention to the written statement of the defendant/petitioner wherein the defendant had specifically denied existence of any privity of contract between the parties to the suit, such a pleading in our view is wholly irrelevant. In our view, the jurisdiction of the court must be determined on the plaint itself and on the facts set out therein; where as in the present case the plaintiff lays his alternative claim on breach of the contract of carriage, he cannot resile from the terms thereof which he accepts as binding between the parties. One of the terms of such a contract as have pointed out hereinbefore incorporated in S. 17 was with regard to choice of forum as between several courts of concurrent jurisdiction. Such a contract, therefore, binds him and he cannot institute a suit in Alipore Court contrary to the said agreement.

10. In the result, this application succeeds. The impugned order of the learned Subordinate Judge being set aside, we decide the preliminary issue in favour of the defendant and hold that the court of the learned Subordinate Judge at Alipore has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. We, therefore, direct the learned Subordinate Judge to return the plaint to the plaintiff for being filed before the appropriate court. There will be no order for costs in this application. Let the order be communicated to the court below.

11. Let operation of order remain stayed for six weeks.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA AND

C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

Paras Nath Dubey and another, Appellants v. Kedar Nath Kejriwal and another, Respondents.

A.F.O.O. No. 280 of 1977, D/- 11-5-1982.

(A) Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), S. 33 — "The Court shall decide the question on affidavits" — Award relating to certain motor vehicles in a hire purchase agreement — Opposite party claiming to have appeared before arbitrator on relevant date with advocate — Neither affidavit of party concerned nor that of advocate filed — Judge was justified in deciding the case on affidavits of parties as before him — Trial on evidence, not necessary. (Para 16)

(B) Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), Sections 35 (1), 34 — Relative scope of — Mere commencement of legal proceeding — Arbitration proceeding not rendered invalid.

The underlying object of S. 35 (1) is to stop the conflict of decisions between the private forum and the public tribunal. The section contemplates that mere commencement of the legal proceeding will not by itself render the arbitration proceeding invalid. To render it invalid the legal proceeding must be commenced upon the whole of the subject-matter of the reference: it must be between all the parties to the reference and a notice thereof has to be given to the arbitrators or umpire as the case may be. If all these conditions are satisfied the further proceeding in the arbitration from the time of the notice upon the arbitrators or umpire in the pending reference becomes invalid. This invalidity, however, can be removed as provided by S. 35 (1) as and when an application is made under Section 34 and an order is obtained thereon staying legal proceeding. (Paras 20, 22)

The court in granting the stay may under S. 34 in its discretion, depending on the facts of each case, consider to make an order for stay only with regard to that part of the legal proceeding which is covered by the arbitration agreement but the position is not exactly the same when it comes to the operation of S. 35 (1). (Para 23)

The expression "whole of the subject matter of the reference" has a special significance of its own and it is only when this is strictly complied with that it might have the force to render the arbitration proceeding invalid. The principle behind this is to have the entire disputes decided in legal proceeding without leaving any part to be decided in the pending arbitration proceeding so that there might not be any possibility of conflict of decisions. Unlike S. 34, in applying S. 35 (1) there is no scope for exercising the discretion although it is in the negative form still it is mandatory in substance. Accordingly the section has to be strictly complied with.

The reasons why the whole of subsec. (1) of S. 35 has been put in the negative form is to give only a limited right to the party commencing the legal proceeding. He cannot, by his own act by commencing the same, simpliciter render the arbitration proceeding invalid. He can effectively do so only upon fulfilling the three conditions laid down therein. Mr. Bhabra, for Appellants; S. K. Gupta, for Respondents.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J.:—The appeal herein arises from the judgment and order of Subyasachi Mukharji, J. passed on May 18, 1977. The learned Judge has dismissed the application for setting aside the award and has, inter alia, passed a judgment in terms of the award.

2. The award was passed on Jan. 22, 1977 in respect of disputes arising out of a Hire-Purchase Agreement dated Nov. 25, 1972 in which there was an arbitration clause. The award read as follows:

"Whereas Messrs. Kedarnath Kejriwal, the claimant abovenamed referred to my arbitration all disputes and differences between them and the respondents pursuant to the Arbitration Agreement dated 9th day of October, 1972 between the parties and whereas I took upon myself the burden of the said reference and whereas I have read and considered the papers filed before me and also heard the evidence:

Now I make my award as follows:—

1. I award and declare that the claimant namely Kedar Nath Kejriwal are the owners of the Tata Mercedes Benz Motor Vehicle bearing Police Registration No. BRJ 2741 and No. 312.978.86. 22850 on the Engine and No. 342.050.85. 22018 on the Chassis thereof and entitled to possession thereof.

2. I hold and award that the respondents, namely (1) Paras Nath Dubey and (2) Jairam Prasad Dubey do pay the Claimant a sum of Rs. 37,250 (Rupees Thirty-seven thousand two hundred and fifty) only.

3. I further hold and direct that should the respondents fail to give possession of the said vehicle to the claimant, they do pay to the claimant a sum of Rupees 16,000 (Rupees sixteen thousand) only in lieu of the Award made herein as to declaration and possession of the said motor vehicle.

4. I further hold and direct that the respondents do pay Rs. 850 (Rupees eight hundred and fifty only) as costs of this Arbitration."

3. The hire-purchase agreement relates to the motor vehicle bearing No. BRJ 2741. In March, 1972, the disputes were referred to arbitration by the respondent, Kedar Nath Kejriwal (hereinafter called Claimant Kejriwal). On April 24, 1975 the arbitrator wrote to the petitioners Dubeys (Paras Nath and Jairam Prasad) (hereinafter called Dubeys) to file counter-statement of facts. Thereafter on April 25, 1975 the Dubeys requested the arbitrator to grant 15 days' time. The claimant Kejriwal made an application on or about May 5, 1975 for appointment of a Receiver under S. 41 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 over the said vehicle. On or about July 17, 1975 Dubeys filed an affidavit-in-opposition to the said application. Dubeys also made an application in this Court under Ss. 5 and 33 of the Arbitration Act for determination of the validity and effect of the arbitration agreement. On Aug. 6, 1975 Dubeys filed a Title Suit being Suit No. 207 of 1975 in the Bhagalpur Court. In that suit Dubeys had asked for a decree that the petitioner Paras Nath Dubey was the absolute owner of vehicles Nos. BRF 3461 and BRJ 2741 and that the defendant therein, being Kedar Nath Kejriwal had no right, title and interest therein. Dubeys also asked for a declaration that the alleged hire-purchase agreement dated Oct. 9, 1972 relating to vehicle No. BRJ 2741 and the alleged hire-purchase agreement dated Nov. 24, 1972 relating to vehicle No. BRF 3461 were void and not binding on the Dubeys and for the delivery up and cancellation thereof. They also asked for a decree for accounts and for such amount as might be found due and payable and/or refundable by Kejriwal and also for a decree for Rs. 5,100. There was also a prayer for mandatory injunction restraining Kejriwal from taking any step and/or any further proceeding in respect of the said hire-purchase agreement. On Sept. 29, 1975 Dubeys obtained an ex parte order of injunction from Bhagalpur Court restraining Kejriwal from proceeding with the reference before the Arbitrator.

4. After the hearing of the said application under Ss. 5 and 33 was concluded, the judgment was reserved by the learned Judge Roy Chowdhury, J. on the prayer of the Dubeys to enable the petitioners Dubeys to settle the matter but instead of settling the matter, Dubeys obtained an order of injunction from Bhagalpur Court restraining the arbitrator from proceeding with the arbitration. The matter was thereupon mentioned before Roy Chowdhury J. in December, 1975.

5. On March 5, 1976 Roy Chowdhury J. delivered his judgment in the application under S. 41 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 and appointed a receiver therein. The said application under Ss. 5 and 33 of the Arbitration Act was dismissed by the learned Judge. Thereafter on Nov. 22, 1976 the Bhagalpur Court vacated the order of injunction. By an order dated Dec. 21, 1976 the time for making the award was extended till Feb 15, 1977.

6. On Dec. 23, 1976, the advocate Sri Abhijit Banerjee of the Dubeys gave a notice to the arbitrator under S. 35 of the Arbitration Act regarding the filing of the Title Suit No. 207 of 1975 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Bhagalpur. The said letter read as follows:

Dated 23rd December 1976.

To Sri B. L. Sharma
Advocate

Calcutta-1.

Dear Sir,

Re: In the matter of:

Arbitration between Kedar Nath
Kejriwal claimant and Paras Nath
Dubey and Jairam Prasad Dubey
(Respondents)

My client: Paras Nath Dubey and Jairam Prasad Dubey.

Regarding; Notice under Section 35 of the Arbitration Act.

This is to inform you that Hon'ble Mr. Justice Salil Kumar Roy Chowdhury was pleased to extend the time till January 1977 for making the award on the Chamber Application moved on behalf of Kedar Nath Kejriwal which was opposed by my said client.

Please take notice that my clients instituted a suit being Title Suit No. 207 of 1975 in the Court of Subordinate Judge Bhagalpur impleading Kedar Nath Kejriwal for declaration and injunction regarding the hire-purchase agreement dated 9th October 1972 and 25th November 1972 and the said suit is still pending.

That the said suit is between the same parties and the whole of the subject matter of the reference is the same and identical with that of the pending suit.

In these circumstances I request you not to proceed with the reference.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,
Sd/- Abhijit Banerjee
(Abhijit Banerjee).

7. On December 27, 1976 the arbitrator Sri B. L. Sharma, Advocate fixed a meeting of the parties but Dubeys did not attend the same. The minutes of the said meeting held on December 27, 1976 read as follows:—

1st Matter.

In the Matter of Arbitration

Between

Kedar Nath Kajriwal

-And-

Paras Nath Dubey & another.

Minutes of the Meeting of the Arbitrator held on Monday, the 27th day of December, 1976 at 11 A.M.

Present:

1. Sri B. L. Sharma, Arbitrator.

2. Sri S. K. Ghosh of M/s. P. D. Himatsingka & Co. with Sri P. Ghosh of the claimant.

Mr. Ghosh— I do not find anybody present on behalf of the respondent.

The Arbitrator informed Mr. Ghosh that he has received a letter from the solicitor for the respondents intimating to him about the filing of the suit in the Bhagalpur Court by the respondent.

Mr. Ghosh— In my view the pendency of the Bhagalpur suit does not affect the reference. The application of the respondents in the said suit restraining my client from proceeding with the reference has been dismissed. The Calcutta High Court has delivered judgment in the application under Section 41 of the Arbitration Act made by my client and the application made by the respondent under Section 33 holding that there is a valid and subsisting arbitration agreement between the parties and in fact a receiver has been appointed over the motor vehicle in dispute. In the circumstances I submit that this arbitration should proceed.

Arbitrator— I would like to know the view of the respondents as to the submissions made by Mr. Ghosh. I propose to send a copy of this Minutes to the respondents. I will consider the matter on the next date.

The next meeting will be held on Monday, the 17th January, 1977 at 4 P.M. No further notice will be given.

Sd. B. L. Sharma
Arbitrator."

8. On Dec. 28, 1976 the Arbitrator gave notice of holding the next meeting on January 17, 1977 and along with the said notice sent a copy of the aforesaid minutes of December 27, 1976 to the Dubey's at Bhagalpur. The said notice read as follows:

"B. L. SHARMA

Dear Sirs,

1st Matter

In the matter of Arbitration
Between
Kedar Nath Kejriwal
And

Paras Nath Dubey & Anr.

I send you herewith a copy of the minutes of the meeting held by me on the 27th instant, which will speak for itself.

Please note that I will proceed with the reference on the next date. This notice is peremptory.

Yours faithfully,
Sd/- B. L. Sharma
Arbitrator."

9. It appears that on January 11, 1977 Messrs. P. D. Himatsingka & Co. on behalf of Kejriwal wrote to Sri Abhijit Banerjee advocate in reply to his letter dated December 23, 1976 addressed to the arbitrator. inter alia, disputing the validity of the notice under S. 35. The said letter read as follows:

"NH/238 January 11, 1977.
Shri Abhijit Banerjee,
Advocate,
Bar Association,
High Court,

Re: Arbitration between Kedar Nath
Kejriwal Versus
Paras Nath Dubey
& Jairam Prasad Dubey.

Our Client: Kedar Nath
Kejriwal

A copy of your letter dated 23rd December, 1976 addressed to Shri B. L. Sharma, the learned Arbitrator, was shown to us at the meeting held on 27th December, 1976.

We wish to place on record that by the order dated 21st December, 1976 the time for the learned Arbitrator to make his award was extended by his Lordship the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Salil K. Roy Chowdhury till 15th February 1977 and not till January, 1977 as alleged in your said letter. Further the said Chamber application of our client was not opposed by your clients at the time when it was moved although your clients had filed an affidavit-in-opposition thereto.

We have been instructed by our client to deny the validity, legality and propriety of your said notice alleged to be under Section 35 of the Arbitration Act. In the Title Suit No. 207 of 1975 instituted by your clients in the court of the Subordinate Judge at Bhagalpur, your clients have purported to deny the existence and validity of the hire purchase agreement and arbitration agreement in respect of the vehicle BRF-3461 and have prayed for inter alia declaration that the same are void and should be cancelled and/or mandatory (sic) against our client amongst others from taking steps with regard thereto. The subject matter of the said suit therefore cannot and does not cover the subject matter of the reference. Further the parties to the suit and the reference are not the same. Hence the provisions of Section 35 of the Arbitration Act cannot be invoked in the instant case. There is no impediment to the learned Arbitrator proceeding with the reference in the instant case.

We deny that the said suit is between the same parties to the reference or that the whole of the subject matter of the reference is the same or identical with that of the pending suit. The contentions of your client in the said suit are barred by the principles of res judicata and principles analogous thereto in view of judgment and order dated 5th March, 1976 passed by his Lordship the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Salil K. Roy Chowdhury on your client's application under Sec. 33 of the Arbitration Act.

Please note that the learned Arbitrator by his letter dated 23rd December, 1976 has fixed 17th January, 1977 at 4-00 P.M. as the date for the next sitting of the reference. Please ask your client to attend.

Yours faithfully,

Sd/- P. D. Himatsingka & Co.

Copy to: Shri B. L. Sharma,

Arbitrator 239.

10. It will be noticed from the above letter of the arbitrator dated Dec. 28, 1976 that the meeting was fixed at 4.00 P.M. and the same was peremptorily fixed on January 17, 1977. Dubey's case in the petition is that Jairam Prosad Dubey along with their advocate Sri Abhijit Banerjee attended before the arbitrator on January 17, 1977 at 4.00 P.M. The Arbitrator adjourned the meeting as nobody appeared before him on behalf of the claimant and the arbitrator personally expressed regret for causing inconvenience to Shri Abhijit Banerjee, the learned advocate." According to Dubey's they were not intimated any further by the arbitrator until a letter dated Feb. 15, 1977 was received from the arbitrator intimating, inter alia, that the award was made and published on Jan. 27, 1977. A copy of the minutes dated Jan. 17, 1977 was sent under cover of that letter. The said minutes read as follows:

"1st Matter
In the Matter of Arbitration
Between
Kedar Nath Kejriwal
And

Paras Nath Dubey & Anr.
Minutes of the Meeting of the Arbitrator held on Monday, the 17th January 1977 at 4 P.M.

Present:

1. Sri B. L. Sharma, Arbitrator.
2. Sri Dipak Dey of M/s. P. D. Himatsingka & Co. with Sri Binod Kejriwal of the claimant.

Mr. Dey: I find from the records that the learned Arbitrator duly forwarded a copy of the minutes of the meeting held on 27th December 1977 to the respondents by registered post with acknowledgement due. The postal acknowledgment receipt duly signed by and on behalf of the respondents are in the file of the learned Arbitrator. In spite of the said fact, I find that the respondents are absent.

As regards the letter of Sri Abhijit Banerjee, Advocate dated 23rd December 1976, a reply has been sent to the said Mr. Banerji by M/s. P. D. Himatsingka & Co. by their letter dated 11th January 1977 explaining the true legal position. I respectfully submit that the learned Arbitrator should proceed with the reference and allow me to adduce evidence.

Mr. Dey examines Mr. Kejriwal and adduces evidence in support of the claim of his client. Original papers are also filed by him. I will make my award in due course.

Sd/- B. L. Sharma
Arbitrator."

11. It would seem from the above that either Dubey's version is wholly incorrect or the minutes of the arbitrator dated Jan. 17, 1977 were untrue and manipulated.

12. The learned Judge has decided that question from the materials before him without taking any oral evidence of the parties. The learned Judge was of the view that since Sri Abhijit Banerjee was stated to have attended before the arbitrator on January 17, 1977 at 4 P.M. he should have come out with an affidavit particularly when the minutes speak differently of the happenings of that particular point of time. There is still another factor which weighed with the learned Judge in arriving at his conclusion. It was noticed that the petition had been signed by both Parras Nath Dubey and Jairam Prosad Dubey. It was Jairam Prosad Dubey who was supposed to have accompanied the learned advocate when they had been to the arbitrator: but strangely enough, although Jairam Prosad Dubey signed the petition yet he did not choose to verify the same as true to his knowledge and left it to Paras Nath Dubey who verified the material paragraphs as based on information received from Jairam Prosad Dubey. When the facts as stated in the petition were seriously disputed in the affidavit-in-opposition of Benod Kejriwal, Jairam Prosad Dubey along with Paras Nath Dubey this time affirmed the affidavit-in-reply but Jairam carefully avoided this time also, to state that what was stated in the relevant paragraphs of the petition dealing with the said facts were true to his knowledge. It is further to be noted that there was a supporting affidavit by Sri Dipak Dey who was appearing on behalf of Messrs. P. D. Himatsingka & Co. and who attended the meeting to say that the minutes of the said meeting held on January 17, 1977 were true and correct. In the affidavit-in-reply, that affidavit of Sri Dipak Dey was not at all dealt with although in the opening paragraph Dubey says that the affidavit of Sri Dipak Dey was also read over and explained to them and they understood the same. In the affidavit-in-reply Jairam Prosad Dubey does not state when he attended before the arbitrator and at which point of time.

13. In para 7 (b) of the affidavit-in-reply it is stated as follows:—

"We state that in view of the facts set out in paragraph 7 (a) (i) to 7 (a) (v) above it appears that though Jairam Prosad Dubey attended the office of the arbitrator on 17th January, 1977 the meeting was held behind our back at any suitable time after we left the office of arbitrator and the award is made ex parte."

The learned Judge also noticed that when the arbitrator forwarded the award along with the minutes of the meeting dated January 17, 1977 in the middle of February, 1977 Dubey kept silent and did not choose to point out that Jairam Prosad Dubey had attended on January 17, 1977 and was told by the arbitrator that there would be no sitting on that date. Under those circumstances, the learned Judge after taking into consideration the previous conduct of the Dubey's came to the finding that Dubey's were not interested in proceeding with the reference and concluded that it must be accepted that Dubey's did not attend the meeting on January 17, 1977 and the arbitrator's minutes recorded the correct facts.

14. Mr. Bhabra contends that it is a matter involving facts as to what actually happened. It is true that Jairam Prosad Dubey did not affirm the affidavit verifying the petition but in the affidavit-in-reply he has stated the position. It may be that Sri Abhijit Banerjee, advocate did not affirm the affidavit but at the same time the learned Judge should have considered that the arbitrator also did not make any affidavit although he had been made a party herein. Mr. Bhabra contends that the minutes of January 17, 1977 had not been proved by the arbitrator and the copy thereof was not sent immediately after he made the award. It was sent sometime after February, 15, 1977 though the award was made on January 22, 1977. In his award he has stated that he has examined Sri Benod Kejriwal who adduced evidence in support of the claim of the claimant. The minutes also speak of original papers being filed by the said witness. Mr. Bhabra comments that no records have been produced and there is nothing to be found in respect thereto relating to the evidence of the witness or which documents had been filed by him. Therefore, the minutes of January 17, 1977 were not borne out by the records as true. Mr. Bhabra has also pointed out that there were two arbitration proceedings in connection with two hire purchase agreements in respect of two vehicles but the minutes in respect of both of them show that both were decided at 4 P.M. on that date. Mr. Bhabra contends that these are matters which could have been verified and tested on oral evidence and without such evidence the point could not have been decided by the learned Judge. It is contended that the learned Judge has not relied on correct materials to arrive at his decision. In support of his contention, Mr. Bhabra has relied on a decision in the case of Deoki Nandan Dalmia v. Basantlal Ghanashyamdass, AIR 1941 Cal 527 at p. 528 and the decision in the case of Liladhar v. Firm Radha Kishan Ramsahaya, AIR 1946 Nag 5 at p. 8 and also the decision in the case of Jagdish Mahton v. Sundar Mahton, AIR 1949 Patna 393. Mr. Bhabra has also referred to S. 14 (2) of the Arbitration Act, 1940 whereby the arbitrator was required to file the award in the circumstances mentioned therein "together with any deposition and documents which may have been taken and proved before them.....". Mr. Bhabra contends that the learned Judge should not have taken into consideration the past behaviour or conduct of the Dubeys. It may very well be that they might have changed their mind at the very last moment and decided to contest the arbitration proceeding when all other remedies, they were seeking so far, had gone against them. Mr. Bhabra contends further that in the minutes dated December 27, 1976 it was recorded that the arbitrator wanted to hear the Dubeys on the question of notice under S. 35 as served by their lawyer and for that purpose he fixed the meeting on Jan 17, 1977. Accordingly, without hearing Dubeys evidence he should not have proceeded further to make his award.

15. Mr. S. K. Gupta appearing on behalf of the respondents herein contends that the successive steps which Dubeys have taken to thwart the arbitration proceedings will go to suggest that they had no intention to appear. The fact that they had served the notice under S. 35 of the Arbitration Act a few days prior to the said meeting would go to show that they did not intend to actually appear in the said meeting in any event. Admittedly they did not attend the meeting held on Dec. 27, 1976 and no grievance was made in respect thereto at any point of time even after the copy of the minutes thereof was sent to them by the arbitrator. There is no explanation in the petition even as to why they did not appear on Dec. 27, 1976. That being so, the learned Judge was justified in taking into consideration the past conduct of the Dubeys. Mr. Gupta contends that Jairam Prosad Dubey carefully avoided pledging his oath in the petition. Similarly, when pressed he affirmed the affidavit-in-reply herein but made statements therein in a very guarded manner. He did not mention about the time when he went there. He did not deal with the affidavit of Dipak Dey and thus he did not raise any dispute with regard to the correctness of the minutes of the meeting. He did not even give any explanation as to why his advocate Sri Abhijit Banerjee did not come forward to make any affidavit in support of the statements in the petition or in the affidavit-in-reply. There is no explanation as to why he did not verify the petition by affirming an affidavit in that respect. It is most unusual that he did not choose to have his presence recorded in the minutes of the arbitrator even though he was accompanied by his advocate. Even in the grounds of appeal any point relating to the correctness of the minutes had not been taken nor even the attendance at 4 P.M. had been asserted therein. Mr. Gupta contends that it was not incumbent upon the arbitrator to take down the evidence or to make a note in respect thereto nor was it necessary for him to file the documents unless he is requested by the parties or directed by the court in that regard. That being so, it is contended by Mr. Gupta that there were sufficient materials before the learned Judge not to rely on the affidavit of Jairam Prosad Dubey.

16. In our opinion, there is no case in the petition on this point for the learned Judge to consider whether the matter under the circumstances was to be set down for trial on evidence in the absence of the affidavit of the persons who were said to have attended the meeting on Jan. 17, 1977. In the absence of such affidavit from Jairam Prosad Dubey or from Sri Abhijit Banerjee advocate, the court was not obliged to hear the case on evidence and could reject the allegations made in the petition as unreliable and untrue. It is unbelievable that Jairam Prosad Dubey would go before the arbitrator accompanied by his advocate and would come back without having it recorded at the meeting fixed on that date and the only conversation that would take place was that the arbitrator felt apologetic for causing inconvenience to the learned advocate. The learned advocate for Dubeys in the normal course was expected to have the same recorded in writing. Save and except that some vague allegations have been made in the petition by Paras Nath Dubey, who admittedly had not been present at the appointed time, there was no material whatsoever in the petition wherefrom the court would be in a position to entertain such allegations made in the petition. That being so, the affidavit of Jairam Prosad Dubey made in reply to the affidavit in opposition of Kejriwal lost its effect altogether. In any event, Jairam Prosad Dubey, even then had not stated therein that he reiterated the statements made in the petition in connection with the said facts relating to the attendance before the arbitrator. In our opinion, the learned Judge was justified in deciding the case on the affidavits before him in the manner he has done. Accordingly, the points raised by Mr. Bhabra are bound to fail.

17. The only other point urged before us is the effect of the notice under S. 35 of the Arbitration Act, Mr. Bhabra contends that the award was invalid because it was made after notice under S. 35 was served on the arbitrator. The suit was filed on August 6, 1975 at Bhagalpur by Dubey, against (1) Bijay Kumar Kejriwal (2) Kedar Nath Kejriwal (3) M/s. General Investment Corporation and (4) Kejriwal Auto Dealers for the following reliefs:

(a) A declaration that the plaintiff No. 1 is the absolute owner of the vehicles BRF 3461 and BRJ 2741 and the defendants have no right, title or interest therein.

(b) A declaration that the alleged hire-purchase agreement dated 9th October, 1972 relating to vehicle No. BRJ 2741 and the alleged hire purchase agreement dated 25th November, 1972 relating to vehicle BRF No. 3461 are void, and not binding on the plaintiffs and the same are delivered up and cancelled.

(c) Accounts and decree for such amount as may be found due and payable and/or refunded by defendants to plaintiffs.

(d) A decree for Rs. 5,100/- against the defendants;

(e) Interim interest on the said sum of Rs. 5,100/- at the rate of 6 per cent per annum and future (interest).

(f) Mandatory injunction restraining the defendants, their assigns and/or agents from taking any steps and/or any further proceeding in respect of alleged hire-purchase agreements or arbitration agreement dated 9th October, 1972 and 25th November, 1972 in relation to vehicles Nos. BRJ 2741 and BRF 3461 or their execution of the said award cases.

18. It would appear from the above that two of the defendants in that suit are outsiders to the arbitration agreements and the proceedings in connection thereto. The said parties are Bijay Kumar Kejriwal and M/s. General Investment Corporation. The nature of the suit is such that there would be no existence of the arbitration agreement and that the plaintiff No. 1 Paras Nath Dubey was the absolute owner of the two vehicles Nos. BRJ 2741 and BRF 3461 and the defendants have no right, title or interest therein. Furthermore, the plaintiffs in that suit claimed a decree for Rs. 5,100/- against the defendants but that again is not within the scope of the arbitration proceedings. Prayer (f) is also outside the scope.

19. As stated hereinabove, the notice under S. 35 was dated Dec. 23, 1976 and the arbitrator intimated at the meeting held on Dec. 27, 1976 about the said notice to Kejriwal's advocate. Mr. Bhabra argues that the interpretation of Sec. 35 of the Arbitration Act requires some re-consideration. The expression "whole of the subject matter of the reference" should be restricted to the part of the claim in the plaint which would come within the scope of the arbitration agreement. Mr. Bhabra has referred to the decision of P. B. Mukharji, J. (as he then was) in the case of Banwarilal Garodia v. Joylal Hargulal, AIR 1956 Cal 467 and to passages from Sir N. N. Sircar's The Law of Arbitration in British India pages 330-334. Mr. Bhabra contends that Ss. 34 and 35 are to be read together to find out the meaning of the expression "whole of the subject matter of the reference" in S. 35. Mr. Gupta contends that the opening part of S. 35 is in the negative form because before the 1940 Act came into force the prevailing law in arbitration was that the filing of the suit by itself would render the arbitration proceedings invalid. Mr. Gupta has referred to the said decision in AIR 1956 Cal 467 and the passage at page 469 wherein the learned Judge has dealt with that point. In any event, Mr. Gupta contends that the claim in the suit is independent of the contract relating to hire purchase for which the arbitration clause has been provided. It is also contended that two of the parties in the Bhagalpur suit are not parties in the arbitration proceedings. The claim in the suit refers to two vehicles which are the subject matter of the two arbitration references in which two awards have been made. In the plaint Dubey is asking for delivery up and cancellation of the contract including the arbitration agreement. They have based their cause of action on forgery in respect of the said hire purchase agreement. They are claiming title to the vehicles independent of any hire purchase agreement. Accordingly, S. 35 has no application. The pleading in the plaint in fact is based on misrepresentation, fraud, collusion and so on.

20. On the question of interpretation of S. 35 arguments have been advanced before us and to our mind the section has to be read as conferring some rights by the legislature on the parties to the arbitration proceedings but making it obligatory on the party filing the suit to fulfil certain conditions precedent in order that the arbitration proceedings might be rendered invalid by the filing of the suit.

"35. (1) No reference nor award shall be rendered invalid by reason only of the commencement of legal proceedings upon the subject matter of the reference, but when legal proceedings upon the whole of the subject matter of the reference have been commenced between all the parties to the reference and a notice thereof has been given to the arbitrators or umpire, all further proceedings in a pending reference shall, unless a stay of proceedings is granted under S. 34, be invalid.

22. By this section a machinery is provided under the Act to stop the arbitration proceeding not simpliciter by the filing of the legal proceeding but upon fulfilment of certain conditions. The underlying object is to stop the conflict of decisions between the private forum and the public tribunal. The section contemplates that mere commencement of the legal proceeding will not by itself render the arbitration proceeding invalid. To render it invalid the legal proceeding must be commenced upon the whole of the subject matter of the reference; it must be between all the parties to the reference and a notice thereof has to be given to the arbitrators or umpire as the case may be. If all these conditions are satisfied the further proceeding in the arbitration from the time of the notice upon the arbitrators or umpire in the pending reference becomes invalid. This invalidity, however, can be removed as provided by S. 35 (1) as and when an application is made under S. 34 and an order is obtained thereon staying legal proceeding. This is how S. 34 comes into play. In other words, what was so long being done by the act of parties was thenceforward to be done by the court in the exercise of its discretion. This is how the two sections are inter-related and work together to reach a final decision on the point. There are conditions prescribed in both these sections and those are meant to be fulfilled. Section 34 of the Act enables the party-seeking the private forum for the decision of the disputes upon fulfilment of certain conditions as provided therein.

23. Under S. 34 legal proceeding commenced by a party to the arbitration agreement in order that the same may not be allowed to proceed, need not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the arbitration proceeding. The court in granting the stay may in its discretion, depending on the facts of each case, consider to make an order for stay only with regard to that part of the legal proceeding which is covered by the arbitration agreement but the position is not exactly the same when it comes to the operation of S. 35 (1).

24. In course of arbitration proceedings the party or parties may choose to commence legal proceedings in the Judicial forum and thereby may seek to stop the subject matter of the reference from being proceeding with in arbitration. But if that is sought to be done then the section provides that such legal proceedings must be commenced on the whole of the subject matter of the reference and must be between all the parties to the reference and the notice thereof has to be given to the arbitrators or umpire. There is no question of using any discretion on the part of anybody in rendering the arbitration proceedings invalid. The section, accordingly, has to be strictly construed and complied with in order that the arbitration proceeding which was being otherwise lawfully proceeded with has to be rendered invalid.

25. It is argued that in order to render the arbitration proceeding invalid the legal proceeding need not be upon the whole of the subject matter of the reference. It is contended that the first limb of the section speaks only of the "commencement of legal proceeding upon the subject matter of the reference" and not "upon the whole of the subject matter of the reference" which has been used in the second limb of the section. Accordingly, it is contended that when the legal proceedings would be commenced upon any part of the subject matter of the reference then such part would be rendered invalid if the other conditions provided in the section are fulfilled. The further contention is that S. 34 does not contemplate of putting any such fetter by introducing such Expression as in S. 35 (1). Accordingly, the expression "whole of the subject matter of the reference" should be read harmoniously and the said expression should not be construed in any stricter sense.

26. In my opinion, this argument is fallacious. As observed hereinabove an arbitration proceeding which is not otherwise unlawful or invalid is sought to be rendered invalid by the act of parties to the arbitration proceeding by the commencement of the legal proceeding. It is the intention of the legislature to protect the interest of the parties to the arbitration proceeding by providing that in order that the arbitration proceeding might be rendered invalid, the legal proceeding so commenced must be on the whole of the subject matter of the reference and, if not, such commencement of legal proceeding would not be effective in rendering invalid any lawful arbitration reference. The expression "whole of the subject matter of the reference" has a special significance of its own and it is only when this is strictly complied with that it might have the force to render the arbitration proceeding invalid. The principle behind this is to have the entire disputes decided in legal proceeding without leaving any part to be decided in the pending arbitration proceeding so that there might not be any possibility of conflict of decisions. In short, the purpose is that either the "whole of the subject matter of reference" is put an end to or not at all. Unlike Sec. 34, in applying this section there is no scope for exercising the discretion although it is in the negative form still it is mandatory in substance. Accordingly the section has to be strictly complied with.

27. In my opinion the reasons why the whole of sub-sec. (1) of S. 35 has been put in the negative form is to give only a limited right to the party commencing the legal proceeding. He cannot, by his own act by commencing the same, simpliciter render the arbitration proceeding invalid. He can effectively do so only upon fulfilling the three conditions laid down therein.

28. This point under similar circumstances came up for consideration before P. B. Mukharji, J. (as he then was) sitting singly in the case of Banwarilal Garodia v. Joylal Hargulal, AIR 1956 Cal 467. The learned Judge discussed the principle of law involved in S. 35 (1) and under similar circumstances held that the award was not invalid under S. 35 of the Arbitration Act. I entirely agree with the principle decided in that case on that point. In the case before us also S. 35 has no application because the legal proceeding "commenced by the appellant" is not upon either the whole or part of the subject matter of the reference. Such was the case also before the Division Bench of this Court in Rambilas Nandlal v. Imperial Oil Mills Ltd., AIR 1960 Cal 304 where it was held that under such circumstances the notice under Sec. 35 could not render the award invalid.

29. The result, therefore, is that the decision of the Court below must be upheld and the appeal must be and is hereby dismissed with costs.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 587

BIMAL CHANDRA BASAK, J.

Debi Prasad Bagaria and another, Petitioners v. State of West Bengal and others, Respondents.

Matter No. 1891 of 1980. D/- 19-6-1981.

(A) Rules relating to constitution of Managing Committee of Aided Primary Schools in Calcutta, R. 6 — Constitution of Committee — Formal order approving or disapproving Committee is a must. (Education — School Managing Committee).

From R. 6 itself it is quite clear that as soon as a committee is constituted they have to seek approval of the District Inspector of Schools and in case of refusal to approve an appeal lies. This itself contemplates that the District Inspector of Schools concerned must apply his mind and that he should pass a formal order giving reasons and communicate the same because a right of appeal has been conferred by the statute. Unless a formal order is passed giving reasons, the provisions of preferring any appeal would be futile and ineffective. It is not open to the respondents to contend that merely because the authority was of the opinion that the committee was not properly constituted, R. 6 had no application and, therefore, no order need be passed under the said Rule.

(Para 12)

(B) Rules relating to constitution of Managing Committee of Aided Primary Schools in Calcutta, Rr. 6 and 7 — Improper constitution of committee — Not a ground for supersession. (Education — School Committee — Supersession).

Where the constitution of the committee is improper and not according to law it is the R. 6 which applied and it is open to the authority concerned in such a case not to give approval to the committee. In that case R. 7 has no application and an order of supersession cannot be passed thereunder. Rr. 6 and 7 must be read harmoniously. Rule 7 comes into play only when the committee is properly constituted and is approved under R. 6. When the D. P. I. is not satisfied by the management of the school by its properly constituted committee then he can act under R. 7. When the question is whether it is a properly constituted committee or not, it does not come within the scope of R. 7; only R. 6 is attracted in that case. (Para 15)

(C) Rules relating to constitution of Managing Committee of Aided Primary Schools in Calcutta, R. 7 — Order of supersession of Committee passed without giving opportunity to persons concerned of being heard — Order is bad in law. (Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Natural justice). (Para 17)

(D) Rules relating to constitution of Managing Committee of Aided Primary Schools in Calcutta, R. 7 — Power of supersession — Rule requires objective satisfaction and not subjective one. (Education — School Committee — Supersession). (Para 19)

Bachawat, for Petitioners; Netai Bannerjee and A. P. Chatterjee, for Respondents.

ORDER :— The facts of this case as set out in the petition are as follows:—

The petitioners are the President and Secretary respectively of the Managing Committee of Savitri Pathashala, a primary school situated at No. 5/D, Muk'aram Babu Street, Calcutta-7 (hereinafter referred to as the said School). The petitioners state that since 1933 prominent members of the Marwari Community in Calcutta made and collected donations from various persons from time to time for, inter alia, to take charge of, maintain, manage and improve a Girls' School known as the Savitri Pathshala together with its properties and to take the control of or establish any other schools for Girls elsewhere as might be considered necessary or desirable and to spread education among and to promote the religious, moral and intellectual advancement of high caste Up-country Hindu Girls and particularly Marwari Girls belonging to Sat Grihastha as, that is to say, respectable families professing the Sanatan Hindu and Jain religion. The petitioners state that with some prominent members of the Marwari Community, i.e., Rai Bahadur Hozarimull Dudwe-wall, Rai Bahadur Badri Das Goenka, Rai Bahadur Ramdev Chokhani, Rai Bahadur Ramji Das Bajoria, Sri Gobardhan Das Shroff, Sri Ram Kumar Jhunjhunwala and Sri Surajmull Jalan constituted themselves trustees for carrying out the said purposes. The petitioners state that on 24th Apr. 1970, Savitri Educational, and Charitable Trust was executed and Mohanlal Jalan, Hari Krishna Jhajheria since deceased and Parmeshwar Lal Kedia were and except Hari Krishna Jhajheria, along with others still are the trustees of the said Savitri Educational and Charitable Trust. The petitioners state that the objects and purposes of the Trust as declared in the said Trust Deed are, inter alia, that the trustees would continue to allow the said Savitri Pathshala to be run in accordance with the object of the said Trust. The petitioners state that the said Savitri Pathshala have two sections, primary and secondary. Pursuant to the direction given by the respondent No. 3 a separate Managing Committee of Savitri Pathshala (Primary Section) in May, 1979, was constituted with two elected Guardians' representatives, two elected teachers' representatives and two members nominated by the Savitri Educational and Charitable Trust with the Head of the Institution as ex-officio member. Reports of the said constitution of the Managing Committee were duly submitted to the respondent No. 3 and approval for the said constituted Managing Committee was sought for from the respondent No. 3 but it is alleged that the petitioners are not aware of what has happened to the fate of said prayers seeking approval of the said Managing Committee. After the said constitution of the Managing Committee, the members held office bearers election and started functioning for the well being of the said institution. Thereafter Sri Biren Mishra, Dy. Inspector of Schools attached to the office of the respondent No. 3 visited the said primary section of the school several months ago and enquired about the constitution of the Managing Committee and also of the procedure for holding election. At the time of the said enquiry by the said Dy. Inspector of Schools the Head Teacher explained everything to him in details and relevant papers and/or records were also shown to the satisfaction of the said Dy. Inspector of Schools. The petitioners state that thereafter the Managing Committee held several meetings and took some important decisions in the management of the said primary section of the school and started functioning for the better and well being of the said primary school. The teachers and staff also got their respective D.A. from the respondent No. 1. The petitioners state that one Mr. Biren Mishra, a Sub-Inspector of Schools attached to the office of the respondent No. 3 visited the school without prior intimation to the petitioners and without consulting the petitioners and/or the Managing Committee arbitrarily fixed the pay scale of the teachers of the said school. The petitioners state that the petitioner's school is an unaided primary school and the teachers and some non-teaching staff of the said school receive only D.A. from the Government of West Bengal. The petitioners state that the petitioners did not accept the said pay scale fixed arbitrarily by the said Sub-Inspector of Schools and the Managing Committee of the said School fixed the pay scales of the teaching and non-teaching staff of the schools which is higher than the pay scale fixed by the said Sub-Inspector of Schools and started paying them accordingly. The petitioners state that the said Sub-Inspector of Schools visited the school immediately following the day of payment of salary fixed by the Managing Committee of the school and became very much annoyed after having learnt that the Managing Committee of the said school did not accept the pay scale fixed by him arbitrarily and without jurisdiction and asked the Head Teacher to increase the salary of Mr. Darp Narayan Rai, a teacher of the school. Inasmuch as according to the petitioners the said Sub-Inspector of Schools had no jurisdiction and/or authority under the law to order for the increase of salary of a particular teacher, the Managing Committee did not comply with his said order. It is alleged that Darp Narayan Rai was a teacher in the secondary section of Savitri Pathshala and due to his misbehaviour with a student, he was dismissed from the said Secondary Section but out of compassion and on humanitarian ground, the said Darp Narayan Rai was appointed as a teacher in the primary section. It is alleged that on the 18th May, 1980, the Head Teacher of the school convened a meeting of the teachers of the said school and in the said meeting requested the teachers to make the ensuing annual function of the said school a success. At the said meeting, the said Darp Narayan Rai passed highly defamatory and objectionable remark at Smt. Dhan Kumari Karmacharyya, a lady teacher of the said school who is also a teachers' representative on the Managing Committee of the said school. The said Darp Narayan Rai also attempted to assault the said lady teacher but fortunately the said attempt was foiled by the clerks of the said school and of special class. Immediately after the said incident Darp Narayan Rai was placed under suspension by the Head Teacher of the school. It is alleged that after said suspension, the said Darp Narayan Rai started bearing grudge upon the petitioners and went to the office of the respondent No. 3 and made some baseless and unfounded allegations against the Managing Committee of the said school. It is alleged that on the day following the day of making such representation and baseless and unfounded allegations against the management of the school, the said Sub-Inspector of School, Mr. Biren Mishra visited the said school and made certain enquiries and showed unusual interest in the affairs of Darpa Narayan Rai. It is stated that certain correspondence passed between the said Sub-Inspector Mr. Biren Mishra and the Head Teacher of the school regarding the said Darpa Narayan Rai. It is alleged that in the afternoon of 10th July, 1980, the petitioner No. 2 who is the Secretary of the Managing Committee of the school, received a Notice from the respondent No. 4 informing that the respondent No. 4 had been appointed as Administrator of the aforesaid school and that he would take possession and charge of the school at 9 A.M. on the 11th July, 1980. A copy of the said notice issued to the petitioner No. 2 by the respondent No. 4 is annexed to the petition. Thereafter the petitioner No. 2 by his letter dated July 11, 1980 informed the respondent No. 4 that the petitioner No. 2 did not receive any order of supersession of the Managing Committee of the school and also the appointment of the Administrator of the said school. The petitioner No. 2 also stated in the said letter that the Head of the institution was having no power and/or authority to hand over charge to the respondent No. 4 because the Head Teacher was not in charge of the Management of the said school and the petitioner No. 2 stated that the respondent No. 4 could not have any occasion to take over charge from the Head of the institution. In the said letter the petitioner No. 2 requested the respondent No. 4 to send a copy of the primary education memo No. 1656/1(4)S.C./P dt. 20/21st May 1980 immediately. A copy of the said letter is annexed to the petition. It is alleged that no reply has been received as yet. It is alleged that on the 11th July 1980, the respondent No. 4 purportedly took over charge of the school from the Head Teacher of the said School and the petitioner No. 2 sent a letter to the Head Teacher stating that the Head Teacher had no authority and/or power to hand over charge of the school on behalf of the Secretary of the school and it was stated in the said letter that the action of the Head Teacher in purportedly handing over charge of the school to the respondent No. 4 was unauthorised, illegal, void ab initio and prejudicial to the interest of the school. The petitioner No. 2 also asked for an explanation from the said Head Teacher for his said unauthorised and illegal conduct. A copy of the said letter dated July 11, 1980, issued by the petitioner No. 2 is annexed to the petition. It is alleged that no reply has been received as yet. It is alleged that at the said purported handing over and taking over charge of the school by the respondent No. 4, the said Darpa Narayan Rai, the suspended teacher was present in the school premises and he brought out school registers and several papers and documents of the school from the almirah and produced the same before the respondent No. 4. It is further alleged that the Head Teacher also handed over the keys of the almirah of the said school to Sri Darpa Narayan Rai who opened the said almirah and brought out the said records and/or registers of the school. It is stated that on 17th July, 1980, the petitioner No. 1 wrote a letter to the respondent No. 2. In the said letter the petitioner No. 1 stated that on the 10th July, 1980, the petitioner No. 2 who is Secretary of the school received a letter bearing No. 1 ADM dt. 8-7-80 written by the Dy. Assistant Inspector of School (S.E.) Calcutta. It was also stated by the petitioner No. 1 that in his said letter, the said Dy. Asstt. Inspector of School has referred to the Directorate of Primary Education Memo No. 1656/1(4) S.C./P dt. 20/21st May, 1980 but neither the petitioner No. 1 nor the petitioner No. 2 received any such memo or a copy thereof. In the said letter the petitioner No. 1 also stated that the Managing Committee of the said school was duly constituted and reports and/or information with regard to the said constitution of the Managing Committee was submitted to the authorities concerned. In the said letter the petitioner No. 1 stated that the purported supersession of the Managing Committee and the appointment of Administrator in the said school was illegal, unauthorised and against the principles of natural justice. The petitioner No. 1 also stated that no notice and/or hearing was given to the petitioner before passing of the said purported order of said supersession and appointment of Administrator. In the said letter, the petitioner No. 1 requested the respondent No. 2 to send the said memo bearing No. 1656/1(4) S.C./P dt. 20/21st May 1980 and a copy of the report of the respondent No. 3. A copy of the said letter is annexed to the petition. It is alleged that neither the documents asked for have been supplied nor any reply has been received as yet. The petitioners state that the clerk of the said school has supplied them with a copy of the said order of supersession and the appointment of Administrator in the said school and from the said copy, the petitioners learnt that the respondent No. 2 in exercise of powers under Order No. 750/EDN dt. 21st Oct. 1970 superseded the Managing Committee of the said school and appointed respondent No. 4 as the Administrator of the said primary school with immediate effect. It was further stated in the said memo, that it appears, from the report of the respondent No. 3 that the present Managing Committee of the said school was not properly functioning and steps taken for reconstitution of the committee in May 19, 1970 suffered from gross procedural defects. A copy of the said memo is annexed to the petition.

2. The petitioners challenge the said order No. 750-EDN (1) dated 21-10-70 on various grounds.

3. An affidavit-in-opposition has been affirmed in this case by one Netai Banerjee on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, which states inter alia as follows: It is stated that the primary school named Savitri Pathshala was accorded recognition in 1964 with effect from 1-1-64. Renewal of recognition has been accorded and till today the school is a recognised one. The teachers are being paid Government D.A. only from the Government. After introduction of Free Education Scheme in 1974, the school authority did not come under the scheme. To run the school the school authority collects fee from the public @ Rupees 10 per Class I to IV and Rs. 12 for Class V only. Besides tuition fees the school authority charges session fee @ Rs. 20 a year per capita. Up to June 1978 the primary school had been functioning in the same building and same time with the High School. At that time the school accounts were being maintained with Secondary section. Since July 1978 the primary section has been detached with its accounts and other activities as the Secondary section of the school has been taken over by the Government. It is admitted that a committee was formed but it is stated that it was not formed as per rules. Managing Committee of a primary school is formed as per Government Order No. 750-EDN. (P) dated the 21st October, 1970. An existing Managing Committee may also apply for special constitution as per part 10 of the above noted Government order. There has been no approved Managing Committee of the School. The Trust Body was not granted special constitution so the committee constituted by the Trust Body is not regular and valid. Moreover the formalities for constitution of Managing Committee were not observed. It is stated that at the time of inspection of the school it was found by the Deputy Inspector of School, that the Managing Committee of the Savitri Pathshala 'Primary Section' suffered from gross procedural irregularities as such the said Managing Committee was not functioning properly. The Government in their Memo No. 381-EDN (P) dated 14-5-1980 desired that in the interest of school Sri P. M. Mediya, Deputy Inspector of School Calcutta be appointed the Administrator of the school. The Director of Primary Education by office Memo No. OP-3P-78 dated 20th, 21st May 1980 appointed him as Administrator of the said Primary School. It is denied that the said school (primary section) was functioning properly as alleged or at all. It is stated that the Managing Committee was not functioning properly as it was not formed in accordance with law. It is stated that the teachers were not getting salary regularly and at par with the scale prescribed for the primary teachers by the Government. It is stated that if the trust body agreed to come under the scheme of free education the teachers might not have suffered. It is stated that Sri Biren Mishra, Deputy Assistant Inspector of Schools, Calcutta visited the school as it is under his jurisdiction. He has the right to request the authority to pay the teachers as per rules to see whether the standard of education is maintained. Accordingly he had got jurisdictional authority to advise the management to fix up the pay of teachers as per rules. It is stated that in terms of Government Order No. 1366-Edn (P) dated the 28th Nov. 1977 it was decided that each D.A. getting school should pay their teachers as per scale laid down for the teachers of fully aided schools. It is denied that the Managing Committee of the school fixed the pay of the teacher as per Rules as alleged or at all. It is also denied that the Sub-Inspector of School fixed the pay of the teacher arbitrarily as alleged. It is stated that the Managing Committee pay the teacher as per their wishes and they do not follow the Rules laid down by the Government to pay the salary of the teacher of the primary section. It is stated that the Deputy Inspector of School did not accept the payment of teachers fixed by the Managing Committee because it was found that the salary had been fixed arbitrarily. It is further stated that the Deputy Assistant Inspector of Schools has power and jurisdiction to suggest the payment of the teachers in accordance with the Rules if it is found that the salary has been fixed arbitrarily. It is stated that the Deputy Assistant Inspector of Schools did not order but requested the Committee to eradicate irregularity. It is a part of his duty to advise the Managing Committee to follow the departmental orders and rules. It is stated that the respondent No. 4 had been appointed administrator and he wanted to have possession of the charge of the school on 11th July 1980 at 9 a.m. with prior intimation. It is also stated that the Administrator of the School intimated the committee regarding taking over the charge. As such it is denied that the Managing Committee did not receive any order of appointment as alleged or at all. It is further stated that the Secretary and the Head Teacher had been sent copies of the appointment of the Administrator by the Director of Primary Education West Bengal by Memo No. 1656/1(4) S.C./P dated 20-5-1980. It is stated that at the time of taking over charge of the school by the Administrator four persons including the President of the unapproved committee were present and they did not object to taking over the charge by the Administrator. It is stated that Shri Darpa Narayan Rai helped the Head Teacher regarding taking over the charge of the school by the Administrator. It is stated that the Head Teacher told the Administrator that he received a letter in time regarding appointment of the Administrator and informed the same to the President and Secretary of the School (Primary) accordingly. It is also stated that they received a letter of supersession of the Managing Committee. In the said letter it was specifically mentioned that there were procedural defects in the constitution of the Managing Committee. On request of Mr. Bagaria, the Director of Primary Education again sent a letter bearing Memo No. 2425/13 S.C.P./P dated 24th July 1980 along with a copy of the letter 1656/14

S.C./P dated 20-5-80. During inspection it was found that the voters' list was approved by the Head Teacher only. The Head Teacher has no power as per rules to approve voters' list. The intention of the Government behind appointment of Administrator was that the Administrator will regularise the administration of the school and reconstitute the Managing Committee as per rules. It is stated that excepting the petitioners Nos. 1 and 2 there is none who is in the management of the school. It is stated that no recognised institution can be left to the charge of two persons only. As such the appointment of an Administrator was found necessary specially as the petitioner No. 1 Mr. Bagaria is neither a guardian nor a member of the Trust Body. It is denied that the said order of supersession and the appointment of the Administrator in the said school is without jurisdiction and without authority of law and illegal as alleged or at all. It is stated that as per Government Order No. 800-Edn (P) dated the 5th June 1974, the D.P.I. is empowered to supersede any Managing Committee if he thinks that the management of the school is not satisfactory and is also empowered to appoint Administrator or Ad-hoc Committee for the school. It is stated that the enquiry was made by the Deputy Assistant Inspector of School, Calcutta in presence of Mr. Bagaria and the Head Teacher and the report was written in their presence. The Head Teacher of the school and Mr. Bagaria know the report of the Deputy Inspector of Schools (Primary) Calcutta. It is stated that the Committee did not get approval from the appropriate authority as such the said managing committee cannot function in accordance with law. It is stated that there was sufficient material for passing the said order of supersession and appointment of Administrator when the Managing Committee was not functioning properly in accordance with law. It is denied that the appointment of Administrator and the order of supersession was made at the instance and machination of Mr. Darpa Narayan Rai as alleged. It is stated that the respondent had acted independently and not mechanically in passing the said order of supersession and appointment of Administrator which have already been stated in the foregoing paragraphs of this affidavit.

4. Another affidavit has been affirmed in this case by the Administrator Prasad Mohan Medya wherein he has relied on an affidavit affirmed before the Appeal Court in the Appeal preferred from the interim order passed by me. In the said affidavit it has been stated as follows:— Sabitri Pathshala, a registered society, was registered under the Societies Registration Act (Central Act XXI of 1860) on 26th Jan. 1933, the registration number being 7546/217 of 1932-33. The building in which the Sabitri Pathshala was housed was purchased by Sabitri Pathshala by a registered indenture of sale dated the 28th day of Dec. 1949. It will appear from the Memorandum of Association of the Society, namely, the Sabitri Pathshala that 31 persons constituted the first Executive Committee of the said Sabitri Pathshala and neither Mohan Lal Jalan nor Hari Krishna Jhajharia nor Parameshwarlal Kedia were members of the first Executive Committee. According to the Rules of the Society the Executive Committee shall consist of 31 members and shall be elected annually. On 24th April 1979, the aforesaid Mohanlal Jalan, Hari Krishna Jhajharia and Parameshwarlal Kedia purported to create a Trust falsely alleging that the Sabitri Pathshala was under a Trust and that the properties of Sabitri Pathshala were vested in and held by the Trustees of the said Trust and further that the aforesaid three gentlemen were the only trustees of the said Trust, whereas, according to the Memorandum of Association and the Rules and Regulations in respect of the registered society, namely, the Sabitri Pathshala, the administration of the affairs of the society shall be vested in the Executive Committee. The Sabitri Pathshala was at all material times conducting a primary section in the morning from 6-30 a.m. and integrated higher secondary section from 9 a.m. to 4-30 p.m. In 1978 one Kesardeo Jhunjunwalla made an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution challenging the order of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education dated 25th Jan. 1978 appointing Shri Sudhindra Mohan Roy as the Administrator of the school giving rise to Civil Rule 6196 (W) of 1978. The said Rule was disposed of by Mr. Justice Amiya Kumar Mookherji on 24th Jan. 1979 directing the Administrator of the school to hold the election by 30th April 1979. Thereafter, an application was made on behalf of the said Administrator praying for extension of the date for holding the election, whereupon Mr. Justice Mookerji passed an order on 18th April 1979 extending the time of holding the election till 31st Aug. 1979. On 25th April 1979 the Administrator of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education passed another order in view of the fact that the tenure of office of Shri Sudhindra Mohan Roy expired on 4th February 1979 and further that Shri Roy declined to continue and further that a vacuum had, therefore, arisen in the administration of the school, appointing Shri P. M. Medya, the deponent, as Administrator of the school. On 30th July 1979 the Administrator of the Board issued an order withdrawing the approval of the special constitution for the School. It is alleged that due to circumstances beyond his control, the deponent could not hold the election on 31st Aug. 1979, but, when he was taking steps to hold the election of the Managing Committee on or about 10th March 1980 Mohanlal Jalan and others moved an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution against the Administrator of the Board and others including the deponent before T. K. Basu J. praying for an appropriate writ to cancel, rescind, revoke and/or withdraw the order of the respondent No. 1 withdrawing the approval of the Special Constitution and not to enforce the general rules relating to the formation of the Managing Committee of Sabitri Pathshala whereupon Basu J. issued a rule in terms of the prayer and granted an interim order to maintain a status quo till the disposal of the Rule. The said Rule is still pending. In the meantime, on or about 21st Dec. 1979 the appellant No. 2 purporting to sign as trustee of Sabitri Educational and Charitable Trust threatened the deponent that their Durwan will prevent him from holding secondary classes and from discharging of official activities in the school premises in the morning from 6-30 a.m. to 10-30 a.m. claiming that the premises at 5D, Mukhtaram Babu Street were Trust premises and that the Trust had allowed the premises to be used in the morning during the said period for holding classes I to V of the Primary

Section. It is stated that in fact at all material times, as stated above, the Sabitri Pathshala Higher Secondary Section had been holding secondary classes in the morning even before 10-30 A.M. in the said premises and accordingly he wrote a letter on 2nd Jan. 1980 to Shri P. L. Kedia, the appellant No. 2 pointing out that students, employees and teachers of the Secondary School were prevented from entering into school premises during the hours 6-30 a.m. to 10-30 a.m. The deponent also protested that an unauthorised class VI in the secondary section had been started by some persons in the school premises without the permission and approval from him as Administrator of the Secondary School and the deponent pointed out that the primary school had no authority to open class VI in addition to its own recognised classes. On 20th/21st May 1980, the deponent was appointed as Administrator of Primary Section under memo of the Director of Primary Education bearing No. 1656/1/4/SC/P dated 20/21st May 1980 and he assumed charge of the Primary Section on 11th July, 1980. It is alleged that even before he assumed charge another unauthorised Class VII was started in the said school premises between 6-30 a.m. and 10-30 a.m. and after he assumed charge of the primary section not only did the appellants and/or their agents and/or their men forcefully continue holding classes VI and VII but started another unauthorised Class VIII. In that state of affairs, the deponent made a complaint to the Director of Secondary Education with copies to different authorities asking to issue necessary instruction to the Police Authority to see that the main gate of Sabitri Pathshala of Primary and Secondary Schools is not closed to prevent the entry of students, teachers and staff of management of the school and to see that the recognised schools run smoothly. On 16th Sept. 1980 the appellants moved this Hon'ble Court against his appointment as the Administrator of the primary section for an appropriate writ against his appointment as such Administrator whereupon a Rule was issued in Matter No. 1891 of 1980 by me and, on an application for interim order being made, I made an order on 1st Oct. 1980, restraining the respondents and the deponent as Administrator from taking any steps to convert the unaided Primary School as an aided one. It is alleged that the Sabitri Pathshala was never administered by any Trust Body and that it has at all material times been a registered society since 1933 and the premises in which the Sabitri Pathshala holds its primary and secondary school were purchased by the said Sabitri Pathshala as a registered society on 20th Dec. 1949. The Trust purported to have been created in 1970 has not or cannot have any relevance or application to the said Sabitri Pathshala and the terms of the pretended Trust Deed are not binding upon the school, and the Trustees have no legal right to manage the affairs of Sabitri Pathshala. It is also stated that no part of the assets of the school has vested or could at all vest in the Trustees. Neither the appellants nor any of the so-called Trustees have any right to interfere in the affairs of either the primary section or the integrated higher secondary section of Sabitri Pathshala. It is also stated that anti-social elements and goondas have been sent to the school to create disturbances in the school premises by assaulting the teaching staff and students. In fact, a large number of guardians made an application to the Education Minister of the Government of West Bengal asking for immediate help to stop the raise (raid?) by the hooligans who visit the school daily at the instance of the appellants. It is stated that as stated above the Managing Committee of the said Sabitri Pathshala (hereinafter referred to as the said school) was superseded as early as 20/21st May 1980 and the petitioners cannot therefore claim to be the President and Secretary of the Managing Committee of the said school. It is stated that the said school has never been managed by a body of trustees and the Trust alleged in the said paragraph was constituted in 1970, the said school having been established as early as 1905 and having been constituted into a registered society in 1932-33. The school premises were also purchased by the said school in 1949. The Trust that was constituted was so formed for the mala fide purpose of capturing the school and appropriating its assets and, in any event, the said Trust does not extend to the said school in its operation and effect. The existence and continuance of the said school does not depend on the will and desire of the so-called Trustees and, therefore, the declaration, if any, to the effect that the trustees would continue to allow the said school to be run in accordance with the object of the Trust is irrelevant as well as motivated. It is stated that the said school had two sections, primary and secondary. It is stated that the deponent was appointed Administrator of the Primary Section also on 20/21st May 1980 and that he assumed charge as such on 11th July 1980. It was submitted that there is nothing in law to prevent the Managing Committee of a school from paying more than what the Government may pay according to Rules and, therefore, the Managing Committee could pay to the teachers sums in excess of the sums paid by the Government in accordance with the Rules and the scale of pay of the teachers determined. It is also submitted that the Managing Committee of the Schools often mala fide decline to accept aid from the Government in order that they may keep the teachers under their thumb and control and may treat them almost as domestic servants.

5. It is submitted that there was no valid reason, except the aforesaid mala fide purpose, for the Managing Committee not to have accepted aid from the Government.

6. It is stated that the deponent has learnt from the said Shri Darpa Narayan Roy that the allegations that he misbehaved with a student in the secondary section or that he passed defamatory and objectionable remarks against Smt. Dhan Kumari Karmacharyya, or that he bore any grudge against the appellants or that he went to the Office of the Respondent No. 3 and made some baseless and unfounded allegations against the Managing Committee of the School are false. It is stated that the deponent took over charges as the Administrator of the Primary Section on 11th July, 1980. It is denied however, that Shri Darpa Narayan Roy brought out School register, papers and documents of the school from the almirah and produced the same before the deponent or that the Head Teacher handed over the keys of the almirah of the school to Shri Darpa Narayan.

7. It was denied that the Managing Committee was properly functioning or that there was no material or basis for passing the order of supersession and appointment of an Administrator. It is stated that the appellants are holding unauthorised classes VI, VII and VIII in the premises of the said school even though the Management of the Secondary Section of the school has been superseded and it is continuing under the Management of me as Administrator. Any Secondary Class held in the school premises without the permission and consent of the Administrator is unauthorised. Admittedly, the appellants are holding and/or causing to be held unauthorised classes. It is denied that the premises at 5D, Muktaram Babu Street belong to the Trustees of Sabitri Educational and Charitable Trust. It is stated that the premises were purchased in 1949 by Sabitri Pathsala, a registered society. It is also stated that no coaching classes can also be held in the school premises without such permission and consent of the Administrator.

8. It is further stated that in the premises, there are five rooms in the ground floor including one class room, one general office room, one Headmaster's office, one staff room and one room illegally locked by unauthorised persons at the instance of the appellants. On the first floor there are six class rooms and one room for work Education. On the second floor there are six rooms, one library room and one room for Home Science. On the 3rd floor there are six class rooms and one Doctor's room. On the 4th floor there are four rooms for Higher Secondary Classes XI and XII including one room for optional class and one library room. Because of shortage of space in the school premises the school has rented two rooms at 5D, Muktaram Babu Street opposite to the School premises. The Primary Section consists of thirteen sections. The Primary Section is held from 6.30 A.M. to 10.30 A.M. Twenty one Secondary Section Classes are held from 10.45 A.M. to 4.30 P.M. and four Higher Secondary Classes XI and XII are held from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. In the circumstances, it is submitted that the unauthorised special classes held on the 3rd floor of the said premises are not only illegal but also encroached upon the space for primary classes, secondary classes and higher secondary classes. The Secondary School has twenty-one sections and the Higher Secondary has two sections. It is stated that as an Administrator of the school both in its primary and secondary sections, the deponent is in-charge of the school premises as well as the administration in the affairs of the school and classes held without my sanction and permission are unauthorised and illegal.

9. On behalf of the petitioners various contentions have been raised. However, in view of the prima facie case made out by Mr. Bachawat appearing on behalf of the petitioners before he completed his submissions I called upon Mr. A. P. Chatterjee, learned counsel appearing for the State-respondents to satisfy me regarding the validity of the impugned order. The contentions of Mr. Chatterjee are as follows:— He has firstly submitted that the order in question has been made under R. 7 of the Rules relating to the constitution of the Managing Committee of all aided Primary schools including the junior basic school situated in Calcutta and other places. The said rules provide as follows:—

"2. The Managing Committee of an aided Primary (including Junior Basic) School in Calcutta or other Municipal area or an area constituted by the State Government as a notified area under S. 934 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932, or cantonment area shall be constituted as follows:—

(1) President — to be nominated by the Director of Public Instruction, West Bengal in case of schools located in Calcutta, and elsewhere, by the District Magistrate in consultation with the Sub-Divisional Officer and the District Inspector/Inspectress of Schools,

(2) two persons interested in education of whom at least one should be a woman — to be nominated by the Chief Inspector of Primary Education, West Bengal in case of schools located in Calcutta, and elsewhere by the Sub-Divisional Officer,

(3) two guardians if the number of pupils in a school be not less than one hundred; otherwise, one guardian — to be elected from among themselves by the guardians,

(4) the Corporation Councillor or the Municipal Commissioner of the Corporation/Municipal ward in which the school is situated : or if the school is situated in (a) a notified area — a nominee of the notified Area Authority and (b) a Cantonment area — a nominee of the Cantonment Officer,

(5) the Head Teacher of the school-Ex-officio, and

(6) two teachers if the school has not less than 6 full time teachers; otherwise one teacher — to be elected by the full-time teachers from among themselves.

EXPLANATION:—

(a) The term "guardian" means father, or in his absence mother; or if neither of the parents is alive or if the ward is not living with any of the parents in the place where the school is situated, any other relative with whom and under whose custody the ward is actually residing. But no one shall be a guardian if he has not attained the age of 21 years.

(b) A teacher who is also a guardian shall not be eligible for election to the Committee as a guardian.

3. The Committee shall elect one from among themselves as the Secretary. But no member of the teaching staff other than the Head Teacher shall be eligible for such election.

4. Fifty per cent of the total number of members of the Committee shall form the quorum in a meeting.

5. The term of the members of the Committee shall be total of three years commencing from the first meeting of the Committee; provided that notwithstanding the expiration of the said term, the members shall continue to hold office until the new members filling the vacancies take office in accordance with the provisions of this order.

6. (1) Every Committee shall, as soon as constituted, seek and obtain the approval of the District Inspector/District Inspectress of Schools.

(2) (a) If the District Inspector/District Inspectress disapproves any Committee, he/she shall communicate the reasons thereof in writing.

(b) (i) An appeal may be preferred to the Director of Public Instruction, West Bengal against the decision of the District Inspector/District Inspectress disapproving a Committee.

(ii) The decision of the Director of Public Instruction, West Bengal shall be final.

(c) If the Committee is disapproved, it shall be reconstituted in accordance with the provisions of this order and in the light of the observations made by the District Inspector/Inspectress of Schools or the Director of Public Instruction, West Bengal.

7. In case the Director of Public instruction, West Bengal is not satisfied with the management of a school by its Committee, he shall have the right to supersede the Committee and appoint an Administrator in its place."

10. Mr. Chatterjee has submitted that R. 7 confers a subjective satisfaction on the Director of Public Instruction. In any event sufficient reasons have been indicated. It was further submitted that it was not necessary to give an opportunity of showing cause. He has submitted that the principle of natural justice has no application in this case because it is an administrative order and confers subjective satisfaction on the Director of Public Instruction. He has further submitted that the order shows that it has been passed on the ground of various irregularities regarding the constitution of the managing committee. He has submitted that the petition itself shows that it was not properly constituted in accordance with law. On the question of the absence of any order under Rule 6, he has submitted that in this case it would appear from the petition itself that the committee was not constituted in accordance with law and accordingly R. 6 did not apply. There was no question of making any formal order of approval or disapproval in this case. In any event it was submitted that the impugned order itself amounts to rejection of approval under R. 6.

11. In support of his contentions Mr. Chatterjee has relied on two decisions of this Court which are as follows:— Panchanan Jash v. Board of Secondary Education, West Bengal, (1967) 71 Cal WN 189; (Paras 27, 31 and 32); A. K. Maity v. President, West Bengal Board of Secondary Education, (1967) 71 Cal WN 396, (Para 25).

12. From R. 6 itself it is quite clear that as soon as a committee is constituted they have to seek approval of the District Inspector of Schools and in case of refusal to approve an appeal lies. In my opinion this itself contemplates that the District Inspector of Schools concerned must apply his mind and that he should pass a formal order giving reasons and communicate the same because a right of appeal has been conferred by the statute. Unless a formal order is passed giving reasons, the provisions of preferring any appeal would be futile and ineffective. It is not open to the respondents to contend that merely because the authority was of the opinion that the committee was not properly constituted R. 6 had no application and, therefore no order need be passed under the said Rule. There cannot be any preconceived notion about the validity or invalidity of the constitution of the committee even before an application is made under R. 6. Even if such an opinion is held it is a duty on the part of the authority concerned to apply his mind afresh and either to give his approval to such application or to reject the same. In my opinion it is far-fetched to suggest that merely because according to the opinion of the appropriate authority, the committee was not properly constituted, it was not necessary to pass any order in that event under R. 6. In this particular case the allegation that such application for approval has in fact been made has not been disputed. The admitted position is that no formal order has even been passed under R. 6.

13. Mr. Chatterjee has then sought to contend that such application has been rejected and that it would appear from the order of supersession dated the 21st May, 1980 itself. In my opinion this contention is not only far-fetched but also inconsistent. Mr. Chatterjee's client cannot be allowed to blow hot and cold at the same time. He cannot be allowed to contend that no order was needed to have been passed under R. 6 and at the same time argue that the order of supersession and appointment of an administrator under R. 7 is also an order under R. 6 rejecting the prayer for approval made under R. 6. The impugned order is an order under R. 7 and it cannot be treated at the same time as an order under R. 6. Apart from anything else an order under R. 6 has to be passed by the District Inspector of Schools and the order under R. 7 is to be passed by the Director of Public Instruction. Therefore apart from anything else the impugned order cannot be treated as composite order of disapproval required to be passed by the Inspector of Schools under Rule 6 and at the same time an order of supersession passed by Director under R. 7.

14. In that view of the matter I reject the contention of Mr. Chatterjee that Rule 6 need not be applied in the facts and circumstances of this case. I also reject the contention of Mr. Chatterjee that the impugned order is also an order under R. 6.

15. Further in my opinion this order of supersession is also bad inasmuch as in my opinion where the allegation is that the constitution of the committee is improper and not according to law (which is the case of the respondents herein) it is the R. 6 which applies and it is open to the authority concerned in such a case not to give approval to the said committee. In that case R. 7 has no application and the same cannot be invoked. In my opinion Rules 6 and 7 must be read harmoniously.

An inconsistent or overlapping interpretation must not be resorted to unless there cannot be any other interpretation. In my opinion following the well known canons of interpretation of statute it must be held that the question of irregularity of constitution of a committee is the subject matter of and can be dealt with only under the provisions of R. 6 and on that ground application for approval may be rejected. Rule 7 comes into play only when the committee is properly constituted and is approved under R. 6. Rule 7 on the other hand contemplates that when the D.P.I. is not satisfied by the management of the school by its properly constituted committee then he can act under R. 7. When the question is whether it is a properly constituted committee or not, it does not come within the scope of R. 7; only R. 6 is attracted in that case. In that view of the matter in my opinion this order is bad when it says that the reconstitution of the committee made in 1979 suffers from gross procedural irregularity. This mixes up R. 6 with R. 7. An order under R. 7 has been made taking an extraneous matter into consideration viz., alleged irregularity in respect of the constitution of the committee.

16. This order under R. 7 also suffers from another defect. This order is vague and not clear. It mentions that the Committee is not properly functioning. No particulars have been given of the same. It also mentions that the steps taken suffer from gross procedural irregularity without giving any particulars. In that view of the matter in my opinion this is not a proper order under R. 7.

17. This order suffers from another vice also. This order has been passed admittedly without giving an opportunity to the person concerned of being heard. It is now well settled that when an order is passed which affects the civil right of a person, he must be given an opportunity. Right to hold office is a civil right. If that right is sought to be taken away, the persons concerned must be given an opportunity of showing cause. It is now well settled that there is very little difference between quasi-judicial and administrative order so far as the question of principles of natural justice is involved. When it affects the civil rights of any person, he must be given an opportunity. The petitioners concerned claim to be a properly constituted Managing Committee of the School. They are sought to be removed on certain allegations without giving them an opportunity of being heard. In my opinion this cannot be supported in law and it violates the principles of natural justice. It is also well settled that the principle of natural justice would apply to administrative orders since the concept of natural justice cannot be put into a straight-jacket. It has to be kept in mind that the persons concerned should be given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause and that the administrative authority concerned should act fairly, impartially and reasonably. Even if an Act is silent to that effect having regard to the nature of the right enjoyed, principle of natural justice must be followed unless it is impliedly overruled by the statute.

18. The cases cited by Mr. Chatterjee in support of his contention need not be dealt with in detail because the principle of law has now been well settled by the decisions in Binapani's case (AIR 1967 SC 1269) and all the decisions cited were decided prior thereto and to that extent they are no longer good law.

19. In respect of the contention of Mr. Chatterjee that R. 7 confers a subjective satisfaction on the authority concerned, I need not go into the same in details. If it is contended that it confers subjective satisfaction and not objective one, in the sense that there need not be any material at all, in my opinion then it would amount to conferring naked or arbitrary power without any guiding policy and in that any event R. 7 will be ultra vires the Constitution being violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution of India. However, it is now well settled that when two interpretations are possible, the Court should accept that interpretation which makes it constitutional in preference of that interpretation which makes it unconstitutional. In that view of the matter I must proceed on the basis that the R. 7 does not confer any naked or arbitrary power or subjective satisfaction but an objective test has to be made out.

20. I should also point out that not only no reasons have been given but also some vague grounds have been set out in the order. No clear case has been made out in the affidavit affirmed on behalf of the State. Various inconsistent statements have been made. Further the submissions made are not only inconsistent with the order but they are also inconsistent with the averments made in the affidavit.

21. In that view of the matter I allow this application and make the Rule absolute. There will be a writ of Mandamus restraining the respondent from giving any effect or further effect to the impugned order bearing No. 1656/1 (4) S.C./P dated the 20th/21st May, 1980, being annexure 'E' to the petition. The respondent-administrator is restrained from further acting as administrator of the said School. He is directed to hand over possession of the School to the petitioner immediately.

Prayer for stay of the operation of this order is rejected on the ground that this case shows gross irregularity and lack of responsibility on the part of the Officers on whom statutory powers have been conferred. As I have stated in my judgment, they have ignored the rules and they have acted improperly, unreasonably and unfairly.

22. There will be no order as to costs.

Rule made absolute.

(A) Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 63 — Evidence Act (1 of 1872), Ss. 101-104 — Will — Proof — Mode of — Onus of proof.

The mode of proving a will does not ordinarily differ from that of proving any other document except as to the special requirements of attestation prescribed in case of a will by S. 68 of the Succession Act. It is also settled law that the onus of proving the will is on the propounder and in the absence of suspicious circumstances surrounding the execution of the will, proof of testamentary capacity and the signature of the testator as required by law is sufficient to discharge the onus. The propounder is called upon to show by satisfactory evidence that the will was signed by the testator and the testator was in sound and disposing of state of mind, that he understood the nature and effect of the dispositions and put his signature to the document of his own will. AIR 1959 SC 443, Rel. on. (Para 8)

(B) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 3 — Chance witness — Person attending chamber of Advocate who had advised the testator in the matter of preparation of Will — Cannot be called as mere chance witness. (Para 9)

(C) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S. 3 — Witnesses — Credibility of — Witnesses attesting to will deposing in Court four years after attestation — Minor discrepancies in their evidence are not unusual and the same do not really affect the credibility of the witnesses. (Para 10)

(D) Succession Act (39 of 1925), Ss. 74, 63 — Will — Construction — Due execution of Will and testamentary capacity of testator proved — Court is not entitled to consider the terms of will for deciding whether testator was justified in disinheriting his eldest son and his family.

*Against Decree of S. Maity, Addl. Dist. J., 9th Court, Alipore of Zillah, D/- 17-12-1979.

Where there was overwhelming evidence both internal to the will and external about the testamentary capacity of the testator and it was proved that with full knowledge and free will the testator had executed the said testamentary document and the propounder by examining three of the attesting witnesses had proved due execution and attestation of the will, it was not necessary for the court to decide whether or not the testator was justified in disinheriting his eldest son and his family. AIR 1933 Cal 769, Foll. (Para 13)

It is not permissible to a court of probate to consider aliunde the terms of the will to consider whether the relations who had natural and legitimate claim on the testator's bounty have been cut off altogether or not. In the instant case, due execution of the will was proved. It was also proved that the testator had full testamentary capacity. Thus, the onus probandi had been discharged. The probate of the will could not therefore, be refused on the ground that the reasons given by the testator in his will for excluding his eldest son and his family, had not been satisfactorily established. (Para 13)

(E) Succession Act (39 of 1925), Ss. 61, 63 — Evidence Act (1 of 1872), Ss. 101-104 — Will — Undue influence — Burden of proof — Will proved to be executed with due solemnity by a person of competent understanding — Burden of proving that it was executed under undue influence is on the party who alleges it, AIR 1955 SC 363, Rel. on, (Para 14)

(F) Succession Act (39 of 1925), Sections 299, 284 — Appeal against rejection of caveat — Plea of undue influence against propounder of will — No specific allegation in written statement to that effect by caveator — No particulars of alleged undue influence given — Plea cannot be allowed to be raised in appeal for the first time, (Para 15)

(G) Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 61 — Will — Undue influence — What constitutes — Elements of, (Contract Act (1872), S. 16).

It is not every influence which is brought to bear on a testator that can be characterised as "undue". It is open to a person to plead his case before the testator and to persuade him to make a disposition in his favour. And if the testator retains his mental capacity, and there is no element of fraud or coercion — it has often been observed that undue influence may in the last analysis be brought under one or the other of these two categories — the will cannot be attacked on the ground of undue influence. There must be pleading and evidence to prove that the person against whom allegation of undue influence is made, was in a position to dominate the will of the testator. Secondly, the said influence was actually exercised and the amount of influence even if exercised, must be proved to be undue. In the instant case, the caveator-appellant has failed to prove these elements constituting undue influence, AIR 1955 SC 363. Rel. on, (Para 15)

M. N. Ghosh, D. Bhattacharjee, G. C. Pal and P. K. Mukherjee, for Appellant; Saktinath Mukherjee, Madhusudan Banerjee, Bhaskar Ghosh (for No. 1), S. P. Roy Chowdhury, Dipak Ghosh, (for No. 3), Rabindra Nath Mitra and Mrs. Manjuli Chowdhury (for No. 4), for Respondents.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J. :—
The learned Additional District Judge, 9th Court, Alipore by his judgment and decree complained of has rejected the caveat filed by the appellant and has directed that the probate be issued in favour of the respondent No. 1, Alok Kumar Aich, in respect of the alleged will of late Amarendra Chandra Aich, who died on 29th Dec. 1975. The appellant and the respondent No. 1 are respectively the eldest and the youngest sons of the deceased testator, Amarendra Chandra Aich, the respondent No. 2 is his widow and the respondents 3 and 4 are his daughters.

2. Mr. M. N. Ghosh, learned advocate on behalf of the appellant, has submitted that the respondent No. 1 who propounded the aforesaid will of deceased Amarendra Chandra Aich, could not and did not prove the due execution and attestation of the said will and also could not and did not explain the suspicious circumstances relating to the probate in respect of the said alleged will of Amarendra and therefore he ought to be refused probate on the ground that by exercising undue influence upon the testator, Amarendra, Alok, the respondent No. 1, the propounder had procured the said will under which the propounder himself was the principal beneficiary.

3. Having given our anxious consideration to the matter, we find no substance in the above submissions made on behalf of the appellant and we hold that the learned Additional District Judge has rightly granted probate in respect of the said will whose execution and attestation were satisfactorily proved and that the appellant's case regarding undue influence cannot be accepted.

4. The aforesaid will (Ext. 1) was in Bengali language undisputedly written by the deceased testator, Amarendra Chandra Aich, who had signed on each page and also put his signatures on its last page. Mr. Ghosh, learned advocate for the appellant, himself fairly conceded that the law makes a great presumption in favour of the genuineness of such a holograph will (vide Ajit Chandra v. Akhil Chandra, AIR 1960 Cal 551 (paragraph 9); Santashila v. Narendra Nath (1929) ILR 56 Cal 55; (AIR 1929 Cal 290).)

5. The Supreme Court in Shashi Kumar Banerjee v. Subodh Kumar Banerjee, AIR 1964 SC 529, had observed that the will undisputedly was a holograph will admittedly in the handwriting of the testator. In the last paragraph of the will the testator had stated that he had signed the will in the presence of the witnesses and the witnesses had signed in his presence and in the presence of each other raised strong presumption of its regularity and it being duly executed and attested.

6. The appellant neither pleaded nor proved that at the time of the execution of the will the testator, Amarendra Chandra Aich, did not possess testamentary capacity. Although Amarendra was an aged person and suffered from some kind of heart ailment, the same did not impair his mental capacity to make a will. Sailendra Nath Mitra, was the husband(?) of Amarendra Nath Aich's wife, (DW 3), testified that when he met him last Amarendra was not keeping physically fit. He would not go out for long walks. He would only move about very little but DW 3 claimed that after Durga Puja in the year 1975 he had visited Amarendra to offer Vijaya greetings. At that time, Amarendra was ailing and had discussion with DW 3 over worldly affairs.

7. We have no reason to disbelieve the evidence of PW 4, Amiya Kumar Sen, that the testator Amarendra had consultations with him after he had come to PW 4 with notes regarding the will. PW 4 further testified that the testator was in a fit mental condition. After interval of about two months towards early December, the testator had come to PW 4 with the will engrossed and had told Amiya Sen, PW 4, that he had intended to have the will registered as early as possible. PW 4 also deposed about the attestation of the will by him and also about the registration of the will. DW 3, Sailendra, also claimed that he and Amarendra had discussion about making of a will by the latter. Therefore, it was only reasonable and probable that the testator, Amarendra, who was not in good health had decided to make a will and for this purpose had consulted Amiya Kumar Sen, PW 4. On the materials on record we are unable to accept the submission of the learned advocate for the appellant that said Amiya Kumar Sen, PW 4, had done anything improper or unprofessional in the matter of giving advice to the testator regarding the formalities of making of a will. In course of his cross-examination of Amiya Kumar Sen, PW 4, or in his own evidence the appellant Alok did not allege that there was any collusion between PW 4 Amiya Kumar Sen, and the propounder, Asoke Kumar Aich. Merely because the PW 4 had admitted acting as Asoke's lawyer, only after his signature on a petition filed in the court was proved, we cannot reject evidence of PW 4 regarding preparation of the will (Ext. 1) and its execution and attestation should be discarded. Three out of the four persons who had signed as attesting witnesses deposed. Asoke Banerjee, whose name was first among the attesting witnesses, did not testify, although he had affirmed an affidavit at the time of the filing of the application by Asoke for granting probate to the said will. Alok DW 1, admitted that he was not in bad terms with Rabindra Nath Dutta (PW 1) although he happened to be the elder brother of one of the friends of Asoke, the propounder. Alok, DW 1 further stated that he had no enmity with Asoke Nath Banerjee and DW 1 claimed that Asoke Nath Banerjee knew the real background of the will and he had been withheld. Alok, himself did not take any step to examine Asoke Nath Banerjee as a witness. The appellant Alok did not also make any specific allegation against Amiya Kumar Sen except stating that Amiya Babu was not his father's friend. He admitted that Amiya Babu happened to be a neighbour and, therefore, we refuse to believe DW 1 that Amiya Babu was not acquainted with the testator. We prefer to accept the testimony of Amiya Sen, PW 4 on this point.

8. It has been repeatedly held that the mode of proving a will does not ordinarily differ from that of proving any other document except as to the special requirements of attestation prescribed in case of a will by S. 68 of the Succession Act. It is also settled law that the onus of proving the will is on the propounder and in the absence of suspicious circumstances surrounding the execution of the will, proof of testamentary capacity and the signature of the testator as required by law is sufficient to discharge the onus. The propounder is called upon to show by satisfactory evidence that the will was signed by the testator and the testator was in sound and disposing state of mind that he understood the nature and effect of the dispositions and put his signature to the document of his own will. The aforesaid observations of Gajendragadkar, J. in H. Venkatachala Iyengar v. Thimmajamma, AIR 1959 SC 443, has been consistently followed and applied by the Supreme Court in their later decisions (vide Shashi Kumar Banerjee's case (AIR 1964 SC 529) (supra); Ramchandra Ram-bux v. Champabai, AIR 1965 SC 354; Sm. Jaswant Kaur v. Sm. Amrit Kaur, AIR 1977 SC 74).

9. We agree with the trial court that there was no reason to disbelieve at least Rabindranath Dutta, PW 1 and Animesh Roy Chowdhury, PW 2 about the attestation of the will of Amarendra Chandra Aich. Rabindranath Dutta is a medical practitioner and a close neighbour. Nothing has been suggested by the appellant against the impartiality of Rabindranath Dutta, PW 1. We believe his statement that Amarendra Babu had come to his chamber with the will and had requested Rabindra, PW 1, to put his signature. Rabindra claimed that at first he was reluctant but Amarendra Babu had pressed for his signature. Then he agreed. Amarendrababu, according to Rabindra, put another signature on the will in his presence and thereafter, PW 1 had put his signature on it. Thus, Rabindranath, PW 1, had testified that Amarendra had acknowledged his first signature in the will and also had signed again in his presence. Thereupon, Rabindranath Dutta, PW 1, put his signature as an attesting witness. Animesh Kumar Roychowdhury, PW 2, cannot be called a mere chance witness. PW 2, Animesh, from time to time used to attend the chamber of Amiya Kumar Sen, who had advised the testator in the matter of the preparation of the will. Animesh, PW 2, deposed that Amarendra had told him that he had himself written the will and had put his signature in all the sheets. Thereupon, PW 2 signed in the presence of Amarendra. According to PW 2, the signature was obtained in the chamber of Amiya Kumar Sen. PW 2 stated that Amiya Kumar Sen and two other witnesses had signed before he put his signature on it. There was no material on record to prove that Animesh Roychowdhury was not a witness of truth. It is true that there was some discrepancies in the evidence of Amiya Kumar Sen regarding the attestation of the will. The endorsement by Amarendra in the will that he had put his signature in the presence of all the attesting witnesses is also not consistent with the evidence of Rabindra, PW 1, that he had signed as an attesting witness in his chamber.

10. The witnesses had deposed in court nearly four years after they had acted as attesting witnesses. Therefore, some minor discrepancies in their evidence were not unusual and the same did not really affect the credibility of the witnesses, they appear to be otherwise disinterested and respectable persons. Since Amarendra had obtained the advice of Amiya Kumar Sen, PW 4, it was not unusual for PW 4 to take steps in the matter of attestation of the will by his fellow lawyer, Animesh, PW 2 and also in helping Amarendra in having the will registered. But there is no reason to hold that PW 4 "was the real brain behind the entire thing" because the defendant neither pleaded nor proved that he had colluded or conspired with Alok, the propounder, in the matter of making the will (Ext. 1) by the testator, Amarendra Chandra Aich. We agree with the trial court that the propounder satisfactorily proved that Amarendra had signed the will and that it was duly attested at least by three witnesses Rabindranath Dutta, P.W. 1, Animesh Roy Chowdhury, P.W. 2 and Amiya Kumar Sen, P.W. 4.

11. Undoubtedly, in cases where the execution of a will is shrouded in suspicion, the propounder must lead evidence to remove such suspicions and satisfy the conscience of the court that the will was duly executed by the testator (vide the observations in paragraph 9 of the Supreme Court decision in Sm. Jaswant Kaur's case (AIR 1977 SC 74) (supra).) In the present case both in the trial Court and in this court the defendant appellant strenuously endeavoured to establish that there was no cogent evidence of bad relationship between him and his father, and therefore, it was most unnatural to exclude not only the appellant Alok, but his son and wife from the properties of Amarendra. The court below also found that there was no corroboration of the statement of Amarendra made in his will (Ext. 1) that Alok was arrogant and abusive and that he had condoned his earlier lapses but an incident dated 27th September, 1979 was too much for the testator to bear and he had separated Alok with effect from 1st Oct., 1975. The learned advocate for the appellant, in this connection, has also strongly relied upon the evidence of Sailendra Nath Mitra, brother-in-law of the testator, who testified that Amarbabu (the testator) had good relations with his eldest son, Alok and that the father and the sons lived in joint mess. But Sailendra Nath Mitra, D.W. 3, and testator's daughter, Anita, both spoke about constant friction and misunderstanding between the two sons of the testator. Alok, D.W. 1, himself admitted on the date mentioned in the will, he had some serious differences with his brother. The appellant, Alok, further deposed that it was not a fact that his relationship with his father was very bitter. But he had to concede that his father took him to task if he returned home late. Anita, D.W. 2, also admitted on 27th September, 1975 there was a serious quarrel between her two Dadas. She, however, denied that the father had separated Bards (meaning the appellant) since 1st October, 1975. It has transpired in evidence that in August, 1974, Alok, the eldest son of the testator, had married and since the said time the testator and his youngest son used to live in the same room. It also appeared from the evidence that the testator had at least two joint accounts with his youngest son, Asoke. It was reasonable and probable that the youngest son, Asoke, was closer to his father and probably the testator had taken the said side of the youngest son in his quarrels with his eldest brother, Asoke. It further appears according to Alok's evidence, that the testator was fairly old and was peevish and easily irritable (vide the evidence of Alok, D.W. 1, at page 64 of the paper book). But no other witness has corroborated the evidence of Alok (D.W. 1) that his father had lost his power of discrimination. In fact, the witnesses examined on other sides had testified that Amarendra throughout possessed sound disposing mind.

12. We have perused the contents of the will (Ext. 1). The testator by his said will had disinherited his eldest son and his family and the same indicated that he was very much displeased and annoyed with the appellant and his family. It is immaterial that about a year back he had written an inland letter to Alope's wife in affectionate terms (vide Ext. 1 dated 28th September, 1974). In October, 1975 the testator recorded in his will that he was very much displeased with the behaviour of his son and, therefore, he was disinheriting him and his family. The evidence of Sailendra Nath Mitra, D.W. 3, also indicated that Amarendra was then contemplating about making his will. It may be because Amarendra became displeased, he did not ultimately make dispositions in the manner. He had attentively discussed with Sailendra Nath Mitra, D.W. 3, when the latter visited the testator after Vijaya Dashami in the year 1975. We believe the evidence of Amiya Kumar Sen that the testator, Amarendra, had approached him and had taken his advice in Oct., 1975 and, therefore, in December, 1975 Amarendra again met Amiya Kumar Sen, P.W. 4 with the will already written by him. Therefore, it is clear that Amarendra after deliberation had prepared and executed the will. After execution and attestation, Amarendra himself went to the Registration Office and got the will registered.

13. Thus, there was overwhelming evidence—both internal to the will and external about the testamentary capacity of Amarendra Chandra Aich, and that with full knowledge and his free will he had executed the said testamentary document. We have already held that the propounder by examining three of the attesting witnesses proved due execution and attestation of the will. Therefore, the court need not decide whether or not the testator was justified in disinheriting his eldest son and his family. In this connection, the learned advocate for the respondent has relied upon the decision of C. C. Ghose and S. K. Ghose, JJ. in Shyam Sundar Debanshi v. Srimati Kamal Kumari Dassi, (1933) 57 Cal LJ 246 : (AIR 1933 Cal 769). The Division Bench had held that if the court considered that 'due execution' has been proved, that in itself will amount to a finding that the testator with full knowledge of the claims of his relations upon his bounty, with the full knowledge of the state of his properties and with full knowledge of every material circumstance, had executed the will. The Division Bench had further observed that if the court is satisfied about the factum of execution, it is not entitled to pay exclusive attention to the terms of the will. The court should confine its attention to the due execution of the will and whether the probate of the will should be granted or not, the court will not, however, overlook or disregard such elements of suspicion as may be brought to its notice. The court is to analyse direct or positive evidence as regards execution of the will and try to test the accuracy of the evidence remembering of the time what are the real elements of suspicion which may attach to the execution of the will. The Division Bench also pertinently pointed out that it is not permissible to a court of probate to consider aliunde the terms of the will to consider whether the relations who had natural and legitimate claim on the testator's bounty have been cut off altogether or not. We respectfully agree with the above statement of law. In the instant case due execution of the will has been proved. It has been also proved that the testator had full testamentary capacity and, therefore, the onus probandi has been discharged and the probate of the will cannot be refused on the ground that the reasons given by the testator in his will for excluding his eldest son, Alok have not been satisfactorily established.

14. It is also settled law that once it has been proved that a will has been executed with due solemnity by a person of competent understanding, the burden of proving that it was executed under undue influence is on the party who alleges it: (See Naresh Charan Das Gupta v. Paresch Charan Das Gupta, AIR 1955 SC 363 which relied upon the decision of the Judicial Committee in Craig v. Lamoureux AIR 1919 PC 132). Mr. Mukherjee, learned advocate for the respondent No. 1, has correctly pointed out that the defendant appellant in his written statement did not make any specific allegation against the propounder and did not give any particulars of alleged undue influence. He only broadly claimed that the alleged will was not the outcome of the free will of Amarendra Chandra Aich. The defendant in the trial court did not raise any specific issue regarding undue influence and the judgment of the trial court does not indicate that the defendant had urged that the propounder by exercising undue influence upon his father procured the will in question. We are unable to allow the defendant appellant to advance the plea of undue influence because the defendant did not adduce sufficient evidence on the said point. He did not give any particulars in support of his statement in his examination-in-chief that "Father never wrote this will under his free will. My brother bore grudge against us and he has somehow procured this will.....". Again D. W. 1 in course of his cross-examination stated that the will was procured from him applying pressure and taking advantage of his physical and financial weakness. Neither Anita, the younger daughter of the testator (D. W.2) nor the testator's brother-in-law, Sailendra (D. W. 3) has corroborated the claim of the defendant, Alok, D. W. 1, that the testator had no mental capacity or that the will was procured by exercising undue influence upon him.

15. The Supreme Court in Naresh Charan Das Gupta's case (AIR 1955 SC 363) (supra), had pointed out that it was elementary law that it is not every influence which is brought to bear on a testator that can be characterised as 'undue'. It is open to a person to plead his case before the testator and to persuade him to make a disposition in his favour. And if the testator retains his mental capacity, and there is no element of fraud or coercion — it has often been observed that undue influence may in the last analysis be brought under one or the other of these two categories — the will cannot be attacked on the ground of undue influence. The respondents have allegedly pointed out that there must be pleading and evidence to prove that the person against whom allegation of undue influence is made, was in a position to dominate the will of of the testator. Secondly, the said influence was actually exercised and the amount of influence even if exercised, must be proved to be undue. In the instant case, the defendant has failed to prove these elements constituting undue influence.

16. We have already held that when the propounder has satisfactorily proved that the testator had himself written out the will and had executed the same and that his signature was duly attested, the probate cannot be refused on the ground that the propounder did not prove that the defendant No. 1 deserved to be excluded from inheritance. We have perused the will and we find that while the testator deprived his eldest son, his wife and son from his property, the testator had acknowledged that his eldest son had given him Rs. 6,400. The testator had directed repayment of the said sum of Rs. 6,400 to his eldest son. Further, while the testator directed that his residential house would devolve only upon his youngest son, Asoke, his wife and his youngest daughter, Anita, so long the latter remain unmarried, were given right of residence in a portion of the house. He also directed Asoke to pay to them Rs. 150 as maintenance per month. The testator gave further directions regarding the marriage expenses of his youngest daughter Anita. Therefore, the dispositions made in the will do not rouse any suspicion about its genuineness. Mr. Ghosh also submitted before us that it was not believable that the propounder had no knowledge about making of the will and its execution and attestation and that he had for the first time come to know of it from Amiya Kumar Sen, P.W. 4, after the death of his father. In our view, when it has not been proved that the propounder had taken any part in the above matters and the evidences was that the testator himself consulted P.W. 4 and in his own handwriting wrote the will and, thereafter, got his signature attested by the witnesses, it is immaterial to find out whether or not Asoke had known about the will during the lifetime of his father.

17. For the foregoing reasons, we conclude that the court below rightly granted probate in respect of the aforesaid will of Amarendra Chandra Aich, the testator and this appeal should fail. We, therefore, dismiss this appeal without any order as to costs.

18. No order is passed on the application filed by the respondent. But this would be without prejudice to the rights and contentions of the parties in any proceeding according to law.

19. Operation of this order will remain stayed for one month from date.

SANYAL, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DUTTA

AND C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

The Commissioner of Payments (Coking Coal), Appellant v. Sourindra Nath Basu and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 150 of 1981, D/- 22-7-1982.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 21, R. 58 (1) Proviso (b); (3) (d), (4) and (5) — Application for modification of decree — Order giving opportunity to make further application on proper materials — Order is one under sub-rule (3) (d) and as such a decree under sub-rule (4) — It is appealable.

Where in the order on an application under R. 58 for varying or modifying the decree, an opportunity to make further application on proper materials was given and the court did not indicate its mind that on the basis of the proviso (b) to sub-rule (1) the objection was refused to be entertained and as such the same was dismissed, O. 21, R. 58, sub-rule (5) would have no application and, accordingly, the order passed would be deemed to have been so passed under O. 21, R. 58, sub-rule (3) (d). Therefore, the order so passed under sub-rule (3) (d) would have the effect as if it were a decree under sub-rule (4) and the appeal would lie from such order of dismissal as a matter of course.

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 21, R. 58 — Application under for modification of decree — Dismissal of, on ground of want of sufficient particulars — Validity. Order of single Judge, Reversed.

Where in an application for modification of decree, the applicant had stated that he had received a comparatively small amount for disbursement on account of acquisition of coal mine and the same was not sufficient for paying off priority debts and nothing would remain to pay the decree-holder who was not a secured creditor, the dismissal of the application on the ground of want of sufficient particulars was not justified. When the decree-holder was not secured creditor his claim would be postponed until the secured or preferential creditors were paid off. That being the position, the rest of the particulars that would be required for disposal of the matter would be the subject matter of an order for discovery and inspection and thereafter the same would be considered after evidence was led in respect thereof in adjudicating the claim of the decree-holder. As such, the court could not dismiss the application without such adjudication on the ground that the detailed particulars had not been furnished in the petition itself. It was not a case where no particulars at all had been furnished. Order of single Judge D/- 26-8-1980. Reversed.

(Para 8)

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J.:—

This appeal arises from the order dated Aug. 26, 1980, passed by Mrs. Khastagir, J. in an application for an order for vacating or modifying or varying the order of attachment dated Jan. 22, 1975. The application was apparently made under the provisions of O. 21, R. 58 of the Civil P. C. as amended in 1976 but in the cause title it has been described as an application pro interesse suo or in the nature thereof.

2. There is no judgment in the matter but the learned Judge ordered as follows:

"Upon reading an application of Commissioner of Payments (Coking Coal) (hereinafter referred to as the said applicant) pursuant to a notice of motion dated the first day of July last and upon hearing the Advocates for the parties appearing herein,

It is ordered that the application made in this suit be and the same is hereby dismissed. And it is further ordered that the said applicant do pay to the plaintiff/respondents their costs of and incidental to this application to be taxed by the Taxing Officer of this court. And it is further ordered that the parties appearing in this suit be at liberty to apply on proper materials".

3. The provisions of O. 21, R. 58 relate to the adjudication of claim when an attachment has been levied on the property of the person concerned in an application in execution of the decree. The amendment of the Code has provided that such adjudication would be made in the application itself and the matter would be finally disposed of by making orders as provided thereunder and such orders so passed would have the character as if it were a decree. It is only when the matter is disposed of under the proviso to sub-rule (1) thereof, the provisions of sub-rule (5) would be attracted and under such provision, the party concerned against whom such order, refusing to entertain his application would be passed, would be at liberty to file a suit and subject to the result of such suit, the order refusing to entertain such application, would be conclusive. In the present case there is no indication from the order itself that the learned Judge has refused to entertain the application on the ground as mentioned in proviso (b) to sub-r. (1) of R. 58. Proviso (b) also requires some determination inasmuch as the court has to consider therein that the claim or objection was either designedly or unnecessarily delayed and on that basis the court would make an order refusing to entertain the application. That is not the case here as would appear from the last sentence of the order where it has been provided that the parties appearing in the said suit be at liberty to apply on proper materials. If the court had been satisfied that it was a case of delay which was caused designedly or unnecessarily, then the court would not have given them an opportunity to make further application on proper materials. The court under such circumstances should have indicated its mind that on the basis of the proviso the objection was refused to be entertained and as such the same was dismissed. That, not having been made, in our opinion, O. 21, R. 58, sub-rule (5) could have no application and, accordingly, the order passed herein must have been so passed under O. 21, R. 58, sub-rule (3) (d). The position, therefore, is that the order so passed under sub-r. (3) (d) would have the effect as if it were a decree under sub-rule (4) and the appeal would lie from such order of dismissal as a matter of course.

4. On that basis we decide that the appeal is maintainable and we reject the argument put forward by Mr. Mukherjee that no appeal lies because of the provisions of O. 21, R. 58, sub-rule (5) read with the proviso (b) to sub-rule (1) thereto. With this observation we proceed to consider the merits of this appeal.

5. This is a case where an attachment order was passed on January 22, 1975, wherein it was inter alia ordered that the "sum of Rs. 2,03,145.06 paise only be realised by attachment of the sum of Rs. 56,500/- being the amount to be paid to the defendant under Sec. 10 of the Coking Coal Mines Nationalisation Act, 1972 in pro tanto satisfaction thereof. And it is further ordered that the said attachment shall be levied on the compensation money if any, which has become payable and still payable to the defendant under the Coking Coal Mines Nationalisation Act, 1972. And it is further ordered that the plaintiffs decree-holder shall be at liberty to proceed with the realisation of their claim before the Commissioner for Payments appointed under the said Act. And it is further ordered that the costs of and incidental to this application to be added to the claim of the plaintiffs-decree-holder. And it is further ordered that all parties concerned do act on a copy of minutes of this order signed by an officer of this Court being produced before them."

6. The said attachment order, however, was not sought to be further executed until Nov. 23, 1977 when the respondents preferred their claim along with a certified copy of the order of attachment. Thereafter the appellant herein made the application before the court below on June 23, 1980, inter alia for vacating and/or modifying and/or varying the order of attachment. The matter was heard and decided on Aug. 26, 1980 by the learned Judge of the court below and thereafter on June 11, 1981 this appeal was preferred.

7. It appears from the order itself that the learned Judge was not satisfied as to the particulars which have been furnished in the petition of the appellant. In paragraph 2 of the petition, the appellant, inter alia, stated that "..... your petitioner has received Rs. 56,500/- only for disbursement on account of acquisition of the said coal mine. As against Rs. 56,500/- available for disbursement, your petitioner has received claims totalling over Rs. 9,11,000 including a claim of Rs. 2,03,145.06 paise from the plaintiffs decree-holder. Out of the said amount of Rs. 9,11,000/- the priority debts will amount to more than Rs. 90,000/- your petitioner states that even priority debts cannot be paid in full with the available amount of Rupees 56,500/-.

There will remain nothing in hand to pay any unsecured creditors."

8. Admittedly the decree-holders, the respondents herein are not secured creditors and their claim would be postponed until the secured or preferential creditors are paid off. If that be the position, the rest of the particulars that would be required for disposal of this matter would be the subject-matter of an order for discovery and inspection and thereafter the same would be considered after evidence would be led in respect thereof in adjudicating the claim of the respondents-decree-holders. The court cannot dismiss the application without such adjudication on the ground that the detailed particulars have not been furnished in the petition itself. It is not a case where no particulars at all had been furnished. The particulars broadly have been furnished before the court and the rest would be the subject matter of further and better particulars and discovery in the trial itself. The learned Judge also should have considered that the said averments, made in paragraph 2 of the appellants petition, had not been denied in the Affidavit-in-Opposition, filed by Gopal Krishna Basu, affirmed by him on August 4, 1980.

9. That being the position, the appeal must be and is hereby allowed. The order of the court below is set aside but since the matter has not been adjudicated upon, we remand the case to the court below and direct that the same be adjudicated upon in accordance with the provisions of O. 21, R. 58, read with Order 41, R. 23 of the Civil P. C. The matter be disposed of within a fortnight after reopening of the High Court after the long vacation. Let a copy of the judgment and order passed herein be sent to the appropriate court which passed the order under appeal.

10. Each party to pay and bear its own costs.

C. K. BANERJI, J.— I agree.

Appeal allowed.
